

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/

•
•

FOR THE

ROYAL PREROGATIVES OF JESUS CHRIST:

BEING

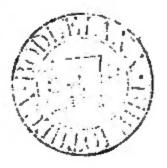

THE LAST SPEECHES AND TESTIMONIES

OF THOSE

SUITO HAVE SUFFEREN FOR THE TRUTH IN SCOTLAND, SINCE THE YEAR 1680.

Reprinted from the Original Editions, with Explanatory and Historical Notes
BY THE REV. JOHN H. THOMSON.

FDINBURGH:

JOHNSTONE, HUNTER, AND COMPANY.

1871.

110.m.10g.

A

C L O U D

WITNESSES,

FOR THE

ROYAL PREROGATIVES

OF

JESUS CHRIST:

OR,

The Last SPBECHES and TESTIMONIES of those who have suffered for the TRUTH, in SCOTLAND, since the Year 1680.

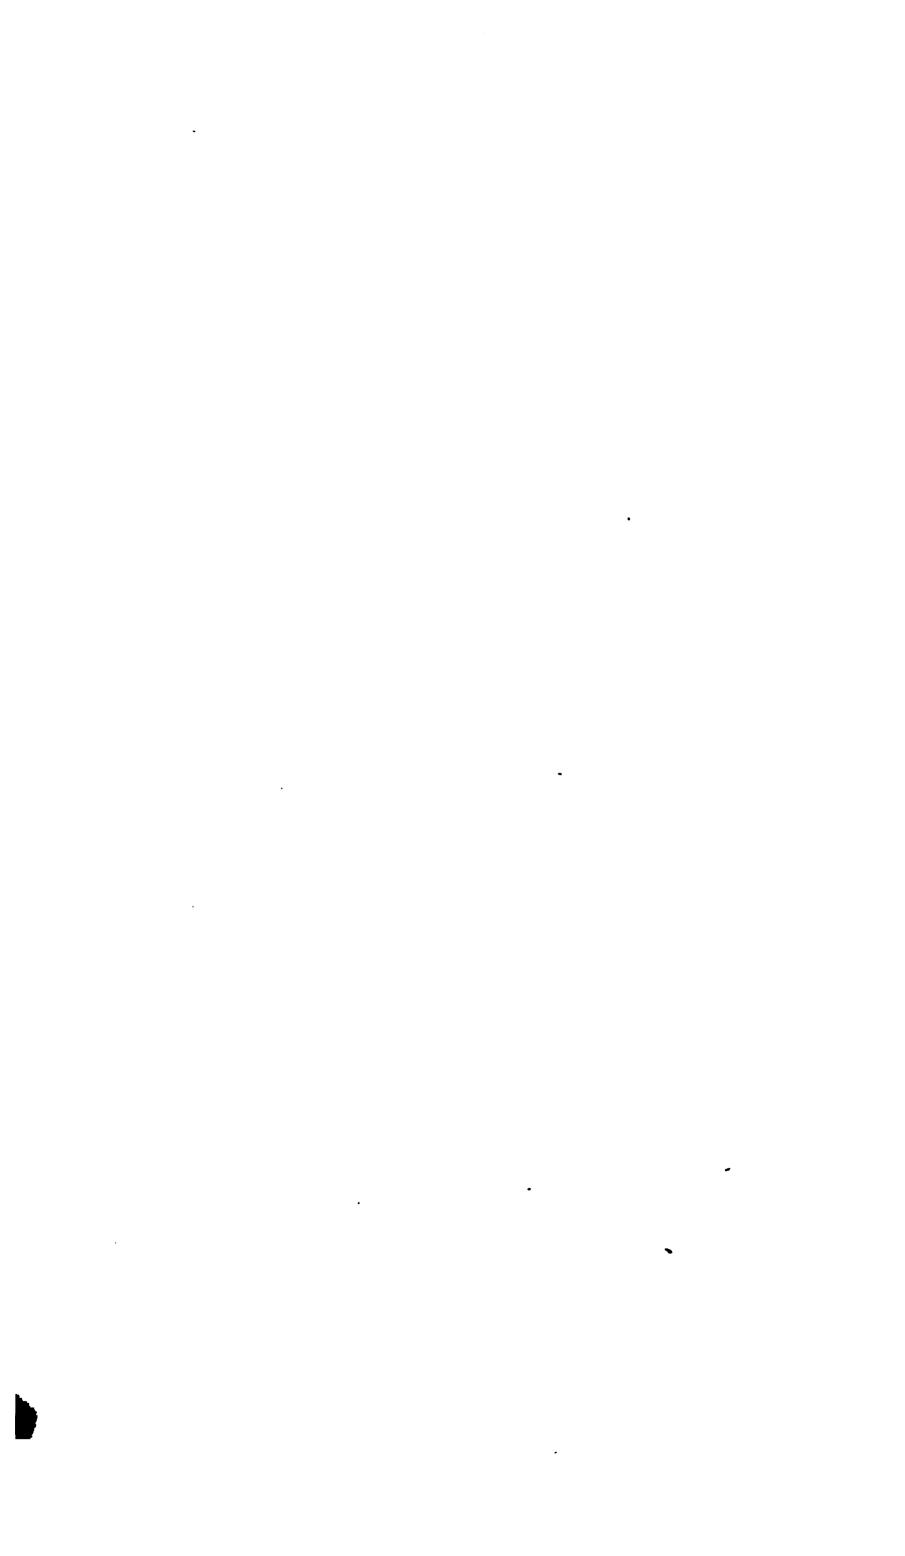

Together with

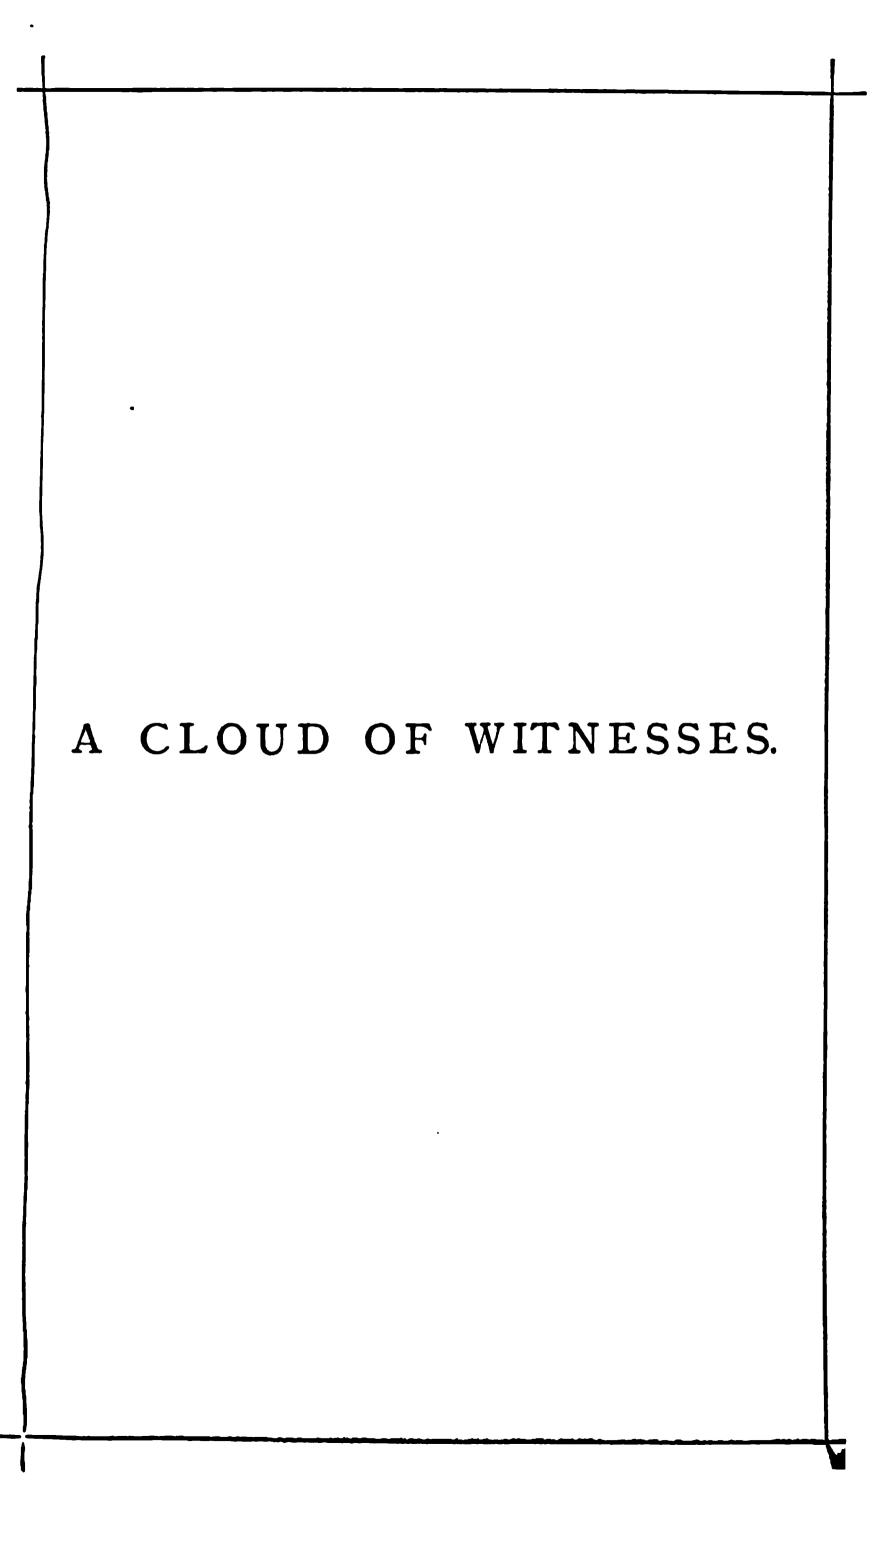

An APPENDIX containing the Queen's-Ferry Paper, Torwood Excommunication, a RELATION concerning Mr. R. Cameron, Mr. D. Cargil and H. Hall; and an Account of those who were Killed without PROCESS of Law, and banished to Forrigh Lands: With a short View of some of the Oppressive Exactions.

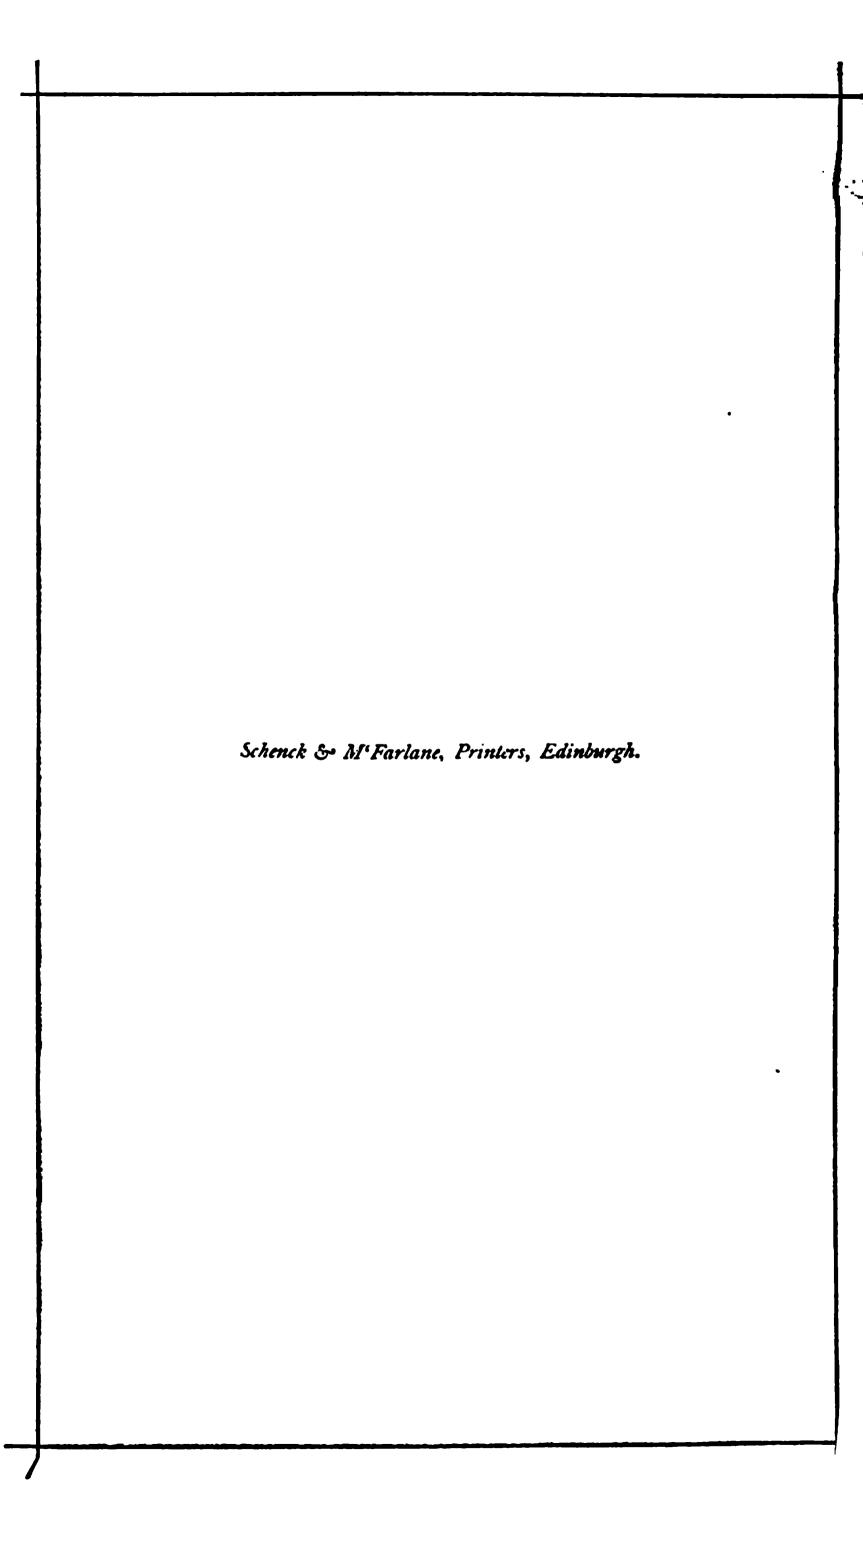

Rev. 7. 14. These are ever which come out of great Tribulation, and have wased these Rober, and made them white in the Bleed of the Lamb.

Cypr Epist. 9. Eracante in Operidus Frattum candida Ecclesia; nune lacte est in Ctuore Martyrum purputes: Floudus eins nec Rolz delvac que Lilia.

Printed in the Year M.DCC.XIV.

CONTENTS.

THE INTRODUCTION,		PAGE
THE PREFACE TO THE READER,		xvii
AN ENCOMIUM ON THE MARTYRS,		xlii
ALISON, ARCHIBALD, His Testimony, .		58
ALISON, ISABEL, Her Interrogations, .		117
	•	126
BOIG, MR JAMES, His Testimony, .		36
BRYCE, MATTHEW, A Relation concerning h	im, .	446
CARGILL, Mr DONALD, . Last Speech and Testime	ony, .	6
. Letter to Mr James Sker	ne, .	11
. Letter to some friends,		14
. Letter to John Malcoli	m and
Archibald Alison, .		15
. Letter to the Prisoners	in the
Correction House, .		19
CLARK, ANDREW, His Testimony, .		404
COCHRAN, JOHN, His Testimony, .	•	279
COCHRAN, WILLIAM, His Testimony, .		269
CUTHILL, WILLIAM, His Testimony, .		181
DICK, Ma JOHN, A Relation concerning h	im, .	400
FARRIE, DAVID, His Testimony, .		208
FINLAY, JOHN, His Testimony, .		260
FORMAN, PATRICK, His Testimony, .	•	200

Contents.

	PAGE
GARNOCK, ROBERT,	His Testimony, 194
GILRY, JOHN,	A Relation concerning him, . 326
GOUGER, WILLIAM,	His Testimony, 147
GRAHAM, JAMES,	His Testimony, 422
GRAY, ROBERT,	His Interrogations, 227
,,	His Testimony, 229
GUILLINE, ANDREW,	His Testimony, 275
HACKSTON, DAVID,	His Testimony, 39
,,	Letter to his Christian Friend N., 43
,,	Letter to a Gentlewoman, . 52
,,	Another Letter to his Christian Friend N.,
,,	Letter to his Sister, 57
HARKNESS, THOMAS,	His Testimony, 404
HARVIE, MARION,	Her Interrogations, 135
,,	Her Testimony, 139
HAY, LAWRENCE,	His Testimony, 160
JACKSON, GEORGE,	His Testimony, 410
JOHNSTON, JAMES,	A Relation concerning him, . 337
KEAGOW, WILLIAM,	A Relation concerning him, . 414
LAUCHLANE, MARGARET,	A Relation concerning her, . 440
LAWSON, JAMES,	His Testimony, 406
MAIN, JOHN,	His Testimony, 329
MALCOLM, JOHN,	His Testimony, 68
MARSHALL, EDWARD,	His Testimony, 447
MARTIN, GEORGE,	His Testimony, 321
MILLER, CHRISTOPHER, .	His Testimony, 147
MILLER, ROBERT,	His Testimony, 429
M'EWEN, SAMUEL,	His Testimony, 404
• • •	Letter to a Friend, 405
NICOL, JAMES,	His Testimony, 388
NISBET, JAMES,	His Testimony, 365
NISBET, JOHN (the younger),	His Interrogations, 290
> >	His Testimony, 291
NISBET, JOHN,	A Relation concerning him, . 455

	PAGE
NISBET, JOHN,	His Testimony, 458
PATON, CAPTAIN JOHN, .	His Testimony, 359
PITILLOCH, ANDREW,
POLLOCK, ROBERT,
POTTER, JOHN,	His Testimony, 107
RENWICK, MR JAMES,	His Testimony, 483
,,	A Letter to his Christian Friends, 488
,,	His Last Words upon the Scaffold, 489
RICHMOND, JOHN,	His Testimony, 339
ROBERTSON, JAMES,	His Interrogations, 240
• ,,	His Testimony, 241
ROBERTSON, THOMAS, .	His Testimony, 383
RUSSELL, ALEXANDER, .	A Relation concerning him, . 224
SANGSTER, ROBERT,	His Testimony, 147
	A Relation concerning him, . 419
	Letter to his Mother and Sister, 419
	His Interrogations, . 82
•	Letter to Professors in the shire
,,	of Aberdeen, 86
,,	Letter to his Friend N., . 90
	Another Letter to his Friend N., 91
••	His Testimony, 92
SMITH, JAMES,
,	Mother, 286
SMITH, MR WALTER,	His Testimony and Last Words, 28
STEWART, ARCHIBALD, .	·
•	A Letter to his Christian Ac-
•	quaintance, 348
STODART, THOMAS,
STUART, JAMES,
	·
TACKET, ARTHUR,	•
THOMSON, WILLIAM,	His Testimony, 173
WATT, JOHN,	A Relation concerning him, . 419
WHARRY, JOHN,	A Letter to his Mother, Brother, and Sisters, 283

	•
V	1

Contents.

	WILKIE, JAMES, A Relation concerning WILSON, JOHN,	Counci her,	l,	9446 303 311 440 337 406
THE	APPENDIX— A Relation concerning Mr Richard Cameron,	-	•	•
	The Bond of Mutual Defence found at Airsmoss, .	•	•	495
		•	•	500
	A Relation concerning Mr Donald Cargill, .	•	•	501
	The Torwood Excommunication,	•	•	507
	A Relation concerning Mr Henry Hall,	•	•	511
	Abstract of the Queensferry Paper,	•	•	513
	A List of the Banished,	•	•	518
	A List of those killed in the Fields,		•	532
	A Short Account of the Oppressive Exactions, .		•	5 57
	Epitaphs or Inscriptions,	•	•	562

ILLUSTRATIONS.

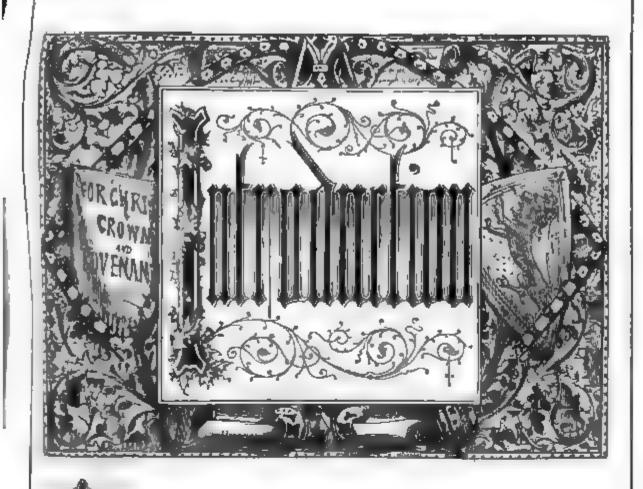

THE CANONGATE TOLBOOTH,			•	•	Front	ispiece
Fac-Simile Frontispiece of First Edition.
Fac-Simile Title of First 1	dition.
THE GREYFRIARS CHURCH, I	DINBUR	GH,	•		to face p	ige I
THE HIGH CHURCH OF GLASO	GOW—ea	st view,	•	•	•	4
22 29	W	est view,			•	5
CANONGATE TOLBOOTH—fro	m the ea	ıst,	•			16
THE CROSS, EDINBURGE,			•	•		17
UTRECHT,		•				32
QUEENSFERRY, .		•	•		•	36
THE TOLBOOTH, EDINBURGH	—south	front,				40
BOTHWELL BRIDGE, .		•				48
THE HIGH CHURCH OF GLAS	GOW—so	uth view	, .		to face pa	ge 65
THE TOLBOOTH, EDINBURGH	, .			•	,,	129
NETHERBOW PORT, EDINBUR	GH,	•			"	193
THE GRASSMARKET, EDINBU	RGH,	•		•	79	257
THE HIGH CHURCH, EDINBU	RGH,		•			321
OLD PARLIAMENT HOUSE, EI	DINBURG	н,		•	1)	385
TORWOOD CASTLE, .					,,	449
RICHARD CAMERON'S BIRTH	PLACE,					495
THE TOLBOOTH, GLASGOW,				. 4	face pag	2513
MARTYRS' MONUMENT, EDIN	BURGH,	•	•		•	563
MONUMENT AT AIRSMOSS,	•	•			•	572

viii

Illustrations.

						PAGE
FENWICK CHURCHYARD,	•	•	•	•	•	591
MONUMENT TO THE WIGTOWN	MART	YRS AT	STIRLIN	G, .	•	592
RULLION GREEN, PENTLAND	HILLS,	•	•	. •	•	597
MONUMENT AT RULLION GREI	EN,	•	•	•	•	597
CHURCHYARD, ST ANDREWS,	• .	•	•	•		602
DUNOTTAR CASTLE, .	•	•	•	•	•	603
MONUMENT TO THE WIGTOWN	MART	YRS AT	WIGTOW	N, .	•	606
BLACKADED'S TOMBSTONE AT	NODTH	REDWI	CK			612

HE "CLOUD OF WITNESSES," an edition of which we now present to the reader in a new and handsome setting, was originally published as a small quarto volume of 290 pages. Its title page, of which we give a fac-simile, contains the name neither of printer, publisher, nor of compilers, but simply the year in which it was printed, viz., 1714. Considering the rude state of the art of printing in Scotland at that time, after the tyranny and oppression under which the land had groaned for so many years, when much of Scottish literature had to be printed in Holland, and was secretly brought over and circulated in the country, it may be considered a very creditable specimen of typography; the title page being printed in two colours with a considerable amount of taste. There are, however, a goodly number of typographical errors in the text, which the compilers apologise for, at the close of the volume, in the following quaintly courteous sentence:—"Good Reader,—There being several mistakes of the press in this impression, too many to bear any reasonable apology; it is hoped thy candour and ingenuity will pardon the smaller, and thy pen amend the greater, which may mar or alter the sense; a list whereof follows."

The frontispiece, of which a fac-simile is also given, shows, in a still more remarkable degree, the low condition of the engraver's art in Scotland at that period, although in the next generation the future Sir Robert Strange learned in Edinburgh, under a Mr Cooper, the rudiments of an art, in which he was yet to rank among its greatest masters. But rude as it is, it has a power approaching to the sensational, and, no doubt, would lead many to read the book itself.

The second edition is said to have been published in 1725, but, while the first edition is not uncommon, this is one of the rarest of books. It is not in any of the public libraries, and even the recent discussions on the authenticity of the story of the Wigtown martyrs have not been successful in bringing a copy to public view. third edition is an 18mo of 388 pages, and was published in 1730. It contains several additions to the matter of the first, such as the inscription on the grave of Margaret Wilson at Wigtown. fourth edition was published in Glasgow in 1741, and is a 12mo of 408 pages. It gives for the first time the Testimonies of John Nisbet younger, John Nisbet of Hardhill, Robert Millar, Thomas Harkness, the letters of John Semple and Archibald Stewart, and the epitaph at Rullion Green. The fifth edition was published in Glasgow in 1751, and is one of the most correct as well as the most beautifully printed of the early editions. It adds to the matter of former editions the testimony of John Finlay. Edition after edition followed the fifth in quick succession: the eighth edition was printed at Edinburgh in 1765; the tenth at Aberdeen in 1778; and in the same year (evidently in ignorance of the one issued from the banks of the Dee), another tenth edition was published at Glasgow. new edition" was printed in London in 1794, a fifteenth edition in Glasgow in 1814, and it has been given to the world in many different forms since.

So early as 1686, the Societies entertained the design of collecting and publishing the testimonies of the martyrs. In a letter (found in substance in the "Faithful Contendings," but here given verbatim from the original autograph) to Sir Robert Hamilton, dated March 7th, 1688, Michael Shields, writing in their name, says—

"It hath been our design and desire more than two years by-gone to collect an account of the sufferings of this poor despised remnant, with what the rest of the land have suffered, under the domineering tyranny of the late deceased tyrant, and of the present usurper, to the end the same might be printed and published. This we think a part of our generation work, and a duty laid upon us, as we would desire to have the cause of Christ, which we own and suffer for, handed down and transmitted to our posterity, and not be guilty of robbing them of such a rich treasure as the fragrant and refreshing account of the sufferings of the martyrs, witnesses, and confessors of Christ in this age is, and will be to those who come after us."

Through a difference of opinion that arose between the Societies and the person who was to edit this proposed collection of the testimonies of the martyrs, the publication did not take place, and it was not until some ten years after the Revolution that the proposal was again entertained.

The minutes, in manuscript, of the meetings of the General Societies, still in possession of the Reformed Presbyterian Synod. detail the steps taken for the publication of the "Cloud," as well as for the erection of stones over the graves of the martyrs. These minutes are—"Conclusions of the General Meeting at Crawfordjohn, April 21, 1697.

"That a true and exact account of all the persecutors within the several quarters; of the remarkable judgments and deaths, or what hath befallen to their families or estates; be made up and brought to the next general meeting.

"CRAWFORDJOHN, April 5, 1699.

"That all the respective Societies send an index of all the late martyrs' testimonies, not in 'Naphtali,' to the next general meeting.

"CRAWFORDJOHN, Oct. 29, 1701.

"First concluded, that all the correspondences provide and make ready stones as signs of honour to be set upon the graves of our late martyrs as soon as possible; and all the names of the foresaid martyrs, with their speeches and testimonies, and by whom they were martyred or killed in house or fields, country or city, as far as possible to be brought to the next general meeting, in order for the epitaphs; and likewise an account of those martyrs' carriage and behaviour in the time of their martyrdom.

"Secondly concluded, a review of the former conclusions concerning the remarkable judgments of the persecutors, and the diligence of the correspondences and Societies to be diligently brought to the next general meeting.

"CRAWFORDJOHN, Oct. 21, 1710.

"That an index of all the martyrs' testimonies that are not in 'Naphtali,' who were martyred in Scotland, be had from all quarters against the next general meeting; likewise an account of all the martyrs' names that suffered in this kingdom.

"CRAWFORDJOHN, February 23, 1711.

"The martyrs' testimonies were given into Mr Alexander Marshall and Hugh Clark their hands, to be by them compared, and the correctest transcribed for the general meeting, and the copies to be returned to the several correspondences from whom they were collected, and the said persons were appointed to go to the [Rev.] Mr Linning [of Lesmahagow], and require a sight of the testimonies that he had from Mr Alexander Shields, belonging to the general meeting, and their diligence to be returned to the next general meeting.

"CRAWFORDJOHN, Oct. 6, 1711.

"The several correspondences were appointed to take a copy of the epitaphs engraven upon the martyrs' gravestones in their several bounds, to be brought to the next General meeting, and that they be inquisitive what account can be had of any remarkable instances of God's judgments upon persecutors in their several bounds, and to have an account as well warranted as can be.

"CRAWFORDJOHN, June, 1713.

"It is enjoined to the several correspondences to be careful to see what money may be advanced for printing the martyrs' testimonies, and an account, to be brought from each, of the quotas they think they can advance.

"Crawfordjohn, Oct. 26, 1713.

"The several correspondences are appointed to take care to get a true list of the martyrs who were shot or otherwise killed without process of law, their names, abodes, time and place of their deaths, who killed them, and any other particulars about them, with a true duplicate of the elegies on all the gravestones, against the 1st of January, to be sent to Edinburgh."

These extracts show that the Societies had been engaged in gathering the materials of the "Cloud of Witnesses" from at least 1697. Part of their first design, to notice what had befallen the persecutors, they seem to have laid aside, and to have been satisfied with the account given by Alexander Shields in his "Short Memorial of Grievances."

Alexander Marshall and Hugh Clark, to whom the Testimonies were to be given in, were prominent members of the Societies. Thirty years after the publication of the "Cloud," Alexander Marshall was licensed as a probationer by the Reformed Presbytery, and was soon afterwards ordained. He was the first probationer licensed by the Presbytery after its constitution in 1743. We are inclined to attribute the drawing up of the Appendix to him. Hugh Clark acted as clerk to the general meetings of the Societies in 1714. After his death there was published a poem of thirty-two pages, entitled, "Meditations upon the love of Christ, in the redemption of elect sinners, written by the truly worthy, learned, and eminently religious Mr Hugh Clark, sometime before his death, which was on the 15th day of February 1724, and of his age the 36th year." Some of its lines are not without merit, and point him out to be the author of the "Encomium" following the Preface to the Reader in this volume, and possibly to have been concerned in writing the latter part of the Preface, and, it may be, some of the epitaphs on the gravestones of the martyrs. A paragraph taken at random from the "Meditations" will sufficiently show his powers:

"O saints who share His love, in Him be glad, Who loved you, ere you a being had! Why should you doubt His love to you, because You cannot in yourself perceive the cause? Twas not your worth of goodness could deserve That He at first from death should you preserve, Nor will your worthlessness, nor vileness make, Your loving Lord your souls again forsake. It was the goodness of His sovereign will Engaged him first, and will engage Him still, And since He loved you from eternity, Believe He'll do the same eternally. Lay by your doubtings, then, ye saints, and raise Melodious songs to your Redeemer's praise."

In a note to his "Vindiciæ Magistratus," Edinburgh, 1773, p. 152, the Rev. John Thorburn, minister of the Reformed Presbyterian congregation of Pentland from 1762 to 1788, says that "the Testimonies were given to Messrs Marshall and Clark, to be copied out fair for the press, and to be sent to John M'Main, A.M., teacher of a grammar school at Liberton's Wyndfoot, Edinburgh, who, it is very probable, was the writer of the Preface; or, at least, it behoved to be the work of one or other of these three."

John M'Main, by the freedom of some strictures he had made upon the ministers of the Established Church, so provoked the Presbytery of Edinburgh, that they summoned him to appear before them, 29th November 1721, to answer for presuming at his own hand to keep a school within the city of Edinburgh, without license or warrant given him from any in authority. M'Main published his answer to the summons, in which, as might be expected, he has the better of the Presbytery. In 1724 he published Alexander Shields' life of James Renwick. In the preface he takes Wodrow to task for his not very tavourable reflections on some of the martyrs whose testimonies are given in the "Cloud." In both the answer to the Preshytery and the preface to Renwick's life, there seem evident traces of the vigorous pen that wrote the Preface to the "Cloud," and it goes far to justify the probability of the opinion, that, to a large cutent, it was his production. But, whoever drew it up, it is a comprehensive and masterly statement of the lawful and Scriptural character of the contendings of the martyrs, and is written with a commence an carnestness, and catholicity of tone, and a power of convenient that reflect the highest credit upon its authors.

The Pretace makes it unnecessary that the aim of the "Cloud Witnesses" should be here stated. It may be enough to say that the position taken up in these testimonies towards the government of the time, which has often been much excepted to, was simply an anticipation, by some years, of what the estates of the kingdom of Scotland at their meeting in the spring of 1689 found and declared,—"That king James the seventh being a professed Papist, did assume the regal power and acted as king without ever taking the oath required by law, and hath by the advice of evil and wicked counsellors invaded the fundamental constitution of the kingdom, and altered it from a legal limited monarchy to an arbitrary despotic power, and hath exercised the same, to the subversion of the Protestant religion and the violation of the laws and liberties of the kingdom, inverting all the ends of government, whereby he hath forfeited the right to the crown, and the throne is become wacant;" while the testimonies themselves were the voice of liberty, at a time when freedom was denied to the press, when the right of meeting in public was taken away, and when to utter an opinion different from the government was enough to expose to torture and death in its most cruel form. Hence the occasional sternness of the language in which they are clothed. The enemies of liberty compelled the martyrs to cast aside honeyed words, and to express themselves in strong terms.

This edition has been reprinted from the first. Great pains have been taken to ensure correctness. When difficulty has arisen, the fourth and fifth editions, which seem to have been printed with unusual care, have been referred to. No change, save in the spelling and manifest misprints, has been made in the text. Scotch or unusual words have been retained, and their signification given within brackets. Notes—historical, where such were required to elucidate the text; or biographical, when they could lend additional interest to the lives under review—have been added, wherever there seemed occasion for them. In some cases, these notes have been derived from the traditions of the localities where the martyrs lived or suffered; but mainly they have been drawn from the pamphlets of the period, and the writings of the Rev. Robert Wodrow, and Patrick Walker.

Wodrow was minister of Eastwood, in Renfrewshire, and died in 1734, in the fifty-fifth year of his age, and thirty-first of his The first volume of his "History of the Sufferings of ministry. the Church of Scotland from 1660 to 1688" appeared in 1721, and the second in the following year. Its materials had been sent to him from all parts of the country, and he had been employed for about eight years in their arrangement. The book was folio, and the subscription price two guineas, yet there were 650 subscribers. Although it has no graces of style, it was immediately successful, and by almost all parties was felt to be a great work. The Jacobites smarted under its statement of the tyranny and cruelty of their idols, and did their utmost to depreciate its value, but their Its voluminous collection of facts illustrative labours were in vain. of the sufferings of the Presbyterians under Charles II. and James II. might be parodied, but their truth could not be denied. different class from the Jacobites found fault with the "History." The Societies—the compilers of the "Cloud of Witnesses"—took exception to the manner in which he spoke of James Renwick and others for declining to take advantage of the Indulgence, or to associate with the indulged ministers. But they did not challenge its statements of It was simply the historian's inferences or reflections that they facts. called in question. Wodrow's father had accepted the Indulgence, and many of his friends were in the same position. These friendships manifestly biassed the historian's judgment.

Patrick Walker was a prisoner in Dunottar for some months, and when brought to Leith for further trial, made his escape from the Tolbooth. He took a prominent part in the Societies at the Revolution on their presenting a statement of grievances to the government, but he soon afterwards withdrew from their association. When he published his "Some Remarkable Passages of the Life and Death of Mr John Semple, Mr John Welwood, Mr Richard Cameron, Mr Alexander Peden, Mr Donald Cargill, and Mr Walter Smith," in 1727 and 1728, he seems to have been a chapman, and to have had a house in Edinburgh "within Bristo Port, opposite the Society gate." His "Passages" are a curious farrage of matter; but it is not difficult to pick out what must really have happened under his own eye, or that of trustworthy witnesses; and these narratives are often of interest and value as corroborative of the "Cloud of Witnesses" and Wodrow.

Of the martyrs' graves whose inscriptions are given in the Appendix, we have visited the greater number, and have been able to add to those contained in the first edition a goodly number of others, scattered about in various parts of the country. original forty-six there is only one, that of Andrew M'Gill at the Gallows of Ayr, which we have been unable at this date to find. visiting these graves it is impossible not to feel how much their present condition is due to a man whom the creative genius of Sir Walter Scott has immortalised—Robert Paterson, "Old Mortality." All over the south-west of Scotland his work is seen in the deeply graven letters, cut evidently by no hireling hand, but by a workman determined, that, so far as deep lettering would perpetuate the names of the witnesses for Christ's Crown and Covenant, until a generation should arise that would reverence their memory, it The indifference should be done by him. And he has succeeded. characteristic of the end of last century, and the beginning of this, to the memory of the martyrs in Scotland has passed away.

Of all the martyrs' monuments or gravestones that we have visited, we have not found one (with the single exception of that at Magus Moor) but what is in excellent preservation, or in the course of being restored, or a new stone being placed alongside of that which had become illegible by age. On inquiry we have always learned that the inhabitants of the districts where they are, irrespective of denomination, have vied with each other to keep them in proper repair. The graves themselves seem, with few exceptions, to have been undisturbed, and they may be often detected by their being considerably lower than the surrounding ground, which has risen up by many interments since. This is nowhere more strikingly seen than in the Greyfriars Churchyard in Edinburgh.

JOHN HENDERSON THOMSON.

EAGLESHAM, September 1871.

HRISTIAN READER, the glorious frame and contrivance of religion, revealed by the ever-blessed Jehovah in the face or person of Jesus Christ, for the recovery of lost mankind into a state of favour and reconcilement with Himself, is so excellently ordered in the counsels of Infinite Wisdom, and exactly adjusted to the real delight, contentment, and happiness of the rational world; that it might justly be wondered why so many men in all ages, otherwise of good intellectuals, have not only had a secret disgust thereat themselves, but laboured to rob others of the comfort and benefit of it, and make the world a chaos of confusion by persecutions raised against it; had not the Holy spirit in the Scriptures laid open the hidden springs of this malice and enmity, which exerts itself in so many of the children of men.

We are told in these Divinely inspired writings, that the first source of this opposition that the true religion meets with in the world, sows originally from Satan, that inveterate enemy of God's glory and man's happiness; who, having himself left his original state of obedience to, and enjoyment of God his creator, hath no other levamen of his inevitable miseries, but to draw the race of mankind into the like ruin, which is the only satisfaction that malicious spirit is capable of. This restless adversary perceiving that, through the grace and love of God manifested in Christ, a great number of these whom he thought he had secured to his slavery are redeemed, and called by the Gospel out of that intolerable servitude into a glorious liberty, and secured by faith to salvation, labours, by two great engines, open force and secret fraud, to keep them in, or regain them to his obedience; hence the sacred Scriptures describe him—both as a dragon for cruelty and a serpent for subtilty.

But because he either cannot, or thinks not fit, to do this visibly in person; therefore he does it more invisibly, and so more successfully, by his agents in whom he works, who, because of their unreasonable unbelief, are called children of impersuasion. acts and animates, as it were so many machines, to endeavour by crafty seduction, or violent persecution, to draw or drive the followers of the Lamb from their subjection, obedience, and loyalty to the Captain of their salvation, that he may drown them in perdition and This is the latent origin of all persecution, the mint where all the other more visible causes of the bloody violence which the people of God meet withal, are struck and framed. This is the grand design to which they tend—to root out the obedience of faith out of the world, and deprive the Son of God of His rightful dominion over His subjects, whom He hath chosen, redeemed, and sanctified for Himself.

As this holds true of all the persecutions raised against the Church and truths of God, whether in the persons of the Jews or Christians, by whatever hands, Pagan or Anti-Christian, so it is eminently verified of the persecutions of the Church of Scotland, prosecuted by a profane, wicked generation of malignant Prelatists, during the reigns of the late King Charles II. and James VII. For, as the other persecutions were all levelled against some point of truth or other wherein the obedience of faith was concerned, respecting either the existence and worship of the true God, or the person, natures, or offices of Jesus Christ, etc.; so this persecution was directly bended against that office and authority of Jesus Christ, whereupon His formal claim to the obedience of His Church is founded, viz., His headship over His Church. This was the peculiar depositum concredited to the Church of Christ in Scotland, and her distinguishing dignity, to have the royal supremacy of the King of Zion to defend against the kings of the earth; who, not content with the princely authority of ruling the persons of their subjects, according to the laws of God and the realm, would needs usurp a blasphemous sacrilegious prerogative of ruling the Church and consciences of men in room of the Mediator, by what laws and statutes they pleased, and found most subservient to their lust, for advancement of Popery and arbitrary government.

ESUS CHRIST, the only begotten of the Father, having received the Church of Scotland, as one of the utmost isles of the earth, for His possession, by solemn grant from Jehovah, was pleased, as to call her from the deplorable state of Pagan, and • reform her from the ruinous condition of anti-Christian darkness, so to dignify her, in a peculiar manner, to contend and suffer for that truth, "that He is a King and Lawgiver to His Church;" having power to institute her form of government, to give her laws, officers, and censures, whereby she should be governed; and hath not left it ambulatory and uncertain, what government He will have in force for the ordering of His house, but hath expressly determined in His Word every necessary part thereof, and hath not put any power into the hands of any mortal, whether Pope, Prelate, prince, or potentate, as a vicarious head in His personal absence, whereby they may alter the form of government at their pleasure, and make what kind of officers, canons, and censures they please; but all the power that this King hath left in His Church, concerning her government, is purely and properly ministerial, under the direction and regulation of His sovereign pleasure, revealed in His written Word.

This, this is the most radiant pearl in the Church of Scotland's garland; that she hath been honoured valiantly to stand up for the headship and royal prerogative of her King and Husband, Jesus Christ, in all the periods of her Reformation. For no sooner had she thrown off the yoke of the Pope's pretended jurisdiction and authority, but presently, while she was labouring, by means of these censures which Christ had instituted, to root out the damnable heresies which that enemy had sown, all on a sudden King James VI., naturally ambitious, and instigated by interested and projecting counsellors, attempts a rape upon her chastity and loyalty to her Husband and Lord, and by his royal order stops her freedom of sitting, voting, and acting in her Supreme Courts, imprisons some of her most zealous and faithful ministers, calls them before his Council, indicts them of treason and lese majesty for their making use of the freedom Christ had given them, and, after their declining his and his Council's usurped authority in spiritual matters, and so witnessing a good confession for the royal dignity of their Master, banishes them their native country; See "Calderwood's History," from page 491, to page 536, and downward. [Wodrow Society Edition, vol. vi., p. 590.] Upon the same bottom of a pretended royal jurisdiction over the Church, he attempted, and in a great measure effected, the establishment of a Popish hierarchy and Romish ceremonies, by setting up Prelates, and bringing in the Perth articles, flattering some, and overawing others of the ministry into a compliance therewith, persecuting the zealous and faithful contenders for Christ's headship, and the government of His Divine institution, with vexatious prosecutions before High Commission Courts, suspensions from their office, wanderings, confinements, etc.

And in like manner, Charles I., following his father's example and instructions, endeavoured, upon pretence of the same prerogative, to improve upon what his father had begun, and complete the Church's slavery, by obtruding upon her a liturgy and canons, formed a la mode d' Angleterre, collected out of the Romish mass-book and canon law, which put the faithful sons of the Church of Scotland to much wrestling and contending, partly by humble and submissive, yet zealous and faithful addresses, supplications, remonstrances, and representations, partly by more bold and daring protestations and associations for mutual defence, even till they were forced to take arms for defence of religion and the liberties of their country. Which contendings for Christ's royal authority, and His Church's liberties, at length, by the blessing of God, issued in a glorious Work of Reformation through Britain and Ireland, wherein the Churches of Christ in these lands not only revived their former beautiful order, shining purity, and precious liberty, but also had several degrees of new attainments in purity and uniformity of religion added thereto.

But the Church's sun of prosperity is soon at the tropic. Scarce was that spring-time well begun to blossom and bud, when, behold, a world of malignant vapours, arising out of the earth, clouded all her sky again, and turned her spring to a deplorable winter. Various heresies in England, growing Popery in Ireland, public resolutions for advancing malignants to places of power and trust in Scotland, like so many inundations breaking in upon the Church of Christ, laid all her pleasant things waste. And no sooner was Charles II.

advanced to the exercise of the royal authority, but, drowning the sense of all sacred obligations with a glut of sensual pleasures, he authorised a malignant crew of statesmen to persecute and destroy the people of God for their adherence to the Covenants which himself had entered into as the fundamental stipulation of government, and to that Reformation which he had sworn to maintain and practise, and for their bearing witness against the grand principle and foundation upon which he built his power of overthrowing religion, and setting up a new frame thereof in Britain, namely, the blasphemous headship of Ecclesiastical Supremacy.

Hence it is evident to a demonstration, that the grand state of the quarrel upon which the martyrs laid down their lives during the late tyrannical reigns, was really one and the same with that for which the zealous and faithful ministers suffered such hardships in the time of King James VI., and afterwards; this being the precise foundation upon which all the other acts and oaths were built, which the enemies made a handle of to involve honest people into the crime of treason and rebellion against the State, as it was then determined by their iniquitous laws. For, as this was still the principal question put to them, "Own ye the king's authority?" and the chief article of indictment if they either answered in the negative or kept silence, so it is evident that, by this question, they really meant not his civil authority only, but also his pretended claim to supreme headship over the Church.

For no sooner had he authorised a Parliament to meet at Edinburgh, under the inspection of that malignant wretch, John Earl of Middleton, anno 1661, but that generation of enemies to the work of God, intending the utter ruining thereof, set up this Dagon of the Royal Prerogative, not only with respect to things civil, as "in the choice of his officers of State, counsellors and judges" (Act ii.), in "the calling and dissolving of Parliaments, and making laws" (Act iii.) in "the militia, and in making peace and war" (Act v.); which were great invasions upon the national liberties of the subjects; but also in things sacred, "in making of leagues, and the conventions of the subjects" (Act iv.), wherein all the former work of Reformation is condemned, and the Covenants made for its defence are declared treasonable and rebellious actions against the royal prerogative; and in consequence hereof, it is declared that the League and Covenant is not obligatory upon this kingdom, nor doth infer any obligation on the subjects thereof, to meddle or interpose in anything concerning the religion and government of the Churches of England and Ireland; and all the subjects are discharged "to renew the same, as they will answer at their highest peril" (Act vii.); and and in the oath of allegiance and acknowledgment of his majesty's royal prerogative (Act xi. of the said Parliament), all persons, of whatsoever trust, post, office, or employment, are obliged to swear, that they "acknowledge the king only supreme governor of this kingdom, over all persons and in all causes;" and that they "do with all humble duty acknowledge his majesty's royal prerogative, in all the particulars, and in the manner aforementioned."

And to make the matter clearer, what they meant by the King's authority, in the preamble of the first Act of the second session of the same first Parliament, they assert, that "the ordering and disposal of the external government and policy of this Church doth properly belong unto his majesty, as an inherent right of the crown, by virtue of his royal prerogative and supremacy in causes ecclesiastical." And upon this bottom, he, with advice and consent of the estates of Parliament, sets up the Episcopal form of Church-government, the jurisdiction of bishops and archbishops over the inferior clergy, with their concomitant of patronages, and "doth rescind, cass, and annul all Acts of Parliament, by which the sole and only power and jurisdiction within this Church doth stand in the Church, and in the general, provincial, and presbyterial Assemblies, and Kirk Sessions, and all Acts of Parliament or Council, which may be interpreted to have given any church power, jurisdiction or government, to the office-bearers of the Church their respective meetings, other than that which acknowledgeth a dependence upon, and subordination to, the sovereign power of the king as supreme." And in pursuance hereof, in the second Act of the foresaid session, entitled, "Act for preservation of his majesty's person, authority, and government," he doth, with the advice of his estates of Parliament, declare, "That the assembly kept at Glasgow in the year 1638, was in itself (after the same was by his majesty discharged, under the pain of treason), an unlawful and seditious meeting;" and "that all these gatherings, convocations, petitions, protestations, and erecting and keeping of Council Tables, that were used in the beginning, and for carrying on of the late troubles (thus they call the work of Reformation) were unlawful and seditious; and particularly that these oaths, whereof the one was commonly called the National Covenant, and the other a Solemn League and Covenant, were, and are in themselves unlawful oaths;" and therefore declares their obligations void and null, and "annuls all acts or constitutions, ecclesiastic or civil, approving them."

Nor does it suffice them to rescind these covenants and other proceedings for carrying on the work of Reformation, as contrary to this royal prerogative of ecclesiastic supremacy, and to inhibit all persons to speak, write, or act anything in defence of the same, and against the said prerogative; but likewise, in the fifth Act of the foresaid session, all persons in any place, office, or trust, are obliged to swear all the particulars contained in the foresaid Acts, in that most impious oath, commonly called the Declara-And again, in the fifth Act of the third session of the tion. foresaid Parliament, entitled "Act for the establishment and constitution of a National Synod," it is declared, that "the ordering and disposal of the external government of the Church, and the nomination of the persons by whose advice matters relating to the same are to be settled, doth belong to his majesty, as an inherent right of the crown, by virtue of his prerogative royal, and supreme authority in causes ecclesiastical." And in the first Act of the second Parliament, holden by that apostate, John Earl of Lauderdale, entitled, "Act asserting his majesty's supremacy over all persons, and in all causes ecclesiastical," commonly called the Act Explanatory, it is expressly declared, "that his majesty hath the supreme authority and supremacy over all persons, and in all causes ecclesiastical within this kingdom; and that, by virtue thereof, the ordering and disposal of the external government and policy of the church, doth properly belong to his majesty and his successors as an inherent right to the crown; and that his majesty and his successors may settle, enact, and emit such constitutions, acts, and orders, concerning the administration of the external government of the church, and the persons employed in the same, and concerning all ecclesiastical meetings, and matters to be proposed and determined therein, as they in their royal wisdom shall think fit."

ROM all which Acts, it plainly appears, that the true sense of that authority, which they would have their private thoughts about, was really, as the martyrs understood it, his ecclesiastic supremacy, and that no less than a recognition hereof would serve their turn; and though some of the martyrs offered a distinction between the two, professing to own his civil authority abstract from the ecclesiastical (as for instance, Mr John Dick), yet they were not absolved, because they would not own his authority in gross. And besides their including the supremacy over church matters into the formal notion of the king's authority, they could be pleased with no less, from any that they called before them, than an owning the whole acts and laws, and entire exercise and administration of things in Church and State, which was an implicit condemning of all the preceding Reformation, and consenting to the persecution and murder of the saints who stood up for its defence.

It is true, indeed, these things were so impious and abominable, that, had they been proposed without mask, they would presently have begot an horror in the mind of any, who was not entirely lost to all conscience and goodness; and therefore these children of the old serpent had so much of their father, that they made it their work to hide these horrid hooks with some specious baits, that they might the more easily entice simple people into that snare they had laid for them; and hence, knowing how much it is the effect of true religion to make men loyal, and that the Presbyterians were of all others the readiest to yield all lawful subjection to their rightful princes, they still made use of the specious title of authority as a blind to hide the ecclesiastical supremacy and bloody exercise of their government, from these whom they laboured to ensnare. They saw the supremacy they intended to fix in the king was such a "Monstrum horrendum, informe, ingens, Hecate atque Erebo ortum," that, without some veil of this nature, no man would be so mad as to embrace it.

But when this would not do, but that still its ill-favoured face appeared through the vizor; and all good men saw, that the authority which sought no other way to maintain itself, but by blood and rapine, was really degenerated into tyranny; then they pretended to come some steps lower, and said, that they required no more at the hands of people, in order to dismiss them, but that they would at their desire pray for the king, in their prescribed form of words, viz., "God save the king," or that they would drink the king's good health. were by them represented to be so very minute and easy things, and by a great many professors looked upon as so trivial and indifferent, that they were in the fair way either to ensnare, or with more opportunity to expose such as refused to the contempt of indifferent spectators, as being such scrupulous fools and brain-sick persons, as were transported with an extravagant wild zeal without knowledge, who had rather have a hand in their own death, than do so small and indifferent a thing in order to prevent it. And hence not the persecutors only, but even a great many who professed presbyterian principles, stood not to call them murderers instead of martyrs.

But all this notwithstanding, it is certain they had nothing else before them, but to bring people to a tame submission and slavish compliance with the whole course of their Christ-dethroning and land-enslaving constitutions and administrations; for they intended the same thing, by urging people to say "God save the king," as by the Oath of Allegiance, Declaration, or Test; namely, an acknowledgment of that authority, wherewith they had vested him in the forementioned articles and others of like nature. Less than this could never serve their design, which was still the same, whatever alterations might appear to be in their way of prosecuting it.

For either these things were so insignificant and indifferent as they gave them out to be, and as others conceived of them; or they were not. If we say the former, then what monsters of mankind were these persecutors, who pursued poor innocent people to death, and inflicted such cruel tortures upon them, for trifles and things of indifferency. This is, what themselves (I suppose) would never admit, to be reckoned a degree further lost to humanity than a Nero or Caligula, so as to torment and destroy men for sport. Nay, they still pretended that all these persecutions were made upon weighty and just causes. If then we say the latter, namely, that they were not so very inconsiderable things as some conceived; wherein could the moment and weight of them consist, but in this, that they were an owning of the authority as it was contained in the laws, and what else was the scope of the most openly impious Oaths, Tests, and Bonds, but this?

And besides, when any yielded this much, they were still urged further, till they had debauched them out of all conscience and integrity as much as themselves. The rest of the questions put to them, and made causes of their indictment, were all but so many branches from this root, and rivulets from this spring. The chief was that about defensive arms, which their laws had declared rebellion; which all the martyrs, without the least jar or discord, did steadfastly maintain as being a thing so very consonant, not only to the positive commands of God in His Word, but also to the very law of nature stamped on the heart, and to the laws and practices of all kingdoms, and undertaken upon so necessary grounds as the defence of the Gospel and lives of the innocent in consequence of their Covenant engagements; which, however, these wicked persecutors had declared void and null, and the adhering to them capital; yet all such as had any love for God and zeal for His cause believed to be perpetually obligatory upon them and the nation, and therefore adhered to them with a steadfastness and courage invincible, against the most bloody opposition. And it is observable, that, whatever any of the martyrs had not so much light in as others, or differed from others anent, or was silent when interrogated upon it, yet they all agreed perfectly and were clear abundantly in owning, and bold, harmonious, and courageous in asserting the lawfulness, and avouching the obligatory force, of the Covenants

ATIONAL COVENANTS were the means that God had constantly from the beginning of the Reformation maduse of and blessed, to cement and strengthen His people in Scotland in their adherence to the truth. By means of these Hi church was as a strong city and incorporation, all prosecuting th same common cause of religion and liberty, so that by that common bond the injury offered to any one of her members was taken a done to all; and beside the express command of the Word, thi was a blessed tie and engagement to every one in their plac and station to stand up for the purity of the doctrine, simplicit of the worship, beauty and order of the government and discip line of Christ's house, and His royal supremacy over the same And hence malignant and disaffected persons, perceiving that ther was nothing so conducive to the advancement and preservation c national reformation as these mutual bonds and sacred Covenants set themselves chiefly to destroy these, and in an ignominious manne burnt them, declared them treasonable and seditious, made th owning of them criminal, and persecuted such as adhered to them and, on the other hand, God was pleased mightily to animate Hi suffering saints both with light and zeal in the defence of ther against all the efforts of hellish violence, Wherefore, when this alone was not like to effectuate their design these persecutors betook themselves to another stratagem, and fe upon more mild but more successful measures of giving out ir demnities and indulgences, so restricted and limited, as the accepter should be gained to a peaceable compliance with and submission t their impious laws, and taken off from their zeal in maintaining th work of Reformation, and divided from their Covenanted brethrer By this means they weakened the remnant that had not complied with Prelacy, set them at variance one against another, allured the one to sit quietly still till they had made an end of their brethren, and in short, rent and almost quite ruined the poor Presbyterian Church of Scotland; and hence, as the suffering remnant, which was by far the smaller part, were much opposed and reproached by these ministers and professors who accepted or made use of these pretended favours, so it became a necessary head of testimony to witness against the Indulgence, and acceptance thereof, or sinful connivance thereat. The particular disposition of this affair is not consistent with the narrow limits of a preface. Wherefore the reader may see for his satisfaction therein, "The History of the Indulgence," "Informatory Vindication," "Hind let Loose," etc.

Afterwards, when the persecution became sore and violent against the remnant that refused these deceitful baits, and stood to their Covenanted religion and liberty, and that both by the open violence of the enemies, and false slanders and calumnies of pretended friends, they were obliged to emit several Declarations of their principles, and to defend themselves from these unjust slanders and calumnies; which Declarations so soon as the persecutors got into their hands, thinking they had got a good handle therein for taking away the lives of all such as should adhere to them, (in regard that therein they had more explicitly and fully cast off the authority of the tyrant Charles II. and specified the reasons why they could not own his authority), they never failed on all occasions to make that a part of their examinations. "Own ye the Sanquhar Declaration, the papers found at Queensferry?" etc. And many were indicted upon their I conceive it is adherence to these Declarations and other papers. not necessary to swell this preface with a particular defence of these Declarations, that being so well done by themselves in the "Informatory Vindication," which the reader may have recourse to; and as for the paper found upon Mr Hall of Haughhead, when he was murdered at Queensferry, the reader shall see it, with a short relation concerning that worthy gentleman's death, in the Appendix to this book.

Another question commonly put to sufferers was, Whether they owned the Excommunication at the Torwood? which they did with much freedom; as a necessary duty, and lawfully performed, so far as that broken state of the Church would permit, and upon most weighty and sufficient grounds. The form and order of which Excommunication is also added by way of Appendix to this book.

But their finest topic, wherein they insulted and glorified most, was the death of James Sharp, Archbishop of St Andrews, which they reckoned a cruel murder, and therefore hoped that, if the sufferers should approve of the same, they would have a colour to destroy them, as being men of assassinating and bloody principles, deserving to be exterminated out of any well-governed commonwealth; and therefore it was still one of their questions—"Was the Bishop's death murder?" To which question some answered directly that it was a just and lawful execution of God's law upon him, for his perjurious treachery and bloody cruelty; others were silent, or refused to answer anything directly to the point, as, conceiving that it being no deed of theirs, they were not obliged by any law, Divine or human, to give their judgment thereupon, especially when they could not exactly know the circumstances of the matter of fact, and saw that the question was proposed with a design to ensnare them, or take away their life. Yet was their very silence or refusal to give their opinion made a cause of their indictment, and ground of their sentence, and some were put to torture to make them give their sentiments anent it. If any would be further satisfied on this head, let him see "Hind let Loose," head vi. page 633. [Edition 1744, page 646.—ED.]

But however these murderers of the servants and people of God made use of such questions as these to entangle them, yet still the grand state of the quarrel was, "Whether Christ alone or King Charles should be owned as head and lawgiver to the Church; and whether the Divine form of government and discipline which Christ had instituted should continue in her; or if an usurper should have leave to mould it, as he pleased, and conform it to the pompous dress of the Romish whore?"

And hence it is also evident, that the state of the sufferings before the engagement at Bothwell was really one and the same with that which was after it (as to the main, though things came to be clearer after it), concerning the civil authority, when by that and many other instances it was made evident, that the pretended rulers were setting themselves directly to ruin the whole interests of the subjects, as well civil as sacred, and that it was in vain to be any longer in suspense, waiting for a satisfactory redress of grievances, or opportunity to represent the same.

So that the charge of rebellion, laid against them not only by our Episcopal passive-obedience men, but also by the Indulged and such as tread their steps, is a most groundless imputation; for King Charles had violated all the conditions of government, and manifestly degenerated into a tyrant; long before they rejected his authority; and had refused all claim to the subjects' allegiance, upon the account of the contract which he entered into at his coronation, and had no other pretence to authority but hereditary right, and bloody force, with the consent of such profligate noblemen and gentlemen as sat in these packed and pretended Parliaments; which could never, in law or reason, oblige the honest and faithful subjects of the kingdom to comply with these tyrannical courses, and submit to him, who had as really forfeited his right to be king of Britain, as did his brother afterwards by his abdication.

But it is no new thing for the followers of Christ to meet with this charge of rebellion. If a Jezebel wants a Naboth's vineyard, and he stands up for his property, she will not want sons of Belial to bear witness that he "blasphemed God and the king." Do the adversaries of Judah and Benjamin intend to stop the building of Jerusalem, they'll not want a Rehum the chancellor, and Shimshai the scribe to write, "That this city is a rebellious city, and hurtful unto kings and provinces, and that they have moved sedition within the same of old time." Would Haman have all the Jews destroyed, because Mordecai will not honour him, this is the charge he lays against them, as most likely to effectuate his purpose, that "their laws are diverse from all people, neither keep they the king's laws." Have the presidents a purpose to be rid of Daniel, this is the engine, "that Daniel, which is of the children of the captivity of Judah, regardeth not thee, 0 king! nor the decree that thou hast signed." Is a Tertullus to employ his eloquence against Paul, here's the artifice—"We have found this man a pestilent fellow, and a mover of sedition among the Were the Romans desirous to have the Christians exterminated out of the empire, what shift took they? Why, truly this was it, "The Christians are rebellious and seditious; they won't swear by the life of Cæsar, nor adore his image!" and therefore Christianos ad Leones. If we look through the whole ecclesiastic history, we shall scarce find a persecution raised, but this is an article of the charge. But it is no paradox, "the servant is not greater than his Lord;" even Christ himself was accused and condemned as an But I shall not enter enemy to Cæsar, and a mover of sedition. into this argument; the sufferers for Christ in Scotland have been frequently vindicated from the charge of rebellion by more learned pens, and yet still we have a generation of absurd men, who will not fail to renew it; nor can the strength of argument silence them, while they have brow enough to return railing in the room of reason.

HE reader having thus briefly seen the causes upon which they laid down their lives, it were necessary to proceed to a short delineation, both of the cruelty of the persecutors inflicting, and of the courage, patience, and cheerfulness of the martyrs suffering these severities; but as for the former, what tongue can express, what pen can describe the barbarous cruelty and hellish rage of these sons of wickedness? One might write a volume upon their cruelties, and after all fall short of drawing them to the life, or giving any just idea of them; they were so extremely inhuman and brutish. At first they began with noblemen, gentlemen, and ministers, who had been eminent for the cause of God; beheading some, and placing their heads on the ports [i.e., gateways] of Edinburgh, in token of the highest contempt; banishing others, ejecting all from their charges, but such as would subject to Prelacy, and the blasphemous Supremacy; and vitiating all the springs and seminaries of learning. Next, they fell to compel the common people to hear curates, by vast and exorbitant fines, extorted by troops of soldiers, plundering, quartering, beating, wounding, binding men like beasts; chasing them away from their houses; compelling them, though sick, to go to church; consuming and wasting their provisions with dogs; and promiscuously abusing, as well those that conformed, as them that refused; and if any testified their resentment at these vermin of ignorant and scandalous curates, or refused to give them their titles, they were imprisoned, scourged, stigmatised [i.e., branded with a hot iron], and banished to Barbadoes or other foreign parts. Any that were hearing their own ministers in private houses were seized, dragged to prisons, and close kept there in great hardship; and that of every age and sex.

These were their tender mercies, and but the beginnings of sorrows; for, after the defeat at Pentland Hills, beside what were killed upon the spot, such as surrendered upon quarter and solemn parole to have their life, were, contrary to the law of nature and nations, treacherously and bloodily murdered, to the number of forty; one of them, a much reverenced young minister [Hugh M'Kail] had his leg squeezed to pieces in the Boot, and was afterwards hanged, though he was not in the fight, but had only a sword about him. Soldiers were ordered to take free quarters in the country to examine men by tortures; to compel women and children to discover their husbands and fathers, by threatening death, wounding, stripping, torturing by fire-matches, etc.; crowding into prisons so thick that they could scarce stand together, in cold, hunger, and nakedness; and all this, because they would not or could not discover who were at that expedition. Likewise many ensnaring bonds, oaths, and tests were framed, and imposed with rigour and horrid severity; people obliged to have passes declaring they had taken them, or swear before common soldiers, under pain of being presently shot dead. Severe laws were made against ministers that came to Edinburgh for shelter; they and their wives were searched for, by public search, crowded into prisons, and sent to foreign plantations to be sold as Dragoons were sent to pursue people that attended fieldpreachings, to search them out in mosses, moors, mountains and dens of the earth. Savage hosts of Highlanders were sent down to depopulate the western shires, to the number of ten or eleven thousand, who acted most outrageous barbarities, even almost to the laying some countries desolate.

After the overthrow of the Lord's people at Bothwell they doubled their severities; issued out more soldiers, imposed cess, localities, and other new exactions, forced people to swear super inquirendis, and delate upon oath all that went to field-preachings; they set up extraordinary circuit courts, enlarged their Porteous rolls, [i.e., lists of persons summoned to appear before the Justiciary Courts], pressed bonds of compearance to keep the peace, to attend the church, refrain from field-meetings, etc.; examining country people upon several questions which they had no occasion to understand, concerning the death of King Charles I. and the Archbishop of St Andrews, and condemning them to death for not answering; quartering some alive, cropping their ears, cutting off the hands of some, and then hanging them, cutting their bodies in pieces after they were dead, and fixing them upon poles in chains, and upon steeples and ports of cities, beating drums at their executions, that they might not be heard speak; detaining others long in prison, laden with chains and fetters of iron, and exposed to greater tortures than death itself, and, after all, sent to be sold as slaves, to empty the prisons; exercising all these bloody deaths and cruelties upon poor country people, which had no influence to do hurt to their government, though they had been willing; yea, upon women of tender age, whom they hanged and drowned, for refusing their oaths and bonds, and resetting the Lord's suffering people.

It would be endless to enumerate all the barbarities exercised upon particular persons, only for a swatch [i.e., specimen], take these inflicted upon that excellent gentleman, David Hackston of Rathillet. He was taken out from the place of judgment to his execution, and his body, which was already wounded, was tortured while he was alive, by cutting off both his hands, which was done upon a high scaffold prepared for the purpose; thereafter being drawn up by a pulley to the top of the high gallows by the rope which was about his neck, and suffered to fall down a considerable way upon the lower scaffold three times with his whole weight; then he was fixed at the top of the gallows, and the executioner, with a big knife, cutting open his breast, pulled out his heart while he was yet alive (as appeared both by the body contracting itself, when it was pulled out, and by the violent motion of the heart when it dropped upon the scaffold), which the executioner, taking up upon the knife, showed to the people upon the several corners of the stage, crying, "Here is the heart of a traitor!" and then threw it in a fire prepared for the purpose upon the stage, together also with his other inward and noble parts; and having quartered his body, fixed his head and hands on a port at Edinburgh, and the other quarters at Leith, Cupar of Fife, and other places. Such was the size and proportion of their persecutions, while yet they pretended to bring them to the knowledge of assizes and colour of law.

But being now weary with these persecutions, according to the tenor of their own laws, the Councillors, to rid themselves of this trouble, gave out an edict for killing them, wherever they might be found, immediately upon the spot, unless they would take the oaths, and show their pass (which they behoved to swear that it was not forged), and if they found any arms or ammunition upon them of any sort. By means of which edict, many were suddenly surprised and shot dead by the brutish and merciless soldiers, who were either peaceably living at home, following their lawful employments, or wandering in mountains to hide themselves from their bloody enemies, not being allowed time to recommend their souls to God; and the country was engaged by oath to raise the hue and cry against them, in order to deliver them up to the hands of these burriors [i.e., The chief contrivers and framers of this horrid executioners. murdering edict, were the Earl of Perth, chancellor, Duke of Queensberry, Marquis of Athole, and, particularly, the Viscount of Tarbat, now Earl of Cromarty, who invented this murdering device, wherein yet he carried so cunningly, that he procured the despatch of the Act to the king with such suddenness, that he found a way to shift his own subscribing it; and though he wants power now to practise such bloody mischief, yet, it is evident, he has not repented thereof; but is, as yet, a contriver of the present encroachments made upon the Established Church, by the late mischievous Acts of Parliament [i.e., the Act of Toleration, requiring the taking of the Oath of Abjuration, the Act restoring Patronage, etc.—Ed.]

But I must not launch any further into the relation of these cruelties, the true history of which would commence into a volume. I own indeed, that a fuller narration of these things, with pertinent observations thereupon, would have been proper enough for the intended work; but, hoping that the Lord may yet raise up some of better abilities for such an undertaking, to set these sufferings in a true light, and give an impartial recital thereof, this short hint, together with some account of these cold blood murderers in the Appendix, may suffice at present.

ET us next view a little, with some attention and concern, with what undaunted courage, holy resolution, and greatness of mind, with what unshaken steadfastness and constancy, those worthy sufferers underwent all these bloody severities. Those disciples of Jesus had been so trained up in His school, and learned the great Christian doctrines of bearing the cross, mortifying the flesh, and contemning the world—they had been so thoroughly instructed by this great Master of assemblies, who teaches to profit, and leads the blind in a way they know not, to discern the exceeding preciousness of truth, and excellency of the knowledge of Christ—that they were made willing, yea, cheerfully willing, to forego riches, honours, pleasures, liberty, and life itself, when they came in competition with a steady adherence to the truth and honour of their lovely Lord. Love to Jesus Christ was the great spring which set all the wheels of their affections in motion, to do and suffer for Him whatever He called Every one of them could say to their persecutors, what Chrysostom said to the Empress Eudoxia, who sent him a threatening message, "Nil nisi peccatum timeo," I fear nothing but sin. saw so much of the evil of sin, and beauty of holiness, that they would rather undergo the severest of suffering than stain their consciences with the least sin, or lose the smallest filing of this fine gold Many of the things for which they suffered were reckoned of truth.

small by the indifferent world, but to them they appeared in their just magnitude.

Tertullian, in his book, "De Corona Militis," tells us, that when a certain Christian soldier in the emperor's army refused to wear a crown of bays upon his head, as all the rest of the soldiers did upon a day sacred to one of the heathen idols, he was not only mocked by the infidels for his nicety, but even by many of the Christians; conceiving it a folly that this one man, for such a small and indifferent thing, should endanger both himself and other Christians; but Tertullian defends him, and says, "This soldier was more God's soldier, and more constant than the rest of his brethren, who presumed they might serve two Lords, and, for avoiding persecution, comply with the heathen in their superstitious rites." when some Christians, who, like our Indulged people, would rather comply than endure the hazard, objected, "Where is it written in all the Word of God, that we should not wear bays upon our heads?" Tertullian answers, "Where is it written that we may do it? We must look into the Scriptures to see what we may do; and not think it enough that the Scripture doth not forbid directly this or that very particular."

They knew, with the same Tertullian, in the fore-cited book, "that the state of Christianity doth not admit the excuse of necessity. There is no necessity of sinning to them, to whom it is only necessary And hence they would not so much as seem to call in not to sin." question any of the truths of Christ; when the enemies would have given them time to deliberate, and advise anent them, they were so confirmed in the present truth, that they answered their adversaries as Cyprian once did his, "In materia tam justa non est deliberandum," In so just a cause there needs no deliberation. were urged with the example of other Presbyterians, ministers and professors, who had complied, and were far wiser and better than they; this did not shake them, but rather heightened their zeal. Chrysostom tell us, these two holy martyrs, Juventius and Maximus. when they were urged by their persecutors with this argument, "Do not ye see others of your rank do thus?" answered, "for this very reason we will manfully stand and offer ourselves as a sacrifice for the breach that they have made." So the sad defections of their brethren made them the more emulous to witness for Christ, when so many, Demas-like, had forsaken Him, having loved this present world.

These martyrs had such large discoveries of Christ's love, especially under the cross, that their hardest trials were accounted As Stephen the protomartyr got the fullest view of Christ while before the council, so these had most lively sights of Him under their sharpest sufferings; and hence they could not find in their heart to deny so kind a Master. As Polycarp, that holy minister of Christ at Smyrna, answered the proconsul bidding him defy Christ and he should be discharged: "Fourscore and six years (said he) have I been His servant, yet all this time He hath not so much as once hurt me; how then may I speak evil of my King and Sovereign who hath thus preserved me?" so they were under a lively sense of their vows and obligations to Christ, personal and national, and therefore durst not, could not, deny His name, nor break His bonds, and cast away His cords, as the wicked had done. They were of the resolute disposition of Victorianus, who, being solicited by the Emperor to turn Arian, told him, "You may try all extremities, torture me, expose me to wild beasts, burn me to ashes; I had rather suffer anything than falsify my promise made to Christ my Saviour in baptism." And as Christ had been very kind to them, so they trusted much to Him, and depended on Him for strengthening influence, being very sensible of their own weakness; and they durst promise much on Christ's head; they could say, as Vincentius to the tyrant Decius, "Rage, and do the utmost that the spirit of malignity can set you on work to do; you shall see God's Spirit strengthen the tormented more than the devil can do the tormentors." And as Zuinglius to the Bishop of Constance, "Truth is a thing invincible, and cannot be resisted."

As they were well instructed in the necessity, so in the usefulness and benefit of the cross; they knew that, as the church and nation had deserved to be chastened and punished of God, so it was far more eligible to be chastened by sore adversities, inflicted by a loving father, than by severe impunities of an incensed and just They knew that the grief they suffered was medicinal, not judge. penal; the correction of a father, not the indignation of an enemy; and that they needed such merciful files and furnaces of adversity to scour off the rust they had contracted in prosperity. Nay, they were not only content to undergo these fatherly corrections, but accounted it a singular kindness and condescension that what they deserved should be their punishment, was made their glory, crown, and honour; that they, who had merited to be scattered into corners, and have their remembrance made to cease from among men, for their lightly prizing the precious and glorious Gospel, should be gathered into such a cloud of witnesses, and have their remembrance made everlasting as honoured martyrs for Christ and the defence of His Gospel; that when they had provoked God by their sinful lusting after a malignant to be their king, they should be dignified to contend for the kingly prerogatives of such a glorious and good sovereign as the King of Kings. And as they had a good understanding in the doctrine of the cross, so likewise in the promise of the crown that is upon the back of the cross; they had their eye at the recompense of reward, and therefore endured, because by faith they saw Him who is invisible. It was their looking unto Jesus, who endured such contradiction of sinners against Himself, that made them bear all these reproaches, slanders, scoffs, and jeers, from enemies and professed friends, with such invincible patience.

HOU hast here, Christian reader, the dying speeches of some of these noble heroes, and, as the speeches of dying men are remarkable, the speeches of dying Christians more remarkable, how remarkable must the speeches of dying witnesses for Christ It is reasonably expected that dying men, much more dying Christians, and most of all, dying martyrs, should speak best at last. They are immediately to give in their last account; they are disinterested from all the worldly views that use to darken our understandings and bias our affections, while living in health and prosperity; they are upon the borders of eternity; and, as the motions of nature are the stronger the nearer they are to the centre, so saints are most lively and heavenly when nearest heaven. Martyrs have a special promise "that it shall be given them in that hour what they shall speak." The last speeches of Christ's dying witnesses have extorted even from heathens acknowledgments to the honour of God; "Vere magnus est Deus Christianorum," Truly great is the Christians' God! They have been made the means of conversion to many thousands of sinners; as Justin Martyr testifies of himself, that the dying words of the Christians made him fall in love with the life of Christianity. ["Second Apology," chap. 12].

I own they are not bedecked with the embellishments of oratory and fine language; who can expect that from people of so mean education? But they are full of the language of heaven, which is many degrees more forcible than all our artificial rhetoric. One will find several mistakes in grammar, no doubt, in them; but they were never intended for the reflections of critics, but for the instruction of Christians; and their plain rude discourses may, through God's blessing, do more good to the latter, than the most elaborate composures can do to the former. They may serve both as a comfort and encouragement to sufferers, and as an instruction and example to saints. Herein, as in a glass, we may both see our blemishes, wherein we come short of them, and learn to dress ourselves with the like Christian ornaments of zeal, holiness, steadfastness, meekness, patience, humility, and other graces.

But, alas! How can the best of us read these Testimonies, without blushing for our low attainments and small proficiency in the school of Christ! How unlike are we to them! how zealous were they for the honour of Christ! How lukewarm are we of whatever profession or denomination! How burning was their love to Him, His truths, ordinances and people! How cold is ours! denied and crucified to the world were they! How selfish and worldly are we! How willing were they to part with all for Christ, and what an honour did they esteem it to suffer for Him, to be chained, whipped, haltered, staked, imprisoned, banished, wounded, killed for Him! How unwilling are we to part with a very little for Him, much less to endure such hardships, and account them our glory! Alas! are we not ashamed of what they accounted their ornament, and account that our glory, which they looked upon as a disgrace! How easy was it for them to choose the greatest sufferings rather than the least sin! How hard is it for us not to choose the greatest sin, before the least suffering! Oh that their Christian virtues could upbraid us out of our lethargy of supine security,—that their humility, meekness, and patience could shame us out of our pride, haughtiness, and impatience! They were sympathising Christians, active for the glory of God and good of souls, diligent to have their evidences for heaven clear; and, having obtained assurance of God's love to their persons, and approbation of their cause, they went cheerfully on their way, fearless of men, who can only kill the body, and ready to die the most violent death at God's call. But, oh! how little fellow-feeling is there now among Christians; but instead thereof, bitterness, emulation, wrath, envy, contentions and How little concern for the work and cause of Christ! how dark are the most part, both as to their spiritual state, and their proper and pertinent duty! And how much is the fear of man prevailing above zeal for the glory of God!

1. Granting, for argument's sake, that they had expressed themselves with some more fervency on that head, than others formerly have done, and that this was a piece of their infirmity, it will not follow that we should presently admit the invidious inference, that therefore they were no martyrs for Christ; for as neither the many gross failings of the Old Testament saints, nor the mistakes of the primitive Christians about the truths for which they suffered, could deprive either of the honour of saintship or martyrdom, so neither ought any infirmity of theirs to be improven against them for that Solomon tells us, that oppression makes a wise man mad; and they met with it in the highest degree, and that not from the hands of Pagans, Turks, or Papists, but of those who had been their covenanted brethren by profession; and when a holy self-resigned David had much ado to bear reproaches from the hand of one that had been his equal, guide, and acquaintance, with whom he had formerly sweet fellowship, it was not to be wondered, if they were put upon some vehemency of expression by their severe sufferings from such hands; and should rather be favourably constructed of.

> ----"Si quid, Intumuit pietas, si quid flagrantius actum est."

But, 2. More directly, I am bold to deny the charge; for they everywhere distinguish betwixt the injuries done to them, considered simply in themselves, and the injuries done to Christ, and to His image in them. The former they declare they forgive as they desire forgiveness of God themselves; the latter they leave to God's sovereign disposal, withal wishing that God might give them repentance. Nor is the thing unprecedented; for, beside the example of Jeremiah, who laid his innocent blood at the door of the princes, if they should take his life, there might be several more recent parallels adduced. It shall suffice to instance one of our own nation, imprisoned for bearing witness to the same truth, namely, worthy Mr John Welch, who, in his letter to Lady Fleming, hath these express words: "The f our blood shall lie upon bishops, councillors, and commis, who have stirred up our prince against us, and so upon the our brethren, who either by silence approve, or by crying peace, strengthen the arm of the wicked, that they cannot and in the meantime make the heart of the righteous sad.

upon all them that sat in council, and did not bear plain testiof Jesus Christ and His truth, for which we suffer. And next, hese that should have come and made open testimony of Christ ly, although it had been to the hazard of their lives. Finally, se that counsel, command, consent, and allow, are guilty in the f God." Sure I am, this is as full as anything they have on ad, and proves that what they did was consistent with a Chrisd forgiving temper of spirit.

d as they went off the stage both with magnanimity and meeko it has been observed concerning many of their persecutors, ey departed this world with visible symptoms of God's wrath dgments, especially with hell in their souls. I mean, the of an awakened conscience, under the sense of God's indignaan which there can be no greater torment in this life.

——"Siculi non invenere tyranni Tormentum majus."——

Il, these martyrs are now in heaven, in Abraham's warm enjoying the crown laid up for them, confirmed in an geable state of rest and blessedness: we are yet in the stage on and place of probation, we have our trials before us; let us the Cloud of Witnesses, and contend for the faith once ed to the saints. We know not what storms are abiding us; naanite and the Perizzite are yet in the land. A restless and Jacobite party, projecting a new revolution of affairs; as lary and cruel yet as ever, and retaining as much of the old ity and enmity against the Covenanted work of Reformation , only waiting an opportunity to exert it; [the Jacobite insurin favour of the Pretender took place in 1715—the year after rords were written.—ED.]; and many things in the present asaffairs portending, that they may be our scourge in the hand of pleased Lord, for our misimproving mercies and deliverances, ng ourselves with our own things, not minding the things of ; chiefly for our undervaluing the offers of the blessed Son of the Gospel, and visible breach of national obligations to be Seeing then such clouds are gathering, and n and His cause.

threatening a dismal tempest, let us arm ourselves with the same mind, to stand up for the truth upon all hazards, whether we be called of God to do, or to suffer, for the joint interest of true religion and national liberty; for these, like Hippocrates's twins, weep or laugh, live or die together. Righteousness exalteth a nation, said the wise Solomon; and Theodosius the Emperor owned that the establishment of a Christian state depends chiefly upon piety towards God. On the other hand, civil liberty is an excellent bulwark to religion, without which its purity cannot long be preserved; for, as the same Emperor said, "Multa inter ecclesiam et rempublicam cognatio intercedere solet; ex se invicem pendent, et utraque prosperis alterius successibus incrementa sumit;" there is a great sibness [i.e., close relationship], betwixt the Church and the Commonwealth; they depend the one upon the other, and either is advanced by the prosperity and success of the other.

It is to be feared, that this time of ease and outward peace has so effeminated and softened our spirits, that we'll find it hard to face a storm; we may complain with Eusebius, "Res nostrae nimia libertate in mollitiem et segnitiem degenerarunt;" too much liberty has The vigorous exercise of Christian made us soft and sluggish. discipline has been much intermitted, and therefore we have ground to expect severe correction from the hand of God. Cyprian observes, that this was the procuring cause of God's correcting the Church in his time: "Quia traditam nobis divinitus disciplinam pax longa corruperat, jacentem fidem, et pene dixerim dormientem, censura coelestis erexit;" because long peace had corrupted the divinely instituted discipline, therefore, there needed heavenly chastisement to awaken the faith of the Church, which was lying low, and almost fast asleep. All these dying witnesses assure us of judgments abiding this Church and nation, and our present condition seems to say, that we are the people that are to meet with them; how much need then had we of the Christian armour, the divine panoplia, which made these Christians proof against all the fiery darts of Satan and the wicked; and of the holy submission which made them bear the indignation of the Lord patiently, because they had sinned against Him?

AVING thus briefly ushered thee into the following sheets, Christian and candid reader, I shall detain thee no longer from perusing them, save only by the way to take notice of these few advertisements:

1. It is not pretended that here are all the Speeches and Testi-es of those that suffered in Scotland since the year 1680. of them, which no doubt are extant, have not come into the s of the publishers of this collection, and some of them, that in their hands, did so far coincide with others in matter and ie, that they lest them unpublished, with some remark upon , to keep up the memory of these honourable sufferers; being ous that the book should not swell to such a bulk, as might : it less useful to country people, who have not much money to nor leisure to read bulky volumes. And if encouragement be 1 in this attempt, there may more of them come to be published Only this the collectors of these testimonies can say, they have left out none which were in their hands, that they eived might be for the benefit of the public, upon any sinistrous or account. And if any shall find any alteration in any of them their own manuscripts (except it be in the grammar, wherein took some little freedom, where necessity required it), they are pute it to the variety of copies, whereof they had several, and that which they conceived most genuine.

. As for the Testimonies of the Banished, they being much the as to all material points with these of the dying witnesses, they mitted, and a list of their names added in the Appendix.

. The Last Speeches of those who suffered on account of the Earl gyle's attempt, in the year 1685, are advisedly pretermitted, both ise some of them are already published in a book entitled, "The ern Martyrology," and likewise because it is the opinion of the iragers of this work, that their testimony was not so directly cond, according to the true state of the quarrel, for the Covenanted est of the Church of Christ in Scotland, as it ought to have been; th they intend not hereby to rob them of the glory of martyrdom re Protestant religion. Nor can this be any prejudice to others, may incline more fully to publish the transactions of these times. lay the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who enabled people to witness so good a confession for His truth and cause, these dying speeches useful to animate all the lovers of the ned religion, with the like Christian magnanimity and resolution, and up for its defence against a Popish, Prelatic, and Jacobitish on, endeavouring its overthrow! May He unite us in the way of and duty, to strive together for the valuable interests of our on and liberty!

AN ENCOMIUM

ON THE

FOLLOWING MARTYRS.

O I here of faithful Witnesses a Cloud, For Christ their King resisting unto blood, Lo! here upon their Pisgah top they stand, Just on the confines of Emmanuel's Land: Leaving th' ungrateful world, longing to be Possess'd of blessed immortality. Lo! here they stand, accosting cruel death With Christian braveness, to their latest breath; The views they have of heav'n's eternal joys, So far eclipse all sublunary toys, Their souls are only charm'd with things above, Exulting in their sweet Redeemer's love. Lo! here they stand, and will not quit the field, They'll die upon the spot, before they'll yield. Lo! with what courage and brave resolution They bear the shock of bloody persecution. Hell's rage, Rome's fury, or the scorn of those Pretending friendship, though the worst of foes, Could never shake their steady loyalty To Zion's King, for whose supremacy

Over His Church thus boldly they contend, And by His grace endure unto the end; Refusing e'er to make a base surrender Of Christ's regalia to a vile pretender, Who, swoll'n with more than Luciferian pride, Could not in his own princely place abide, But would usurp the sp'ritual pow'r and throne By God JEHOVAH giv'n to Christ alone. And having thus 'gainst heav'n display'd a banner, The Covenant he swore in solemn manner He broke and burnt; Divine and human laws Trod under foot; and, to advance his cause, Made bloody violence the only claim, Whereby he wore the royal diadem: Being serv'd with beasts devoid of human sense, Much more of honour and of conscience; Who slew God's dearest saints in field and city, 'Gainst law and reason, without sense of pity; Whose sharpest sufferings could not assuage, Nor death itself allay their hellish rage; As if their bodies dead felt sense of pains, Cut all in parts, they hung them up in chains; Heads, legs, and arms, they plac'd on every port Of burghs, or other places of resort, As standing trophies of their victory O'er Divine truth and human liberty. Well, have they kill'd, and ta'en possession too? Is this the utmost that their rage could do, Only to send Christ's loving subjects home, To their dear country where they long to come! What matter where their dusty parts do ly, Interr'd in earth, or lifted up on high, While as their souls eternal anthems raise, In sweet accents to their Redeemer's praise!

And will not Zion's King regain His crown?

Throwing such vain aspiring mortals down

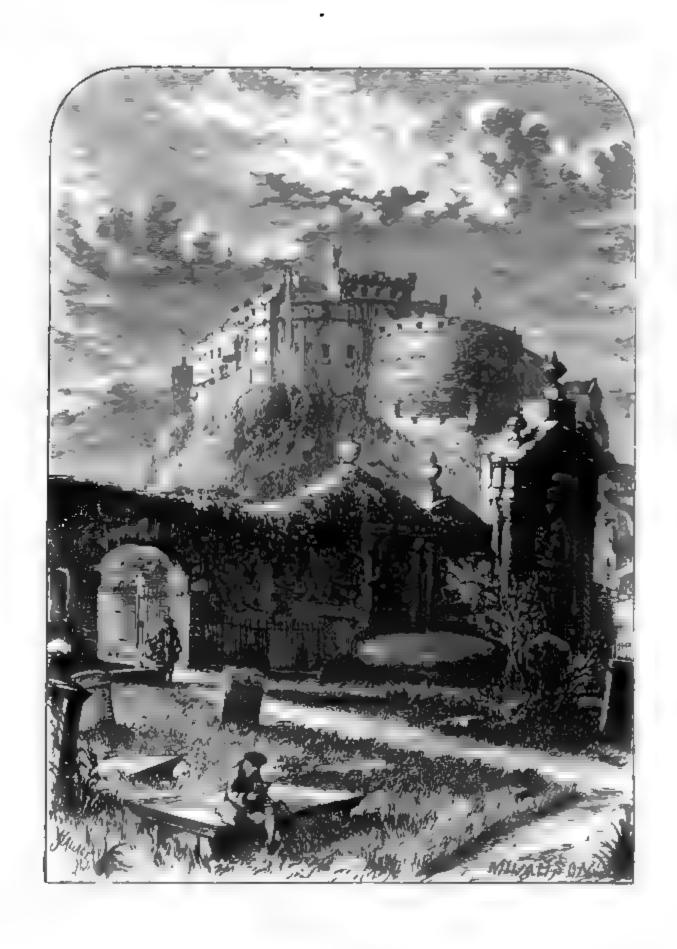

Into that direful pit, from whence did flow

These mists of pride which did enchant them so.

Come, then, behold these noble Witnesses
Adorn'd with holy zeal and faithfulness;
Who like a Cloud do us environ round,
Viewing (as 'twere) what way we'll stand our ground.
Let's run our race with equal patience,
With eyes intent upon our recompense.

THE GREYFRIARS CHURCHYARD, EDINBURGH.

Donald Cargill.

onalD Cargill was the fourth minister, in succession from the Reformation, of the Barony parish, Glasgow; his predecessor being Zachary Boyd, the author of the quaint m, the "Last Battle of the Soul," and a metrical version of the lms. He was a native of the parish of Rattray in Perthshire, received his early education in Aberdeen. From school he at to the University of St Andrews, where he passed through the plant curriculum.

His father, a godly and feligious gentleman, says Sir Robert milton, in his "Relation of some Remarkable Passages in the of Mr Donald Cargill" (given in the Appendix to this volume), desirous that he should study for the ministry; but he declined, ler the conviction that the responsibilities of the office were greater a he could bear. His father still continued to urge him, when he sived to set apart a day for fasting, and prayer for Divine directive to the result was, that he yielded to his father's wishes.

Professor James Wodrow, the father of the historian, was a pw-student, and was very intimate with him. The Professor that he was shy and reserved, and for a time was troubled a grievous temptations, which drove him to such despair that he length determined to put an end to his miserable life. Under horrible fury of those hery darts, he went out once or twice the river Clyde, with a dreadful resolution to drown himself; somebody or other coming by him, always stayed his purpose.

The temptation still continued, and one day he was on the point of throwing himself into an old coal pit, when that word struck him in the mind, "Son, be of good cheer, thy sins are forgiven." It put new life into him. His fears and doubts vanished, and his faith acquired the confidence that so strikingly appears in his after life.

He became minister of the Barony parish in 1654. Little, however, is known of him during his ministry, further than the general statement of Wodrow, that he was "a pious and zealous minister," and a "successful preacher of the Gospel." In 1662 he refused to keep the anniversary day of thanksgiving for the restoration of Charles II., and to accept a presentation from the archbishop of Glasgow; and in November he was banished north of the Tay.

He was at the battle of Bothwell Bridge—June 22, 1679—when he was severely wounded and taken prisoner, but was set free by his two captors when they found who he was. As soon as his wounds healed he went over to Holland; but after a short residence there he returned to Scotland, and lived in retirement at Queensferry. The escape he here made when surprised by his enemies, through Haughhead's grappling with the governor of Blackness until he got safely away, is detailed in the Appendix, in the "Brief Relation," etc., of Henry Hall. After this deliverance he preached much in company with Richard Cameron, until the fatal encounter at Airsmoss—July 22, 1680—left him well-nigh alone.

In September, before a great assemblage at the Torwood, half way between Larbert and Stirling, he pronounced sentence of excommunication upon Charles II., and the Dukes of York, Monmouth, Lauderdale, Rothes, Sir G. M'Kenzie, and Dalziel of Binns. The sentence itself is in the Appendix. The Government was now stirred up more than ever against him. On November 22, he was declared to be "one of the most seditious preachers," and "a villainous and fanatical conspirator," and a reward of 5000 merks offered to any one who should bring him in, dead or alive. In December following he made a second narrow escape from the governor of Blackness. He spent the next three months in England, where, according to Patrick Walker, "the Lord blessed his labours in the ministry to the conviction and edification of many souls."

In April 1681 he came back to Scotland, and passed his few remaining weeks in almost constant preaching. His last sermon was preached, July 10th, at Dunsyre, a parish in Lanarkshire on the confines of Midlothian, and on the watershed between the east and west of Scotland. Next morning he was seized while in bed, and was immediately hurried on to Lanark, and thence to Glasgow; on the 15th he was brought before the Council in Edinburgh, and again on the 19th. His "interrogatories" and "answers" on both occasions are in Wodrow's History. During his imprisonment Professor Wodrow visited him. After some conversation, he asked how he found matters with him? Mr Cargill answered, "as to the main point, my interest in Christ, and the pardon of my sins, I have no doubts there; neither have I been ever shaken since the Lord's condescension to me in my extremity about twenty-five years ago, which I communicated to you a little after; and no thanks to me, for the evidence was so clear that I could, never since, once doubt."

He was tried on the 26th, along with Walter Smith, James Boig, William Thomson, and William Cuthill, martyrs whose testimonies According to Patrick Walker, in "Some are also in this volume. Remarkable Passages in the Life and Death of that singular Exemplary, holy in life, zealous and faithful unto the death, Mr Cargill," when he was first brought before the Council, "they were very fierce and furious against him, especially Chancellor Rothes." But, in the interval, Cargill's words at the examination, as well as the spectacle of Rothes, now in sore suffering upon his death-bed, [so remarkably in accordance with the martyr's answer to his threatenings: "My Lord Rothes, forbear to threaten me; for die what death I will, your eyes will not see it,"] had done much to allay their wrath; and it was proposed, that "as he was old, and had done all the ill he would do, to let him go to the Bass and be prisoner there during It was put to the vote, but by the casting vote of the Earl of Argyle, who said, "Let him go to the gallows and die like a traitor," it was carried that he be hanged next day.

Argyle's vote afterwards troubled him. His premature rising in 1685 against the Government with which he had been so long associated, brought him few followers. One morning, after his landing, he was walking at the waterside very sad, when he was accosted by a Thomas Urquhart. "I am sorry to see your Lordship so melancholy." "How can I be otherwise?" replied Argyle. "I see few coming to our assistance. I am persuaded I will be called Infatuate Argyle. But all does not trouble me so much as the unhappy, wicked vote I gave against that good man and minister, Mr Cargill; and now I am persuaded I shall die a violent death in that same spot where he died," a persuasion unhappily soon verified. On the morning of his execution, it is said that Argyle again spoke of the vote to some of his friends, and declared, "That above all things in his life, it lay heaviest upon him."

THE HIGH CHURCH OF GLASGOW, FROM AN OLD PRINT-BAST VIEW

The sentence passed upon Cargill and his fellow-sufferers was executed July 27th, 1681. "The hangman hashed and hagged off all their heads with an axe. Mr Cargill's, Mr Smith's, and Mr Boig's heads were fixed upon the Netherbow Port; William Cuthill's and William Thomson's upon the West Port."

Donald Cargill's dying testimony, and the four letters that follow it, are all of the same character—earnest and evangelical, and written in nervous English. M'Millan's "Collection of Letters," Edinburgh, 1764, contains two by Cargill. They are of the same nature as those in this volume. John Howie of Lochgoin, in his "Collection of Lectures and Sermons," etc., has given four lectures and seven sermons, from notes taken by hearers. But they are obviously imperfect, and by no means do justice to Donald Cargill. One of them is said to be his last sermon. Patrick Walker gives the close of the same discourse, and in a form much superior to that of Howie, which indeed justifies Wodrow's commendation, as well as his own, of Donald Cargill as a preacher:

"I had the happiness to hear blest Mr Cargill preach his last

THE HIGH CHURCH OF GLASGOW RESTORED-WEST VIEW

esire to bless the Lord) in Dunsyre-Common, betwixt Clydesand Lothian, where he lectured upon the 1st chapter of Jereand preached upon that soul-refreshing text, Isa. xxvi., two last i, 'Come, my people, enter into your chambers,' etc. Wherein s short, marrowy, and sententious, as his ordinary was in all his esermons and prayers, with the greatest evidences of condness, exceeding all that ever I heard open a mouth, or saw a Bible to preach the Gospel, with the greatest indignation at aconcernedness of hearers. He preached from experience, and to the experience of all that had any of the Lord's gracious ig with their souls. It came from his heart, and went to the
; as I have heard some of our common hearers say, that he as never man spake, for his words went through them.

He insisted what kind of chambers these were of protection afety, and exhorted us all earnestly to dwell in the clefts of ock, to hide ourselves in the wounds of Christ, and to wrap were in the believing application of the promises flowing there; and to make our refuge under the shadow of His wings, until sad calamities pass over, and the dove come back with the oliveral her mouth. These were the last words of his last semmon."

The following testimony, and those of Walter Smith and James Boig, are given first, because of their importance, and the high character and influence of Donald Cargill. With David Hackston a chronological arrangement begins, which is strictly followed throughout the volume.—ED.]

HE LAST SPEECH AND TESTIMONY of the Rev. Mr Donald Cargill, sometime Minister of the Gospel in the Barony Parish of Glasgow, delivered by him in Writing before his Execution at the Cross of Edinburgh, July 27, 1681:—

"This is the most joyful day that ever I saw in my pilgrimage on earth. My joy is now begun, which I see shall never be interrupted. I see both my interest and His truth, and the sureness of the one, and the preciousness of the other. It is near thirty years since He made it sure; and since that time, though there has fallen out much sin, yet I was never out of an assurance of mine interest, nor long out of sight of His presence. He has dandled me, and kept me lively, and never left me behind, though I was ofttimes turning back. Oh! He has showed the wonderful preciousness of His grace, not only in the first receiving thereof, but in renewed and multiplied pardons!

"I have been a man of great sins, but He has been a God of great mercies; and now, through His mercies, I have a conscience as sound and quiet as if I had never sinned. It is long since I could have adventured on eternity, through God's mercy and Christ's merits; but death remained somewhat terrible, and that now is taken away; and now death is no more to me, but to cast myself into my husband's arms, and to lie down with Him. And however it be with me at the last, though I should be straitened by God or interrupted by men, yet all is sure, and shall be well. I have followed holiness, I have taught truth, and I have been most in the main things; not that I thought the things concerning our times little, but that I thought none could do anything to purpose in God's great and public matters, till they were right in their conditions.

"And O that all had taken this method! for then there had been fewer apostacies. The religion of the land, and zeal for the land's engagements, are come to nothing but a supine, loathsome, and hateful formality; and there cannot be zeal, liveliness, and rightness, where people meet with persecution, and want heart-renovation. soul trembles to think how little of regeneration there is amongst the ministers and professors of Scotland. O the ministers of Scotland, how have they betrayed Christ's interest and beguiled souls! have not entered in themselves, and them that were entering in, they hindered.' They have sold the things of Christ and liberties of His Church for a short and cursed quiet to themselves, which is now near an end; and they are more one and at peace with God's enemies, after they have done all their mischiefs, nor [i.e., than] they were at first when they had but put hand to them. And I much fear, that though there were but one minister on all the earth, He will make no more use of them; but there will be a dreadful judgment upon themselves, and a long curse upon their posterity!

"As to our professors, my counsel to them is, that they would see well to their own regeneration, for the most part of them have that yet to do; and yet, let never one think that he is in the right exercise of true religion, that has not a zeal to God's public glory. There is a small remnant in Scotland that my soul has had its greatest comfort on earth from. I wish your increase in holiness, number, love, religion, and righteousness; and wait you, and cease to contend with these men that are gone from us, for there is nothing that shall convince them but judgment. Satisfy your consciences, and go forward; for the nearer you are to God, and the further from all others, whether stated [i.e., declared] enemies or lukewarm ministers and professors, it shall be the better.

"My preaching has occasioned persecution, but the want of it will, I fear, occasion worse. However, I have preached the truths of God to others, as it is written, 'I believed, and so I preached,' and I have not an ill conscience in preaching truth, whatever has followed; and this day I am to seal with my blood all the truths that ever I preached; and what is controverted of that which I have been professing, shall, ere long, be manifested by God's judgments in the consciences of men. I had a sweet calmness of spirit and great submission as to my taking, the providence of God was so eminent in it; and I could not but think that God judged it necessary for His glory to bring me to such an end, seeing He loosed me from such a work. My soul would be exceedingly troubled anent the remnant, were it not that I think the time will be short. Wherefore, hold fast, for this is the way that is now persecuted.

"As to the cause of my suffering, the main is, 'Not acknowledging the present authority, as it is established in the Supremacy and Explanatory Act.' This is the magistracy that I have rejected, that was invested with Christ's power. And seeing that this power, taken from Christ, which is His glory, made the essential of the crown, I thought it was as if I had seen one wearing my husband's garments after he had killed him; and seeing it is made the essential of the crown, there is no distinction we can make, that can free the conscience of the acknowledger from being a partaker of this sacrilegious robbing of God; and it is but to cheat our consciences to acknowledge the civil power; for it is not civil power only that is made of the essence of his crown. And seeing they are so express, we ought to be plain; for otherwise it is to deny our testimony and consent to His robbery."

FTER Mr Cargill was come to the scaffold, standing with his back towards the ladder, he fixed his eyes upon the multitude, and desired their attention; and after singing a part of the 18th Psalm, from the 16th verse to the close, he looked up to the windows on both sides of the scaffold with a smiling countenance, requesting the people to compose themselves and hear a few words that he had to say, which, said he, "I shall direct to three sorts of folk, and shall endeavour to be brief:"

"First, All you that are going on in persecuting the work and people of God, O beware for the Lord's sake, and refrain from such courses, as you would escape wrath eternally, which will be a tormentar beyond what we are to endure by the hands of cruel and bloody murderers."

Upon this the drums were beaten, at which he smilingly said—
"Now ye see we have not liberty to speak, or at least to speak what—we would; but God knoweth our hearts. But, O ye that are called—ministers and professors in the Church of Scotland, who are wearied in waiting upon the Lord, and are turned out of His way, and run into a course of gross defection and backsliding, truly, for my part, I tremble to think what will become of you; for either you shall be punished with sore affliction (I mean in your consciences, because of sin), or else you shall be tormented eternally without remedy, which shall be shortly, if mercy prevent it not; which I pray God may be the mercy of all these to whom He has thoughts of peace. All ye that are the poor remnant, who fear sinning more than suffering, and are begging for His returning into Scotland, to wear His own crown and reign as King in Zion, in spite of all that will oppose Him, whether devils or men, I say to you that are thus waiting, wait on, and ye shall not be disappointed; for either your eyes shall see it, or else ye shall die in the faith of it, that He shall return, and 'if you suffer with Him, you shall also reign with Him,' which reign will be glorious and eternal.

"I come now to tell you for what I am brought here to die, and to give you an account of my faith, which I shall do as in the sight of the living God before whom I am shortly to stand. First, I declare I am a Christian, a Protestant, a Presbyterian in my judgment; and whatever hath been said of me, I die testifying against Popery, Prelacy, Erastianism, and all manner of defection from the truth of God, and against all who make not the Scriptures, which are the Word of God, their rule, that so they may commend Christ and His way to strangers by a holy and Gospel conversation. The cause for which I am sentenced to die here this day, is my disowning of authority in the unlawful exercise thereof, when they, instead of ruling for God, are fighting against Him, and encroaching upon His prerogatives, by that woful supremacy which my soul abhors, and which I have testified against since I was apprehended; and now again I disown all supremacy over the consciences of men and liberties of Christ's Church."

Whereupon the drums were again beaten, and he kept silence a little, and then said: "Of this subject I shall say no more. Only I think the Lord's quarrel against this land is, because there has not been so much heart religion and soul exercise among either ministers or professors, as there seemed to be when the land owned Christ and His truth. I wish there were more true conversion, and then there would not be so much backsliding, and, for fear of suffering, living at ease, when there are so few to contend for Christ and His cause.

"Now for my own case, I bless the Lord that, for all that hath been said of me, my conscience doth not condemn me. I do not say I am free of sin, but I am at peace with God through a slain Mediator; and I believe that there is no salvation but only in Christ. And I abhor that superstitious way of worshipping of angels and saints contrary unto the Word of God; as also I abhor the leaning to self-righteousness and Popish penances. I bless the Lord that these thirty years and more I have been at peace with God, and was never shaken loose of it; and now I am as sure of my interest in Christ and peace with God as all within this Bible and the Spirit of God can make me; and I am no more terrified at death, nor afraid of hell, because of sin, than if I had never had sin; for all my sins are freely pardoned and washen thoroughly away, through the precious blood and intercession of Jesus Christ. And I am fully persuaded that this is His way for which I suffer; and that He will return gloriously to Scotland, but it will be terrifying to many; therefore I entreat you, be not discouraged at the way of Christ and the cause for which I am to lay down my life, and step into eternity, where my soul shall be as full of Him as it can desire to be.

"And now, this is the sweetest and most glorious day that ever my eyes did see. Now I entreat you, study to know and believe the Scriptures, which are the truths of God; these I have preached, and do firmly believe them. Oh! prepare for judgments, for they shall be sore and sudden. Enemies are now enraged against the way and people of God, but erelong they shall be enraged one against another to their own confusion."

At this the drums were beaten a third time, and being taken to the north side of the scaffold, he stood a little during the space that one of the rest was singing; and then being carried to the south side of the scaffold, he prayed. Thence he was brought to the east side of the scaffold, and there he said, "I entreat you prepare you presently for a stroke, for God will not sit with [i.e., disregard] all the wrongs done to Him, but will suddenly come and make inquisition for the blood that has been shed in Scotland."

Then he was commanded to go up the ladder, and as he set his foot on it, he said, "The Lord knows I go up this ladder with less fear and perturbation of mind than ever I entered the pulpit to preach."

And when he was up, he sat himself down, and said: "Now I am near to the getting of my crown, which shall be sure; for I bless the Lord, and desire all of you to bless Him that He hath brought me here, and makes me triumph over devils, and men, and sin: they shall wound me no more. I forgive all men the wrongs they have done to me, and pray the Lord may forgive all the wrongs that any of the elect have done against Him. I pray that sufferers may be kept from sin, and helped to know their duty."

Then having prayed a little within himself, he lifted up the napkin and said: "Farewell all relations and friends in Christ; farewell acquaintances and all earthly enjoyments; farewell reading and preaching, praying and believing, wanderings, reproaches, and sufferings. Welcome joy unspeakable and full of glory. Welcome Father, Son, and Holy Ghost! into Thy hands I commit my spirit," which was occasioned through want of time and the persecutors' severity, who took his larger testimony from him the day before he died, paper and ink being conveyed to him secretly by a cord through the window the night before his death, it is thought proper to subjoin these following letters of his, they being all of public concern, to give a more full discovery of the testimony which he held; and particularly of his witnessing against the errors about that time broached by the infamous John Gib, as the letter written to the prisoners in the Correction House manifests.

Then he prayed a little, and the executioner turned him over praying.

LETTER from Mr Donald Carcill to Mr James Skene, who suffered Martyrdom at Edinburgh. [A short notice of Mr Skene, with his last Testimony, will be found in its proper place.—Ed.]

"DEAREST FRIEND,—There is now nothing upon earth that I am so concerned in, except the Lord's work, as in you and your fellows; that you may either be cleanly brought off, or honourably and rightly carried through. He is begun in part to answer me; though not in that which I most affected, yet in that which is best.

"My soul was refreshed to see any that had so far overcome the fear and torture of death, and were so far denied to the affections of the flesh, as to give full liberty to the exoneration of conscience in the face of these bloody tyrants and vile apostates. And yet these, by our divines, must be acknowledged as magistrates! which very heathers, endued with the light of nature, would abominate, and would think it as inconsistent with reason to admit to or continue in magistracy; such perjured, bloody, dissolute, and flagitious men, as to make a wolf the keeper and feeder of the flock. But every step of their dealing with God, with the land, and with yourself and brethren, is a confirmation of your judgment anent them, and sufficient ground of your detestation and rejection of them; and it is the sin of the land, and of every person in it, that they have not gone along with you, and these few in that action. But since they have not done that, they shall not now meet with the like honour, if ever they meet with it, till vengeance be poured out upon them; and they and their king shall either be keeped together in wrath or divided in wrath, that they may be one another's destruction.

"But go on, valiant champion; you die not as a fool, though the apostate, unfaithful, and lukewarm ministers and professors of this generation think and say so. They shall live traitors, and most part of them die fools. I say, traitors; as some men live upon the reward of treachery, for their quiet and liberty; if it may be called a liberty, as it is redeemed with the betraying of the interest of Christ, and the blood of His people. But He Himself hath sealed your sufferings, and their thus saying condemns God, and His sealing condemns them. But neither regard their voices, nor fear; for God will neither seal to folly nor iniquity. He then not only having sealed your sufferings, but your remission, go on to finish and perfect your testimony, not only against them, but against all that subject [i.e., yield] to them, side with them, or are silent at them.

"And as for these men that will be our rulers, though they have nothing of worth or virtue in them; I am persuaded of this, that none that appear before them and acknowledge them as they have now invested themselves; standing on a foundation of perjury, which is an act to issury of their admission to the government, with Christ's crown on their head, and a sceptre of iniquity and a sword of persecution in their hand; but must deny Christ. And in effect, the whole land generally hath denied Christ and desired a murderer; and as for that unsavoury salt that lately appeared, acknowledged them, and was ashamed of this testimony, and in so doing gave the first vote to your condemnation, and proclaimed a lawfulness to the rest of assizers and murderers to follow in their condemnations, God shall require this, with his other doings, at his hands; and I am somewhat afraid, if he be not suddenly made the subject of serious repentance, that he shall be made the subject of great vengeance." [The reference here is to the Rev. John Carstairs, minister of the Inner High Church, gow, from 1650 to 1662. In 1662 he declined to take the oath llegiance without giving an explanation of the sense in which he ght it might be taken, and was imprisoned for several weeks I his health gave way. After the battle of Pentland, he went over Iolland, and preached in Rotterdam with great acceptance. 2 he returned to Scotland, when he was almost immediately moned before the Council, but was set free on finding security 2000 merks, i.e., £120. When Skene was apprehended, some ers were found on him that brought Carstairs into trouble. was summoned before the Council, says Wodrow, where "he led the king's authority and that of his courts. With a great l of seriousness he disclaimed the follies and principles Mr Skene some others now advanced, and said he could not express his minating their extremities with vehemency enough." He edited several of the postned to have lived in retirement. ious works of his former colleague, James Durham, and the onemed edition of Calderwood's History. His son was the wellwn counsellor of William III., Principal Carstairs.—Ed.]

But forgive and forget all these private injuries, and labour to go ternity and death with a heart destitute of private revenges, and I with zeal to God's glory; and assign to Him the quarrel against enemies, to be followed out by Himself in His own way against ndignities done to Him, and against the mocking perfidiousness, eties, and lukewarmness of this generation.

And for yourself, whatever there has been either of sin or duty, mber the one and forget the other, and betake yourself wholly se mercy of God and the merit of Christ. Ye know in whom are believed, and the acceptableness of your believing, and the fully you henceforth believe, the greater shall be His glory, the greater your peace and safety.

Farewell, dearest friend, never to see one another any more till e right hand of Christ. Fear not; and the God of mercies grant ll gale and a fair entry into His kingdom, which may carry tly and swiftly over the bar, that you find not the rub of death. :e, mercy, and peace be with you.

"Yours in Christ,

" D. C."

LETTER to some Friends before Mr Donald Ca went Abroad.

"DEAR FRIENDS,—I cannot but be grieved t from my native land, and especially from that pa it for whom and with whom I desired only to live; the dreadful apprehensions I have of what is cot upon this land may help to make me submissive to providence, though more bitter.

"You will have snares for a little, and then a deluge of j ments. I do not speak this to affright any, much less to rej over them, as if I were taken, and they left; or were stud by these thoughts to alleviate my own lot of banishment; the I am afraid that none shall bless themselves long upon the count that they are left behind; but my design is to have you may ourselves prepared for snares and judgments, that ye may both the greatest readiness and the greatest shelters, for both shalin one.

"Clear accompts, [i.e., accounts] and put off the old; for like, that what is to come will be both sudden and surpris that it will not give you time for this. Beware of taking on debt. I am afraid, that these things which many are looking of favours are but come to bind men together in bundles for a fire.

"I am sure, if these things be embraced, there shall not be time given for using of them; and this last of their favours snares is sent to men, to show that they are that which other they will not confess themselves to be. Tell all, that the shand benefit of this shall neither be great nor long, but the snar it shall be great and prejudicial.

"And for myself, I think for the present He is calling manother land; but how long shall be my abode, or what empent He has for me there, I know not, for I cannot think H taking me there to live and lurk only.

"I rest,

"DONALD CARGILL."

LETTER to John Malcolm and Archibald Alison, prisoners. [See Note prefixed to their testimonies in a later part of the volume.—Ed.]

"DEAR FRIENDS,—Death in Christ, and for Christ, is never much to be bemoaned, and less at this time than any other, when these that survive have nothing to live among but miseries, persecutions, snares, sors, and sinning; and where the only desirable sight, viz., Christ ning in a free and flourishing Church, is wanting, and the greatly ving and offensive object to devout souls, viz., devils and the st of the wicked reigning and raging, is still before our eyes.

"And though we had greater things to leave and better times to in, yet eternity does so far exceed and excel these things in r greatest perfection, that they who see and are sure (and we indeed, being made sure), will never let a tear fall, or a sigh go he farewell, but would rather make a slip to get death nor [i.e.,] to shun it; if both were not equally detestable to them, upon account of God's commandments, whom they neither dare nor are ng to offend, even to obtain Heaven itself. And there are none are His, but they must see themselves infinitely advantaged in exchange; and accordingly hasten, if sin, the flesh, and want of rance did not withstand. And there is no doubt but these must veak and poor spirits, that are bewitched or enchanted either the fruition or hopes of the world; and as earth has nothing to a resolute and reconciled soul, so heaven wants nothing to rit; and to some, to live here has been always wearisome, since peace was made, Christ's sweetness known, and their own mess and unusefulness experienced. But now it becomes hateloathsome; since devils and the worst of men are become the l, and dreadful, by their stupendous permissions, loosings, and thenings in their reigning; and friends are become uncomfort-; because they will neither Christianly bear and bide, nor rightly orward to effectuate their own delivery.

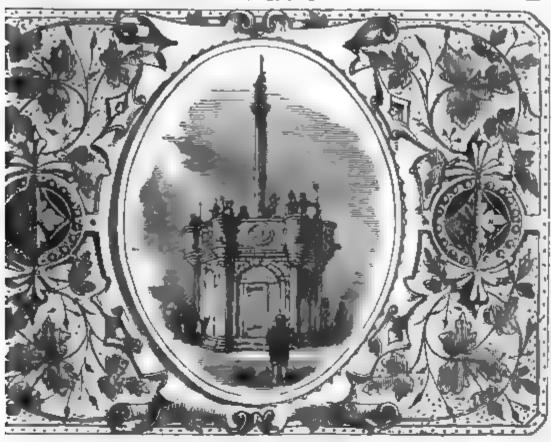

But for you there is nothing at this time (if you yourselves be with God, which I hope either you are or will be), which can e me bewail your death; though the cause of it doth both increase my affection to you and indignation against these enemies. Yet for you, notwithstanding of the unjustness of the sentence, go not to eternity with indignation against them upon your own account, neither let the goodness of the cause ye suffer for found [i.e., be the foundation of] your confidence in God and your hope of wellbeing; for were the action never so good, and performed without the least failing (which is not incident to human infirmity), it could never be a cause of obtaining mercy, nor yet commend us to that grace from which we are to obtain it. There is nothing now which is yours, when you are pleading and petitioning for mercy, that must be remembered, but your sins, for in effect there is nothing else ours.

CANONGATE TOLBOOTH, EDINBURGH.

"Let your sins, then, be on your heart, as your sorrow; which we must bewail before we be parted with them, as the captive her father; not because she was to leave him, but because she had been so long with him; and let these mercies of God and merits of Christ be before your eyes as your hopes, and your winning to these as the only rock upon which we can be saved. If there be anything seen or looked to in ourselves but sin, we cannot expect remission and salvation allenarly [i.e., solely] through free grace, in which expectation only it can be obtained; neither can we earnestly till we see ourselves destitute of all that procures favour, and of all that merits and hastens vengeance and wrath.

THE CROSS, EDINBURGH.

And besides, it heightens the price of that precious blood, by h only we can have redemption from sin and wrath; it being only sufficient in itself, and only acceptable to the Father; and so ast be, being the blessed and gracious device and result of te wisdom, which makes the eternal God to be admired in His ousness and holiness; having found out the way of His own paywithout our hurt; and which makes all return to their own es, and there to rest in an eternal complacency; for this way ns to God His glory, to justice its satisfaction to disquieted ciences of men, frighted and awakened with the sight of sin and 1, ease, peace and assurance; and to the souls of men, fellowship God, and hope of eternal salvation. Now the righteousness of it being made sure to us, secures all this for us, and this truth is ved and apprehended by faith; it being the hand by which we this rock; and if it be true, it cannot but be strong, and we l.

Look well, then, to your faith, that it be a faith growing out of peration, and the new creature, and that it have Christ for its eousness, hope, and rejoicing, and be sealed by the Spirit of God.

And what this sealing is, when it comes, it will abundantly show itself; and there can be no other full satisfaction to a soul than this. But seek till ye find, and, whatever ye find for the present, let your last act be to lay and leave yourselves on the righteousness of His Son, expecting life through His name, according to the promise of the Father.

"Dear friends, your work is great, and time short; but this is a comfort, and the only comfort in your present condition, that you have a God infinite in mercy to deal with, who is ready at all times to forgive, but especially persons in your case, who have been jeoparding your lives upon the account of the Gospel; whatever failings or infirmities in you that action hath been accompanied with; for it is the action itself which is the duty of this whole covenanted kingdom, and not the failing, for which you are brought to suffering. Seek not then the favours of men, by making your duty your sin; but confess your failings to God, and look for His mercy through Jesus Christ, who has said, 'Whosoever loseth his life for my sake, shall keep it unto eternal And though it will profit a reprobate nothing to die after this manner (for nothing can be profitable without love, which only is, or can be in a believer), yet it should be no disadvantage, but in a manner the best way of dying; for it would take some from his days that he might have lived, and so prevent many sins that he would have committed, and so the sin is lessened that is the cause of eternal sufferings.

"And let not this discourage you, or lay you by [i.a., overcome you], that the work is great, and the time short; though this indeed should mind you of your sinful neglect, that you were not better provided for such a short and peremptory summons, which you should always have expected. It also shows the greatness of the sin of these enemies, who not only take away unjustly your bodily life, but also shorten your time of preparation, and so do their utmost to deprive you of eternal life. Yet, I say, let not this either discourage or lay you by, for God can perfect great works in a short time; and one of the greatest things that befall men shall be effectuate in the twinkling of an eye, which is one of the shortest. I assure you, He put the thief on the cross through all his desires; conviction, conversion, justification, sanctification, etc., in short time; and left nothing to bemoan, but that there did not remain time enough to glorify Him upon earth, who had done all these things for him.

"Go on, then, and let your intent be seriousness. The great-your sorrow, and the height of love, in a manner make rensation for the shortness of time; and go on, though ye was have gone short way; for where these things are, one hour form more than thousands where there were not either such ments or power; and be persuaded in this, you have Him as and more hastening than yourselves; for you may know His by your own, they being both set forward by Him. And, ends, be not terrified at the manner of your death, which, to ms to be the easiest of all, where you come to it without pain, perfect judgment, and go through so speedily; before the pain the glory is come! But pray for a greater measure of His e, which only can make a pass through the hardest things I and pleasant.

bid you farewell, expecting, though our parting be sad, our ng shall be joyful again. Only our great advantage in the ou are in is, to credit Him much; for that is His glory, and; Him to perform whatever ye have credited Him with. No out avow boldly to give a full testimony for His truths, as you o be avowed of Him. Grace, mercy, and peace be with you.

"DONALD CARGILL."

LETTER to the Prisoners in the Correction House of Edinburgh. [These prisoners were twenty-six women, followers of John Gib, of Borrowstounness. Cargill, when preaching at Darmead, heard that Gib and his followers were in the neighbourhood, and, sending for them, had a long conference with them as to their opinions. Its sum and substance, according to Patrick Walker, is contained in the following letter. Gib and hirty adherents had forsaken their homes, and had taken up sode in the moors, under the persuasion that they would thus e free from all snares and sins. Their extravagances attracted lice of the government, and in the spring of 1681, they were by a troop of dragoons, and carried to Edinburgh. Gib and lale associates were imprisoned in the Canongate Tolbooth, e twenty-six women in the Correction House, usually filled the loose and abandoned of the city. Gib and his male that gave in a statement of their opinions to the Council, which will be found in Wodrow; and Donald Cargill seems to have come to the conclusion that they were so wedded to their errors as to be irreclaimable. Of the women he entertained better hopes, and hence sent them the following affectionate appeal. It says much for his kindness of heart, and for his patient and earnest desire to reclaim them. His efforts were not without success, for the greater part of them, according to Patrick Walker, came to their right mind after they had tasted the bitter fruits of these demented delusions. Gib himself was shortly after set at liberty, but in 1684 was again apprehended, and banished to America. After a life of much misery and wretchedness, he died in 1720.—Ed.]

"DEAR FRIENDS,—I think ye cannot but know that I am both concerned and afflicted with your condition, and I would have written sooner, and more, if I had not feared that you might have been jealous, under your distempers, that I had been seducing you to follow me, and not God and truth.

"It had been my earnest and frequent prayer to God, as He Himself knows, to be led in all truth, and I judge I have been in this graciously answered; but I desire none, if they themselves judge it not to be truth, to adhere to anything that I have either preached, written, or done, to any hazard, much more to the loss of life.

"But I have been afflicted with your condition, and could not but be more, if God's great graciousness in this begun discovery, and your sincerity and singleness, gave me not hope that God's purpose is to turn this to the great mercy of His poor Church and yours, if ye mar it not; and yet the great sin, and pillar of Satan, that is in this snare, makes me tremble. It was God's mercy to you, that gave you such convictions; that made you, at least some of you, once to part with these men. And it was undoubtedly your sin, that you continued not so; but after convictions, did cast yourselves in new temptations; for convictions ought to be tenderly guided, lest the Spirit be grieved, from whom they come; but this second discovery, though it be with a sharper rebuke, as it makes God's mercy wonderful, so it shall render your perseverance in that course sinful and utterly inexcusable; for God has broken the snare; and it will be your great sin, if you go not out with great haste, joy, and thankfulness, when God's wonderful discovery has made such a way for your delivery. For God, having now shown you the ringleaders and authors of these opinions to be persons of such abominations, calls you not only to deny credit to them, but also to make a serious search of their tenets; which will, I know, by His grace, bring you undoubtedly to see, that these things are contrary both to God's glory and truth, that they so much pretend to.

"And now, dear friends, I cannot be tender enough of you, who in your zeal and singleness have been misled. For though this did bewray a great simplicity and unwatchfulness, yet it did also betoken some zeal and tenderness; that being beguiled, it was in things that were veiled and busked [i.e., adorned] with some pretence to God's glory, and public reformation. And on the other hand, I cannot have great enough abhorrence of the persons, who, knowing themselves to be of such abominations, did give out themselves to be of such familiarity with God, and of so clear illumination, to make their delusions more passing with devout souls. Let nothing make you think this is malignity, or natural enmity against the power of Godliness, or progress in reformation, that is venting itself in me: For though I cannot win [i.e., get] forward as I ought, yet I have rejoiced to see others go forward.

"And I am sure, there lies in this bed within you, a viper and a child. Satan, transforming himself into an angel of light, has put these two together, to make it passing with some, and to be spared of others who are of tenderness. But my soul's desire is, to kill the serpent and keep the child alive; and God is calling you loudly to sever the good from the bad, that the wit of Satan's subtilty has mixed together, and to deliver yourselves speedily, as a roe from the hand of the hunter; and not only return, but bitterly mourn for your high provoking of God, in offering such foul sacrifices to His glory, and sewing your old clouts upon that new garment; in your making the enemy more to despise that cause and company who are enough despised already, and discouraging those who were following and going forward with you in that which was right; so that now, neither have they heart nor hand for the work, nor can they look out till God recover them again.

"There is much in the whole of this, that may, and does weight and overwhelm some spirits: but there is nothing in all their cogitations about it that they find comfortable; unless it be, that He is cleared in afflicting us, and continuing to afflict, because there were such persons among us. I speak this but of some of you, and beloved by us, though ignorantly; and we wish that this be the last and great stop that was to be removed, before His coming to revenge Himself, and reign. I would not say but by this also He showed His tenderness, of preserving integrity of doctrine, and sound reformation, and His purpose not to suffer errors and heresies to prosper.

"This I told you, when I met with you, that there were some things ye were owning which were highly approved of God; such as, an inward heart-love and zeal to God's glory, which I perceived to be in some of you, so far as it can be perceived; and setting up that before you, as your end, in pursuing it always as your work, and a forgetting of all other things in regard of it; excepting only these things without which we cannot glorify Him; as a workman that intends his work must mind his tools; even our own salvation, and the salvation of all others, as if they were not things wherein He is greatly glorified; for His glory is in righteousness and mercy, and in, and by these, is the salvation of man infallibly advanced, and to these it is inseparably connected.

"Next, I would advise you to set apart more, yea, much more of your time, for humiliation, fasting, and prayer, in such an exigence, when the judgments of God appear to be so near and so great; so that it be done without sin; for God cannot be glorified by sin, 'for if my lie hath more abounded to His glory, why am I judged as a I was against such as deny nature, and others their right dues; for He that allows dues to others, allows them to be paid also. And we must be like prisoners, who are of great debt and honest hearts, who know they cannot pay every one their full sums, yet are resolved to give every one some, and to the greatest most, and to the rest accordingly. And as there cannot be a total abstinence from meat without self-murder, so there cannot be a total denying others their dues, such as the benevolence of husband to wife, and a total abstaining from work, without a transgression of God's commandments and laws; which can never be a glorifying of Him; which the more impartially they are kept, the more He is glorified.

"Next, ways are allowed of Him, that ye may make yourselves free, so much as in you lies, of all the public defections, whatever may involve you in these, or contribute to their upholding, without either an overpowering force, or an indispensable necessity; for I may buy meat and drink in necessity, whatever use the seller make of that money I give for my meat and drink.

"Next, He allows these particulars of reformation, such as change of the names of days, of weeks, of terms of the year, and such like, nted by the word and example of the Christians in Scripture, have been neglected before in our reformation; so that there be no much religion placed in these things, and other things more try, which undoubtedly have more moral righteousness in them, little in regard of them; but in these good things Satan will ly (if it be not already), over-drive you in your progress, and you only to hug a spurious birth.

But there are other things that ye maintained when I spoke you (and the viper has more since appeared), as truths and parts xd's glory, that are utterly contrary to, and inconsistent with the of God. As first, laying aside of public preaching, some of saying no less, nor [i.e., than that] they had no missing of it; so ye thought, 'Ye had reigned as kings without us, and would to ye had reigned.' Your flourishing should have delighted, though ed not been the instruments and means thereof. But, alas! this liberty, that you so much bragged of, would have lasted but a while, and was among your other beguiles, and was nothing else datan stirring you about to giddiness, and raising of fantastic s to the tickling of the imagination, but leaving you altogether ut renovation of heart, or progress in sanctification; so that I ot compare this your liberty to anything else, but to an ened fabric; where the poor guests, only placed in imagination, ne themselves to be in a pleasant place, and at royal entertain-; but when God comes, and delusion evanisheth, they will find selves cast in some remote wilderness, and left full of astonishand fears.

I told you, while I was with you, that the devil was sowing tares get your thin wheat; but I was not long from you, exercised in this about you, but I saw clearly there was sorcery in your busi; and now, I tell you, I fear sorcerers also. I know I have en this against my own life, if they get the power they desire; am in a defiance of them, and I know also in a defence by who hath preserved, and I know will preserve me, till my work ished. But if your liberty that you talked of had been true, it I at least have stayed till it had brought you to other thoughts, works, and other comforts; and it might have been easily distend not a true liberty, but a temptation that led you from public thing, the great ordinance of God's glory and men's good; as postle has that word, 'forbidding us to preach to the Gentiles;' specially to leave public ordinances at this time, when they are the only standards standing which shows Satan's victory against Christ's kingdom in Scotland not to be complete.

"Yet, dear friends, when you hear this, let not Satan cast you as far to the other side, for it is rare to see the most devout souls altogether out from under his delusions and temptations, as to make you believe that it is impossible to attain unto anything of certitude of truth, liberty, manifestations, and communion with God, if that which seemed to be so firm be delusions. But shall Satan have such power to make men believe lies, and shall not God go infinitely beyond him, in making men to see and believe truth? There were many that thought themselves at the height of assurance, when under the greatest temptations—as Psalm lxxiii., 'Verily I have cleansed my hands in vain;' and yet they have a greater certainty when they come to see that there is no such unquietness of spirit under this, as they found in the former. And seeing it is so, rest not till ye attain that assurance of your own interest, and of His main truths, which is both above doubt and defect, that ye may be able to say, 'Now we believe, and are sure.'

"But in the next place, ye will join with none in public worship, but those who have infallible signs of regeneration. This seems fair, but it is both false and foul. False, because of its false foundation, viz, that the certainty of one's interest in Christ may be known by another. Whereas the Scripture says, 'That none knows it, but he that has it.' Foul also, for this disdain has pride in it, and pride is always foul; and though there be a difference amongst men, and though we should have regard of repentance and brokenness of heart, yet those who have well fought and seen their own filthiness, will judge themselves the persons of any that should be thrust out of the assemblies of God's people, and that not only in regard of what they have been, but also in regard of what they daily are.

"Next, ye would have all to be prayed to eternal wrath, who have departed and made defection in this time. Alas! we need not blow them away; the great part is going fast enough that way; but this, I am sure, is not to give God His glory, but to take from Him, and limit Him in His freedom and choice in the greatness of His pardon. It is remarkable that the angels, in their glory to God, joined also with it good-will to men.

"Next, you have rejected the Psalms, with many other things, by a paper come from some of you; and I cannot see upon what account; except it be, because it is man's work, in turning the Psalms out of.

ed the translation of them is of man's work; ye have not yet ed the original languages; ye must betake yourselves altogether e Spirit, and what a spirit will that be, that is not to be tried by Scriptures? I told some of you, when I last saw you, that ye too little led by the Scriptures, and too much by your own ghts and suggestions; which, indeed, opens a wide door to deluand alas! lays yourselves open to Satan's temptations.

As for the rest of your denying all your former covenants and trations, this cannot be from God, they containing nothing but il and necessary duties; and, suppose they did not contain and de a complete reformation, yet they did not exclude it; so that holding them, we might have passed on to more perfection, and might be inviolable obligations with us.

And next, your cutting off all that were not of your mind, and ering them up to devils, was not justice and religion; it being neither in judgment nor righteousness, upon conviction of their es, but in unbridled rage and fury. But these things I cannot speak to now; yet there is somewhat that I cannot pass, nust tell you, that I fear there shall remain some of the leaven n, which shall not only spoil an orthodox Protestant, but also a tender, and humble Christian, and give us nothing instead of t a blown bladder; for I am persuaded, if Satan should have the y but a while, he should bring it to this; for it has been his way some—first, to make them saint-like, and afterwards to settle at atheism; like a cunning fisher, running a fish upon an angle, at last casts it on dry ground. God is my witness, my soul ; to see holiness, tenderness, and zeal in such a generation, e there is nothing but untenderness, unconcernedness, and warmness; and, by His grace, I shall ever cherish it.

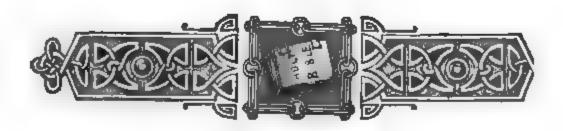

I desire you then, in the bowels of Christ, to retain your zeal; see well to this, that it be for His glory. Indeed, the more ye ealous, and the further ye go forward, so that the word of God t your course, ye are the more pleasing to God, and shall be the er to us. And persuade yourselves, that though I cannot equal before, yet it is the sincere desire of my heart to follow such my soul wishes you well, though, it may be, I cannot here point lead you the way to well-being; yet this I must say, that if I lead you the way that He has led me, I should let you see al life, without these things that I am desiring you to relinquish.

"Hold truth, glorify God, be zealous to have Him glorified think not to desire the condemnation of any man, simply of account, that they dare not come and continue where you a that to put a bar by prayer between them and a return glorifying of God. We glorify Him in this kind, when, as He self desires, we acquiesce in His sentence when it is past, thou wrestle against it before it be known to us.

"I cannot bid you go forward in all, but I desire you to go for in that which is surer and better. And dear friends, let n world have it to say, that when ye are become right, ye are better the less zealous; only take the right object, and let your zeal O let not your sufferings be stained with such wildness; and t not strange that ye have not such liberty in your return, as ye s to have before; if you take the right way, and hold on, ye sha it, in His time, greater, and better, and surer.

"I shall only add, that there must be an express disown your errors and evils, and an express owning of His truths; we have been persuaded before now, but which now are either or doubted; otherwise you will come to nothing of religion, or this will either state your sufferings right, or be a mean to ol cleanly liberty from God in His due time. Grace, mercy, and be with you. Amen!

"DONALD CARGIL!

Walter Smith.

Cargill; he was taken at the same time, and suffered with him. Patrick Walker has a life of him; "A Account of the life and death of that truly pious and worthy ter, Mr Walter Smith," etc. In substance, it is in John F "Scots Worthies." The work, "Steps of Defection," referred the following testimony, is given by Walker; also, "Rule ns anent private Christian Meetings;" together with a letter by him when he was studying at Utrecht, to Janet Fimerton, ar Christian, of deep exercises, high attainments, and great ace in the serious exercise and solid practice of godliness. ter is a very excellent one, and speaks much for Smith's d Christian knowledge.

books are specified in Walter Smith's testimony—

The book which contains the Confession of Faith," etc. plume that in Scotland usually bears the title of the Confession , although it includes the Catechisms, the Covenants, the Direc-Worship, and the Sum of Saving Knowledge. It is not known authority the Sum of Saving Knowledge has been put along e others, for it has never been sanctioned by the General ly of the Church of Scotland. The "Causes of God's Wrath" o have been bound up in the same volume in Smith's time. r assigns its authorship to James Guthrie of Stirling, who at Edinburgh, June 1st, 1661. The first words of the full its nature and date: "Some General Heads of the Causes Lord contends with the land, agreed upon, after seeking of d, by the Commission of the General Assembly 1650, with ice of divers ministers from several parts of the kingdom, Edinburgh 1651." One of the steps of defection from the nt mentioned is, "The authorising of commissioners to close with the King for the investing him with the government, s subscribing such demands as were sent to him, after he had nany clear evidences of his disaffection and enmity to the and people of God, and was continuing in the same." s" was condemned, along with Rutherford's "Lex Rex," in mation by the Committee of Estates, dated September 19, and both were burnt, October 17th, at Edinburgh, by the hand angman. "No doubt," says Wodrow, "by order of the Comhough I do not observe any clause for this in the proclama-It was much easier to burn those books than to answer the igs and facts in them." The "Causes" is now somewhat It occupies eighty-five pages in Henderson's collection of entitled "Testimony-bearing Exemplified," 12mo, Paisley, hepard's "Sound Believer." Thomas Shepard was a native hampton; but went out in 1635 to New England, and was settled at Cambridge, where he was the chief means of erecting and endowing the well-known Harvard College, an institution that in this century has renounced the opinions of its founders, and become the chief seat of unitarian error. Shepard was an able and successful Gospel minister. His works, comprising twenty different publications, have been lately collected. He is best known on this side the Atlantic, by his "Parable of the Ten Virgins;" and his "Sound Believer," a treatise on evangelical conversion; both of which have been frequently reprinted in this country.—ED.]

"DEAR FRIENDS AND ACQUAINTANCES,—As I desire, while in the body, to sympathise somewhat with you, in lamenting your various cases, and the case of the Church, whereof we are the sons and daughters; so

I must lay this request upon you, and leave it with you, that ye take some of your time, and set it apart particularly to solace your souls, in blessing and magnifying your God and my God, for the lot He hath decreed and chosen out for poor unworthy me, from eternity, in time, and to eternity; in the immediate enjoyment of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, one God, incomprehensible and unchangeable in His being, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness, and truth; and that, because He hath made me a man and a Christian. And now I set to my seal to all His truths revealed in His word, and particularly these:

"First, That He is one God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. But alas! who can think of Him? who can hear of Him, or write of Him aright? Oh! He is God! He is God!

"Secondly, That He made man perfect. And though we have destroyed and incapacitated ourselves to do anything that is right, while out of Christ, yet we are under the obligation of the whole law, which is the perfect rule of righteousness.

"Thirdly, That my Lord (yea, through free grace I can say, my Lord Jesus Christ), came to the world to save sinners. And, though I cannot say that I have been the greatest of sinners, yet I can say, that He hath covered, pardoned, prevented, and hid from the world, sins in me that have been heinous by many aggravations.

"Fourthly, That except a man be born again, he cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven. My friends, this is the new birth, this is regeneration that I am speaking of, to which the great part, even of professors, I fear, will be found strangers.

"Fifthly, I set to my seal to the truth of that precious promise, Josh. i. 5, etc.; repeated, Heb. xiii. 5: 'For He hath said, I will never leave thee nor forsake thee,' together with all the other promises to that purpose; and, I am sure, He hath carried me through divers conditions of life, many various and singular difficulties, and damping discouragements. But omitting these things, whereof the profane persecutors may as much boast as to the outward as any, He hath led me through the several steps of soul exercise, and the pangs of the new birth, into Himself. This, this, my friends, is the cognisance and distinguishing character of a saint indeed; and by this, and this only, we pass from death to life.

"And, as I adhere to the Confession of Faith and work of reformation (as I shall afterwards speak to), so particularly, I set to my seal to these truths, in the xviii. chapter thereof, anent the assurance of grace and salvation. Alas! the ignorance of this generation is great. My dear friends, I leave this as my last advice to you, make use of that book which contains the Confession of Faith, Catechisms, Sum of Saving Knowledge, Practical Use of Saving Knowledge, Directory for Worship, the Causes of God's Wrath, etc. And let none think this work below them; for the spiritual enlightening of the mind, which requires the literal with it, is the first work of the Spirit, after we first begin to come to ourselves, or rather to what we were in innocency, and ought to be by grace. But as to this, I do confidently refer you to Shepard's 'Sound Believer,' which, in my poor apprehension, is the soundest and surest ye can meet with.

"And Sixthly, I set to my seal to the Covenant of Grace, particularly that clause of it (Isa. lix. 21), 'As for me, this is my covenant with them, saith the Lord; my spirit that is upon thee,' etc. And here I leave my testimony against all atheists, speculative (if there be any such) and practical, and all mockers at godliness, all formalists and hypocrites, Quakers and enthusiasts, who either pretend to the Spirit, neglecting the word, or lean upon the word, neglecting the teaching of the Spirit. And what shall I more say, but by what of truth I have in experience seen, I am bold to believe what I have not seen; His testimony is a ground sufficient, and there can be no deceit under it.

"And now I am to die a martyr; and I am as fully persuaded of my interest in Christ, and that He hath countenanced me in that for which I am to lay down my life, as I am of my being. And let the world and biassed professors say their pleasures, I am here in no de-I have the free and full exercise of reason and judgment; I am free of passion and prejudice, and, excepting that I am yet in the body, I am free of Satan's fire and fury. I have no bitterness nor malice at any living, so that what I am owning and dying for, I am solidly and firmly persuaded to be truth and duty, according to my mean capacity. And this is the main point this day in controversy, upon which I was peremptorily questioned, and desired positively to answer, yea or nay, under the threatening of the Boots, viz.: Whether I owned the King's authority as presently established and exercised; which I did positively disown, and denied allegiance to him, as he is invested with that supremacy proper to Christ Jesus And who knoweth not that at first he was constituted and crowned a covenanted King, and the subjects sworn in allegiance to him, as such, by the Solemn League and Covenant? This was the authority wherewith he was clothed; and the exercise of it was to be for God, religion, and the good of the subjects. And is not all this, as to God and His people, overturned and perverted? But secondly, The whole of this pleaded-for authority at present, is established on the ruin of the land's engagements to God, and to one another. I say no more as to this. Consider things seriously, and ponder them deeply; zeal for God is much gone. Look to it, and labour to recover it; your peace shall be in it, as to duty; though Christ's righteousness, I see, is the only sure foundation.

"I leave my testimony against malignancy, ungodliness, and profanity, and whatsoever is contrary to sound doctrine, professed and owned by the reformed anti-erastian presbyterian party in Scotland, whereof I die a member and professor, being fully satisfied and content with my lot. And as to my apprehending; we were singularly delivered by Providence into the adversaries' hand, and, for what I could learn, were betrayed by none, nor were any accessory to our taking, more than we were ourselves; and particularly let none blame the Lady St John's Kirk in this. [It was the lady St John's Kirk who persuaded Smith and Boig, against Cargill's judgment, to leave the where Cargill would have passed the night, and go to Covingfill, where all three were taken. Patrick Walker blames her nuch.—ED.] I have no time to give you an account of the s kindness and tenderness to us, in restraining the adversaries' For they began very brisk, by making us lie all night bound, xpressly refused to suffer us to worship God, or pray with one er, until we came to Linlithgow. But the Lord hasteneth to Beware of going back. Wait for Him. Be not anxious about shall become of you, or the remnant. He is concerned; His ession is sufficient. Get Him set up, and kept up in His own in your souls, and other things will be the more easily kept in Be tender of all who have the root of the matter, but beware opliance with any, whether ministers, or professors, or adversaries. As to my judgment, insignificant as it is, I am necessitate to you to the draught of a paper which I drew at the desire of some ies in Clydesdale, entitled, 'Some Steps of Defection,' etc. te of a spirit of bitterness, peremptoriness, and ignorant zeal, hath been the ruin of some, and will be the ruin of more, if prevent not. I was withdrawn from by some, as having given e to them by my protesting against their way in a particular, in I am sure as to the manner they were wrong; and though ad been right, it was not a ground to have made such a sepafrom me, much less from those who joined with me. And if vision be longer kept up upon that account, they will find it a niquity, if rightly considered.

can get no more written, nor see I great need for it; for the onies of martyrs are not your rule. Farewell.

From the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, July 27, 1681.

" Sic subscribitur,

"WALTER SMITH."

EING come to the scaffold, Walter Smith accosted the multitude to this purpose: "All ye beholders who are come here upon various designs, I entreat you, be not mistaken the cause of our suffering this day; for however ye may be ormed, yet it is of verity that we are brought here upon the s of our God; because we testified against the supremacy, and not consent to the setting of Christ's crown upon the head of ho had by usurpation aspired thereto, contrary to his former ments."

UTRECHT

Upon this they caused beat the drums, which obliged him to silence; but, beckoning with his hand, he said, "I shall or something to three particulars: And first, Anent that which so apt to believe, that we are against authority; but we detest the say that we own all the lawful exercise of authority; and we there are none that are Christians who will allow us to own t lawful exercise, or rather tyranny of authority."

At this the drums were again beat, and so he sung a part 103d Psalm from the beginning, and prayed; which done, he his face to the Cross, and said, "I bless the Lord I am n prised, neither terrified, with this death, or the manner of confess the thoughts of death have been sometimes very t to me, when I have been reflecting upon my misspending coous time; yea, sometimes the strength of temptation, ar own weakness, have made me herein to raze the very foun of my interest; but my God builds faster than He permi devil and my false heart to cast down. I have had some even since I came to prison; but blessed be God, these are moved; for my God hath said to my soul, 'Be of good che sins are forgiven thee.' And the faith of this makes me not grim death, though it be called the king of terrors, yet it is no me; for this that you think a cruel and sudden death, is but as to life, which shall be eternal. Let none be offended at Christ and His way, because of suffering; for I can persuade you there is more of Christ's help, and supporting grace, and strength, in a suffering lot, than all that ever I heard of by the hearing of the ear. But now I am made to find it in my own experience; and I can say, 'He is altogether lovely.'

"But a second thing that I promised to speak to is, that I detest and abhor all popery, prelacy, erastianism, and all other steps of defection from the truths of God, and turning aside to the right and left hand. Also, I testify against all errors, as Quakerism, Arminianism, and all that is contrary to sound doctrine; who walk not according to the Scriptures, and make not the Word and Spirit of God their rule to walk by. I have lived, and now am ready to die, a Christian, a Protestant, and a Presbyterian in my judgment; therefore let none hereafter say that we walk not by the Scriptures, for once Britain and Ireland, and especially Scotland, were deeply sworn to maintain what now they disown; therefore beware of standing in the way of others, seeing ye will not go in yourselves.

"Thirdly, I exhort all you that are the poor remnant, to be serious ingetting your interest cleared; you that are in the dark with your case, take not flashes for conversion; study a holy conversation. Be at more pains to know the Scriptures, and believe them. Be serious in prayer. Slight not time. Take Christ in His own terms, and resolve to meet with trials, and that shortly. Slight not known duties: commit not known sins, whatever suffering ye may meet with for your cleaving to duty. Lippen [i.e., trust] to God, and you will not be disappointed. Construct well of Him under all dispensations. Weary not of suffering. Lie not at ease in a day of Jacob's trouble.

"I have one word more to speak, to all that are going on in persecuting the way and friends of Christ, and it is in the very words of our Lord; remember, 'Whatever ye do to one of these little ones, ye do it unto Me.' I pray the Lord that He may open the eyes of all the elect, who are yet strangers to regeneration, and also convince such of them as are fallen from their first love.

"Now, my friends, I have this to say in my own vindication, that however I have been branded by some, and misconstrued by others, yet I can say in the sight of the Lord, before whom I am now to appear, that I am free of any public scandal; I say I am free of drunkenness, I am free of whoredom, thefts, or murder; therefore, let none say that we are murderers, or would kill any, but in self-defence, and in defence of the Gospel. I truly forgive all men the wrongs they have done to me, as I desire to be forgiven of the Lord; but as for the wrongs done to a holy God, I leave these to Him who is the avenger of blood; let Him do to them as He may be glorified. Now, I say no more, but pray that all who are in His way may be kept from sinning under suffering, and that every one may prepare for a storm, which I do verily believe is not far off."

Then stooping down, he saluted some friends, and said, "Farewell all relations and acquaintances; farewell all ye that are lovers of Christ and His righteous cause." And beckoning to the multitude, he said "Farewell also." And so he went up the ladder with the greatest discoveries of alacrity and magnanimity, and seating himself upon it, he said, "Now, this death of mine I fear not, for my sins are freely pardoned; yea, and I shall sin no more, for I am made, through my God, to look hell, wrath, devils, and sin eternally out of countenance. Therefore, farewell all created enjoyments, pleasures, and delights; farewell sinning and suffering; farewell praying and believing, and welcome heaven and singing. Welcome joy in the Holy Ghost; welcome Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; into thy hands I commend my spirit."

When the executioner was about to untie his cravat, he thrust him away, and untied it himself, and, calling for his brother, threw it down, saying, "This is the last token you will get from me." After the napkin was drawn over his face he uncovered it again, and said, "I have one word more to say, and that is, to all that have any love to God, and His righteous cause, that they will set time apart, and sing a song of praise to the Lord for what He has done to my soul, and my soul says, to Him be praise." Then letting down the napkin, he prayed a little within himself, and the executioner doing his office, threw him over.

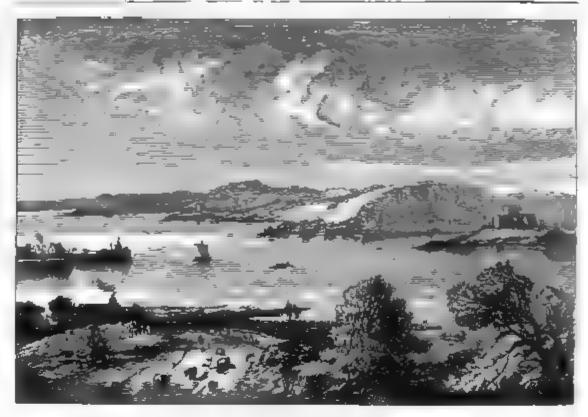

James Boig.

ITTLE is known of James Boig than that he was son to a Mr James Boig, merchant in Edinburgh. His testimony is a well written document, in keeping with his character as a student of theology. Wodrow records that "both he and Mr Smith died under much comfort, joy, and full assurance." The Sanquhar Declaration mentioned in his testimony was published by about twenty persons gathered together at Sanquhar, June 22, 1680, when Michael Cameron read it, and left a copy affixed to the Cross. It was the first public statement in which allegiance to Charles II. was renounced, because of the supremacy he claimed over the Church. It is appended to the Informatory Vindication, which contains an eplanation and defence of this Declaration by Renwick. Wodrow, in his History, gives a kindly plea for its authors, written by "a very worthy Presbyterian minister lately got to the joy of the Lord." The Sanguhar Declaration roused the Government to fury. A counter proclamation was issued, declaring it to be "a most treasonable and unparallelled paper," and offering 5000 merks for Richard Cameron, 3000 merks for Douglas, Cargill, and Michael Cameron, and 1000 for each one of the traitors, dead or alive, to be instantly paid to their captors. *

The Queensferry paper, referred to in this and several of the following testimonies, was said to have been found upon Henry Hall of Haughhead, June 3, 1680. It was unsubscribed, was evidently an imperfect draught, and was never, as whole, owned by the societies. Hall was waiting for an opportunity to go over to Holland with it when he was captured. Though incomplete, it is yet an able document, and asserts in bold prominence a doctrine that must have been specially unpalatable to Charles II. and the debauchees associated with him—the absolute necessity of moral character in a ruler, be his office what it may. The paper is in Wodrow, and the tenor of it is given in the appendix to this work.—ED.]

QUEENSFERRY,

HE LAST TESTIMONY of Mr James Boig, Student of Theology, who suffered at the Cross of Edinburgh, July 27, 1681, written in a letter to his brother:—

"DEAR BROTHER,—I have not now time to write that which I would; but to satisfy your desire, and the desire of others, who are concerned in the cause and work of God, that is now at this time trampled upon, I have given out my indictment to a friend of yours, and now I shall give you an account of the enemies' prosecution thereof against us.

"My indictment did run upon three heads-

"1. That I had disowned the King's authority;

"2. That I said, the rising in arms at Bothwell Bridge was lawful, and upon the defence of truth;

"3. That I owned the Sanquhar Declaration in the whole heads and articles thereof. And having again owned this before the Justiciary and Assizers [i.e., the Jury], I held my peace, and spake no more, because I saw what was spoken by others was not regarded, either by our unjust judges or mocking auditors. All that our speaking did, was the exposing of us to the mockery of all present.

ut the reasons that were given in thus, for our defence in the first ere—That we could not own the authority, as now presently shed, unless we should also own the Supremacy which the King surped over the Church. By our doing of this, we should rob of that which is His right; and give that unto a man, which is no mortal. The reason is, because the Supremacy is declared r Acts of Parliament to be essential to the crown; and that is essential to anything, is the same with the thing itself; so owning the authority, we are of necessity obliged to justify 1 their usurpation also. But there is another argument, which is valid, though I spoke it not before them, and it does not a ouble me that I should have passed it. The Advocate, in his se to the assizers among other things, said, that we were overthese acts and laws which they, the assizers, had consented were owning. Now, I suppose their consent to the present d laws was never formally required of them, but that which is or their consent is their simple silence, when these acts were and published, and owning these Parliaments as their repreves; so that I may clearly argue from this, that, even in their ense, my owning of the present authority now established as and the present magistrates as my magistrates, is a giving my t to the present acts and laws, and so consequently to the z of Christ of that which is His right.

s to the second, it being but one particular fact, deduced from inciple of the lawfulness of self-defence, and this principle is positively asserted by all of us, I look upon the principle to expressly sealed with our blood, as that particular fact of rising at Bothwell Bridge is.

s to the third, it being a deed consequential from the first, I upon them both to stand and fall together; and he that the first, must of necessity own the last also.

nd as to that of declaring of war, I did always look upon it to and the same, though differently expressed, with that conin the paper found at the Queensferry; and that the main of it was to vindicate us before the world in our repelling violence, and clearing us of these aspersions that were cast is, viz., the holding, as a principle, the lawfulness of private nations (which we disown), and murdering all those who are the same judgment with us.

hese are the truths which we are to seal with our blood, tomorrow, in the afternoon, at the Cross of Edinburgh. As to particular actions, we declined to answer positively to them, a of the Archbishop [Sharp's] death. We told them that we coube judges of other men's actions. As to the excommunicati the Torwood], because we declined them, as not competent jud cognosce upon an ecclesiastic matter, they did not proceed upon

"And now, dear brother, you may see our quarrel clearly to be the same that Mr James Guthrie laid down his head for; whose, mine and my other two friends' heads are to be set. were many other things passed in private betwixt me and Mr W Paterson (sometime my regent, now Council Clerk), with some who strongly assaulted me with their snares; but now I hope say, that 'my soul hath escaped like a bird out of the snare fowler.'

"And as to your second desire, of knowing how it wen my soul. Many and strong have been the assaults of Satan's came to prison; but glory to God, who hath not been wanting in giving me assistance, yea, many times unsought; and He continuing, and I hope shall do to the end, to carry me above the of death, so that I am in as sweet a calm, as if I were going married to one dearly beloved. Alas! my cold heart is not a answer His burning love; but what is wanting in me is, and she made up in a Saviour complete and well furnished in all a appointed of the Father for this end, to bring His straying che to their own home, whereof (I think I may adventure to say it) one, though feckless [i.e., worthless].

"Now, I have no time to enlarge, else I would give you a particular account of God's goodness and dealing with me; this suffice, that I am once fairly on the way, and within the v Immanuel's land, and in hopes to be received an inhabitant within the space of twenty-six hours at most. Farewell all ecomforts, farewell all worldly vanities, farewell all carnal developme cross, welcome gallows, welcome Christ, welcome hand everlasting happiness.

"I have no more spare time. Grace, mercy, and peace b you. Amen.

"From Edinburgh Tolbooth, July 27, 1681.

"Sic subscribitur,

"JAMES BOI

David Hackston.

AVID HACKSTON, of Rathillet, in the parish of Kilmany, Fifeshire, was a gentleman of good family. He was present at the death of Archbishop Sharp, but took no share in the matter. He was at Drumclog and Bothwell Bridge. John Howie has given him a merited place among the Scots Worthies.

His sentence is in "Wodrow." It is scarcely possible to conttive anything more savage and revolting. Burnet says of him, "He was so low, by reason of his wounds, that it was thought he would die in the Question if tortured; so he was, in a very summary way, condemned to have both his hands cut off, and then to be All this he suffered with a constancy that amazed all people: he seemed to be all the while in an enthusiastical rapture, and insensible of what was done to him. When his hands were cut off, he asked, like one unconcerned, if his feet must be cut off likewise; and he had so strong a heart, that, notwithstanding all the loss of blood by his wounds and the cutting off his hands, yet, when he was hanged up and his heart cut out, it continued to palpitate some time after it was on the hangman's knife, as some eye-witnesses assured me." Defoe and Patrick Walker give still more circumstantial accounts of the cruelties perpetrated on him at his execution. -Ed.]

> HE TESTIMONY of that valiant and worthy Gentleman, David Hackston of Rathillet, who suffered at the Cross of Edinburgh, July 30, 1680:—

His Interrogations and Answers before the Privy Council, Saturday, July 26, 1680.

I. Whether or not had you any hand in the murdering of the late Archbishop of St Andrews? Answered, He was not obliged to answer that question, nor be his own accuser.

TOLBOOTH OF EDINBURGH-SOUTH FRONT-NOW REMOVED.

II. What he would declare as to the King's authority? Answ The authority that disowns the interest of God, and states [i.e., itself in opposition to Jesus Christ, is no more to be owned; I it is, the King's authority is now such, therefore it ought not owned.

III. Whether the killing the Archbishop of St Andrews was myea or not? Answered, That he thought it no sin to desparbloody monster.

IV. If he owned the New Covenant, taken at the Queens from Mr Cargill, one of their preachers? Answered, That hown it in every particular thereof, and would fain see the man the conscience and reason would debate the contrary.

V. If he were at liberty, and had the power to kill any c King's council, and murder them as he did the Archbishop of S drews, whether he would do it, yea or not? Answered, That he no spare time to answer such frivolous and childish questions.

The Chancellor told him, that if he were not more ingenue his answers, he would presently be tortured. He answered, "T but a little addition to your former cruelties, and I have that cor that though you torture my wounded body, yet ye cannot reac soul." The Chancellor urged him with several other questions, " he refused to answer. But, said he, "I would gladly speak a little, if I could have liberty;" which was allowed him.

Then he said: "Ye know that youth is a folly, and I acknowledge that, in my younger years, I was too much carried down with the spate [i.e., flood] of it; but that inexhaustible fountain of the goodness and grace of God, which is free and great, hath reclaimed me, and, as a firebrand, hath plucked me out of the claws of Satan; and now I stand here before you as a prisoner of Jesus Christ, for adhering to His cause and interest, which hath been sealed with the blood of many worthies, who have suffered in these lands, and have witnessed to the truths of Christ these few years bygone. And I do own all the testimonies given by them, and desire to put in my mite among theirs, and am not only willing to seal it with my blood, but also to seal it with the sharpest tortures that you can imagine."

Then, being interrogated by the Bishop of Edinburgh, what he would answer to that article of the Confession of Faith, that difference of religion doth not make void the Magistrate's right and authority? He answered, that he would not answer any perjured Prelate. The Bishop replied, he was in the wrong to him, because he never took the Covenant, therefore he was not perjured, and so deserved not that name. But some of them asking him how he would answer that question, he answered, "That question was answered long ago, by the Solemn League and Covenant, which binds us only to maintain and defend the King in the defence of the true religion: but now the king having stated himself an enemy to religion, and all that will live religiously, therefore it is high time to shake off all obligation of allegiance to his authority."

These interrogations were all read to him in the face of the council, and he owned all. The next day he was arraigned before the council. They asked if he had any more to say. He answered, that which he had to say, was said already in every particular thereof, and, said he, "I will not only seal it with my blood, but with all the tortures you can imagine."

XTRACT of the proceedings of the Privy Edinburgh, July 29, 1680.

In presence of the Lords, Justiciary Cl Commissioners of Justiciary, compeared Dav ston of Rathillet, and declines the King's . authority, the authority of the Commissioners ciary as his judges, and absolutely refuses to declaration, as being before persons who are not his judg refuses to answer concerning the murder of the late Archi St Andrews, and says the causes of his declinement are, ' they have usurped the Supremacy over the Church, belonging Jesus Christ, and have established idolatry, perjury, and oth ties; and, in prosecuting their design in confirming themselv usurped right, have shed much innocent blood." Therefore David, adhering to Christ His rights and kingly office over the declines them that are His open enemies and competitor: crown and power as competent judges; refuses, as formerly this his declaration, dated from his own mouth; whereupor jesty's Advocate takes instruments, and requires the Comn of Justiciary to sign the same in his presence as for him; Majesty's Advocate takes instruments, that the said David clined his Majesty's authority and the authority of his comm and refused to deny the murder of the late Archbishop of St and requires Mr John Vass, James Balfour, and the men of witnesses to the foresaid declaration. Sic subscribitur, Sir MAITLAND, JAMES FOULIS, DAVID BALFOUR, DAVID F. RODGER HODGE.

PON Friday, July 30, being again brought before the it was asked of him if he had any other thing to answered "That which I have said, I will seal it they told him they had something to say to him, and comma to sit down and receive his sentence, which willingly he did; them, they were all murderers, for all that power they had wa from tyranny, and that these years bygone they have not or nised over the Church of God, but have also granded the fa poor, so that oppression, bloodshed, perjury, and many murders were to be found in their skirts. Upon which he was incontinent [i.e., instantly] carried away to the scaffold at the Market Cross of Edinburgh, where he died with great torture inflicted upon his body, not being permitted to leave any testimony to the world; except what is comprehended in these missives, directed to some of his Christian acquaintance from his prison in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, which are as follows:

OPY of a LETTER written by DAVID HACKSTON of Rathillet, to his Christian friend N. Dated from the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, July 25, 1680.

"DEAR ACQUAINTANCE,—I know this late dispensation of Providence will occasion much sadness to you, and other lovers of God's truth; now in this day, when so few by their practice prove themselves to be realous for God, or lovers of His truth, but, instead of that growth the graces of God's Spirit, and steadfastness which should be in Christians, have made defection from the truth, and are fallen from their first love, to the strengthening the hands of usurpers of the crown of Christ, in their unlawful encroachments on the privileges of the Son of God.

"Wherefore, I entreat you, and all others, as you would not offend God, and provoke Him to more anger, do not murmur, but bless and praise Him, and submit to Him in all humility; for if this be one of the steps to Zion's deliverance, and God's glory, why should not we praise Him for everything? If we had the manner of our delivery at our carving, we would spill [i.e., mar] it. He is the wisdom of the Father, who sits at the helm, and orders all affairs. The faith of this should silence all suggestions from Satan, our own hearts, and misbelief.

"I desire you will discharge all that have love or affection to me, not to be sad on my account, but rather to rejoice on my behalf, that God hath so honoured me in all I have been trysted [i.e., tried] with. For as He took me, when I was a slave to Satan and sin, and cast His love upon me, and plucked me as a brand out of the fire, and brought me into covenant with Him, to promote and carry forward His work without fear of what man could do unto me; and as He helped me to make the bargain with Him in good terms; which was a renouncing of my own strength, and a resolution to do all in His strength; so now He hath been faithful in all things to me, and hath furnished me sufficiently for what He hath called me to, and hath passed by my many gross failings, and breaches of my conditions to Him, and hath done to me above what I could ask of Him.

"Oh! that I could commend Him to all, and stir up all to fear, admire, and praise Him, and believe on Him! But the lukewarmness and want of love to God, and indifferency in Christ's matters (which, in His condescendency to His Church He hath reserved as His declarative glory), and neutrality in these things, are come to so great a height amongst professors, that I think God is laying stumbling-blocks before them, one after another; that, when they are fallen whom He will have to fall, He may be glorified in His justice, by bringing that stroke of vengeance that seems to be hanging over these lands, because of their fearful idolatry, perjury, bloodshed, blasphemy, and other abominations which the whole land is this day guilty of.

"Think it not strange that I say all are guilty. There are none free, nor shall be reputed free in the sight of God, but mourners in Zion. Lord grant repentance and a spirit of mourning! Brokenness and contrition of spirit are the only sacrifices well-pleasing unto God; and I prove all guilty; first, our representatives, and so we in them, established these sins in our national decrees, which we have homologated in owning them ever after, and much more have we homologated their sins, in contributing, one way or other, to the strengthening of their hands against God; as, alas! but few be free of this, this day. Oh! that preachers would preach repentance, and professors would exhort one another to mourn in secret, and together, because of sin; and with their mourning would believe; for these are very consistent together.

"I find flesh and blood great enemies to faith, and friends, yea fosterers, of sinful fears. It is above nature to believe, especially when dispensations seem to contradict our faith. But if any had faith towards God concerning me, let not this brangle [i.e., weaken] their faith, but rather strengthen it. There is nothing can contradict what God hath determined; but over the belly of all opposition He will perfect His work in and by me, either to a remarkable delivery, through-bearing [i.e., upholding] me as He sees most for His own ory.

"Wherefore, let us submit to His will, and lie before His throne behalf of Zion and her children. And oh! that ye yourselves ould, and that ye would desire others that are faithful, to hold up my se to Zion's God, that He would glorify Himself in me; and let your ayers be in faith. 'To him that believeth, all things are possible.' here are many feckless [i.e., worthless] misbelieving prayers, that revail not with God, because of unbelief. I know these sufferings ill be a great stumbling to many otherwise gracious; but let it not to you. I bless God it is not, as yet, so to me; but rather the ower, yea, the love of God to me; for it was not altogether unpected unto me.

"For (not to reflect upon any that have sealed that truth and use, as we stated it, with their blood), I cannot deny but it was ver the belly of conscience that I joined with some of our uty;—[referring to the discussions and fatal divisions immediately revious to the battle of Bothwell Bridge.—Ed.]—for some of them ad not their garments clean of their late defections, and there was o much of pride amongst us. Neither dare I allow that taking of tisfaction for practices, which are the homologating of the public is, which we did about half-an-hour before our break; which checked exceedingly in the time. I think real sorrow would make men, e the prodigal, to think themselves not worthy to be employed in it work. Real evidences of reconciliation with God should be in before admission to such an employment.

"Oh! that all would take warning, by my reproof, not to venture follow any man over conscience! There were choice, godly men ongst us, but one Achan will make Israel to fall. I fear the want faith among us, first and last, and all along our late business. I we many mouths will be opened against me, because of what I did ore this business. But I dare not but speak it; this is a stumbling-ck laid to drive them to more sin; and alas! that I did not do re to purge us of every sin, especially known sin among us. ese that abode within, and came not out with us, let them remem-Meroz' curse. I am afraid that God thinks them not free of our od, for not joining to our help.

"And now, knowing ye will be anxious to know how it was then Airsmoss], and how it hath been since with me: First, we getting ice of a party out seeking us, sent two on Wednesday night late about ten hours [i.e., ten o'clock], we went to take some meat; and sent out other two, and desired them to consult with the first two, who had not come to us, but were lying down to sleep; who all four returned and told us, it was unnecessary to send any for intelligence, they having secured it.

"Whereupon, after we had gotten some meat, we came to a piece of grass, and lay down, and presently we were all alarmed that they were upon us; and so making ready, we saw them coming fast on, and that about three or four hours [i.e., three or four o'clock] in the afternoon; and each one resolving to fight, I rode off, to seek a strength [i.e., a piece of rising or commanding ground] for our advantage, and being desired by a countryman to go into such a place for the best strength, I went, and they followed; but, coming to it, I found we could go no further, and so running and drawing up quickly eight horse on the right hand with R. D[ick], and fifteen on the left with me, being no more; the foot not being forty, and many of them ill armed in the midst; I asked all if they were willing to fight, who all said yes, especially J[ames] G[ray].

"The enemy advanced fast, whom I took to be above an hundred and twelve, well armed and horsed; who sent first about twenty dragoons on foot to take the wind of us, which we seeing, sent a party on foot to meet them, and the rest of us advanced fast on the enemy, being a strong body of horse coming hard on us; whereupon, when we were joined, our horse fired first, and wounded and killed some of them, both horse and foot. Our horse advanced to their faces, and we fired on each other, I being foremost after receiving their fire, and, finding the horse behind me broken, I then rode in amongst them, and went out at a side, without any wrong or wound. I was pursued by several, with whom I fought a good space; sometimes they following me, and sometimes I following them.

"At length my horse bogged, and also the foremost of theirs, which was David Ramsay, one of my acquaintance. We both being on foot, fought it with small swords, without advantage to one another, but at length closing, I was stricken down with three on horseback behind me, and receiving three sore wounds on the head, and so falling, he saved my life, which I submitted to. They searched me, and carried me to their rear, and laid me down, where I bled much; where were also brought several of their men sore wounded. They gave us all testimony of brave resolute men. What more of our men were killed,

I did not see nor know, but, as they told me after, the field was theirs. [Nine were killed in all. The inscription on the monument erected where they fell is in the Appendix.] I was brought towards Douglas. They used me civilly, and brought me drink out of a house by the way. At Douglas, Janet Cleland was kind to me, and brought a chirurgeon [i.e., a surgeon] to me, who did but little to my wounds, only stanched the blood.

"Next morning I was brought to Lanark, and brought before Dalziel, Lord Ross, and some others, who asked many questions at me; but I not satisfying them with answers, Dalziel did threaten to roast me, and carrying me to the tolbooth, caused me to be bound most barbarously, and cast me down; where I lay till Saturday morning, without any, except soldiers, admitted to speak to me, or look to my wounds, or give me any ease whatsoever. And next morning they brought me and John Pollock, and other two of us, two miles on foot, I being without shoes, where that party which had broken us at first received us. They were commanded by [Bruce of] Earlshall. We were horsed, civilly used by them on the way, and brought to Edinburgh, about four in the afternoon, and carried about the north side of the town to the foot of the Canongate, where the town magistrates were, who received us; and setting me on a horse with my face backward, and the other three bound on a goad of iron, and Mr Cameron's head carried on a halbert before me, and another head in a sack, whose I knew not, on a lad's back, we were so carried up the street to the Parliament Close, where I was taken down, and the rest All was done by the hangman.

"I was carried up to the Council, and first put up into a room alone, where the Chancellor [the Duke of Rothes] came, and asked if I knew him. I answered yes. He, after some protestations of love, to which I answered nothing, went his way, and then I was brought in before the Council, where the Chancellor read a dittay [i.e., indictment] against me.

"First, anent the Archbishop's murder, to which I answered, I was obliged by no law, either of God or man, to answer to it, and neither to accuse myself nor reveal others, by vindicating myself, or any other way.

"The Advocate asked where I was the third day of May was a year; to whom I answered, 'I am not bound to keep a memorial where I am or what I do every day.'

"The Chancellor asked if I thought it murder; to which I answered, though I was not bound to answer such questions, yet I would not call it so, but rather say, it was no murder.

BOTHWELL BRIDGE.

"The Advocate said, 'sir, you must be a great liar, to say you remember not where you were that day, it being so remarkable a day.' I replied, 'sir, you must be a far greater liar, to say I answered such a thing.'

"Whereupon the Chancellor replied, 'My Lord Advocate, he said only he was not bound to keep in memory every day's work.'

"The Chancellor asked if I adhered to Mr Cargill's papers, which they called the New Covenant, taken at the Queensferry? I answered I would know what any would say against them.

"He asked if I owned the king's authority? I told, though I was not bound to answer such questions, yet, being permitted to speak, I would say somewhat to that. And first, that there could be no lawful authority but what was of God; and that no authority, stated [i.e., set up] in a direct opposition to God, could be of God, and that I knew of no authority nor judicatory this day in these nations but what were in a direct opposition to God, and so could neither be of God, nor lawful; and that their fruits were kything [i.e., manifesting] it, in that they were setting bougerers, murderers, sorcerers, and such others, at liberty from justice, and employing them in their service, and made it their whole work to oppress, kill, and destroy the Lord's people.

"The Chancellor and all raged, and desired me to instance one of such so set at liberty and employed. I answered to that, though it were enough to instance any such, when I saw a judicatory to execute justice, yet I would instance one, and I instanced a bougerer, liberated at the sheriff court of Fife, and afterwards employed in their service, at which the Chancellor raged, and said I behoved to be a liar; but I offered to prove it.

"Bishop Paterson asked if ever Pilate and that judicatory, who were direct enemies to Christ, were disowned by Him as judges? I answered that I would answer no perjured prelate in the nation. He answered that he could not be called perjured, because he never took that sacrilegious Covenant. I answered, that God would own that Covenant, when there were none of them to oppose it. They all cried that I was prophesying. I answered, I was not prophesying, but that I durst not doubt but God, who had such singular love to these lands as to bring them into Covenant in so peculiar a manner with Him, would let it be seen that His faithfulness was engaged to carry it through, in opposition to His enemies.

"Some asked what I answered to that article of the Confession of Faith, concerning the king? I answered, it was cleared in these two Covenants. The Advocate asked, what I said of that article of the Covenant, wherein we are bound to maintain and defend the king? I desired Him to tell out the rest of it, which was in defence of religion, but not in the destruction of religion.

"The Chancellor threatened me with the Boots, and other terrible things, and said that I should not have the benefit of a sudden death. To which I answered, it would be but an addition to their cruelties used against God's people before, and that I was there a prisoner of Christ, owning His truths against His open enemies; and referred it to their own Acts of Parliament and Council, to let their cruelty and opposition to God and His people be seen.

"After this, they called for a chirurgeon, and removed me to another room, where he dressed my wounds, in which time the Chancellor came and kindly asked, If ever I said to a shepherd, on the Mounthill, that, if I thought they would not put me to an ignominious death, I would refer myself to the Chancellor? I said, No. He said that a shepherd came to him and said so. I said, That he, or any other that said so to him, were liars. I was asked by some concern ing our strength; to which I told how few we were, and how surprised by such a strong party, and, knowing with what cruel orders they came against us, were forced to fight.

"After dressing of my wounds, I was brought back to them, and these things, being written, were read over to me, to which I adhered; and being asked if I would sign them, I said, Not. The Chancellor said, He would do it for me. Some one of them asked at the first time, concerning my being at some other business. To whom I answered, That though I was not obliged to answer to such questions, yet I adhered to all that had been done in behalf of that cause against its enemies. After which, I was sent to the Tolbooth, and have met since with all manner of kindness, and want for nothing. My wounds are duly dressed, which, I fear, may prove deadly, they being all in the head. The rest of my body is safe.

"In all these trials, I bless the Lord, I was staid, unmoved; no alteration of countenance in the least, nor impatience appeared Some of them have come to me, and regretted that such a man as I should have been led away with Cameron. I answered, He was a faithful minister of Jesus Christ; and as for me, I desired to be one of these despicable ones whom Christ choosed. They said, It was a Quaker-like answer. I told, It was the words of Christ and His apostles. Bishop Paterson's brother (unknown to me), had a long reasoning with me, but I think not to truth's disadvantage. me, That the whole Council observed, that I gave them not their due titles; at which I smiled, and made no reply. He said, I was ill to the Bishop. I told that I asserted the truth. That he never took the Covenant, and so could not be perjured. I answered, Prelacy itself was abjured by the whole nation. told me, That the whole Council found I was a man of great parts, and also of good birth. I replied, For my birth, I was related to the best in the kingdom, which I thought little of; and for my parts, they were small; yet I trusted so much to the goodness of that cause, for which I was a prisoner, that, if they would give God that justice, as to let His cause be disputed, I doubted not to plead it against all that could speak against it.

"It was cast up to me, both at the Council and here, that there were not two hundred in the nation to own our cause. I answered, at both times, that the cause of Christ had been often owned by fewer. I was pressed to take advice. I answered, I would advise with God, and my own conscience, and would not depend on men; and refused to debate any more, since it was to no purpose, being troublesome to me, and not advantageous to the cause. At the Council, some said, I was possessed with a devil; some one thing, some another; the Chancellor said, I was a vicious man. I answered, While I was so, I had been acceptable to him; but now when otherwise, it was not so. He asked me, If I would yet own that cause with my blood if at liberty? I answered, Both our fathers had owned it with the hazard of their blood before me. Then I was called by all, a murderer. I answered, God, to whom I refer it, should decide it betwixt us, who are most murderers in His sight, they or I.

"Ye have an account, as near as I can give, of what passed among us. Be ye, and desire all others to be, earnest with God in my behalf; for I am weak, and cannot stand without constant supplies of the graces of His Spirit. Oh! I am afraid lest I deny Him. I have rich promises; but I want faith. Pray and wrestle in my behalf, and in behalf of the rest. And show this to my friends in that cause with me, especially D. K. Let all lie before the Lord, that He would show us the cause of His anger against us; and let me know, with the first occasion, who of us were slain [at Airsmoss].

"Commend me to all friends; and let none stumble at the cause, because of this. It was often in my mouth, to almost all, 'That if we purged not ourselves of the public and particular sins among us, God would break us, and bring a delivery out of our ashes.' Let none murmur at what we should think our glory. And let ministers and others be afraid to be more tender of men, than God's glory; and however it be a stumbling to some, let it be a token of the love of God to His Church, to you, and all that love His truth. Pray for the out-lettings of all the graces of God's Spirit to me, and all the rest. I have need of patience, submission, humility, love to, and zeal for God; hope and faith above all, without which I am but a frail worm, and will fall before these enemies of mine, inward and outward.

"And thus recommending you to His grace, who hath bought us with His precious blood, and remembering my love to all friends,—I am.

"Yours, in our sweet Lord and Sympathiser in our afflictions, "Sic subscribitur,

"DAVID HACKSTON.

"P.S.—You may let others see this, but have a care of keeping it; because I have no double, and it may be all my testimony. Send nothing to me; for I am fully seen to, and have met with kindness from all sorts; only, friends have not liberty to see me. My love to you and all friends. I said to Clerk Paterson, that I should have seen Mr Cargill's papers, before I had answered anent them."

OPY of another LETTER written by DAVID HACKSTON of Rathillet, to a Gentlewoman of his acquaintance, dated from the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, July 28, 1680.

"MADAM,—The bearer shows me, that your ladyship desires to know what I mean by the Achan I mentioned in my other, which I shall explain. And alas! that I have such a wide field to walk in, when I name such a thing; for I know not how to find out the man that is free of the accursed thing among us, for which God is contending against the land; especially against such as would be most free of the public sins, and most downright for God. Only I desire both to reverence and admire the holy wisdom and loving-kindness of God, who is by these dark-like dispensations purging His people, that He may bring forth a chaste spouse to Himself in Scotland. These are tokens of His fatherly love; and I fear a delivery, while we stand guilty of such things as are so open whoredoms against our married husband, might rather be looked upon as a bill of divorce, than joining again in the married relation. And first, I must explain the national sins according to the light God hath bestowed upon me out of His free grace; who is not tied to any, but chooseth and revealeth Himself to whom He will, and often glorifies His free grace, in making use even of the greatest sinners, as I confess I have been one; which national sins are contained in our national decrees.

"And first, The whole land is become guilty of idolatry, as it is established by the Acts of Supremacy, especially the Act Explanatory [i.e., 1st Act of Second Parliament of Charles II., Nov. 16, 1669, asserting his Majesty's supremacy over all persons, and in all causes ecclesiastical, and the first act that was rescinded in the second session of the first Parliament of William and Mary.—Ed.], wherein all the declarative glory and prerogatives of Jesus Christ are given to the king; which is fearful idolatry, in ascribing that which He hath purchased with His precious blood, and received from the Father as His gift, and hath reserved as His peculiar glory; giving this, I say, unto a creature, whom by this blasphemous decree, we have set up in the room of Jesus Christ, as governor and absolute head and judge in all ecclesiastic affairs. And by the same decree, all acts and laws contrary to it are rescinded; and the whole word of God contained in the Scriptures both of the Old and New Testament are a law contrary to it, and so by this are rescinded.

"Now, besides this sin of idolatry, by the Act Recissory, [Act 15 of the First Parliament of Charles II., entitled 'Act rescinding and annulling the pretended Parliaments in the year 1640, 1641, etc.' In virtue of this Act, there is a blank in the editions of the Scots Acts from 1639 to 1650. The original register of these Acts has been recently found in Her Majesty's State Paper Office in London, and has been transcribed, and is about to be published by her Majesty's Government, uniform with the other Acts of the Parliament of Scotland.—ED.], all other acts, oaths, covenants, and engagements that the lands are lying under, sworn to God, and in His name, are rescinded and declared null; and, in contempt of God, to whom, and in whose name they were so solemnly sworn and so often renewed, are burned by the hands of the hangmen, through several places of these covenanted kingdoms. This is a legal perjury, and breach of covenant, without a parallel in sacred or profane history. in contempt of the presence of God, seen at the meetings of His people convened in His name, they have declared them rendezvouses of rebellion [Act against Conventicles. Act V., Second Session of Second Parliament of Charles IL.—ED.]; and by another Act, have accounted it presumption for any minister to preach without doors [this is done in the Act just mentioned, and also in Act XVII. of the Third Session of Scottish Parliament of Charles II. -ED.]; thus contemning the call of Christ, whereby they set themselves above God.

"I could instance many horrid things, acted and done by them, in their prosecuting their design of having that idol of theirs fixed in the usurpation of the prerogatives of Jesus Christ. Yet not doubting but your ladyship knows many of them, I shall for brevity's sake omit; only the land is filled from the one end to the other with innocent blood shed on that account, and with other terrible abominations, detestable among Turks and heathens. I think, in God's righteous judgment, these men are given up thereto, for the upfilling of the measure of their iniquity, that He may be glorified in the stroke of His justice upon all ranks, which is fast hastening, and that inevitably.

"But next, to mention who are guilty hereof. I know not how to do it, only, I may say, I know none can be called free; and a freeing of any of ourselves thereof, is but a hardening ourselves against God, and a defending sin against Him, who is a swift witness and will not be mocked, but will bring forth the hidden things of And, therefore, not to mention the idol of the dishonesty to light. Lord's jealousy, or those that are prosecuting his wicked commands under him, nor Prelates, and their adherents, I judge, and I fear, God will esteem all guilty of these forementioned sins, that have any way owned any of these after their wickedness was discovered; and much more such, as have by their personal deeds homologated these wicked decrees; and that either by paying cesses for strengthening them in their down-bearing of the meetings of God's people for His worship, met in opposition to these wicked decrees, which is their consent to, and contribution for the strengthening them in all their wickedness against God; or yet by subscribing any manner of bonds to them, which is an acknowledging them in that relation wherein they stand, and are designing to fix themselves, when they are pursuing, taking, imprisoning, and letting them out on these bonds For their end, in all their prosecutions of this nature, is again. to confirm themselves in this usurpation of the crown of Christ, as Head of the Church; and a subscribing any manner of bond prescribed by them is, and will be, in the sight of God, an acknowledging them as head of the Church, in the several stations wherein they have stated themselves, the King as head, and they as factors under him, prosecuting his will, and putting in execution his commands. And an acknowledging any other head, any manner of way, over the Church, is directly a denying of Christ before men in His kingly office, which is a plain denying of Him, and hath fore-threatenings annexed thereunto.

"I could mention many other circumstances wherein this generation has touched the accursed thing, and has bowed the knee to that Baal-like idol of the Lord's indignation and anger; but I shall only mention, beside these two, a third, of some who have appeared in arms against God, for, and in company with His enemies. Now, that way of giving and taking satisfaction for these sins, which some are for, I cannot consent to.

"For first, these sinful practices being practices immediately against God and the first table of the law, no satisfaction to man can be sufficient. I close not that door which God hath opened in mercy to the really penitent; but I say, real evidences that God has forgiven should be, before a-joining with such in society. I know the Gospel should be preached to all, that they may repent; that being the means which God hath appointed for conversion, when men have sinned. But oh! when men, after light, fall into these things, and others counsel and advise them to such things, fearful shall their doom be, if God prevent them not in His mercy!

"Now, madam, there were some such among us; and, as I have observed, God has still punished that party which has been appearing for Him, when they have taken in and joined with the men of these abominations, and has, as it were, laid by such as have complied with the time's apostacy, I doubt not reserving them to the general stroke He is threatening the whole lands with. Oh! that one and all were making their soul's interest sure with God!

"Madam, I shall not mention the several steps of apostacy and defection from God in these lands, in complying, one way or other, with the stated enemies of the living God, to the strengthening them in their usurpations of Christ's crown and privileges, and hardening them in their sin; in shedding, so many ways, so much innocent blood, and their other wicked courses. Neither shall I mention that idolising of men that is amongst us, to the provoking of God to let, yea, cause them fall; neither that selfishness that is among us, in our appearances for God, which cannot away with [i.e, be endured by] a holy, spotless, and jealous God, who will not give His glory to Oh! that one and all were mourning for, and acknowledging our own and the land's guiltiness in these things, and were seeking brokenness of spirit, which is a sacrifice well pleasing to God; that God might yet be reconciled to us, and set up by His spirit His standard, and gather in His own people thereto, and might let out His spirit to one and all, that are called by His name. I doubt not but God will save a remnant; but it will be of such in whom His free grace will be glorified, and not of the great ones that have not rendered to the Lord according to the talents He bestowed on them.

"Remember me to my fellow-prisoners, especially such as are keeping their garments clean of these pollutions; and be earnest with God in my behalf, that He would keep me standing, by His free grace, in this trial, in patience, humility, and godly fear; and I am,

" Madam,

"Your Ladyship's, in all humility in Jesus Christ, "DAVID HACKSTON."

OPY of a Third LETTER written by DAVID HACKSTON during his imprisonment, to his Christian Friend N. Dated July 28, 1680.

"DEAR AND CHRISTIAN ACQUAINTANCE,—My love being remembered to you and all friends in Jesus Christ; these are to show you and all others that I know, and [who] love the truth, as it is this day owned by the smallest handful that pretend thereto, that I was yesterday before the Lords of Justiciary. They charged me with several things.

"I declined the king's authority as a usurper of the prerogatives of the Son of God, whereby he hath involved the lands in idolatry, perjury, and other wickednesses; and I declined them, as exercising under him the supreme power over the Church usurped from Jesus Christ, who, in carrying on their designs of confirming themselves in their usurpations of the crown of Christ, had shed so much innocent blood throughout the land; and that therefore I, as an owner of Christ's right and His kingly office which they by their wicked decrees had taken from Him, durst not, with my own consent, sustain them as competent judges, but declined them as open and stated enemies to the living God, and competitors for His throne and power belonging alone to Him. Whereupon I was dismissed, and at night my indictment to compear to-morrow before an assize was intimated.

"Therefore I entreat ye will, (for I know ye have moyen [i.e., power] with God.) and cause other faithful friends, to set time apart, and inquire the Lord's mind concerning me, and be earnest with Him in my behalf, that He will glorify Himself in me. You may send your letter to ———— with a sure hand, who will give it to me. Wherever M[r] D[onald] C[argill] is, acquaint him with my case, or send him this line, for I know the mind of God is with him, and desire him to write to me. I think I dare not misbelieve, but when fear assaults me, I think there is a voice saying Fear not. Let none stumble at our cause, because of the late sation; it is God's cause; which was, and is, in our hands, He has punished us with His fatherly chastisements, because amongst us. Every tree that bringeth forth fruit, He purgeth it may bring forth more fruit; but that which decayeth and backward, is laid by as useless.

ohn Pollock has been in the Boots, but I am informed, he is not raged, but is likely to be well again. My wounds are very out, blessed be God, He keeps me in a good temper, both of and mind. I am kindly enough used, wanting nothing.

recommend you, and all the faithful, to the protection of Him, the Almighty God, and Everlasting Father. No more, but

"Yours in our sweet Lord Jesus Christ,
"DAVID HACKSTON."

LETTER written by David Hackston to his sister:

"LOVING SISTER,—I received yours, and the other with it, both to my contentment and satisfaction.

"It makes me afraid, that the eyes of many should be on me. Let all look to God. I am frail, but Christ is strong. I have His promise of through-bearing, and assurance that He should honour me in His cause, this. Lie low before the Lord, and let others that are yet be earnest on my behalf, and do it in faith. The prayers of thful avail much.

lave you nothing, and tell all friends to have nothing, to do uch, as have ado with these that are sitting in that seat, and ing that power which belongs alone to Christ. The stroke Lord's anger is ready to be poured forth; and these that have ed greatest talents from God, and have made use of them, to hen enemies' hands by bonds, or otherwise owning them, shall st remarkable in the stroke, and shall not be honoured to testify rist—despised Christ—robbed Christ—contemned Christ by neration.

Remember me to all relations and friends; and give warning to cleave to Christ's truth and interest. If the free grace of God rified in me, ought not all to praise Him? Christ came not to call the righteous, but sinners. Many of this generation think they have so much grace that they cannot sin; but I must tell them, grace doth not warrant from sin, and they may so think of it.

" Sic subscribitur,

"DAVID HACKSTON."

Archibald Alison.

ODROW'S account of Alison and of Malcolm, is all that is now known of them: "Upon the 4th of August, I find other two men who had been taken at Airsmoss before the Justiciary; John Malcolm, of the parish of Dalry, in Galloway, and Archibald Alison, of the parish of Evandale, in Clydesdale. Their indictment runs in common form. They confess they were at Bothwell Bridge, and at Airsmoss; and received their sentence to be hanged at the Grassmarket upon the 11th of August. That day, or, as other papers make it, the 13th, they were executed, and died in great assurance and comfortable hopes of well-being."

The Rutherglen Declaration, referred to in Alison's testimony, was the earliest indication of the position which the societies soon afterwards took up, of direct opposition to the Government. It was, however, never owned by the societies. It will be found at the close of the Informatory Vindication. Its substance is well stated in the Vindication: "The Lord stirred up a handful to publish the Testimony at Rutherglen, May 29, 1679, bearing witness against the sacrilegious Supremacy, the Declaration condemning our covenants, the Act for keeping the 29th of May as an holy anniversary day of thanksgiving for the upsetting of the tyrant, and against other nefarious Acts of Parliament, and all prejudices done to the interest of Christ in the land. And for confirmation of their testimony, they did burn the aforesaid Acts, according as the adversary had burnt our holy Covenants, and did extinguish the bonfires upon the same anniversary day."

The first Indulgence, also referred to in Alison's testimony, was issued June 7th, 1669. It permitted those outed ministers, that had lived peaceably and orderly in the places where they had resided, to exercise the functions of the ministry in their former parishes, but forbade persons from other parishes to come and hear them, and declared all who preached at or frequented conventicles to be seditious persons. The second was made up of three acts, issued September 2d and 3d, 1672. It was of the same Erastian character as the former, although it seemed to give more liberty. It was the cause, as no doubt it was designed by its framers, of much division among the Presbyterians.

The spot where so many of the martyrs suffered in the Grass-market is at a central part in the east end. Robert Chambers, writing in 1823, says, that at this spot there remained till very lately a massive block of sandstone with a square hole in the middle. It was the stone which served as a socket for the gallows when it was the common place of execution. At the present day the spot is marked out by an arrangement of the paving-stones in the form of a St Andrew's Cross.

Criminals of a higher class suffered at the Cross in the High Street of Edinburgh. Here Donald Cargill, David Hackston, Walter Smith, and others, were executed.—Ed.]

HE DYING TESTIMONY of ARCHIBALD ALISON, who lived in the parish of Evandale in Clydesdale, and suffered at the Grassmarket of Edinburgh, August 13, 1680.

"There have been many such sights seen in this place of execution since the year 1660, for this interest and cause, for which I have received the sentence of death; and here I am, in your presence, to lay down my life this day; for which I charge thee, oh! my soul, and all that is within me, to bless and magnify the name of the Lord, who can perfect His praise, and bring a testimony out of the mouths of babes or sucklings. Yea, before He want some to seal His testimony, even if it were from the beasts of the field, He will not want; as in Balaam's days, the dumb ass, speaking with man's voice, gave a testimony against the madness of the prophet. Wherefore, unworthy as I am, I am come here, and beg your ear and attention, ye who are spectators and auditors, if the Lord shall permit me to speak a few words; and I shall be but brief.

"There are many come here this day, to hear and see me lay down this tabernacle of mine, that have various ends; but our Lord knows you all, and your ends both. It is true, God is my witness, that I judge myself the unworthiest person of any that have lost their blood for this honourable cause. He has been pleased to take a testimony from noblemen, gentlemen, ministers, and poor ploughmen lads, and tradesmen of several sorts; which is a token for good, that He has yet a kindness for these covenanted lands. And I bless the Lord with all my heart, that ever He called me with His heavenly calling. I bless the Lord, that I have a life to lay down for His sake. Glory to the Lord, that I shall have blood and wounds in His cause.

"But to come more particularly to the purpose in hand, the articles of my indictment were these: First, they charged me with rebellion for joining with these whom they call rebels, and declared enemies to the king, and enemies to all good government. For my own part I never called them so. I declare here where I stand, before Him who will be my judge within a little, that my design in coming forth with arms, was to hear the Gospel preached truly and faithfully; and I know it was the design of that poor handful to defend the Gospel, and to keep up a witness and testimony against the abounding corruptions that this land is filled with from end to end, and to plead with the Lord that He would not make a total removal therefrom. Yea, I heard Mr Richard Cameron say:

"'My friends, we are not to compare ourselves with a Gideon's 300 men. No, not at all. Our design is to have you examined how ye are, and what ye are; to choose two or three of the foot, and two or three of the horse, that are found fittest qualified for elders; to try your principles, to try your life and conversation, and to have you being [i.e., living] Christians. Our number was more the last day, and we gave them free leave to go home, and only but a few handful y; for we design not to fall upon any party of the forces, except be few in number, and oppose us in keeping up the Gospel in elds; for I am persuaded that one meeting in the fields has been owned and countenanced by His presence with His people, twenty house meetings, as they are now bought [by the Induls]; and therefore make no strife among yourselves about offibecause they are but men; yea, I think there is not a man gst you all meet for it. We are not meet to be a Minister to only we are to wait till the Lord provide better; and, ye that ot satisfied to stay in defence of the Gospel, good morrow to whatsoever ye be.'

And so I thought it was rational and warrantable, both from the of God, and our solemn vows and covenants, which you and hole land are engaged unto. Now ye see what was my motive in with that handful, and in this I have peace, and on this id I lay down my life.

There is a Second motive I had, for which I thought myself d to own that persecuted cause and interest of my blessed Lord I being about two years ago in Carrick, Master, Jesus Christ. hearing the precious Gospel of Jesus Christ (in these glorious the shining of the countenance of our Lord was discernibly there, both upon His ministers and people), I thought it my The Lord did so soften and animate my heart to mark it. it time, that I made it my work, how I might win [i.e, get] to less how to state [i.e., declare] myself, being among the de-I indulged Ministers; and finding several places of Scripture g me out from them, as these known Scriptures, 'If the Lord od, follow Him: but if Baal then follow Him.' 'Come out among them my people, and touch not the unclean thing.' ch not, taste not, handle not, which are all to perish with sing;' I thought it was dreadful to be halting between two On the other hand, I had some Scriptures concerning the that attends pure religion and undefiled. The Lord who has l me here to-day, to seal these truths, wrought, with an irree power on my heart, that good word of His; 'The Lord ; and blessed be my Rock; and let the God of my salvation It is God that avengeth me, and subdueth the people alted. He delivereth me from mine enemies: yea, thou liftest me. p above those that rise up against me: thou hast delivered me the violent man' (Psalm xviii. 46-48). This makes me rejoice.

The Lord of hosts is upon my side; the God of Jacob is my defence. Oh! so strongly as this binds and obliges me to suffer, and count all joy now to go up this ladder! And I had occasion to be at several other meetings, I bless the Lord for it; I bless the Lord, that ever He made choice of me, who was a miserable sinner, to lay down my life for His cause. And so I die not by constraint or force; but willingly at His command.

"There is another clause in my indictment, and sentence of death. They say, 'That I walked up and down the country, murdering, destroying, and oppressing the subjects:' But I say, I did never mind [i.e., intend] the like. And so they have, as they have done to many an one, assized and sentenced me wrongously; for I did never mind to murder or rob any man. Therefore I am clear to charge them guilty of my blood, and to give my testimony against them, as murderers of the servants and people of God, in their being about the service and worship of God; as I was.

"In the next place—

- "1. I believe that all the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament are the word of the eternal and ever living God, given by divine inspiration; and that every duty commanded therein ought to be obeyed and performed upon the greatest peril and hazard; and that every crooked and false way should be avoided and guarded against, whatever be the seeming advantages which may accompany the embracing of it; under the pain of being led forth with the workers of iniquity, when He shall pronounce peace on His Israel.
- "2. I give my witness, and join my adherence to the Confession of Faith, the Larger and Shorter Catechisms, National and Solemn League and Covenant, with our Solemn Acknowledgment of sins and Engagement to duties.
- "3. I adhere to the Church government by General Assemblies, Synods, Presbyteries, and Kirk Sessions, according as it was established in the year 1648.
- "4. I give my testimony to that faithful declaration at Rutherglen, the 29th of May 1679.
- "5. I adhere and give my testimony to the Declaration at Sanquhar, June 22, 1680, together with the paper gotten at the Queensferry upon Henry Hall, June 3, 1680.
- "6. I give my testimony, and set to my seal, to all the former testimonies sealed by the blood of them who have been murdered on scaffolds, in the fields, and in the sea, from the year 1660, to this by all the imprisonments and banishments of exiled and ring ones; and by all the spoilings and robbings, oppression, tizing, scourging, and booting, and other horrid cruelties, which seen committed by the enemies of our Lord Jesus Christ. On the other hand—

- . I enter my protestation before the Judge of all, both living ead, before whom I am to appear within a little time, against all icroachments made upon the prerogatives of our Lord Jesus , particularly against Popery, Quakerism, and Prelacy, and all underlings and the joiners with them; and against all Suprewhich is contrary to the word of God; and against all Erasn; and against both the Indulgences, first and last; and all the s with, connivers at, and supporters of it; and against the e in watchmen at this day, in not giving faithful warning, acig to that in Isaiah lviii. 1: 'Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy like a trumpet, and shew my people their transgression, and ouse of Jacob their sins;' and against their ambiguous and applications, so that the sin of the times is not touched, lest rritate the magistrate, and bring themselves in hazard of our s cross; which was an evil, creeping in long ago, which the ibly condemned in the ministers, and ordered them to be nded, if they did not amend, and, seeing no humiliation for such t sin, they were to be deposed.
- 2. I enter my protestation against all those who have declared elves opposite to our Lord Jesus Christ, and have displayed ner for Satan; not only tolerating, but acting and committing nner of abominations, and horrid cruelties in things civil and iastical.
- 3. I enter my protestation against all declarations, proclamabonds, cess, and militia money, for keeping standing forces displayed banner against our Lord; and against all profanity, less, and lukewarmness, and all the backslidings of the Church tland, since our entering into covenant with God, to this day. Now, sirs, I have given you but a short hint of my faith and ples, and also of the motives which moved me to join with the s seekers of God, and also the grounds of my indictment, and ice of death; also some little glance at the corruptions of the themselves to work wickedness. Oh! It is but little that I can say; it would take a long summer day to rank them up, and not win [i.e., get] at them all. For my part, I am but ignorant; my capacity can but reach little things. It may be, ye will take but little notice of what the like of me says, but I cannot help it. Now, as a dying man, I leave all these things to your consideration; if this prelatic and indulged party be the party to be meddled with and owned, pleaded for and defended, what think ye of them that have gone before us? What think ye of Argyle, and Mr Guthrie, that were men of understanding? What think ye of Mr Kid, and Mr King, and that gentleman that suffered last at the cross [Hackston of Rathillet]? Nay, what think ye of religion and the cost of it? What think ye of heaven and glory, that is at the back of the cross? The hope of this makes me look upon pale death as a lovely messenger to me. I bless the Lord for my lot this day.

I have here joined my testimony to the sufferings of the e of God, and I have entered my protestation against some sins, which are obvious to all who have not willingly yielded

"I shall come shortly to a close, only I beg leave to speak a word or two to three sorts of folks; and, I think all may be comprehended under these three. I entreat you, take heed; I wish I may not be a stumbling-block to any one that is looking on me this day. 'Blessed is he,' says Christ, 'that shall not be offended in Me and my followers.'

"1. To the seekers of God. I have a word to you. Ye have Kirk and State upon your top [i.e., seeking your ruin]; ye get leave to weep a long night, and have none to comfort you. And if you cry, 'Watchman, what of the night?' the watchmen are drunk and fallen asleep; they cannot tell. Can these dry bones live? Lord, thou knowest. Ye are seeing the godly cut off, one way and another. Ye are hearing them, that have the root of the matter in them, crying up a sinful union, and ministers will not tell you what is your duty or danger. Oh! my dear friends, cast not away your confidence. Ye must come through many tribulations; but there is a begun heaven for you at night. Seek ye the Lord, ye meek of the earth; ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger. There is no persecution in heaven, where your Lord's enemies shall never come. I shall not take upon me to say, who of them will not come to heaven; but this I may say; if they come, it will be more than ordinary humiliation they must have; as it is said of Manasseh, that 'he humbled himself greatly before the Lord God of his fathers.' Friends, give our Lord credit; He is aye [i.e., always] good; but oh! He is good in a day of trial, and He will be sweet company There is none like the God of through the ages of eternity.

	·
-
				•
	•	•		•
			•	•
	·

THE HIGH CHURCH, CLASGOW.

Jeshurun, that rides upon the heaven in thy help, and in His excellency on the sky. And underneath are everlasting arms, and He will save His people.

- "2. I have a word to say to you that are godly; but, alas! you have wronged the cause; for which I fear you have lost the countenance of God, and will not get it again in haste. Ye have waxed fat and kicked. Ye have flung at God, so to speak. Ye have laid a confederacy with enemies for a false peace. Ye have been crying peace and union with the indulged; because they are godly men. I say before the Lord, that ye and these godly men have most basely betrayed the Kirk of Scotland. Ye shall go to heaven in a fiery chariot. Ye shall hardly get leave to suffer, but go away in a stink [i.e., as an offence], for your complying and shunning the cross.
- "3. A word to the ungodly. Oh! ye atheists and ungodly magistrates, full of perjury, and bloodshed, ye have nourished your hearts as in a day of slaughter. The blood of the Lord's martyrs, that has been shed these eighteen or nineteen years within this city, will be charged home upon you, as well as upon the assizers. counsellors, your work will be rewarded. Ye criminal lords, remember; 'the saints shall judge the earth,' and shall shortly be in equal terms with you; and they shall stand upon Mount Zion with the Lamb, and give their consents against you; and shall shortly cry, Hallelujah, hallelujah, to your condemnation! And therefore I obtest you, in the bowels of our Lord Jesus Christ, that you will desist from your wicked courses, and lie in the dust, and mourn for all your Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish! Ye abominations. ignorant and profane drunkards, swearers and Sabbath breakers, repent, or else ye shall likewise perish!

"And now, I take my farewell of all the serious seekers of God, for a short time. And you that are calm, prudent professors, I leave you under process, till you repent for casting off Christ, and His cross, and for bringing up an evil report on the good land, and for your wronging of the cause. And ye rulers, farewell for ever more, without repentance, and deep humiliation, for wronging of Christ and His people! Return, my soul, unto thy quiet rest. Farewell all created comforts in time; and welcome Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; into Thy hands I commit my spirit.

" Sic subscribitur,

"ARCHIBALD ALISON."

John Malcolm.

I will be seen from John Malcolm's testimony, and from the list of the banished in the Appendix to this volume, that he was at Bothwell Bridge, and was one of the many prisoners taken after the battle. He was brought to Edinburgh, and, with several hundred more, was confined in the open air in Greyfriars Churchyard. After almost incredible privations, endured for nearly five months, two hundred and fifty-seven of their number, John Malcolm among them, were given over to one Paterson, a merchant in Leith, towards the close of 1679, to be shipped as slaves to the plantations in North America. The usage they received on ship-They had scarcely room to lie board was of the worst character. down; they were half-starved; and, to add to their misery, the ship met with such stormy weather, that a fortnight was spent in reaching the Pentland Firth. At last the vessel was wrecked on the Moul Head of Deerness, so striking an object to the voyager as he nears the Mainland of the Orkney Islands. Two hundred perished, and John Malcolm was one of the fifty survivors. After this, he appears to have joined the suffering remnant in the fields under Richard Cameron, and was taken in the fatal encounter at Airsmoss.

The Bonds, protested against by Malcolm, and repeatedly alluded to in the testimonies, were imposed at different times during the twenty-eight years' persecution; but that which caused most suffering was the one issued in the close of 1677, or the beginning of 1678. The general refusal to sign it throughout the West of Scotland, was made the pretext for calling in the Highland host, and treating the country as if it were an enemy's, to be plundered by the soldiery at their will. Its ensnaring and cruel character will be best seen from its terms. It made heads of families responsible for any one of their household that attended a conventicle, and proprietors liable for the acts of their tenants and cottars; and forbade hospitality, or kindness, or even shelter, to be given to the intercommuned ministers. The following is a true copy of the Bond referred to:

lasgow, January 28, 1678.—"We —— faithfully bind and us, that we, our wives, bairns and servants respective, shall lys be present at any conventicles or disorderly meetings in coming, but shall live orderly, in obedience to the law, under ains and penalties contained in the Acts of Parliament made against: as also, we bind and oblige us, that our haill tenants tottars respective, their wives, bairns, and servants, shall likeabstain and refrain from the said conventicles, and other meetings not authorised by the law, and that they shall live ly and in obedience to the same: and further, that we nor they not reset, supply, or commune with forfeited persons, interuned ministers, vagrant preachers, but shall do our utmost vours to apprehend their persons; and in case our said ts, cottars, or their foresaids shall contravene, we shall take upprehend any person or persons guilty thereof, and present to the judge ordinary, that they may be fined or imprisoned or, as is provided by Acts of Parliament made there anent, vise we shall remove them and their families off our ground; we fail herein, we shall be liable to such pains and penalties as id delinquents have incurred by law.—Consenting thir presents, ubscribed ut supra."

e Cess and Militia-money, mentioned in Malcolm's testiand often referred to throughout the volume, was a tax imby the Convention of Estates, June 1678, for the purpose of ining troops to put down the field-meetings. It was a great ace to the body of the nation. Parliament, rather than the nation of Estates, was the proper authority to impose taxes; but vernment would not summon a meeting of Parliament, lest it d to discuss the grievances of the nation. In the proclamation ning the Convention, the troops, sought to be supported by ected Cess, are declared to be for the purpose of putting down crable field conventicles. And lastly, in the Act of Convention; to the king the £1,800,000 pounds to be raised by the Cess, d-meetings are stigmatised as dangerous field conventicles and vouses of rebellion.

e Act of Convention led to much discussion, and the debates he lawfulness or unlawfulness of paying the Cess were not few. bate as they might, all were ultimately forced to pay the tax e form or other, and the greatest severity was practised where case it was refused—ED.] HE DYING TESTIMONY of JOHN MALCOLM, Weaver, in the Parish of Dalry, in the Sheriffdom of Galloway, who suffered Martyrdom at the Grassmarket of Edinburgh, August 13, 1680.

"I desire the audience of you, who are here spectators and auditors, to hear some words of a dying man, ready to offer up this tabernacle in your sight

I would have it among my last wishes, that you would consider your ways and your doings, that are not good; and not harden your hearts as in the provocation; for ye have to do with an holy God, who is quickly about to come, in flaming fire, to take vengeance on all the ungodly profane persons who are living at ease in Zion, and rejoicing in the afflictions of the people of God. I would obtest you in the bowels of our Lord Jesus Christ, that you would break off your pernicious ways, and make peace with God, while He would make peace with you, lest ye be destroyed in the overflowing flood of His wrath.

"There have been flockings and gatherings to see others who are gone before me, that have been wonderfully countenanced and owned with the evident presence of God; convincingly helping some to go through the jaws of death, rejoicing and looking profane onlookers out of countenance, and have given their testimonies against the abominations committed in the land. And I am come hither, who am the unworthiest of any that has gone before me.

"Now, before I come further, I would ask you what you think of religion? What, think ye, can it be that makes men go to death with so great peace and sweetness? Ye have heard what malefactors have had to say. Think ye not strange that a rational man can enter in upon eternity leaving such a testimony as ye have heard? And I hope the Lord will help me, in less or more, to be faithful and free in leaving my testimony in the sight and presence of Him, who is the Sovereign Judge of all the earth, before whom I must stand in a short time.

"The cause of my coming here this day is, because I was found with that poor persecuted handful, which is the people that was singly adhering to the honour and glory of God; now when He is ning to bring in His sore plagues upon this apostate Church, s played the harlot with other lovers, for which He will bring gnation, wrath, and pain upon many.

But this is ground of encouragement to the seekers of God; e is keeping up a party in the land that see it their duty to d for His cause and interest, and shall overcome through the of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; who are not their lives unto the death, to contend for His cause and For He hath said, in the seventh chapter of Ezekiel, 16th 'But they that escape of them shall escape, and shall be on ountains like doves of the valleys, all of them mourning, one for his iniquity.' Now, I seeing and considering upon ne hand, what treacherous dealings are hatched up among ers and professors in this poor Church; and on the other considering what the Lord had done formerly; I thought I in conscience, and from respect to the honour of which I had before mine eyes, and the good of mine own I was constrained by an influence of the Spirit bearing in ord upon my heart, which we have in 1 Kings xviii. 21, Elijah came unto all the people, and said, How long halt ween two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow Him; but then follow Him.'

he Lord determined me to join myself with that party, and I count it my duty, and no sin not repent it this day. I think it my credit to serve such a noble Master; pellion. deed, I wonder at His condescendency, that ever He sought from such a wretched sinner as I have been, who lived ger to Him all my days. But, O wonderful love! at the matchless acts of the Lord's condescendency and rehensible ways with me! that He has made choice of such , weak, frail pickle of dust as I am, and has led me out , and has brought me to this place of execution to give my my to His work, cause, and interest; and has passed by the t, wise, and prudent in the land, and has made choice of such less [i.e., worthless] nothing as I am. But blessed be His s name, that will have His word made out, that out of the of babes and sucklings He can perfect His praise.

. And this, likewise, is a ground of hope to you that are weak nnot venture on suffering, being sensible of your own weakness the weak He increaseth strength.' And this is another ground of hope—That He takes the blood and wounds of poor weak things to seal His truths.

"It cannot be expected that I shall be very formal in what I say, I being no scholar, nor yet old in experience. And besides, after I had received my sentence, I was taken out of a private room and put in the irons among bad company, except two days before this.

"The ground of my indictment was, 1. 'That I came against the King's forces, under the command of [Bruce of] Earlshall, and fired upon them.' I declare, I intended not to resist, but being put to it in defence of the Gospel, and my own defence, I did resist them to my power.

"2. 'That I had been with that party in the months of April, May, and June.' I was but two days with them, intending no other thing but to hear the Gospel, and for this I suffer; I bless the Lord, not as an evil doer, but for my duty; for ye know we are all bound in covenant, both Kirk and State, according to the Coronation-oath, and the Covenants were owned and sworn, both by the supreme magistrate, the nobles, gentry, and commons of all sorts. The Lord did wonderfully shine upon this land, so that it became the glory of the whole world; the fame of it went abroad, and was renowned through I have heard, that if a stranger of another kingdom the nations. had come into a church in this land, there was such a frame of spirit among the people, that the stranger would have thought that they had been all saints. The Church then was fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners. But we have not been content with these days. Then the swearer was bound up from oaths, and the drunkard's throat ran dry; iniquity stopped her The Lord was with His people in those days; the Gospel mouth. was successful.

"And yet I can say, there have been as great days of the Gospel in the west of Scotland in the foresaid months, in the fields, as were in Scotland, since it was Scotland. I am sure, the Gospel preached by Mr Richard Cameron especially was backed with the power and presence of Christ. As much of Christ and heaven were found, as finite creatures on earth were able to hold, yea, and more than they could hold; the streams of the living waters ran through among His people, at these meetings, like a flood upon the souls of many, who can witness, if they were called to it, that they would not have been afraid of ten thousands; 'The shout of a king was heard among them.'

The fruits of it, I am hopeful, shall appear after this; all the ers and dragoons in the three kingdoms, will never get that fire ve quenched that is kindled in the breasts of some in that ry; it will never be quenched. It will not rot; the fathers e telling the children of it, when they are old men, who are not away with the wrath that is coming on, to avenge the quarrel broken Covenant. They will be telling, that 'in the year there were as great days, as there are now; when there were tes through these lands, upon the mountains up and down this ; it was then that I got on the zeal of God upon my soul.' they shall say, 'who were they that preached in mosses and stains, and not in the kirks nor houses? Did not all the godly sters, when the apostate prelates were in the land, go out and ss and testify against them, with their lives in their hands?' And thers will say, 'Know, my children, they had run well for a season; ney wearied, and yielded up the Church's liberties to a tyrant king, name of Charles; and he set up the prelates, and they made the full of curates under them; and after that, some, that stayed off a , then turned council-curates, and these council-curates beguiled est of them; and Erastianism was universal; but the moderate ged in judgment would have silenced Mr Richard Cameron preaching; but the Lord had said to him, "Go, and I will go hee;" and so he was wonderfully helped. Indeed, the Lord enanced him after that, and deserted them; and he died a r, and had his head set up upon a port [i.e., gateway], beside three of his brethren, and many of these that wrote against ind had him in derision, went away with a stink.' this to say, and tell to the young ones yet unborn. 'The ous man shall be had in everlasting remembrance.' ends, if any such be hearing me, I may say, truly a great man Israel fell at Airsmoss, the 22d of July 1680.

And now, if I were set at liberty, with a provision that I were and with Mr Donald Cargill (whom I pray the Lord may keep sinning), I would yet again join with that persecuted party, igh they should use me as they did that eminently worthy man that suffered before us [Hackston of Rathillet].

So I am not in the dark, how and for what I suffer. I am clear was in my duty, and I have peace in it since, and I grow learer in it; glory to His name; for it is true that after I got dictment and received my sentence, I wanted the countenance of God; for I never knew that the Lord loved me, but since that time; but I was never in the dark about the righteousness of the cause. I knew it would bear a suffering unto blood and death. And now, I am clear of my interest, and clear as to the grounds that I am laying down my life for this day. I could wish that every hair of my head were a life for His sake, and His persecuted cause.

"I die in the faith of the true Protestant religion, in doctrine, discipline, and worship, as it was received in the year 1638 and in the year 1649. I join my adherence to the government of this Church, as it was reformed from Popery, Prelacy, Erastianism, and Supremacy. And I join my cordial testimony to the Church's laws and statutes at that time, as she was governed by general assemblies, synods, presbyteries, visitations and sessions; and to days of humiliation for sins, solemn days of thanksgiving in receipt of mercies bestowed, and censures for trying out persons of erroneous principles, either ministers or private persons. I adhere to the Confession of Faith; the Larger and Shorter Catechisms; the solemn Acknowledgment of Sins and Engagement to Duties; the National and Solemn League and Covenant; and the protestation at St Johnstoun [i.e., Perth]. testimony to, and approbation of these papers at Queensferry, the third of June 1680. I adhere to that faithful testimony at Rutherglen, the I join my testimony to that last testimony or de-29th of May 1679. claration, affixed upon the market-cross of Sanquhar, the 22d of June 1680. I witness my testimony to the late appearance at Airsmoss, the 22d of July 1680, where the Lord's worthies fell. Likewise I witness my testimony, and set to my seal against that horrid murder of that eminently worthy and famous godly gentleman, David Hackston of Likewise against all the bloodshed in fields, scaffolds, Rathillet. and the sea, these 19 years. And I enter my protestation against Popery, Quakerism, Supremacy, Erastianism, Indulgences first and last, and against arbitrary power over civil and ecclesiastic matters, further than the bounds appointed in the word of God.

"Likewise I witness my testimony against the pleaders for union, siding, joining, halving with usurpers of Christ's crown; silence in watchmen; and all their contrivances, impositions, instructions, or limitations they put upon the young men to be licentiate; prescribing a rule to them, to order their ministry so and so; their papers and pamphlets they have put out lately, to lead men over to that woful Indulgence, under the fair pretext of union; which is dreadful underhand dealing, to bring the people under the shadow of the Lord's ad-

I enter my protestation against that national declaration th in the year 1661 [i.e., the act asserting the royal prerogative], l their declarations since, and all their bonds and oaths imposed the Lord's people. Likewise, against the paying of the cess ilitia money; and against their imprisonments, stigmatising, g and burning with fire-matches, fining and confining, robbing poiling, banishment, oppression, rigour of masters of tolbooths. and because of that mistake, which they say in my indictment resbyterians, and I amongst the rest, had cast off all fear of God e against all good order and civil law; I declare I adhere to kingly ment, but not to perjury and tyranny, turning upside down h and State, contrary to the word of God, our Covenants, and vs of the nation, and contrary to the declaration at Dunfermline, pronation-oath, and the acts of general assembly, and acts of ment ratifying Presbytery, and abjuring this prelatic hierarchy, is now re-established, and Presbytery rescinded. And I bear stimony against those that have been and yet are pleading for your (as they call it) of the Act of Indemnity, after the murder-Mr King and Mr Kid, who were executed on the day that toclamation was read over the Cross, the 14th day of August and against their Justiciary Courts, to ensnare and pannel the eople of God in the west of Scotland.

shall draw to a close shortly; but I might, if I had time, a further upon these. I will say only this to you, who are gupon me this day, that my lot is hard, but I bless the Lord

The Captain of my salvation was made perfect through 1g. No man has wronged me by counsel or advice, for I am ded that the cause is the Lord Jesus Christ's cause, and He vn it. And whoso touches any of His people, touches the of His eye. For He sends none a warfare upon their own s, and in His own time He will make inquisition for the blood His saints, because it is right precious in His sight. And when the inquisition after their blood, and searches them out that ed His people, I would not be the king of Britain, nor a llor, prelate, nor malignant, for a world; and whatever I be, yet the versuaded, that they have the blood of His dear saints in their which are this day under the altar, crying, 'How long, O Lord, and just, wilt Thou not avenge our blood on them that dwell on th?'

'ou got Mr King's advice on the scaffold, to be more sparing of shedding more blood; for within a short time he told you, he be on equal terms with you, that judged him guilty of death; b doth not warn the rulers of this kingdom. Do not think that quarrelling for the taking of my blood. No; it is love for you that obliges me to speak thus. Oh! what can be expected by the Lord has His sword furbished for blood, and He will have of nobles' blood. The Lord has been smiting and woundir Church and people, and blood has touched blood. hath touched Mr Guthrie's blood: and Bothwell touched Pentlar the drowned in the sea touched Bothwell; and Airsmoss the dr in the sea; and our blood toucheth that which was spilt the July last. Oh! that at last ye would be persuaded to desist an no more blood; Oh! that the Lord himself would stop the effu more innocent blood, if it may stand with His honour. more may be for His honour and service, Lord, keep Thy I when they are called to it, to say with David, 'Here am I, le do with me as seemeth Him good!'

"I am also apprehensive, that the Lord hath a great sacrifice bodies of multitudes, and that He will give the flesh and blo many to the fowls of the air; and He minds to give the fow birds a feast of flesh and blood. O Scotland, wilt thou never be wise, until thou be betrayed into the hands of thine enemies? I think, it is incredible, that this land will get leave to pass lor not be swept with the besom of justice; the Lord is really with this land; for I know no person, no, not one, but He has ground of controversy with. It is astonishing to me to think sparing mercies of God towards these lands. For my part, I as that He calls me away after this manner, for which I desire with n to bless Him for His kindness to me, in taking this method as with such a wretched sinner as I am, who deserve nothing but and only wrath. But glory to the riches of His free grace, 'who into the world to save sinners, of whom I am the chief!' I noble High Priest indeed!

"I must draw to a close: I entreat your patience a little, shall say but these three or four things shortly.

"1. I would entreat you, that are strangers to God, make and flee in unto God for your life; from this consideration, t who had union and communion with God, and are now langlory, have died in the faith of it, that there are glorious days can and that the Lord will reckon with His enemies, and pay them all the wrongs done unto His cause and people. 'And it ne to pass in that day, that the Lord shall punish the host of ones, that are on high, and the kings of the earth upon the and they shall be gathered together, as prisoners are gathered t, and shall be shut up in the prison, and after many days y be visited. Then the moon shall be confounded, and the med, when the Lord of Hosts shall reign in mount Zion and alem, and before His ancients gloriously.' You may read it leisure, in the 24th chapter of Isaiah, from the 21st verse to

There is another word in the 36th chapter of Job, 18th It is a word of advice, given by Elihu to Job: 'Because wrath, beware lest He take thee away with His stroke; then ansom cannot deliver thee.'

It is my comfort this day, that my enemies are God's enet is the allowance He bestows on poor things, in the following duty; though they have not much knowledge in religion, nor perience, yet if they be faithful in the little, He helps them thful in much. Ye know He says, 'Because thou hast been n what I committed to thee, have thou rule over five cities.' that it is commonly reported, that they have not much at adhere to this persecuted way; as I take in myself among ho never had great gifts, nor parts, nor heart experience; has told me, since I received the sentence of death by men the Lord's sword, that faithfulness in this juncture of time, lenying His name, shall be an excuse for many infirmities. ill the strong contenders, none get the prize but the sincere resolute man, and they who are determined, as Esther was, nough it should cost them their life. And this is the time people of God should be at holding and drawing, rugging ng [i.e., earnestly struggling] ere the enemies of our Lord His crown, and bruik [i.e., enjoy] it with peace. And this I I to these that are biassed: I shall be a dying witness against ; and professors that made it their work to brand and clothe ıful minister [i.e., Mr Richard Cameron] and martyr of Jesus rith odious names and notorious lies, in calling him a Jesuit, ng that he received the Pope's gold, and that he was a great of the Duke of York, a declared papist; while I know, and ninent Christians know, that he hated him as a limb of Satan; they said, that the troopers had commission to pass him by nan any man, even after the declaration came out; to give 5000 merks for him, dead or alive! Go and lie in the dust for what ye have said of him, and what ye have said of Mr Kid; I bless the Lord, that ever I saw his face, and that ever I heard him preach.

- "3. Give me leave to say this much; I am afraid the apostacy of Scotland, the neutrality and formality that are among both ministers and professors, have shapen out this Church and land of Britain, in length and breadth, with the Church of Laodicea, whom the Lord threatens to spue out of His mouth as a loathsome thing, and then He will have pleasure in His Zion. Yet ye see He is snedding down [i.e., lopping off] a Guthrie, a Wellwood, a King, a Kid, a Brown, and a Cameron, and the like of a Henry Hall and a Robert Dick, that were contending for the truth, and for restoring the privileges of the Church. And these were counted disturbers of your sinful union with the enemies of the Lord! Lay it to heart; now their blood is shed for the cause, and ye are not free of it; but ye can wipe your mouth, and say ye are innocent! Remember that in the 50th Psalm and 18th verse, 'When thou sawest a thief, then thou consentedst with him.' And this the Lord hath seen, and kept silence; remember and mourn for it, lest He tear you in pieces when there is none to The court favour is too short a covering, it will not hide you; therefore, as a dying man, I warn you as from the Lord; consider your ways and your doings that have not been good, and cast yourselves out of the court favour, otherwise, I declare, ye shall not get the favour of God.
- "4. If ye will set about some days of humiliation before the Lord, and take with you your sins and the sin of crying up this clatty [i.e., dirty] liberty, which is the price of blood; if ye will return unto the Lord, then return with all your heart; for He is merciful and gracious, and repents Him of the evil that He threatens, neither will He give way to His anger. He did so to me. I no sooner began to look to Him but He made me welcome, and put me to work, though I be but young, and know nothing. He was tender of me-He took me to Bothwell Bridge to own His cause; and I had many temptations to stay; what from my mother, and from one hand and another; but I durst not for my soul stay behind. I thought it my duty to join myself with that party against the Lord's enemies, and the Lord was good to me there, many ways. He covered my head in the day of battle, and suffered not one hair of my head to fall to the ground, and He suffered many, better than me a thousand times, to fall on all hands of me. So I thought then I held my life of Him; and the Lord brought me to the Greyfriars Churchyard; though I came almost naked, yet He mounted me better than ever I was before with clothes, and wonderfully provided for me beyond many I bless the Lord, my mother's sickness did not keep me from Bothwell Bridge; and when I was in the Greyfriars Churchyard, I was threatened with death by the Justice-General, who swore a great oath that I should die if I would not take the Bond. I told him, as it was true, that many better than I had been hanged; but I was brought out of his hand, and the Lord took me to the sea, and did deliver me from the ragings thereof, when He suffered many better to lose their lives. And when He laid His hand upon me by sickness, He made me to be favoured by all my enemies. He healed me, and brought me home, and then He called me out to hear the Gospel, for which I desire to bless Him, and within a little while I shall praise Him for it. The Lord was so seen amongst His persecuted handful there, that He did engage me to join with them, who were hazarding their lives upon the fields for Him. I was at that late engagement [Airsmoss], and the Lord took some work off my hand there, and has brought me to this place this day to lay down my life for His sake. And this is the last combat I shall have. I shall work no more; I shall suffer no more; I shall fear no more; I shall sin I must take my leave of you all, and so rest in His love. I go where all tears shall be wiped away; where the servant is made free from his master; to the land where the inhabitants shall not say they are sick.

"Now be not discouraged at the ways of God's providence to me, for I can assure you the cause is His own, and He will own it. 'For lo, thine enemies shall perish.' I would have every one of you seeking the favour of God, for ye will have ado with it at death and judgment. The greatest persecutor or malignant will have sore missing of His favour in that day. O seek Him in time! and the Lord help His poor young wrestling people well through their trials! The Lord help them to be faithful, and to endure to the end, for they have the promise of being saved. Join with His people, and cast in your lot with them, and do not stand on the other side; let His cause be your cause in weal and woe. O noble cause! O noble work! O noble heaven! O noble Christ, that makes it to be heaven! And He is the owner of the work. O noble Mediator of the new covenant! O noble Redeemer, who is powerful to help in time of need, and will help such as trust in Him! There was never one that trusted in Him that came to loss. He made them are up [i.e., always recompensed them] sometimes with an hundred-fold in this life, and heaven after. I lay down my life, not as an evil-doer, but as a sufferer for Christ.

"I shall say no more, but a word or two. One is, anent that which some would be informed in; whether I took the Bond that was tendered to the prisoners [taken after Bothwell Bridge]? I acknowledge there was a supplication drawn up containing two articles; one was, craving the benefit of the Act of Indemnity; the second was, that I should not lift arms against the king or any lawful authority; but because it was not authority only, but lawful authority, it was not granted. And at that time there were pains taken by some persons of note, that persuaded men to take the Bond as it was tendered by the bloody Council. Indeed, it hath been a thing heavier than the sand to me, and hath made me groan. I think for that and for many other private failings the Lord did not give me His countenance. Lord pardon, as I hope He will, that I should have put my hand to a pen, and blacked paper in that supplication; but for the Bond, I bless the Lord I did not subscribe it!

"The second thing I am reputed guilty of is, that I supplicated for a delay some short time, and that I called it rebellion that I was at Airsmoss. Indeed, I subscribed no such thing; but it was only this, that it might please them to grant us some more time, for we were in confusion, because of the shortness of the time. We desired some more time, that we might get our souls' case laid to heart, and our peace made with God through Jesus Christ.

"I shall say no more, but wish that ye would all seek repentance in time, before it be hid from your eyes. I recommend my spirit to Him that is able to save to the uttermost all that come to Him through Christ, and desire to take my leave of all created comforts. Farewell all relations; farewell world; farewell sin! Welcome Christ, welcome heaven, and glory for evermore!

"Sic subscribitur,

"JOHN MALCOLM."

James Skene.

AMES SKENE was connected with the best families in Aberdeenshire; his brother's estate of Skene being in the parish of that name, about ten miles to the west of Aberdeen. sociation with Richard Cameron is somewhat remarkable, as he from a county, the stronghold of prelatic principles in the North, nanifest from the strong expressions in his letters to Mr Wildexander and other of his friends. He was apprehended on arge of being a hearer of Donald Cargill, at a time when he had no nat even his name was known as one attached to the persecuted

Nothing could be brought against him, save what he himself He was sentenced to be hanged on the 24th November. He sed a respite for eight days, but at its expiry was hanged at 'arket Cross of Edinburgh, at the same time with John Potter schibald Stewart, whose testimonies follow.

ene's testimony against the tyranny and illegal character of many acts of the Government is expressed in stronger language lmost any other in the volume. The compilers of the "Cloud," tote, guard against taking his expressions in a wrong sense, we finds much fault with the compilers for publishing Skene's ony at all; he fears lest its strong language may lead Papists relatists to be spatter the Protestant religion and Presbyterians teral. But no one who now dispassionately reads Wodrow's istory will entertain such thoughts. Indeed the marvel is, that fferers were able to restrain their just indignation, and speak mly as they did.

to throughout the volume, was one of the papers issued between ttle of Drumclog and that of Bothwell Bridge. It stated the is for continuing in arms. 1. The defence of the Protestant in, as established by law and sworn to by all ranks in the Coveand more particularly the defending and maintaining the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ over His church. 2. The preserving and defending the king's majesty's person and authority in the preservation and defence of the true religion and liberties of the kingdom. 3. The obtaining a free and unlimited Parliament, and a free General Assembly. The second of the above reasons gave offence to many, who believed it worse than useless to speak of defending the king's authority, when he had during a long course of years given so many proofs of his desire to take away liberty, and to rule as an irresponsible monarch.

Of the members of the Privy Council mentioned by James Skene as present at his examination, "York" was the Duke of York, afterwards James VII. of Scotland. Though a Papist, he regularly attended the examinations of the persecuted Presbyterians. When any one was to be struck in the Boots, it had to be done in the presence of the Council. Burnet says: "Upon that occasion, almost all run away. The sight is so dreadful, that without an order restraining such a number to stay, the board would be forsaken. But the Duke was so far from withdrawing, that he looked on all the while with an unmoved indifference, and with an attention as if he had been to look on some curious experiment. This gave a terrible idea of him to all that observed it, as of a man that had no bowels nor humanity in him."

- "Rothes" was the Duke of Rothes, and Lord Chancellor.
- "Burnet" was Alexander Burnet, Bishop of Glasgow. He counselled the hanging of all the prisoners taken at Pentland, if they would not renounce the Covenant. He died in 1684.
- "Paterson" was John Paterson, Bishop of Edinburgh; translated from the diocese of Galloway in 1679. In 1687, he was appointed Archbishop of Glasgow. The Revolution deprived him of his dignities. He died at Edinburgh in 1708. If the pamphleteers of that age are to be believed, his moral character was not of a high order.
- "The Advocate" was Sir George M'Kenzie of Rosehaugh; a man remarkable for his literary attainments, and occupying an honourable place among the writers of his age; but, as a public prosecutor, he was merciless. His remains lie in the Greyfriars Churchyard, and tradition still points out his tomb as that of "bloody M'Kenzie."
- "Clerk Paterson" was Sir William Paterson, made clerk to the Privy Council in 1679.
- "Linlithgow" was the Earl of Linlithgow; who was general over the royal troops previous to Bothwell Bridge, until the chief command was assigned by the king to the Duke of Monmouth.

THE BOOTS.

latton" was Sir Charles Maitland, Lord Hatton, a younger t of the Duke of Lauderdale. He was Master-general of nt, and for some time was Lord Justice-Clerk. Shortly after execution the Duke of Lauderdale died, August 24, 1682, the following October Sir Charles Maitland became Earl of dale. Being accused of malversation in his management of nt, he was found guilty, and, in addition to being heavily fined, eprived of all his offices. With him fell the power of the nds.

ene mentions that he was accompanied to prison by Archibald t and John Sproul. Stewart's testimony follows Mr Skene's. Sproul was an apothecary in Glasgow. He was twice put to ture in the Boots; and, having been fined £500 sterling, was rds confined for six years in the Bass Rock. He survived evolution, and received from his friends the compellation of John Sproul," whereof, says Wodrow, he needs not to be ed.

MWard, mentioned by Skene, was the well-known amanuensis mel Rutherford while at the Westminster Assembly; he suc-Andrew Gray in Glasgow. In 1661 he was charged with able preaching, and banished the kingdom. He went to Utrecht, and then to Rotterdam, where he died December 1681. His life is in the "Scots Worthies." The letter referred to is in "Wodrow."—ED.]

HE LAST TESTIMONY of Mr James Skene, Brother to the Laird of Skene, who suffered at Edinburgh, December 1, 1680.

His Interrogations and Answers before the Privy Council, related by himself in a letter to his Brother:

"DEAR BILLIE [i.e., BROTHER, from same root as the German, 'billig' equal, fair],—To satisfy your desire, I send you this line to let you know, that when I came before the Council (York and Rothes being there, two Bishops, viz., Burnet and Paterson, the Advocate, Clerk Paterson, Linlithgow, and many more, sitters and standers, Dalziel, the General, being porter, walking proudly up and down, not as a servant), none was admitted to come in with me. I saluted them all civilly, and kept off my hat, because they kept off that they might not say that I was a Quaker.

"Rothes asked me, Was I at Bothwell or Airsmoss? I answered, I was at home in the north both these times.

"They asked, If I did own Sanquhar Declaration and the Testimony at Rutherglen? I told them, I did own them both.

"He asked, Did I own the king's authority? I said, in so far as it was against the Covenant and interest of Christ, I disowned it.

"He asked me, Thought I it not a sinful murder the killing of the Arch-prelate [James Sharp]? I said, I thought it was their duty to kill him when God gave them opportunity; for he had been the author of much bloodshed.

"They asked me, Why I carried arms? I told them it was for self-defence, and the defence of the Gospel.

"They asked me, Why I poisoned my ball? I told them I wished none of them to recover whom I shot.

"He asked me, Why I carried a durk? I told them they might ask Mr George Mackenzie, if it was not our country fashion; and he presently told the Chancellor that it was so.

"They asked if I knew Cargill? I said it was my comfort I knew him. Then they reproached him, and me for conversing with him. I said, I bless God, He gave me sweet peace in it.

"They asked, Would I kill the soldiers, being the king's? I said it was my duty, if I could, when they persecuted God's people.

"They asked, If I would kill any of them? I said they were all stated [i.e., declared] enemies of our Lord Jesus Christ, and, by the Declaration at Sanquhar, I counted them my enemies.

"They asked, If I would think it my duty to kill the King? I said, he had stated himself an enemy to God's interest, and there was war declared against him. I said, the Covenant made with God was the glory of Scotland, though they had unthankfully counted it their shame. And in direct terms I said to the Chancellor, 'Sir, I have a parchment at home wherein your father's name is, and you are bound by that as well as I.'

"They asked, Why I called the Chancellor 'Sir.' I said, 'Sir' was a title for a king, and it might serve him.

"The Chancellor asked, If I knew his Royal Highness? I said I never saw such a person.

"York looks out by [i.e., from where he was], for he sat in the shadow of Bishop Burnet, and said, Why did I wish the king so ill? I told, I wished no ill to any, but as they were in opposition to God, I wished them brought down. And he spoke no more.

"The Chancellor said, Would I not adhere to the Acts of Parliament of this kingdom? I said, I would not own any of them which were in opposition to God and His Covenant.

"Mr Mackenzie said, 'If the king were riding by in coach, would ye think it no sin to kill him?' I said, by the Sanquhar Declaration, there was war declared against him, and so he needed not put that in question.

"So Mr Mackenzie came out by to the bar, and said, 'I know your relations and mine are sib, [i.e., connected by blood] be ingenuous in all that is demanded of you, and I will save you from torture.'

"I said, 'Sir, I know you, and ye know me and my relations. I have been as free and ingenuous as I could imagine, because I reckon it my credit and my glory to give a full and free confession for my blessed Lord's interest that is reproached and borne down.'

"They asked me, where I saw Cargill last? I said, I met with him last in the West Bow, to my comfort.

- "They asked me, Who were owners of the house? I said, I really could not tell them; I knew them not.
 - "They said, Would I know the house? I said, Yes.
- "They said, Would I show it to some whom they would send with me? I told them I was free in what concerned myself; but to hurt any else, I could not mar my peace with God; but if they were advertised to go out of the house, I should show it them.

"Then they desired me to go my ways. The General [Dalziel] opened the door, and rounded [i.e., whispered] in my ear, 'Ye must go down with some soldiers, and show them that house.' I said, 'I will not do it to hurt any: these indwellers must be advertised to flee the house first.'

"Then I was ordered to the guard, which was of Linlithgow's soldiers, which took me, and walked (after Archibald Stewart and John Sproul, who were examined) to the Tron; and back to the Council house of the town, I being alone, and only six soldiers with me. I took me to prayer, and was comforted; and then sent money for meat and drink: and then worshipped in public with the soldiers. At night, a person from J---, kindly wakened me, and brought me bread and ale and sugar, and some confected caraway. After that I was carried to a committee, where were present the Chancellor, Hatton, Paterson, Justice-Clerk, Wigtown, and Linlithgow; and they showed me two letters of mine to Mrs Simpson, wherein I owned the Declaration at Sanquhar, and told I would do much to persuade many that it was just, from Mr M'Ward's advice that was given to the I owned the letters, and told them I did what I could to dissuade professors from paying them cess, which they ordered for bearing down the Gospel: at which they laughed.

"The Chancellor said, Why did I not call him Lord? I told him, were he for Christ's interest, I would honour him. Then he said, he cared not for my honour; but he would have me to know he was Chancellor. I said, I knew that. He said I was not a Scotsman but a Scots-beast. At which Wigtown gloomed [i.e., frowned] at him, and he laughed. He then rounded [i.e., whispered] to me, that he would be my friend, would I be ingenuous. I told him, I wished him no ill.

"They asked me, What Mr William Alexander was it, that I wrote of? I said that Mr Paterson the bishop, and Mr Ross, at Glasgow, knew him, and persecuted him unjustly. I then related to them how it was. Paterson said, I told that which I knew not to be truth; he pitied me. He said to the Chancellor, Certainly I forgot to write.

"I was before the Justiciary Court, where my confession was read, and after I read it again, and told them I thought it my honour to subscribe to it. I assented to all that was recorded by the clerk; I owned it, and counted it my honour so to do. The Justice-Clerk Hatton's son being there, said he pitied me, I being a gentleman; he knew my friends. I said, were I an Earl's son I would esteem it my honour. I desired them to canvass [i.e., consider] well what they did, for they would be panneled before God for it. He said I might prepare for another world. I said, I hoped the Lord would prepare me.

"Now, dear Billie, I have given you an account of the truth, as I confusedly remember; but I entreat you, take all the praise you give me, and put it upon my Lord, for I am but a poor, simple, sinful worm. It is from Him I had this courage.

"Wigtown and the Justice-Clerk desired me to show them that house, saying, that I was free enough in all except that; and if I were obstinate, I might belike get the Boots. I said, let them do with me what they pleased; in what concerned myself I was free; but to do hurt to others I would not, to bring them under their wrath. I would not mar my peace with God so far.

"The General said, He would parole [i.e., engage] to me, that the indwellers of the house should be advertised. I said, I would not have his parole.

"The Chancellor, boasted [i.e., threatened] me for denying his parole. I said to the Chancellor, I was a gentleman that had blood relation to his relations, the Earl of Mar's mother and I being sister-bairns [i.e., cousins]. He said, He was sorry I was so related. I said, The cause I was there owning honoured me; and I would it befel my friends. So this I hope; you will not critically reflect on my confused writing, since I am in haste; ye know, it may be, I may be cited before these bloody men this forenoon. I will not order for my funeral, till I know my sentence. I may possibly not be allowed a burial. My Lord comforts me, and I leave all on Him to bear me through this storm, through the valley and shadow of death.

"Dear Billie, bid all ye see of our serious friends help me with their prayers, that I may be helped of the Lord to be faithful unto the death, and that He will give me the faith of assurance, that I shall enjoy my Lord's love through all eternity. The want of this clouds me much, I am so unworthy a wretch. I am,

"Dear Billie, your unworthy friend, and loving Brother,
"JAMES SKENE."

"From my Lord Jesus, His house, which He has made a sweet palace, wherein He shows me His wonderful free love; the close prison above the Iron House, in the high Tolbooth of Edinburgh, November 1680.

"P.S.—I told the Chancellor the cause was just, whereby the king and others were excommunicate [at the Torwood]; though I was not there, yet I adhered to it.

LETTER from Mr James Skene: "To all professors in the shire of Aberdeen; especially Mr William Alexander, Mr William Mitchell, and Mr John Watson, my dear acquaintances. Being the last Testimony for the interest of Christ from James Skene, now in close prison for Christ's interest, in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh."

"DEAR FRIENDS,—The Lord having dealt so graciously with me in wonderful free love, as to bring me to the love of Himself, His truth, and despised interest, as that He engaged me in a particular covenant with Himself, which, by His honouring me to make me a prisoner to evil men, for His despised interest, He has evidently confirmed to me, that He accepted of my bargain with Himself, when most unworthy and wretched; though many times by reason of a prevailing body of sin and death, I provoked Him to cast [i.e., break] the bargain; yet still by new obligations, He engaged me to renew it.

"My mercy has been great, that Providence ordered sometime my coming South, where most suffering has been for our Lord, and for that reason most light has been given to professors here, that they might see what was clear duty in these trying, tempting, and backsliding times. And whenever the Lord helped me to see our covenant obligations, which are the glory of Scotland, I was serious and sealous, ye know, to impart to all of you, whom I was acquaint with. The Lord always making my love to Him to abound, I thought no travail ill wared [i.e., laid out], or any hazard too great on any occasion, whereby I might propagate His despised interest among you.

"You know how much I have contended with you for paying of that cursed cess, ordered by the Convention of Estates for bearing down the Gospel; as I was honoured to witness against it at a committee on Saturday last, at night. You are not aware how you bring the blood of saints on your heads by this obedience to the stated enemies of our Lord Jesus Christ. Your opposing of that which was and is the judgment of the most tender professors (in withdrawing from indulged ministers, and from these ministers that favoured them, and so did not, nor would not declare against the Indulgence as a sin that most heinously and rebelliously dishonours our blessed Lord as head of the Church, and sets up a tyrannous usurper in His place), was a particular I much contended [i.e., insisted on] with many of you, on my hearing you pleading for a sinful union with those who have conspired to dethrone our blessed Lord. Some of you opposed that which was an honourable testimony for our Lord at Rutherglen, and that declaration at Sanquhar, and the testimony or covenant that was taken at the Queensferry; calling these rash and inconsiderate! whom the Lord called out to be valiant contenders for His truth and interest (which is now contemned by a wicked apostate generation), and to seal all of them with blood.

"By all these the Lord has been calling His people to come out from among Babel's brood; its cursed brood, who by many subtile satanical ways, what by Prelacy, Quakerism, Arminianism, Latitudinarians, and Indulged ministers, and ministers and professors that love so their quiet that they will not declare against and decline that usurping traitor on the throne, Charles Stuart, and all the cursed crew of pretended magistrates in Scotland, having forfeited their right of government, as appears by their wicked and unparallelled apostacy from that Solemn League and Covenant; upon that foul pretext, that we are not in a probable capacity to extirpate them, or put them out of office. When, in our place and station, we give our witness against these usurpations, we so far contend for God, and witness for His trodden down and despised interest, and testify our unwillingness that our Lord should totally give up with this poor land.

"Oh! this hath been many times a sad heart to me; that ye have looked more to the credit of men than the glory of our great Lord (in). I fear this testimony be unacceptable and hazardous to you to main tain because of that they call treason in it; but, ah! there is no man he done to advance a mortal creature, a stated enemy to Christ, a fur hasty, cruel murderer of God's saints, that there is fear of disow God, and a palpable denying of Him before men, when you these tyrannous oppressors. Your estates you cannot part with; credit and pleasures, and your quiet in the world, you will not with. You will rather imagine arguments to cheat yourselve defending your practices, that are clear breaches of covenant, if too great carnal love to the world did not blind you, and unwillingness to quit your life for Christ; which soon will come tend, however, with less comfort than you would certainly have, you adventure all for our blessed Lord.

"As for you, Mr Alexander; I may say I have found you willing good information, to be for tender cleaving to your dear Master; bad information making it a question if it was duty to dethrone pretended king, which, Mr T. H. and Mr R. M. opposing, bis you from that principal duty, by which we are singularly known true Covenanters. And leave these that are blind, and follow dear Master, in the duties He calls His people to; and He will them (and I am persuaded He has owned them) who have or Him in this duty. You did quarrel at field-meetings, enemies or ing against them, and consenting that house-meetings be enjout here is your testimony; when you keep the fields, you declare our Lord's Church has liberty to keep her meetings and ordina where she pleases, and ought not to be at the arbitrament of me "To Mr Mitchell I say; I have had a great esteem of you a true lover of piety, and I doubt not, the Lord has sealed ministry sometimes, and some witnesses of it I have known. O! sir, what a fearful snare are you in, by complying with curat hearing them, and taking both sacraments off their hands! O ye quit not all carnal love to the world, to credit, and [to] friends will oppose your coming off, the hazard is great; the Lord may you with them that have opposed the rising of His kingdom. I ever, I am sure, He will make you mourn for it, and I doubt [not ye shortly come not off from that accursed crew, that the Lord send you a sorer trial than sufferers for Him meet with.

"To Mr Watson I write this as my last testimony. Oh! hor faithful is his ministry; he dare not, for fear of losing his min declare against the heinous breach of Covenant by all the pretermagistrates in the land. I grant, your clearness as to other the was much one with my own. O! Sir, quit men as they quit Ch way and interest; else you will never be clear in truths; as the Lord lets out light and increaseth it. And this is most dreadful, to be so ensnared to walk in darkness, and so be in opposition to our blessed Lord! Oh! let love to the Lord Jesus Christ assuredly overcome you; and then admiring of men, and cleaving to them who are out of Christ's way, will be no small matter, but a heinous sin. Oh! will you adventure your salvation on it, to cleave to them who are reproaching our Lord, His people, and interest, by mixing in with the cursed curates? That person ye cleave to draws on Him the guilt of all the saints' blood that is shed in maintaining His interest and covenant, whose judgment ye cannot decline, He being judge of all the world.

"Ye may say much, every one of you that know me. I was many times negligent of a tender walking, by seeking of settlement; and if that had been my lot, ye had not heard of this testimony. You know, every one of you, this testimony I gave you formerly; even when with you. I many times wished from my heart the Lord would not order a settlement to me among you. My heart was broken with your lukewarmness and indifferency. And this I testified to several of you, and I rather choosed, I said often, to be a sheep-keeper in the South, where I might be encouraged in godliness, than to live in pomp and ease at home with an ill conscience. And when I came away last, I was sorry at my purpose of leaving Scotland, when I heard all were agreeing to apostacy, in my judgment then, from our blessed covenanted God; and I was determined for Ireland then, being ill informed of every one of the kingdoms, there not being a people tenderly owning the Covenant in Ireland, but all some way owning the usurper Charles Stuart.

"But in poor Scotland, here in the South, I found a poor handful, and but one faithful minister, whom the Lord called out, viz., Mr Donald Cargill, to be His messenger to His people, and to give witness against the apostacy of ministers and professors; even those who were great lights in the land are now in obscurity, and avowedly reproaching our Lord's interest and people; whom yet the Lord will clothe with shame, and make their peace they boast of, and quiet sleep, to their great confounding.

"As for the call I have to suffer, I found it my only peace to quit thoughts of Ireland, that I might not be involved in their guilt of denying to have our Lord Jesus Christ to be King over them. Oh! that poor party I find only for maintaining His prerogative royal, to which I am joined, Mr Donald Cargill being the only if ambassador our Lord has in Scotland! I, following the ordin on Friday last; being as well armed for defending the Gospe myself, as I could; beyond expectation, a party of Linlith soldiers is sent out to my lodging, and not dreading danger day-time, I thought our persecutors had never heard of my nan was apprehended, and now at last brought hither to close p the Lord having honoured me to give an ample testimony befo Council and Lords of Justiciary, for my wronged Lord Jesus.

"And supposing I must seal it with my blood, I leave this mony to you, my friends and acquaintances in Aberdeenshire subscribe it, November 17, 1680,

"JAMES SKEN

"From my delectable prison; in which my Lord has allow His peace and presence, and comforted me with that I shall with Him eternally; for I am His, and bought with His pr blood."

LETTER from Mr JAMES SKENE to his Friend Fellow-prisoner N.

"My MUCH HONOURED FRIEND IN CHREgive it under my hand, I have no cause to n sweet bargain. His cross is easy and light yet that which is most terrifying, I hope He will comfortable. O lovely Lord! what could make to choose me to suffer for Him? What is all the world to His honour be at the stake? If His honour be advanced death, O happy me!

"I have oftentimes wished a suffering lot; I heard and a much of God's goodness, that I thought the cross and comfc Christ could not be separated. And I have no reason to plain; the Lord is so oft the joy of my heart, that I am fore wonder at it.

"Leaving further troubling you, hoping you will be as go your word; be much in prayer for these two or three days. likely on Thursday next I will need no help of prayers, being he immediate vision of my Lord, to see Him as He is; I will be refied, as it were, and amazed at it. If His merits were not of rite value, I might question, What would I do? But He has produced that I shall reign with Him.

"JAMES SKENE."

"MY DEAR FRIEND IN CHRIST,—I received yours, encouraging me to hold on in my blessed Lord's way, which He hath pathed to me. I am not unmindful of you, as I can, and I desire you to pray, that none may offend at the Lord's interest for me, there being willing-on my part to suffer; though justly they cannot condemn me; ney offer me a delivery, if I would submit to the Duke's and cil's mercy; but it is evidently often seen, that the tender merof the wicked are cruelty. I find no liberty to deny my Lord ar of death. I hope He will make up my loss in Himself. All desire of you is, to pray much for me, that the Lord will own or His own cause, before the adversaries, and in my dissolution. h the Lord to comfort His people, and tenderly own His sed interest.

Mr Carstairs [see note, page 12] said, 'He was ashamed of principle we maintained, and that we were not sound Presbys, and wished the Lord to preserve him from the like. I am hit troubled at this, I bless my Lord. They would have me ring with him. I said, I would not notice him if he came ne.

Tell my friend I would have written, but had no time. I yesternight to him. I need both your helps by supplications trong cries to the Lord, to carry me cleanly through the valley hadow of death.

I must leave here, wishing the Lord to bear you up under all I thought ye should have been in eternity before me; but think I shall leave you on the valleys when I shall arrive at essed harbour. I am, dear friend, your well-wisher and Christ's ter, "JAMES SKENE."

"P.S.—A double of my Confessions you may have from a friend, whom I shall desire to send it to you. I got my summons for eternity with sound of trumpet yesternight; and my indictment with five shouts of the trumpet, and pursuivants in their coats, at seven of the clock, was a grave sight; but my Lord helped me not to be afraid at it, since all was from Him."

HE LAST SPEECH AND TESTIMONY of Mr James Skene, Brother to the Laird of Skene; which he intended to have delivered on the scaffold, December 1st, 1680.

"DEAR PEOPLE,—I am come here this day to lay down my life for owning Jesus Christ's despised interest, and for asserting that He is a King, and for averring that He is head of His own Church, and has not delegated or deputed any, either Pope, King, or Council, to be his vicegerents on earth.

"Since my blessed Lord Jesus Christ has in His love engaged me by a particular covenant, in His own terms, to renounce and resign myself to Him, in soul and body; assuring me by His word, and testifying His acceptance of my resignation by His holy and blessed Spirit; promising to redeem me from all sins; giving me assurance of a saving interest in Himself; and now, having called me in His providence, contriving this my suffering (by permitting His ungodly enemies to apprehend and take me prisoner, having wickedly plotted my taking, in my going on the way to attend what the Lord had to work on my soul by His preached Gospel), to give a testimony for His covenant, interest, and people that are reproached and borne down by a perjured God-contemning generation, and to seal my sufferings and testimony with my blood; I most willingly lay down my life for His interest.

"I leave my testimony to the National Covenant, and the Solemn League and Covenant, which are founded on the Scriptures, the Word of God, which are written by the prophets and apostles in the Old and New Testaments, which has Jesus Christ, the blessed object of our faith, for the chief corner stone of the building. I also leave my testimony to Mr Donald Cargill's papers, taken at the Queens-ferry, called a New Covenant, according as they agree to the true original copy.

"I adhere to Presbyterian Government, and the whole work of Reformation of the Church of Scotland; the Confession of Faith, and Larger and Shorter Catechisms, consulted well, and written by the Assembly of Divines; except that article about Magistracy, when ill expounded, in the 23d chapter; because our magistracy is but pure tyranny, exercised by the lustful rage of men, yea, rather devils in shape of men, whom God has permitted, in His holy and spotless wisdom, for a trial to His people, and a snare to some others, to oppress, tyrannise, and blasphemously tread under foot His truth, interest, and people; yea, that article is expounded in the National Covenant, where we have vowed to the Almighty God, not to maintain the king's interest, when he disowns the Covenant, and well-settled Church-government by Presbyteries, Synods, and General Assemblies of the Church of Scotland.*

"I adhere to the Testimony for the interest of Christ, at Rutherglen; at which time the wicked Acts of Parliament and the blasphemous Declarations, by which they have sworn to be enemies to the interest of Christ, were solemnly burnt.

"I adhere to the Sanquhar Declaration; whereby we, that were true Presbyterians, did depose that tyrant Charles Stuart, who is the head of malignants and malignancy, from his exercise of government as to us; and we do no otherwise than the people of Libnah, 2 Chron. xxi. 10: 'At the same time also did the people of Libnah revolt from under the King of Judah, because he had forsaken the Lord God of his fathers.' And this practice is not so gross that I own, in declaring against that monstrous tyrant on the throne of Britain, as many conjecture; if seriously folk would consider the injustice practised in civil matters, by himself, and all his adherent inferior magistrates, (yea, inferior tyrants; for he is the head and supreme tyrant,) that no poor man, that has a just cause, if he be not as profligate and

Let none mistake this sentence as if this worthy gentleman thereby disowned that unshaken principle of the Protestant religion; viz., that infidelity or difference in religion does not make void the magistrate's just and legal authority; for it is plain, he rejects only the false sense that was then put upon it, to make it an argument for defence of tyranny and arbitrary power. [Note by the compilers of the "Cloud," in the first edition.]

wicked as themselves, can have justice; and his usurpation in ecclesiastic matters; which is too great a task for any on earth, since they must take upon them to dethrone our blessed Lord Jesus Christ, who is given in all things to be head to His Church (Eph. i. 22; Ps. ii. 8). You would canvass the justice of disowning his authority, which to do you are engaged by oath to God, he overturning the whole work of Reformation; which was the great ground of his enthronement in Scotland, to maintain the Covenant, and work of Reformation. His wicked burning of the Covenant, and 'Causes of God's Wrath,' is cause enough to me to disown his authority, which is so maintained by perjury. 'Shall he break the Covenant, and be delivered?' (Ezek. xvii. 15-19.)

"Consider likewise his oppression, in ordering military forces to oppress God's people, to obstruct, impede, and hinder the worship of God, the ordinances in houses or fields, and compel them to join with a cursed crew of prelates, curates, and some indulged ministers. Yea, his tyranny is so great, that he ordered an host [i.e., the Highland host] of armed men in the year 1678, to invade a peaceable country in the West: who robbed, stole from, and oppressed poor people, for no other reason, but because they would not pollute their consciences, and be subject to Prelacy; which erastian government he has contended for these several years, and kept up in this land. If there were no other cause of his rejection than these proceedings, they might suffice to justify any, who were engaged by God, having time and place, to cut him off. For, by the law of God, murder, adultery and oppression are punishable by death; and kings are not exempted, far less tyrants that are lawfully excommunicate.

"But to those horrid impieties is added the shedding of the blood of poor innocents; which aggregeth [i.e., aggravateth] his guilt, so that, though the Lord should make him penitent, he deserves death by the law, according to which blood cannot be expiated but by the blood of him who shed it. For confirmation of what I have said, see Ezekiel xxi. 25-27; read also Ezekiel xliii. 9: 'Let them put away the carcases of their kings far from me, and I will dwell in the midst of them for ever.' Consider how our fathers contended for truth, and must we lose what they gained? Ah! this atheistical generation of perjured, adulterous, and bloody powers are ripe for God's vengeance!

"I give my testimony against the cursed persecuting soldiers; the blood of God's saints is on their heads, and mine is laid on them, ally Sergeant Warrock, who apprehended me. My blood is e Justiciary, who subscribed* to my sentence; and on the assizers, James Glen, stationer, being clerk; and on the ellor; and on Mr George Mackenzie, who pleaded for my mnation; and Thomas Dalziel, who ordered my taking; and Andrew Cunningham, who condemned me; and upon all the ho are accessory in the least thereto; yea, the Privy Council be accountable for my blood; and my blood is on the head J[ohn] C[arstairs], who condemned my testimony against these y tyrants, asserting me to be a Jesuit. ['In charity, I shall e that Mr Skene was informed that the Rev. Mr Carstairs aid so; but the same charity, and Mr Carstairs' known tendernd temper, forbid me to believe that he said so.'—Wodrow.] leave my testimony against the receiving that accursed traitor, Duke of York, and all Papists, Quakers, prelates, curates, latirians, indulged ministers, and their favourers, the Hamilton ration, and other papers and actings, directly or indirectly I leave my testimony against the lukewarm prot the truth. s, who write and speak grievous things to reproach the truly and who keep silence when God calls them to give a free and stimony for His despised Covenant and whole work of Reformagainst a traitorous, backsliding, and adulterous generation; and his place, or any other of my papers, I could not have designed enemies any otherwise, than by their pretended offices. ar people, I crave your liberty, and let none think that thereby them in the least point.

ikewise, whereas my sufferings were delayed; the Lord, in presence I must appear erelong, knows what a soul-grief it is to remember it. When the day I was sentenced to die for my Lord's interest came, I expected vainly that my relations, that great in court, who had seen me, should have procured a val for me; but being disappointed, a fear of death surprised me, g that all were presently making ready for my execution; and hese and the like sentences, which may possibly be met with in some other nies, ought not to be mistaken as the effects of a revengeful ungospel but rather as a simple declaration of their being guilty of blood in cong them; to serve as a warning to the persecutors, not to proceed further in icked courses, and to waken them to repentance (if possible) for what they eady done; and is much parallel in its nature with that of Jeremiah, in logy before the princes, chap. xxvi. 15. [Note by the original compilers of loud."] then my carnal relations, almost weeping on me, engaged me by their insinuations to supplicate that bloody crew for it myself. A carnal well-wisher drew it up in these terms: 'James Skene, prisoner, earnestly desires your lordships to grant him a reprieval for some days, till he canvass these things he was sentenced for with learned and godly men; and your lordships answer.'

"After I subscribed it, a great confusion and horror of spirit fell I went to prayer, wishing in my heart it were not granted; but such was my trouble, I could not say anything but nonsense. My heart was afflicted sore with this straitening, and the more when the reprieval was granted. I thought, I, having shifted the cross, my Lord might deny me that credit again, and put a worse on me in requital of my slighting Him. I judge, the Lord left me thus to slip, to humble me, and that He hid His face to make me exemplarily punished for untender carrying under His cross, which He had chosen for me; to warn others under the cross, that they would be circumspect and zealous for keeping from being polluted with any compliance with the defections of the times, that they may have a cleanly suffering. From this backsliding I recovered not for two days after; but found it sad for my soul; the Lord hid His face from me. now my God has had compassion on me; and, this time of the eight days' reprieval, He has preserved me from such a backsliding, when the devil by his emissaries has had much artifice to turn me aside from the way of the Lord. Yet I will say this far; all I have done was not in order to own that wicked Council as lawful rulers; but my life being in their tyrannous hands, I thought then I might desire as much favour of them as of a robber that had the dagger at my breast; and I truly look on all their actings in courts, either higher or lower judicatories, in matters civil or ecclesiastic, that they act as murderers, oppressors, and tyrants only.

"And now these bloody oppressors say, because I will not sinfully renounce my Lord and His interest, and look on them as magistrates, and say I spake rashly what I did (on which terms, craving them pardon, I would soon get remission and be at liberty,) that they look on me as guilty of my own blood. But I hope my God will not account me guilty, who knows I dare not so sinfully disown Him, for all the hazard of my poor life. There being a dilemma in my case, either I must sin or suffer; I have found it my only peace with my Lord, to choose suffering, and hate the way of sinning. And this I thought good to insert in my dying testimony, that others may re of an untender walk with God, 'who is a consuming fire to apenitent sinners.' Now, my Lord has sealed my remission for xtravagance, and has entered into a new covenant with me, and I resigned myself wholly to Him, to be at His disposal; and it is joicing, that He is calling me out to honour me so much as to A poor countryman with us, would think it his for His sake. to be called to signify his loyalty to a nobleman, who was his r, whose courage obliges him to fight for his safety to the loss ; life. But oh! what a disparity is in my case! I am but a wretched, sinful worm, and I am called to signify my love and y to the King of Glory, before these treacherous and perfidious rs that sit at ease, and disown, yea, declare against my Lord, He is not our covenanted King and Lord. And the two del Covenants are not despicable, but our glory. I will first te they are traitors, and ought to be disowned as magistrates or rulers; and so many of them as have imbrued their hands in ood of the saints, either by commissions, or votes in councils, er courts; or have lived, oppressing God's people, in adultery, anness, wickedness, and witchcraft; they are guilty of death. when there are no other magistrates who will duly punish these ties, it is my duty, out of zeal to the Lord (I say it again), if the would employ me, to cut them off; as that zeal of Phineas, h mocked at by them in their proclamation, is a good example. Thus I end, wishing that what I have here penned for a testito the Lord's despised interest, may have weight with any who ler, that, what I have written, I must erelong reckon for; and ave laboured to be single-hearted before the Lord in it.

Now, I have touched everything I can remember concerning dgment of things controverted, as also some reasons of my prinasserted in face of a great council, and twice before the Justi; which I gladly sign with my subscription, glorying in the Lord wned me, so that I was not ashamed, but judged it my glory e my full and free testimony for my blessed Lord's despised against that wicked and treacherous pack of my God's ed enemies.

Now, farewell, all dear friends! I hope the Lord will have a us Church in Scotland, and that He will raise His glory out ashes of a burnt Covenant. Now, farewell sun, moon, and Farewell, holy Scriptures! Oh! I am going to a life where I to more be troubled with a body of sin or death. Oh! I am going to a mansion of glory that my Lord has prepared for me. I shall have a crown of life; because I have been, by my blessed Lord's assistance—though I slipped aside—made faithful to the death.

"Now, welcome Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, thou hast redeemed me by thy price, and by thy power. Oh! Lord God of Hosts, into thy hands I commit my Spirit!

"Sic subscribitur,

"JA. SKENE,

"In the close prison of Edinburgh, November 30, 1680; being the day before my execution, according to the unjust sentence of a perfidious court."

Archibald Stewart.

RCHIBALD STEWART belonged to Borrowstounness. He had been in Holland, where, as well as at home, he had heard the Gospel, and it had been blessed to his conversion. He was several times before the Privy Council. On November 15th, the commissioners reported that they had examined him by torture. "A confession of his being at Airsmoss was extorted, and he likewise discovered a great many of Mr Cargill's haunts and places of hiding."

The Government fancied that a conspiracy had been formed to take away the lives of the king, the Duke of York, and their counsellors. To obtain some grounds for their fancy, John Sproul, apothecary, Glasgow; Robert Hamilton, son of the chamberlain of Kenneil; and Archibald Stewart, were each put to the torture. We have no record of Stewart's torture further than the fact. Sproul, however, lived to tell of his sufferings at the hands of his enemies. What is told of him is no doubt similar to what could have been told of Archibald Stewart:

"Lord Hatton was preses of the committee to examine the said

as by torture, and the Duke of York and many others were at. The preses told Mr Sproul, that if he would not make a ample confession than he had done, and sign it, he behoved to lie the torture. Mr Sproul said that he had been very ingenuous e the Council, and would go no further; that they could not ct him to torture according to law; but, if they would go on, he sted that his torture was without, yea, against all law; that what extorted from him under the torture against himself, or any others, ould resile from it, and it ought not to militate against him, or others; and he declared his hopes, that God would not leave so far as to accuse himself, or others, under the extremity of pain. 'Then the hangman put his foot in the instrument called the , and at every query put to him, gave five strokes or thereby the wedges. The queries were—Whether he knew anything plot to blow up the Abbey [i.e., of Holyrood] and the Duke of ? who was in the plot, and where Mr Cargill was? and if he To these he d subscribe his confession before the Council? tred his absolute and utter ignorance, and adhered to his refusing ibscribe.

When nothing could be expiscated by this, they ordered the old to be brought, alleging this new one used by the hangman was so good as the old; and accordingly it was brought, and he rwent the torture a second time, and adhered to what he had e said. General Dalziel complained at the second torture, that tangman did not strike strongly enough upon the wedges. The man said he struck with all his strength, and offered the general hall to do it himself.

Mr Sproul was very firm, and wonderfully supported, to his own ig, in body and spirit during the torture. When it was over, he carried to prison on a soldier's back, where he was refused the fit of a surgeon. But the Lord blessed so the means he used elf, that in a little time he recovered pretty well."

lo specimen of the Boot is known to exist in this country. It is only known from the pictures of the period. Burnet's description of it is: "They put a kind of iron boot close on the leg, and wedges between this and the leg. The common torture was to drive these in the calf of the leg; but I have been told they sometimes driven upon the shin bone." The Boot seems origito have been brought from France, where it was known under the lame of Le Brodequin.

In 1684, another instrument of torture was introduced; according to Fountainhall, by Generals Dalziel and Drummond, who saw it used in Muscovy. So much were the Council impressed with its value, that they put the following Act upon record:—"July 23, 1684.—Whereas the 'boots' were the ordinary way to expiscate matters relating to the Government, and that there is now a new invention and engine, called the 'thumbkins,' which will be very effectual to the purpose and intent foresaid, the Lords of His Majesty's Privy Council do therefore ordain, that when any person shall, by their order, be put to the torture, that the said boots and thumbkins both be applied to them, as it shall be found fit and convenient."

A smaller instrument of torture for the fingers had already existed, made of two pieces of iron, that were screwed up with finger and thumb, but it was of no great power. William Carstairs, the first upon whom the new thumbkins were used, says they were of a size so large, that the whole hand could be used in turning the screw. He bore their torture for an hour and a-half, with great firmness. After the revolution, when Principal Carstairs, he got hold of the instrument that had caused him such suffering, and showed it to King William. The king put his thumb into it, and desired Carstairs to give the screw a turn. This he did with such vigour that the king cried out, "Hold, hold! Principal; another turn, and I would confess anything!"

There are several thumbkins in the Museum of the Society of Antiquaries in Edinburgh.—Ed.]

HE TESTIMONY of Archibald Stewart, who lived at Borrowstounness, and suffered at the Cross of Edinburgh, December 1, 1680.

"MEN AND BRETHREN,—It is like, the most part of you are come here to gaze and wonder upon me, rather than to be edified; but I hope there are some here that are witnessing and sympathising with me.

But while ye are strangers to God, and ignorant of His word, and of what our Lord has suffered for us, and that He has told us, 'That through many tribulations and afflictions we must enter into the kingdom of God,' it is no wonder ye count us fools; for while I was in black nature myself, I was as mad as any of you all. But, blessings to His glorious and holy name, that, whereas once I was blind, now I see; and therefore I abhor myself in dust and ashes, and I desire the more to magnify His free grace, for all that He hath done to me. It is nothing in myself; therefore, why should I not be content to follow the footsteps of my blessed Master, that has gone before me, from time to eternity. Though, in this manner, it is unpleasant to natural sense.

"And He is calling for my mite of a testimony for His despised truth. For it was, by the hearing of the Gospel by His suffering servants, both here and in Holland, that I was brought to the love of God, and His only son Jesus Christ; since which time He has engaged my heart to seek Him in the same way. I found Him where He was most eminently holden forth and witnessed for, and my sins, and the sins of the land holden forth to me; and it is for this, that I am accused and condemned of men—for my following the Gospel preached in the fields; because I was following that poor handful that fell at Airsmoss, where Mr Richard Cameron had been preaching, and was to preach; and because, when the bloody soldiers came upon us, we offered to defend ourselves—whatever other causes they have to lay to my charge.

"And that ye be not mistaken with me, and the Lord's people and His way; though they allege that we are of bloody principles (as the indulged ministers give it out, that we are of Jesuitical and bloody principles); yet the Lord knows, and I declare, that I have desired to know His will, and walk in it; and I have been studying that which all the land are obliged to; which is to hear and keep up the Gospel, and defend my own life, and the lives of my brethren, who have been so long hunted, and to defend the Gospel, which has been so long borne down.

"So then, however I and that suffering remnant be mistaken; in that they give out in their Declaration [issued Nov. 22, 1680; the charge is repeated in a letter of the Council to the king—ED.], that I said I would kill the king, or any of the Council; it is an untruth and forged calummy to reproach the way of God; more like themselves and their own principles, who have killed so many of the people of God, both in the fields and upon scaffolds, and us amongst the rest, to please that bloody tyrant Charles Stuart's brother, who has been thirsting for the blood of these three nations; and to make men believe that we have been contriving a plot to murder them; though indeed, if they were brought to any trial of a just law, according to the Word of God, or the laws of the land, most of them have done, or consented to more, than might take their lives, both against the people of the Lord, and His borne-down truths, and against the commonwealth, and laws of the land.

"But I never said that I would do it; and when I was before them, especially in the Justiciary-court, upon trial of my life, they would hardly give me leave to speak for, or explain myself; more like men designed to catch advantage, and to cheat me out of my life, than just judges. I know they must answer to their great Judge for what they do.

"And this being the testimony of a dying man, they that fear the Lord will believe my declaration before their proclamation; which may be easily seen to be a plot in them, and not in us, to blind the eyes of a secure generation and make strangers approve of their persecution, and believe that they do it justly, and laugh at our calamity, until they can win [i.e., get] to bring about that bloody Popish design against all that will not follow them in the three nations. they now spare some men, and flatter them to take favours from them, whereby they engage them to lie by, till they destroy His remnant, that dare not but witness against them, and the common sins of the land; for which I desire to mourn, and pray the Lord's people to mourn over them, and witness against them, as they desire to be marked with the mourners' mark; when a holy God shall come to take vengeance on all ranks that have so forsaken and betrayed His Christ, and set up a man in His place, which will be found to be the great idol of jealousy, besides the many other idols that have drawn away the true and kind love and fear, that the generation owes to God. And because we desire to love and fear God, and to follow His sweet Christ, we are reproached and staged [i.e., accused without formal trial] with tongues of many, as these that are out of the way, and are of Jesuitical principles.

"I declare I have in some measure been desiring and intending to know, love, and follow the truth, both in obedience to His commands, and for the hope of glory; though, I confess, through much weakness and infirmity. I am a Presbyterian in my judgment, though I be looked upon as otherwise, because of my declaring my thoughts freely before men; and I own, and adhere to that work of Reformation, the Larger and Shorter Catechisms, the National and Solemn League and Covenant, the Acknowledgment of Sins and Engagement to Duties, and the Causes of God's Wrath. Also, I own all the testimonies of our worthy sufferers that have gone before us; as also, I own the Sanquhar Declaration, and that Excommunication at the Torwood. At the writing hereof, I prayed that the Lord would open their eyes, and let them see their sins, and grant them repentance; all of them that are of the election of free grace; and they that are not, I pray that the Lord would ratify in heaven what was done on earth by His faithful servant, as it is according to His will; which has been all our desires.

"Now, I leave my testimony against the cursed prelates, and all their hirelings, who have been the instigators and drivers on of the Council and bloody soldiers to all the tyranny, oppression, and blood, which they have shed.

"And I leave my testimony against the woful Indulgences, and all that have been either embracers of them, or any that have been strengtheners of their hands, or their favourers; they have broken and divided the people of the Lord, more than all the former persecution could ever do.

"I leave my testimony against all lukewarm and unfaithful ministers and professors, that have turned their back upon Christ and His cause, and have fallen away from their first love, and the doing of their first works; for they are pulling down what they first builded.

"I leave my testimony against the oppression, tyranny, and robbery, done against the people of God, either by one or other; and especially by these wretches [Earl of] Glencairn and [John Skene of] Halyards, whose names shall be recorded for generations to come, as robbers of the widow and fatherless; who have lain in wait against the dwellings of the righteous, and have spoiled his resting place, and have turned many a widow and orphan out of their dwellings.

"I leave my testimony against those tyrants that have forefaulted [i.e., forfeited] all the rights that they now lay claim to, and usurp over the people of the Lord, and the whole land; and all their unjust laws; but especially that accursed Supremacy; by which they set up a miserable, adulterous, wretched man in Christ's room, who thinks to wrong our Lord and carry His crown; but it will be too heavy for him; though all the wicked lords, prelates, malignants, and indulged be joining hand in hand to hold it on, down it shall come, and who-soever wears that crown. And it is because of his wearing my lovely Lord and King's crown, and wronging Him, that I am contending; and as he and they have proclaimed me a rebel and traitor to man, so I disown him and them, and declare him and them traitors and rebels to God, and His Christ; my desirable and holy Lord and King.

"But let me entreat you, that desire mercy, to forsake your wicked ways, and fall in love with Christ, and seek peace with God through Him, who is the only peacemaker; for there are sad judgments coming on the land; and all your peace with these wicked men will not keep you from the dreadful wrath of God coming on the land, because of slighting of the Gospel when it was to be had in God's own way, and the perjury, covenant-breaking, idolatry, profaneness, treacherous backsliding, apostacy and other abominations, that all ranks of the land are guilty of; and because of their receiving and entertaining of this bloody Popish Duke; who must be welcomed with a draught of our blood now, as he was the last time with the blood of our brethren.

"I bless the Lord, I have great satisfaction in my owning this despised way of God, for which I lay down my life; and also, that the Lord has drawn my heart after Him, and made me heartily willing to be at His disposing; I have sweet peace in what I have done, and would entreat all to more tenderness, and to watch over all their ways; for there are many looking on us, and waiting for our halting in the way of God. Oh! that the Lord would help you to wait on Him, until the day break, and the shadows and all these clouds flee away! For this is a heavy day upon the Church of God. Oh! to be labouring to lie in the dust, and to hide ourselves, and shut our mouths, and be silent; for the Lord hath rubbed shame on all faces, because of many backslidings and upsitting [i.e., indifference] in duty (and that both public and private), which I think the Lord is contending for this day.

"Oh! dear friends, all ye that desire to keep the way of God, and be carried faithfully through amidst all these tribulations and astonishing dispensations, forsake not your Christian fellowships, wherein so much of the power and presence of God hath been found among those that met together out of love and zeal for God, to pour out their hearts before Him, and converse one with another. I think the forsaking and upsitting of [i.e., indifference for] Christian meetings, is as sad a token of God's leaving the land, as any that I see; and therefore, I not only exhort you to this duty; but as a dying man, I charge you, as you will answer at the great day, to set about that duty with fear, love, and zeal to God, having His glory before your eyes. And let love to Christ be the principle and motive to draw you to this, and all other duties. Let none be stumbled at the way of Christ, for what we are suffering—if I durst call it suffering; for all the steps of the way are easy to me, through faith in a slain Mediator. For it is those that keep the word of His patience, that He will keep in the hour of temptation. Oh! labour to keep up these lovely field-meetings, wherewith my soul has been refreshed. let it be your work to keep patience; whatever sufferings ye meet with from enemies, or reproaches from pretended friends, who I fear, will be found secret and heart-enemies to God. This I leave to you as my last advice.

"And now I bless God for all that He hath done for my soul, and for this way that He hath taken with me, in carrying me to the land of praise, where I shall sing that sweet song throughout the ages of eternity, which shall never have an end. Oh! long to be with Him; for if ye knew what I have got of His love and presence, ye would whiles [i.e., sometimes] be giving a look to time, and bidding it be gone. Now, even let it be gone, that I may enjoy my Best Beloved!

"Now I take my farewell of all friends and relations, and all earthly comforts and all created glory; and welcome, sweet Lord Jesus; into thy hands I commit my spirit.

" Sic Subscribitur,
"ARCHIBALD STEWART."

PON the scaffold he sung the second Psalm, and read the third of Malachi. But they would not suffer him to pray publicly; for when he began to speak, saying: "Oh! Lord, what wilt thou do with this generation? What wilt thou do with bloody Charles Stuart?" incontinent [i.e., immediately] the drums were beaten and his mouth stopped, that he got no more said.

John Potter.

they had to lay to his charge was, that he had been a of Donald Cargill, and that he owned the Sanquhar ration. It was he that related to Patrick Walker the last w Richard Cameron: "When they saw the enemy so near, a escaping, they gathered close about him, when he prayed word, and had these expressions three times: 'Lord, spare the and take the ripe.' When ended, he said to his brother: 'M come let us fight it out to the last; for this is the day that longed for, and the death that I have prayed for, to die a against our Lord's avowed enemies; and this is the day that get the crown.' And to the rest he said: 'Be encouraged you, to fight it out valiantly; for all of you that shall fall this see heaven's gates cast wide open to receive them.'" He suff the same time with James Skene and Archibald Stewart.

The Declaration stigmatising the Covenants, testified aga John Potter, was ordained by the fifth Act of the second set the first Parliament of Charles II., 1662. All persons in publ were required to sign it. It was the cause of much of the st of the following twenty-six years. The Covenants had been so sworn, and it really made perjury a necessary qualification admitted to office in Church and State. It was the first of course of ensuaring declarations, bonds, or oaths. Indeed, so a year of the persecuting times passed by without some new oath. The Declaration, after a short introduction, was—sincerely affirm and declare particularly that these whereof the one was commonly called the 'National Covenant it was sworn and explained in the year 1638, and thereafte the other, entitled 'A Solemn League and Covenant,' were, a in themselves, unlawful oaths."—Ed.]

HE TESTIMONY of JOHN POTTER, a Farmer, who lived in the parish of Uphall in West Lothian, and suffered at the Cross of Edinburgh, December 1, 1680.

attention to a few words, and I shall be brief. And before I begin, I must tell you, you must not expect such a testimony from me as ye have had from some hem that went before me, I not being a learned man, as some hem have been. However, I desire to look to God; who not only give me what to speak, but can also bless what I speak, so as may be for His glory, and the good of them that love Him, wait for His coming; which is the desire of my soul. Now, ing to step out of time into eternity, I hope you will not think I shall say anything now but what my conscience binds me my.

In the first place, I must tell you for what I am come here this to lay down my life; it is for owning and adhering to my sworn ciples. I am a Presbyterian, and herein I do rejoice that I am iffer for His cause only; for adhering to the Word of God; our ession of Faith; Larger and Shorter Catechisms; our Covenants, onal and Solemn League, together with our solemn Acknowledge of Sins and Engagement to Duties; wherein all Scotland were engaged, and thought it their duty and honour to be so. And is the reason for which I am sentenced to death by men; but to whom vengeance doth belong, will avenge Himself for all the gs done to His glory, cause, interest, and people. I was born the pure light of the Gospel, and was taught to own Christ as in Zion only, and head of His own Church; and this I own to y duty.

But I am here charged with rebellion; which I deny, because never of that opinion, that it was rebellion to hear the Gospel; word of God binds us to it as our duty; otherwise, why should have told us, 'That we should go from sea to sea to seek the of the Lord, and should not find it?' And the practice of ord and His apostles, in preaching of the Gospel to the people heard them, is a sufficient ground to prove it to be duty to hear the Gospel, whether in fields or houses, when it cannot be had elsewhere; and if it be duty to hear the Gospel as it is, then certainly it is duty to defend the Gospel when preached in purity; according to the word of God, and according to the sixth article of the Solemn League and Covenant, wherein we are bound to assist and defend all that enter into covenant with us, and to the utmost of our power, with our lives in our hands; much more to defend the Gospel, which teaches us the fundamental principles of our holy Religion.

"And to take away that vile and malicious aspersion, which they cast upon us; charging us with an intention to have murdered the Duke of York and others with him; I declare I had never such a principle as to murder any man, neither did I ever hear of it till the Council told me; which I knew to be a vile and hell-hatched aspersion cast upon the way and people of God; but they judge others by themselves, for that is their principle—to murder the people of God, as they also do.

"Next I was charged, whether or not I adhered to Sanquhar Declaration? I answered, I not only adhered to it, but also will lay down my life cheerfully and willingly, as I do this day, for adhering thereto; yea, if every hair of my head were a life, and every drop of my blood were a man, I would willingly lay them all down for Him and His cause.

- "I come here to tell you-
- "1. That I adhere to all the written will and word of God; and I adhere to the Confession of Faith, and our Catechisms, Larger and Shorter, and to our Covenants, National and Solemn League, and to the solemn Acknowledgment of Sins and Engagement to Duties, and to all the Covenants made betwixt God and us, wherein I stand engaged.
 - "2. I adhere to all the testimonies that have gone before me.
- "3. I adhere to all that has been done for maintaining and defending the Gospel against a tyrannising and bloody enemy, when the actors thereof had the glory of God before their eyes as the chief motive that drove them thereto; whether at Pentland, Drumclog, Glasgow, Bothwell, Airsmoss, or any other place in Scotland, where there has been any rencounter of that kind.
- "4. I adhere to that action of Excommunication at the Torwood; it being according to the word of God, and done by a faithful minister of the Gospel, and in as legal a way as the present dispensation and circumstance of time could permit; and also, the persons excommunicate being guilty of such crimes as justly do deserve that act to be passed against them.

- "5. I adhere to the testimonies of all that have borne testimony against silent and unfaithful ministers; by their withdrawing from them, which is a declaring that they do not own them as faithful ambassadors of Jesus Christ, because of their unfaithfulness; and I hope none will condemn me for saying, that I have not had clearness to join with them, while they remain so unconcerned with the cause of Christ and the oppression of His people.
- "6. I adhere to the way of salvation agreed upon betwixt the Father and the Son before the creation of the world, that through the Son we should be made perfect; which I hope to obtain before this body of mine be cold, and in His perfection I shall be made perfect, and through His suffering I shall be conformed to Him who suffered without the gate, bearing His reproach. And I am well pleased with my lot this day. Oh! my soul, and all that is within me, bless His holy name, for all that He hath done for my soul, and for His way of bringing me here this day, to lay down my life for Him. I am not afraid of grim death; I know that God has taken away the sting of death through the sufferings of His Son.

"In the next place, being here as a dying witness for Christ and His cause, I do therefore leave my testimony against all abominations done in the land against a holy God, and in contempt of His image; particularly:

- "I. I testify against all that woeful and hell-hatched Act of Supremacy, wherein they acknowledge the king to be head of the Church, and thereby have invested a mortal creature with Christ's crown, sword, and sceptre.
- "2. I bear witness and testify against the breaking of the National and Solemn League and Covenant, and making them to be burnt by the hand of the hangman at the Market Cross of Edinburgh, and elsewhere through Scotland, so contrary to their solemn engagement.
- "3. I witness and bear my testimony against the reception of Prelacy, so contrary to the word of God, and our Covenants; for then it was that the Covenanters in Scotland should have withstood both king and Council, and all that joined with them in that head, and should have testified against them with their swords in their hands until they had resisted unto blood, according to the sixth article of the Solemn League and Covenant. Oh! that all that are alive this day that were men when the Covenant was burnt, were taking with [i.e., confessing] their sin, and were lying in the dust; every one for his share in that sin, and every one for the land's guiltiness.

- "4. I leave my testimony against all the horrid bloodshed that has been in this land, whether of noblemen, gentlemen, ministers, or any others, that have suffered in Edinburgh, or any other place, whether on scaffolds, on gibbets, in open fields, or on the sea; particularly that horrid act of murdering so many men [at Pentland.—Ed.] after they had taken them prisoners and promised them their lives; which was done by Thomas Dalziel, called General; who took them prisoners, and after promising to set them at liberty, delivered them to the bloody Council, who most cruelly murdered them against and without all law and reason, never speaking of conscience; for they had lost all of that they ever had, when they burned the Covenant and murdered the Marquis of Argyle, and my Lord Warriston, and that eminent minister Mr James Guthrie; who were murdered against the very acts of their own laws.
- "5. I bear witness, and testify against the cutting off heads and hands, and setting them up upon the ports [i.e., gateways] of Edinburgh, and elsewhere through the kingdom of Scotland, as if they had been thieves or malefactors.
- "6. I testify and bear witness against all the imprisonments, finings, and confinings, of the people of God, for adhering to His word and our Covenants.
- "7. I testify and bear witness against the pressing of the Declaration against our Covenants upon the consciences of the Lord's people.
- "8. I testify and bear witness against the imposing and paying of cess and militia money, both for oppressing the consciences, and grinding the faces of the poor.
- "9. I testify and bear witness against that cruel and hell-hatched act of sending the Highland host, and the rest of that cabal, to oppress and plunder the people of God.
- "And lastly, I bear witness against all the oppression, spoiling, robbing, and hunting of the people of God, and that against all manner of law or reason. I shall be a standing witness against them, ay, and while [i.e., until] they repent. Oh! that the Lord would pour out of His spirit upon all that have so grievously turned aside, and make them to lie in the dust, and to take with [i.e., confess] their sins; but I fear, a holy God has given them up to themselves, ealed their hearts with obduration, and so they are become against all dispensations; but sure, such as will not bow to shall be broken by the mighty rod of iron, that is in His hand lise the nations.

I have here left my testimony against the perjury, bloodshed, oppression of the people of God, which has been done by him is called the King of Britain and Ireland; and the perjury and shed acted by noblemen and gentlemen, who have been assisted strengthening his hand in bloody and cruel courses; and fore I leave my testimony against them, and my blood upon heads, and especially against such as were present in the cil, when I was examined, and these perjured lords of the nal court, where I was sentenced to die here in this place of tion; and also I leave my blood upon the head of the assizers all others, who said amen to my sentence, whatever they have and yet are; except they repent, my blood shall be charged them. Likewise I leave my testimony against all who carried to guard me to this scaffold; they shall be found guilty of lood, if mercy and grace prevent it not.

Likewise I bear witness, and leave my testimony against the tion [October 1679, or October 1680] of the Duke of York, nd last; that professed papist, who has been laying out himself ry us back to Rome, and that not only by the bloody Council ther perjured noblemen and gentlemen, but also by the city of ourgh, who went out of the port [i.e., city gate] to receive him, ough he had been a king, with shooting of guns, sounding of ets, beating of drums, and kindling of bonfires, which is conto the Word of God and our Covenant, after he had been cast stly by the other kingdom of England. [The bill, October for excluding him from the throne, passed through the House ommons without difficulty, but, by the influence of the king ejected by the Lords.—ED.] I shall be a witness against that 1 in the great day; and, particularly, I leave my blood upon rretch and bloody tyrant the Duke of York; for it is to satisfy and to quench his implacable thirst after blood that I am ht hither this day. The last time he came to Scotland, he sacrifice of the blood of these five that suffered at Magus , who were indeed highly honoured, and nothing short of these vent before them [Thomas Brown, Andrew Sword, John Clyde, s Wood, John Waddell, were taken at Bothwell. They were condemned to be taken to Magus Moor, where Sharp was killed, and there hanged, November 1679. Their testimonies are appended to "Naphtali."—ED.]. And now, he must have this, our blood, to quench his thirst upon; but that heart of his that is so rejoicing at the hearing and seeing of our death; erelong my heart shall sing Hallelujah to the Lamb of God, and join in my note, and pass my sentence with the Great Judge against him, and all the enemies of God, if great repentance and free grace prevent it not.

"And, with respect to that for which I am sentenced to death, because of many mistakes, even among the godly, through wrong information; I here, as a dying man, declare I had before me no design but only the glory of God, and the coming of Christ's kingdom, and His reigning as King in Zion. And for this I am sentenced, and for this I lay down my life this day, and I do it willingly and cheerfully, and not by constraint; for if I had been left of a holy God so far as to quit one hoof of His truth, I might have redeemed my life; as some have done, that were as deeply engaged to stand by the truth, even to the resisting unto blood, as I was, and seemed to be as deeply concerned as I was. How they have come out of prison I know not; but God knows, and to Him they will and must give account thereof, and to Him I leave it; but I think there are few that came out of prison that now can say, they have neither touched, tasted, nor handled the abominations of these times wherein Therefore, I leave my testimony and witness against all they live. that have come out of prison, by taking of the Bond, if it were but to compear before these bloody enemies of God, in as far as they were convinced that it was sin; as some of them were, otherwise their tongue and pen have lied; which I leave to God and their own consciences to determine, whether or not they sinned in so doing.

"Next, I here as a dying man do declare, that if the blotting of paper to them would save my life, I would not do it at that rate; for I see they are setting themselves to ensnare poor things, and I see neither ministers nor professors to give their advice in this matter, if it be not to make them take the Bond, as they did to these poor things in the churchyard [of Greyfriars, to the prisoners taken at Bothwell Bridge.—Ed.]

Also, I leave my testimony and bear witness against all the unfaithfulness of ministers and professors.

"1. I bear witness against the unfaithfulness of these ministers that were with the Public Resolutions, to bring in, or keep in, any se men that were open and avowed malignants and enemies to so contrary to our Covenants.

- 2. I bear testimony against that act at Glasgow [October 62. By it, all ministers ordained since 1649, who had not presented by the patron, and collated by the bishop, were hed from their parishes. Nearly four hundred were affected by he six hundred were those who submitted to the yoke of erastian macy.—Ed.] wherein six hundred ministers and upwards did their charge, and turn their back upon their flock; and since, of them are turned ravening wolves and greedy dogs that of bark, according to that word, Ezekiel xiii. 4, 5, 'O Israel, thy lets are like the foxes in the deserts. Ye have not gone up into aps, neither made up the hedge for the house of Israel to stand a battle in the day of the Lord.' Had it not been their duty to stood by their charge until they had been driven out of their ts?
- 3. I leave my testimony against both Indulgences, first and and against all that comply and go on with them in that sinful e; ay, and while [i.e., until] they repent, I shall be a standing ss against them. Surely, if they be found with clean fingers God comes to inquire after blood, I am mistaken. will they answer when Christ shall say, 'Come here, sir, give n account of your talent. What did ye with your ministry? Laid aside at the command of Charles Stuart and the bloody cil? And had ye more delight to be a doctor or chamberlain ye had to be minister?' Oh! let the unfaithful minister nber that word in the xxxiii. of Ezekiel, verse 6, 'But if the man see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet, and the e be not warned; if the sword come, and take any person from g them, he is taken away in his iniquity; but his blood will I re at the watchman's hand.' I fear that the blood of many will be required at the hands of the most part of the ministers otland.
- 4. I bear witness and leave my testimony against the unfaithfulof many ministers, who have left their wonted love and burneal which they had when they ventured upon the high places earth in preaching the Gospel.

And now, in the last place, I bear testimony against all that preached, written against, or reproached that poor party, that occasionally met at Airsmoss, only for the hearing of the Gospel; and now, when I am stepping out of time into eternity, I declare that I adhere to all the doctrines that ever I heard Mr Richard Cameron or Mr Donald Cargill preach; and my soul blesseth God that ever I heard either of them; for my soul has been refreshed to hear the voice and shouting of a king among these field-meetings, wherein the fountain of living waters has been made to run down among the people of God, in such a manner that armies could not have terrified us. Oh! I am sure the blood that has been shed in the fields, and on scaffolds, in Scotland, for the cause and interest of Jesus Christ, will have a glorious crop, in spite of devils and men; and I am sure the seed sown at Airsmoss will have as glorious a vintage as ever any seed in Scotland had.

"And now, oh! ye that are the poor remnant that are to stay behind, who are the butt of the fury, not only of the open and bloody enemies, but also of many ministers and professors, who have gone out of the way themselves, and will not suffer others to walk in it; I have this to say to you; be earnest and constant in kything [i.e., showing] of love to Christ; walk with more fear, lest ye offend a holy and jealous God. Oh! beware that ye quit not your integrity; there are many waiting for your halting, yea, and longing for it. Cast not off the way of Christ because of suffering. If ye knew what of His love and comforting presence I had, since I was called to witness for Him against these bloody traitors that are thirsting after the blood of the Lord's people, ye would long for such proofs of His love; seek Him early and ye shall find Him. Be not troubled because of our death; it is not a death unto the soul, but an inlet of life to it; for to be dead to the world, is to be alive to Christ. Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: they rest from their labours, and their works do follow them.

"And rejoice, oh! ye poor of the flock, that wait with fear and trembling, and with faith and love in exercise; it is to you that He will come. He meeteth him that rejoiceth in and worketh righteousness. Blessed are ye that weep now; for ye shall be comforted. Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth. Blessed are the merciful. Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled. Blessed are the pure in-heart; for they shall see God. Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called the children of God. Blessed are they that are reproached for righteousness sake; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you for My sake. Oh friends! it is only you that have ground to rejoice; if ye by Him be helped to keep the word of His patience, He will keep you in the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the face of the earth.

"Oh! dear friends and followers of Christ, hold on your way, weary not, faint not, and ye shall receive the crown of life. that overcome by the blood of the Lamb, and the word of their testimony, that shall stand, being clothed in white robes, before the throne, for these are they that came out of great tribulation. member that there is a book of remembrance written, and the names of these are written in it, that speak often one to another. Oh! my friends, let it be your study to keep up private fellowship meetings, wherein so much of the power and life of religion is to be found. Remember that here I, as a dying sufferer for Christ, leave this charge to every one of you that have any love to Christ; set about this and other duties with more fervent love and zeal than heretofore hath been done; and be much in private prayer; wrestle with God upon the account of Jacob's trouble. I will say this, that the more ye seek for Zion, the more ye will get for yourselves. Let not the reproaches cast upon the way of God, stumble you. And see that when ye are reviled, ye revile not again; but rather with meekness and love, in the fear of the Lord, study ye to gain others; but if they will not hearken, when this is done, then be free and faithful in testifying against them for so doing; but especially let your conversation testify your dislike of these sinful courses. And now, my dear friends in Christ, I leave you to Him, who has promised to be with you in the fire and water, and bear the weight of all your reproaches, and is afflicted in all your afflictions.

"As for you that are lying in black nature, I exhort you to repent of your sins, and come out of that woful estate wherein ye are now lying, and close with a slain Mediator upon His own terms. Oh! fall in love with the way of salvation. Oh! can ye think of the way of redemption, and not stand and wonder at the condescendency of free grace? I tell you, except ye repent, ye shall all perish.

"I have a word to speak to you that are cruel and open enemies to Christ and His cause. Remember, the saints shall judge the world; and then we shall not get leave to stand on equal terms with you; but we shall be set on thrones, with crowns on our heads, and harps in our hands, to sing praise to the Lamb. And then we shall pass our sentence, with the great Judge, upon all the enemies of God; and ye shall be turned into hell, with all the nations that forget God, if ye repent not. I pray that the Lord would open your eyes, that ye may see your sins, and turn from them and live.

"I forgive all men the wrongs they have done, or can do to me. But for the wrongs done to Christ, in robbing Him of His right over His church and people, I know vengeance belongs to God, and He will repay them. Therefore I leave them under process, ay, and while [i.e., until] they repent.

"And now I begin to enjoy Him who is invisible; for it is but little we can see of Him now; but this I am sure of, that I shall be made conform to Him through His sufferings. Therefore I take my leave of all the world, and the enjoyments thereof. I leave my wife and child to my covenanted God, who gave them to me, and willingly quit and give them up to Him, hoping that He will be a husband to the widow, and a father to the fatherless, according to His promise. I hope that the friends of the Lord will remember the living for the dead's sake.

"Farewell wife and child, parents and relations, and all friends and acquaintances. Welcome heaven, angels, and saints! Welcome God and Father! Welcome lovely Jesus Christ! Welcome Holy Spirit of Grace; into Thy hands I commend my soul and spirit.

"Sic subscribitur,
"JO. POTTER."

Isabel Alison.

SABEL ALISON lived very privately in the town of Perth, and was of a sober and religious conversation. She had now and then heard Mr Cargill preach in the fields, and some few others before Bothwell, but not very often—field conventicles not being common in that part of the country. Upon her nonconformity at Perth, and speaking against the severity used upon some religious people there, she was seized; but nothing else could be laid to her charge, till she was brought before some of the magistrates, and, in her simplicity, voluntarily acknowledged converse with some who had been declared rebels. When the Government were informed of this, a party of soldiers seized her, living peaceably in her chamber at Perth, and carried her to Edinburgh.

The Acts of Indemnity referred to in this testimony were a Pardon and Indemnity, dated June 29, 1679, to all tenants and sub-tenants who had been at Bothwell, provided they submitted by a certain day; and a General Indemnity, July 27, 1679. Both are in Wodrow, of the latter of which he says, it was so clogged that it put no great stop to the harassing and spoiling of the country by the soldiers.—Ed.]

HE LAST SPEECH AND TESTIMONY of ISABEL Altson, who lived at Perth, and suffered at Edinburgh, January 26, 1681.

The Interrogations of Isabel Alison before the Privy Council:

"When I was brought before the Council, they asked me, Where did ye live; at St Johnstonn [i.e., Perth]? I answered. Yes.

"What was your occupation? To which I did not answer.

"The Bishop asked, If I conversed with Mr Donald Cargill? I answered, 'Sir, you seem to be a man whom I have no clearness to speak to.'

"He desired another to ask the same question. I answered, I have seen him, and wish that I had seen him oftener.

"They asked, If I owned what he had done against the civil magistrate? I answered, I did own it.

"They asked, If I could read the Bible? I answered, Yes.

"They asked, If I knew the duty we owe to the civil magistrate? I answered, When the magistrate carrieth the sword for God, according to what the Scripture calls for, we owe him all due reverence;

but when they overturn the work of God, and set themselves position to Him, it is the duty of His servants to execute H and ordinances on them.

- "They asked, If I owned the Sanqunar Declaration? I and I do own it.
- "They asked, If I owned the papers taken at the Queens! Henry Hall? I answered, You need not question that.
- "They asked, If I knew Mr Skene? I answered, I new him.
- "They asked, If I conversed with rebels? I answered, conversed with rebels.
- "They asked, If I did converse with David Hackston? swered, I did converse with him, and I bless the Lord that saw him; for I never saw aught in him, but a godly, pious you
- "They asked, If the killing of the Archbishop of St A was a pious act? I answered, I never heard him say that he him; but if God moved any, and put it upon them to execurishteous judgments upon him, I have nothing to say to that.
- "They asked me, When saw ye John Balfour [of Kinloc pious youth? I answered, I have seen him.
- "They asked, When? I answered, Those are frivolous qual I am not bound to answer them.
- "They said, I thought not that a testimony. They asked think you of that in the Confession of Faith, that magistrates be owned, though they were heathers? I answered, It was a matter, than when these, who seemed to own the truth, has overturned it, and made themselves avowed enemies to it.
- "They asked, Who should be judge of these things? swered, The Scriptures of truth, and the Spirit of God; a men, that have overturned the work themselves.
- "They asked, If I knew the two Hendersons that murder Lord St Andrews? [Andrew Henderson and Alexander Henderson Kilbrachmont, are among the twelve mentioned by Ru concerned in the deed.—Ed.] I answered, I never knew an St Andrews.
- "They said, Mr James Sharp, if ye call him so. I said, I thought it murder; but if God moved and stirred them up to this righteous judgment upon him, I have nothing to say to the
- "They asked, Whether or not I would own all that I had for, said they, You will be put to own it in the Grassmarket.

they bemoaned me, in putting my life in hazard in such a quarrel. I answered, I think my life little enough in the quarrel of owning my Lord and Master's sweet truths; for He hath freed me from everlasting wrath, and redeemed me; and as for my body, it is at His disposal.

"They said I did not follow the Lord's practice in that anent Pilate. I answered, Christ owned His kingly office when He was questioned on it, and He told them He was a king, and for that end He was born; and it is for that that we are called in question this day—the owning of His kingly government.

"The Bishop said, We own it. I answered, We have found the sad consequences of the contrary.

"The Bishop said, He pitied me for the loss of my life. I told him, He had done me much more hurt than the loss of my life, or all the lives they had taken; for it much more affected me that many souls were killed by their doctrine.

"The Bishop said, Wherein is our doctrine erroneous? I said, That was better debated already than a poor lass could debate it.

"They said, Your ministers do not approve of these things, and ye have said more than some of your ministers; for your ministers have brought you on to these opinions, and left you there. I said, They had cast in baits among the ministers, and harled [i.e., drawn] them aside; and although ministers say one thing to-day, and another to-morrow, we are not obliged to follow them in that.

"Then they said, they pitied me; for, said they, We find reason and a quick wit in you; and they desired me to take it to advisement. I told them I had been advising on it these seven years, and I hoped not to change now.

"They inquired mockingly, If I lectured any? I answered, Quakers use to do so.

"They asked, If I did own Presbyterian principles? I answered, That I did.

"They asked, If I was distempered? I told them I was always solid in the wit that God had given me

"Lastly, they asked my name. I told them, If they had staged [i.e., accused] me, they might remember my name, for I had told them already, and would not aye [i.e., always] be telling them. One of them said, May ye not tell us your name? Then another of themselves told it.

"Being called before the Criminal Lords, they me, If I would abide by what I said the last da answered, I am not about to deny anything of it

"They said, Ye confessed, that ye harboure killers of the archbishop, though ye would not murder. I said, I confessed no such thing.

"The Advocate said, I did. I answered, I did not; and them I would take with no untruths.

"He said, Did ye not converse with them? I said, I did verse with David Hackston, and I bless the Lord for it.

"They said, When saw ye him last? I answered, never sir murdered him.

"They desired me to say over what I said the last day. I Would they have me to be my own accuser?

"They said, The Advocate was my accuser. I said, Le say on, then.

"Then they went over the things that passed betwixt the Co and me the other day, and put me to it—yea, or nay? I sai have troubled me too much with answering questions, seeing you a judicature which I have no clearness to answer.

"They said, Do ye disown us, and the king's authority in u "I said, I disown you all, because you carry the sword a God and not for Him, and have these nineteen or twenty years it your work to dethrone Him by swearing year after year a Him and His work, and assuming that power to a human cruwhich is due to Him alone, and have rent the members from Head, Christ, and one another.

"Then they asked, Who taught you these principles? Is was beholden to God that taught me these principles.

"They said, Are ye a Quaker? I said, Did ye hear me was led by a spirit within me? I bless the Lord I profited mu the persecuted Gospel; and your Acts of Indemnity after Bot cleared me more than anything I met with since.

"They said, How could that be? I said, By your meddling with Christ's interests, and parting them as ye pleased.

"They said, they did not usurp Christ's prerogatives. I said, What, then, mean your Indulgences, and your setting up of Prelacy? for there has none preached publicly these twenty years without persecution but these that have their orders from you.

"Then they caused bring Sanquhar Declaration and the paper * found on Mr Richard Cameron, and the papers taken at the Queensferry, and asked if I would adhere to them? I said I would, as they were according to the Scriptures, and I saw not wherein they did contradict them.

"They asked, If ever Mr Welch [John Welch of Irongray. He was at Pentland, and at Bothwell Bridge headed the party opposed to Sir R. Hamilton.—Ed.] or Mr Riddell taught me these principles? I answered, I would be far in the wrong to speak anything that might wrong them.

"Then they bade me take heed what I was saying, for it was upon life and death that I was questioned. I asked them if they would have me to lie? I would not quit one truth though it would purchase my life a thousand years; which ye cannot purchase, nor promise me an hour.

"They said, When saw ye the two Hendersons and John Balfour? Seeing ye love ingenuity, will ye be ingenuous and tell us if ye saw them since the death of the archbishop? I said, They appeared publicly within the land since.

"They asked, If I conversed with them within these twelvemonths? At which I kept silence.

"They urged me to say either yea or nay. I answered, Yes.

"Then they said, Your blood be upon your own head, we shall be free of it. I answered, So said Pilate; but it was a question if it was so; and ye have nothing to say against me, but for owning of Christ's truths and His persecuted members. To which they answered nothing. Then they desired me to subscribe what I owned. I refused, and they did it for me.

^{*}This paper being taken from him at his death by the enemies who slew him, no copy thereof, for what I know, has ever been procured, and hence it cannot be certainly known what was the nature of it.—Notes by Compiler of "Cloud." [The paper referred to seems to be the Bond of Mutual Defence which follows the Short Relation concerning the Rev. Mr Richard Cameron, contained in the Appendix.—ED.]

CCOUNT of what Isabel Alison said before the Assizers.

"DEAR FRIENDS,—These are to show you what passed betwixt the black crew and me. They read my indictment, and asked if I had aught to say against it? I said, Nothing.

"They read the papers as they did formerly, and asked, If I owned them? I said, I did own them.

"Then they called the assizers and swore them. Then I told them, All authority is of God (Rom. xiii. 1), and when they appeared against Him, I was clear to disown them; and if they were not against Him, I would not have been there. 'I take every one of you witness against another, at your appearance before God, that your proceeding against me is only for owning of Christ, His Gospel, and members, which I could not disown, lest I should come under the hazard of denying Christ, and so be denied of Him.'

"And when the assize came, they asked, If I had aught to say against them? I said, They were all alike, for there would no honest man take the trade in hand.

"They said to the assize, It was against their will to take our lives. I said, if that had been true, they would not have brought me so far off, pursuing me for my life.

This is the substance of what passed, as I remember.

RCHIBALD RIDDELL, an indulged minister, and brother to the laird of Riddell, was employed by the Council to persuade Isabel Alison and Marion Harvie to conform, but with no success. He seems to have been a good man, but mistaken as to his views of the character of the men then in power, for he soon got into trouble with them. About September 1680, he was apprehended on the charge of frequenting field conventicles. His examination occupies about six pages in "Wodrow." It justifies what Marion Harvie says of his excellence as a preacher. He was kept in prison for seven months, and then for three or four years in the Bass; but was ultimately allowed to go to America. On the s of the Revolution, he left America, June 1689, but on the ome the ship in which he had set sail was captured by a French f-war, and for twenty-two months Mr Riddell suffered all the s which prisoners in that cruel age were made to undergo. He last exchanged, but now his ship was driven into Bantry Bay, he and the ship's company were plundered by the Irish, and even days suffered all manner of hardship, until rescued by the nment.

r Meldrum, alluded to by the goodman of the Tolbooth, was e Meldrum, minister at Aberdeen. In 1681 he left his charge than take the test. Shortly after the Revolution he was called inburgh, where, says Wodrow, "he preached many years to great ation, and was a mighty master of the Holy Scriptures, and d with the greatest talent of opening them up or lecturing of ever heard."—ED.]

CCOUNT of Mr Archibald Riddell's Examination of Isabel Alison and Marion Harvie.

"About seven of the clock at night the goodman [i.e., governor] of the Tolbooth caused call us down, against our will, to be examined by Mr Riddell at the Council's order. So we came down and were brought to the west side of the house, to an empty room, where prought him into us, the goodman of the Tolbooth being preand the keepers, and some gentlemen with them; and they I us sit down.

The goodman of the Tolbooth said, 'Mr Riddell, the Council 1 me bring you to confer with these women, to see if you can them to repentance.'

Then we protested and said, As for repentance, we know not fault we have done.

Then said they, You cannot be the worse to have one of your ters to confer with. We told them, These ministers being their its, we looked no more upon them as ministers of Jesus Christ; nerefore he is no minister to us.

Mr Riddell asked, If the Council would send Mr Cargill to us, we not confer with him? We said, He was not at their command; but if Mr Cargill would do as ye and the rest of you have done, we would do the like with him.

"So he offered to pray. We said, We were not clear to join with him in prayer.

"He said, Wherefore? We said, We know the strain of your prayers will be like your discourse.

"He said, I shall not mention any of your principles in my prayer, but only desire the Lord to let you see the evil of your doings. We told him, we desired none of his prayers at all.

"They said, Would we not be content to hear him? We said, forced prayers had no virtue.

"Then we said, What means he to pray with us more than he did with our brethren that have gone before us? Mr Riddell said, Mr Skene conversed with Mr Robert Ross.

"We said, He did not send for him, but he intruded himself upon him.

"The goodman of the Tolbooth said, He conversed with Mr Meldrum; and we smiled at that, and said, He might talk to him of his perjury, but for no other thing.

"So they urged prayer again. We said, It would be a mocking of God.

"They said, Why so? We said, Because we cannot join with it.

"So Mr Riddell began to debate with us, and said, We would not find it in all the Scripture, nor any history, to disown the civil magistrate. We answered, There were never such magistrates seen as we have.

"He instanced Manasseh, who made the streets of Jerusalem to run with the blood of the prophets. We said, It was a question, if he came the length in perjury.

"He instanced Joash. We answered, He was but a child when that covenant was sworn, and it was not so with these that he now pleaded for.

"He then instanced Nero, how he set the city on fire and robbed the churches; and yet, notwithstanding, the apostle exhorteth submission to the magistrates then being. We answered, It was in the Lord, and as they were a terror to evil doers.

"He said, Although they were wicked, yet they should not be altogether cast off. We said, Before their Excommunication we would not have been so clear to cast them off.

"He said, There were but only seven in the Excommunication, then why do you cast at all the rest? We answered, These seven carried the great sway, and the rest came in under them.

"He said, How can one man take upon him to draw out the sword of excommunication; for the like was never heard tell of in any generation? We answered, Why not one man, since there were no more faithful? and the Church hath power to cast out scandalous persons, be they high, be they low.

"He said, Who is the Church? We said, If there was a true Church in the world, that little handful was one, though never so insignificant, of which handful we own ourselves a part; and though our blood go in the quarrel, yet we hope it will be the foundation of a new building, and of a lively Church.

"He said, Thought we all the ministers wrong? We answered, We desire to forbear, and not to add; for we desire not to speak of ministers' faults. And we desired him to forbear, and let us be gone; but he urged his discourse, and fell on upon the papers that were taken at the Queensferry, chiefly on that part of them: 'When God gives them power, it is a just law to execute justice upon all persons that are guilty.'

"And he came to us, and laid by his coat, and said, Would ye stab me with a knife in my breast, even now? And we smiled, and said, We never murdered any.

"But, said he, They swore to do so. We said, Why did he not debate these things with men, and not with lasses? For, we told him, we never studied debates.

"He said again, Thought we all the ministers wrong? We answered, They were wrong; and forbade him to put us to it, to speak of ministers' faults; for, if he knew what we had to say of them, he would not urge us. So we desired to be gone.

"And he said, If ye come to calm blood, and desire me, or any other of the ministers, to speak to you; ye may tell the keepers, and ye may have them.

"And there was a chirurgeon among them, and the goodman of the Tolbooth said, He might draw blood of us, for we were mad. We said, Saw ye any mad action in us?

"This is all we can mind at present."

HE DYING TESTIMONY AND LAST WO of Isabel Alison.

"I, being sentenced to die in the Grassmarl Edinburgh, January 1681, thought fit to set under my hand, the causes wherefore I suffer. I apprehended at Perth, in my own chamber, order from the Council, and brought to Edin with a strong guard, and there put in prison, and then being exafirst by a committee, and then by the criminal court, the man my examination was:

"First, If I conversed with David Hackston and others (friends? Which I owned upon good grounds.

"Second, If I owned the Excommunication at the Torwood the papers found at the Queensferry, and Sanquhar Declar and a paper found on Mr Cameron at Airsmoss? All whowned. Likewise, I declined their authority, and told then they had declared war against Christ, and had usurped and His prerogatives, and so carried the sword against Him, an for Him.

"So I think none can own them, unless they disown Christ Therefore, let enemies and pretended friends say what they ple could have my life on no easier terms, than the denying of C kingly office. So I lay down my life for owning and adhering to Christ, He being a free King in His own house, for which I ble Lord that ever He called me to that.

"Now, in the first place, I adhere to the Holy Scriptures." Old and New Testament; and likewise I adhere to the Conf of Faith, because according to the Scriptures; the Larger and S Catechisms; and our Solemn Covenants, both National and S League, as they were lawfully sworn in this land; and I adhere Acknowledgment of Sins and Engagement to Duties; I adherwise to these forementioned papers, and to the Excommunicat Torwood, they all being according to the Scriptures of Truth, a both lawful and necessary; likewise I adhere to the Ruthergleitimony, and to all the testimonies of our worthies, who have st in Edinburgh, and elsewhere.

"In the next place, I enter my protestation against all the violadone to the work of God these twenty years bygone. First, The ning of the Covenant made with God, and the "Causes of God's th," and the thrusting in of prelates into the Lord's house, contrary he Word of God, and our sworn Covenants. I leave my testily against Popery, which is so much countenanced at this day, and nst the receiving that limb of antichrist, the Duke of York. Like-: I leave my testimony against all the blood shed both on scafs, and in the fields, and seas; and against all the cruelty used nst all the people of the Lord. And I leave my testimony against paying of that wicked cess, for maintaining of these profane tches, to bear down the work of God. I leave my testimony nst all unlawful bonds; and likewise against the shifting of a imony, when clearly called by the Lord to give it.

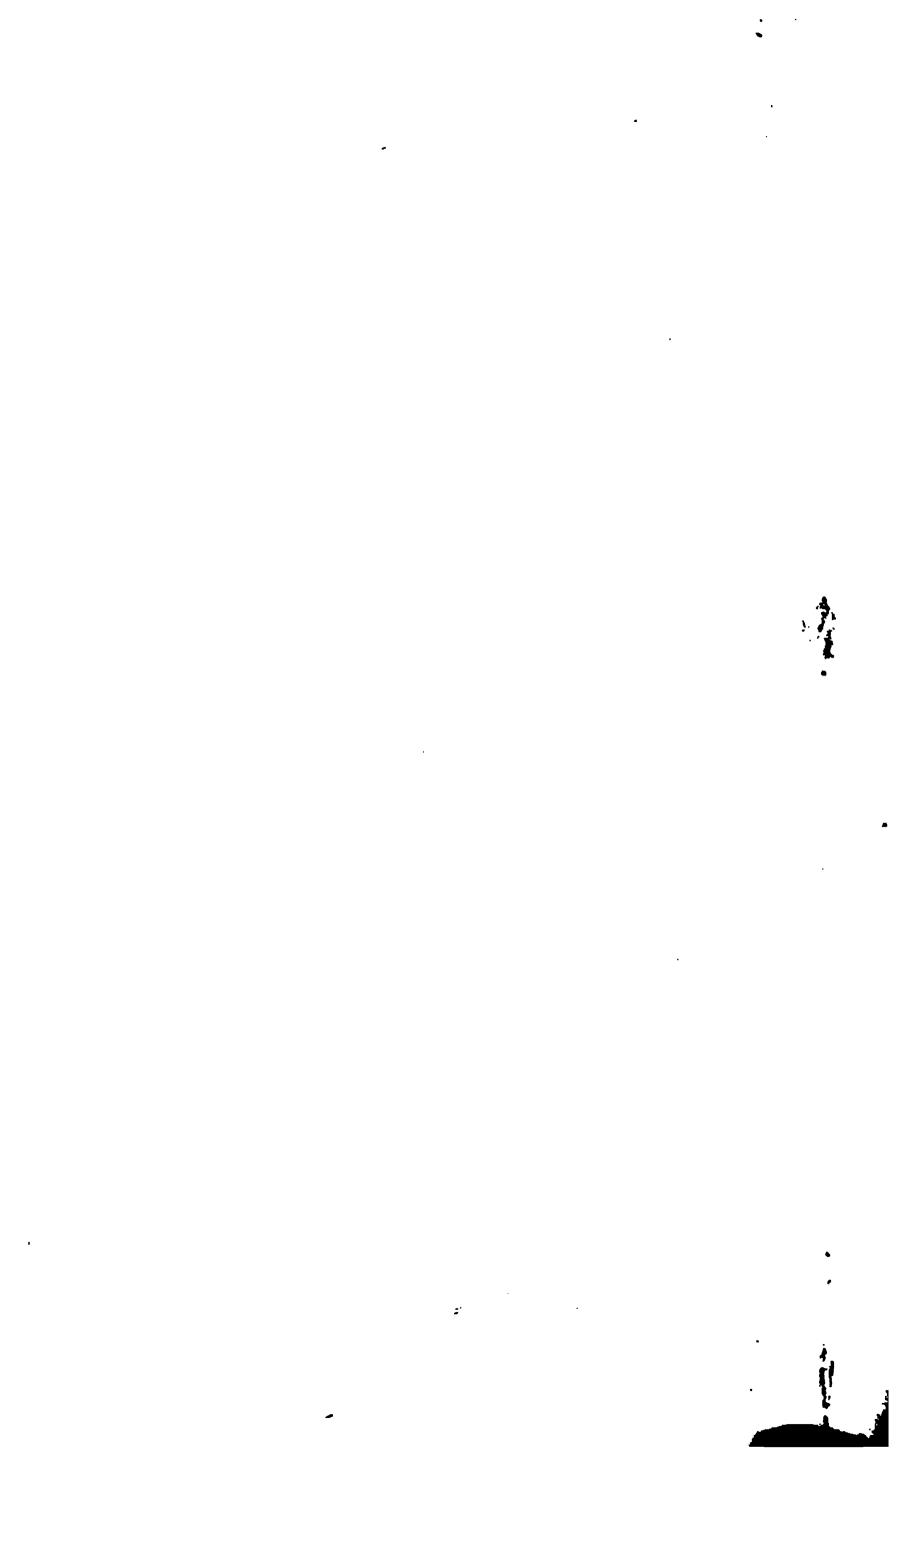

"I leave my testimony against all profanity of all sorts; and likeagainst lukewarmness and indifferency in the Lord's matters. e my testimony against the unfaithfulness of ministers, first and last; r silence at the first, when their Master's work was broken down; for most part they slipped from their Master's back, without so much giving one word of a testimony against the wrongs done to Him; . now are become a snare to the poor people in going to hear the ates; and poor things, following their example, are ensnared. ling the sad experience of it, brings it the more into my memory. ;, notwithstanding of their being convinced of their error in this, ny of them carry now, as if they rued that ever they came forth to fields to proclaim their Master a free King in His own house. d now they are fallen in under the shadow of the sworn enemies; l, alas! they are become profound to lay snares, yea, they are a pupon Mispeh, and a net spread upon Tabor! Oh! for the sad ection both of ministers and professors in Scotland! It is like, our riage may make many of our carcasses lie in the wilderness.

"I leave my testimony against the Indulgences, first and last, and inst all that comply therewith, or connive thereat. I leave my testiny against the censuring of worthy Mr Cameron, or any other whom d raised up to declare the whole counsel of God, and to witness inst the evils of this generation. I fear, when God makes inquisition blood, ministers' hands will not be found free thereof.

"As for charging my blood on any particular person, I cannot, I have never gotten the certainty of what hath brought me to the ge [i.e., to trial]; but if any have done it willingly, I leave it to God and their own conscience. But I may warrantably charge it upon all the declared enemies of God within the land.

- "And first, I leave it on the bloody Council, that sent an order to take me, for they are guilty of it.
- "Secondly, the sheriff-clerk of Perth, and these that were with him when he took me, are guilty of it; the sheriff-clerk of Kinross, and the men that guarded me, are all likewise guilty of my blood.
- "And I leave my blood on Sir George Mackenzie, and the rest of that bloody court, and I take the Lord to witness against them, whether or not it was on easy terms, that they offered me my life; they said only, they would not trouble me with their bishops; but I said that Supremacy was as evil as Prelacy. And they said that I behoved to say, that the king was not a usurper, and pass from all my former confession, and that it was my duty to obey authority. told them that they were sworn enemies to God, so that it was impossible to obey God and them both; so I told them I would not retract an hair-breadth. They said, Thought I ever that he [Charles II.] was our lawful king? I said, Yes; for he entered into covenant with God and with the land; but he hath broken and cast off that tie, and hath exercised so much, both tyranny and cruelty, that I had just ground to decline him and them both. Then they bade my blood be upon my own head; but I told them they would find it would be on their heads, for it was for owning of Christ's kingly office that they put me to suffer, say the contrary who will. Now I bless the Lord I am free from Jesuitical principles. The Scripture is my rule, and when obedience to men is contrary to obedience to God, I am clear to disown them.
- "I leave my testimony against Mr Riddell, for his obeying these wicked men to ensnare us, and to hold out to us, before these accursed enemies of Christ that were seeking our lives for our adhering to the truth, that it was all delusion that we held. I many times rued that I bare so well with him, and now I hear that he denies that which we wrote. But if ye will believe me, who am within a little to appear before God, there was nothing added, but rather wanting; I wish the Lord may forgive him. I bless the Lord, what strikes against myself only I can very heartily forgive; but what strikes against God and His truths, I leave that to God, who is the Judge of all.
- "Now I would only say this to you who are seeking to keep your garments clean; be sober, be vigilant, for your adversary the devil goes about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour. And as I would have you to be zealous for the truth, and not to quit one hoof, so I would have you labour against a spirit of bitterness; beware of self; and be more ready to mourn for the slips of others than to make them the subject of your discourse; and labour to make earnest of religion, for I find there is need of more than a good cause when it comes to the push. Oh! the everlasting covenant is sweet to me now!

SOUTH FRONT

"And I would also say; they that would follow Christ need not scar [i.e., be alarmed] at the cross, for I can set to my seal to it, 'His yoke is easy and His burden is light.' Yea, many times hath He made me go very easy through things that I have thought I would never win [i.e., get] through; He is the only desirable Master; but He must be followed fully. Rejoice in Him, all ye that love Him. Wherefore lift up your heads, and be exceeding glad, for the day of your redemption draweth nigh. Let not your heart faint, nor your hands grow feeble. Go on in the strength of the Lord, my dear friends, for I hope He will yet have a remnant both of sons and daughters that will cleave to Him; though they will be very few, even as the berries on the top of the outmost branches. As for such as are grown weary of the cross of Christ, and have drawn to a lee-shore that God never allowed; it may be, ere all be done, it will turn like a tottering fence, and a bowing wall to them, and they shall have little profit of it, and as little credit.

"But what shall I say to the commendation of Christ and His cross? I bless the Lord, praise to His holy name, that hath made my prison a palace to me; and what am I that He should have dealt thus with me? I have looked greedy-like to such a lot as this, but still thought it was too high for me, when I saw how vile I was; but now the Lord hath made that Scripture sweet to me, in the sixth of Isaiah, 'Then flew one of the seraphim unto me, having a live coal in his hand, which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar: And he laid it upon my mouth, and said, Lo, this hath touched thy lips; and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged.'

"Oh! how great is His love to me, that hath brought me forth to testify against the abominations of the times, and kept me from fainting hitherto, and hath made me to rejoice in Him! Now I bless the Lord that ever He gave me a life to lay down for Him.

"Now, farewell all creature comforts; farewell, sweet Bible; farewell, ye real friends in Christ; farewell, faith and hope; fa prayers and all duties; farewell, sun and moon; within a shall be free from sin, and all the sorrows that follow thereon. come everlasting enjoyments of the Father, Son, and Holy everlasting love, everlasting joy, everlasting light.

"Edinburgh Tolbooth, Jan. 26, 1681.

"Sic subscribitur,

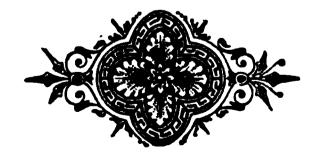

"ISABEL ALISC

EING come to the scaffold, after singing the eighty-fourth and reading the sixteenth of Mark, she cried over the so and said, "Rejoice in the Lord, ye righteous; and I say, rejoice." Then she desired to pray at that place, a Major came and would not let her, but took her away to the foot, and there she prayed.

When she went up the ladder, she cried out, "Oh! be z sirs, be zealous, be zealous! Oh! love the Lord, all ye H vants, oh! love Him, sirs! for in His favour there is life."

And she said, "Oh! ye His enemies, what will ye do, v will ye fly in that day? For now there is a dreadful day com all the enemies of Jesus Christ. Come out from among them, that are the Lord's own people."

Then, she said, "Farewell all created comforts. Farewell Bible, in which I delighted most, and which has been sweet since I came to prison. Farewell, Christian acquaintances. into thy hands I commit my spirit, Father, Son, and Holy (Whereupon the hangman threw her over.

Marion Harvie.

ARION HARVIE was a servant-maid in Borrowstounness. She says, in her answers before the Privy Council, that her father had sworn the Covenants, so that, in all probability, she had enjoyed the advantage of a religious education. But she was fifteen before religious teaching produced good effect upon her mind, and it would seem that it was a sermon of Richard Cameron which awakened her to a sense of sin, and led her to the Redeemer. Henceforward she embraced every opportunity of hearing the persecuted preachers. She speaks of having heard Donald Cargill, John Welch, Archibald Riddell, and Richard Cameron.

She was apprehended in November 1680, through means of a scheme intended to entrap Mr Donald Cargill. James Henderson of North Queensferry, an informer in the service of Middleton, the governor of Blackness, found out Cargill in Edinburgh, and got him persuaded to agree to come to Fife and preach. Meanwhile, a party of soldiers were lying in wait at Muttonhole, not far from Edinburgh on the way to Queensferry. James Skene, Archibald Stewart, Mrs Muir, and Marion Harvie, set out on foot, while Donald Cargill and James Boig were to follow on horseback. When they came to Muttonhole, they were seized by the soldiers, but, in the confusion, Mrs Muir escaped. She fled towards Edinburgh, and stopped Cargill and Boig when on the way, so that they both escaped. Marion Harvie, James Skene, and Archibald Stewart, were brought prisoners to Edinburgh. Henderson, says Patrick Walker, got the price of blood, and bought or built a passage-boat, which he called "The Katharine;" but many eared to cross the water in her. Henderson, after this, turned miserwhile and contemptible in the eyes of all well-thinking men, and, some affirm, died cursing, after he got that reward for his treachery.

Marion Harvie was brought before the Privy Council. Her uswers to the questions put to her form the first part of her Testimony. There was the same levity in the questions which her enemies put to her, as in the examination of Isabel Alison; and Dalziel, with characteristic ferocity, threatened her with the Boots; yet her demeanour was calm and dignified.

On the 6th of December, she was brought before the Lord-Justice and the Commissioners of Justiciary. The books of the Justiciary Court have preserved the following record of her examination:

"Edinburgh, 6th December 1680.—In presence of the Lords Justice-Clerk and Commissioners of Justiciary sitting in judgment, compeared Marion Harvie, prisoner, and being examined, adheres to the fourth article of the fanatics' New Covenant, the same being read to her, and disowns the king and his authority, and the authority of the Lords of Justiciary, and adheres and abides at the treasonable Declaration emitted at Sanquhar, and approves of the same, and says it was lawful to kill the Archbishop of St Andrews, when the Lord raised up instruments for that effect, and that he was as miserable and perjured a wretch as ever betrayed the Kirk of Scotland; declares that ministers brought them up to these principles, and now they have left them, and that she has heard Mr John Welch and Mr Riddell preach up these principles she now owns, and blesses God she ever heard them preach so, for her soul has been refreshed by She approves of Mr Cargill's excommunicating the king. Declares she can write, but refuses to sign the same.

" Sic subscribitur,

- " MAITLAND.
- "DAVID BALFOUR.
- "DA. FALCONER.
- "ROGER HOG."

Marion Harvie's indictment was drawn up from this statement, and she was tried on Monday the 17th of January 1681. "Her discourse before the Justiciary Court" forms part of her Testimony. She was found guilty, but sentence was delayed till the following Friday. Her sentence was, "that she be taken to the Grassmarket of Edinburgh, upon Wednesday next, the 26th instant, betwixt two and four o'clock in the afternoon, and there to be hanged on a gibbet till she be dead, and all her lands, heritages, goods, and gear whatsomever, to be escheat and inbrought to our sovereign lord's use; which is pronounced for doom."

In her Testimony she emphatically condemns her enemies, and leaves her blood upon their heads. The first compilers of the ud," in a note, remind the reader that such statements are to be reted like those of James Skene, as a warning to persecutors than as manifestations of a revengeful spirit. The Rev. James rson, in his interesting volume, "The Ladies of the Covenant," notice of Marion Harvie, has very appropriately quoted a ge from a letter of Gray of Chryston, one who suffered much lf during those times, to Wodrow, which quite agrees with the of the compilers:

As to their leaving their blood upon their enemies in general, on particular persons accessory to their trouble, I could never stand that they meant more by it than the fastening a conviction a brutish, persecuting generation, who vainly justified themas acting by law, and inferred that not they, but the legislawere answerable, if any injustice was done."

arion Harvie's Testimony closes with an account of her last ents. She preserved her faith and hope and confidence to the When she came to the scaffold, she and Isabel Alison sang the Psalm, and it is said the tune they sung was the fine old tune, tyrs," verifying the rude lines—

"This is the tune the Martyrs sang
When at the gallows tree they stood,
When they were gaan to die
Their God to glorifie."

ter reading what was said by her and her fellow-sufferer Isabel, Peden's short but characteristic eulogium on them will be felt well merited: "They were two honest, worthy lasses."

thy or a deeper interest throughout the country. In the some-coarsely-executed, yet expressive engraving, prefixed to the first of Alexander Shields' "Hind Let Loose," published in 1687, nen hanged," evidently Isabel Alison and Marion Harvie, a place side by side with "The drowned at stakes at sea," ne Wigtown Martyrs, Margaret Wilson and Margaret M'Lauch-Fountainhall twice notices their end, and once tries to defend execution. One of his chronological notes under 1680 is—anet [Isabel] Alison in Perth, and one—Harvie in Borrowness, two Cameronian women, were hanged at Edinburgh, 26th by 1681; they called the king and bishops perjured bloody men. There were five other women executed with them for m of their children."

In his "Historical Observes" he has this remark, under -26th January 1681.—"There were hanged at Edinburgh women of ordinary rank, for their uttering treasonable words other principles and opinions contrary to all our government one was named Janet [Isabel] Alison, a Perth woman, the [Marion] Harvie, from Borrowstounness. They were of Camfaction, bigot and sworn enemies to the king and the bishops; same stamp with Rathillet, Skene, Stewart, and Potter; of supra, where we debate how far men (for women are scarce honoured with that martyrdom, as they think it), are to be pur capitally for their bare perverse judgment without acting. thought that threatening to drown them privately in the North 1 without giving them the credit of a public suffering, would have effectually reclaimed them than any arguments which were used the bringing them to a scaffold but disseminates the infection. ever, the women proved very obstinate, and for all the pains would not acknowledge the king to be their lawful prince, but him a perjured bloody man. At the stage, one of them told, so as she followed and heard the curates, she was a swearer, Sab breaker, and with much aversion read the Scriptures; but I much joy upon her spirit since she followed the conventicle pr ing."

Mr George Johnston, referred to in the questions, was minis Newbattle. He was deprived of his charge by the Act of Coun Glasgow, 1662. In April 1670, he was seized in Edinburgh of charge of frequently keeping conventicles, and confined to the 1 of Borthwick during the Council's pleasure. In August 167 name, along with Donald Cargill, James Frazer of Brea, and others, occurs in the Letters of Intercommuning issued by Council. Some time previous to the trial of Marion Harv must have accepted the Indulgence. He survived the Revolution

As to the "rock, cod, and boboons" spoken of in her an before the Privy Council, the rock was a distaff, the staff as which the flax is arranged, and from which it is draws spinning; the cod, i.e., the pincushion or pillow; and boboons bobbins, the small pieces of wood with a head on which the tl is wound, in making lace. The phrase is thus equivalent to spin and lace-making.

Marion Harvie leaves her testimony on "Andrew Cunningham, that gave me my doom." The Doomster, or Dempster, was at that time an officer of the Court of Justiciary, whose duty it was to proclaim formally the extreme sentence of the law on the prisoner at the bar. This odious office was usually held by the public executioner.—Ed.]

HE LAST SPEECH AND TESTIMONY of Marion Harvie, who lived at Borrowstounness, and suffered at Edinburgh, the 26th of January 1681.

An Account of her Answers before the Privy Council.

"They asked first, How long is it since ye saw Mr Donald Cargill? I said, I cannot tell particularly when I saw him.

"They said, Did ye see him within these three months? I said, It may be I have.

"They said, Do ye own his Covenant? I said, What Covenant? Then they read it to me; and I said, I did own it.

"They said, Do ye own the Sanquhar Declaration? I answered, Yes.

"They said, Do ye own these to be lawful? I said, Yes; because they are according to the Scriptures and our Covenants, which ye swore yourselves, and my father swore them.

"They said, Yea; but the Covenant does not bind you to deny the king's authority. I said, So long as the king held by the truths of God, which he swore, we were obliged to own him; but when he brake his oath, and robbed Christ of His kingly rights, which do not belong to him, we were bound to disown him and you also.

"They said, Do ye know what ye say? I said, Yes.

"They said, Were ye ever mad? I answered, I have all the wit that ever God gave me. Do you see any mad act in me?

"They said, Where were you born? I answered, In Borrow-

"They asked, What was your occupation there? I told them I served.

- "They said, Did ye serve the woman that gave Mr Donald Cargill quarters? I said, That is a question which I will not answer.
- "They said, Who did ground you in these principles? I answered, Christ, by His word.
- "They said, Did not ministers ground you in these? I answered, When the ministers preached the word, the Spirit of God backed and confirmed it to me.
- "They said, Did ye ever see Mr John Welch [i.e., of Irongray]? I said, Yes; my soul hath been refreshed by hearing him.
- "They asked, If ever I heard Mr Archibald Riddell? I answered, Yes; and I bless the Lord that ever I heard him.
- "They said, Did ever they preach to take up arms against the king? I said, I have heard them preach to defend the Gospel, which we are all sworn to do.
- "They asked, If ever I sware to Mr Donald Cargill's Covenant? I said, No; but we are bound to own it.
- "They said, Did ye ever hear Mr George Johnston? I said, I am not concerned with him. I would not hear him, for he is joined in a confederacy with yourselves.
- "They said, Did ye hear the Excommunication at the Torwood? I said, No; I could not win [i.e., get] to it.
 - "They asked, If I did approve of it? I answered, Yes.
- "They asked, If I approved of the killing the Lord St Andrews? I said, In so far as the Lord raised up instruments to execute His just judgments upon him, I have nothing to say against it; for he was a perjured wretch and a betrayer of the Kirk of Scotland.
- "Then they asked, What age I was of? I answered, I cannot tell.
- "They said among themselves that I would be about twenty years of age, and began to regret my case, and said, Would I cast away myself so? I answered, I love my life, as well as any of you do; but would not redeem it upon sinful terms; for Christ says, 'He that seeks to save his life, shall lose it.'
- "They said, A rock, the cod and boboons, were as fit for me to meddle with as these things. Then one of them asked when the assize should sit? and some other of them answered, on Monday.
 - "Then they asked, If I could write? I answered, Yes.
- "Will you subscribe, said they, what you have said? I answered, No. They bade the clerk set down that I could write, but refused to subscribe.

- "Then they asked, If I desired to converse with any of our minis-? I said, What ministers?
- "They said, Mr Riddell. I said, What would ye have me to do a him?
- "They said, He might convince you of that sin. I said, What - "They said, The sin of rebellion. I smiled, and said, If I were free of all sin as the sin of rebellion, I should be an innocent sture.
- "They asked, If they should bring Mr Riddell to me. I said, It s an evidence he was not right, since they had him so much at ir will. And I told them, I would have none of their ministers. is is all I can remember at this present."

ARION HARVIE'S DISCOURSE before the Justiciary Court:

"FIRST, I was brought and set in the pannel [i.e., at the bar], with the murderers, and they read over my indictment, and asked me, If I did confess with these things? I answered, Yes.

"Then they read the Sanquhar Declaration, and ted, If I owned it? I answered, Yes.

"They read that paper which they call the New Covenant, and ted, If I owned it? I answered, Yes.

"Then I protested they had nothing to say against me, as to litter of fact; but only because I owned Christ and His truth, and recuted Gospel and members, 'of which [I said] ye have hanged me, others you have beheaded and quartered quick '[i.e., alive, as ackston of Rathillet]. To that they replied nothing; but called assizers, [i.e., jurymen], who had no will to appear, till they were out to fine them, and then they came forward.

"One of them said, he did not desire to be one of the assize, but by would have him. He bade them read our confession; for he new not what they had to say against us. They bade him hold up hand, and swear that he would be true, and he could not, but fell trembling.

"The Advocate bade the assizers look if I had anything to say against them. I said I knew none of them but what were all b butchers together. And when the assize were set in a plathemselves, I said to them, 'Now, beware what ye are doing they have nothing to say against me, but only for owning Christ and His persecuted truths; for ye will get my blood your heads.' So that man that fell on trembling before, desired to read my confession to him, and they read it.

"And after that the Advocate had a discourse to them, and 'Ye know these women are guilty of treason.' The assize 'They are not guilty of matters of fact.' He said, 'But treas fact,' and taking [i.e., correcting] himself again, he said, 'It is to is but treason in their judgment; but go on according to our law if ye will not do it, I will proceed.' And when they had rea confession, they had set down that I had said, The minister taught me these principles. I said, 'That is a lie, and it is like rest of your lies;' so I said, that it was Christ by His Word taught me. They answered nothing to that, but said, Would I the rest of my confession? I answered, Yes.

"The Advocate said, 'We do not desire to take their lives we have dealt with them many ways, and sent ministers to deal them, and we cannot prevail with them.' I said, 'We are not cerned with you and your ministers.'

"The Advocate said, 'It is not for religion, that we are pur you; but for treason.' I answered, 'It is for religion that ye are suing me; for I am of the same religion that ye are all sworn of; but ye are all gone blind. I am a true Presbyterian in my ment.'

"So they put the assize into a room by themselves, and ren me without the guard into another room; then they read the till Friday at twelve of the clock. And I charged them befor tribunal of God, as they should answer there; for, said I, 'ye nothing to say to me, but for my owning the persecuted Gospel

"CHRISTIAN FRIENDS AND ACQUAINTANCES, I being to lay down my life on Wednesday next, January 26, 1681, I thought fit to let it be known to the world wherefore I lay down my life, and to let it be seen that I die not as a fool or as an evil-doer, or as a busy-body in other men's matters; no, it is for adhering to the truths of Jesus Christ, and avowing Him to be King in Zion, and head of His Church; and the testimony against the ungodly laws of men; and their robbing Christ of His rights, and usurping His prerogative royal, which I durst not but testify against; and I bless His holy name, that ever He called me to bear witness against the sins of the times, and the defections of upsitten [i.e., callous] ministers and professors.

- "I. I adhere to the holy and sweet Scriptures of God, which have been my rule in all I have done, in which my soul has been refreshed.
- "2. I adhere to the Confession of Faith, because agreeable to the Scriptures.
 - "3. I adhere to the Larger and Shorter Catechisms.
- "4. I adhere to the Covenants, National and Solemn League, and the work of Reformation.
- "5. I adhere to all the faithful testimonies which have been left by our faithful ministers of Jesus Christ, either on scaffolds or fields.
 - "6. I adhere to the papers found at the Queensferry, on Henry Hall.
- "7. I adhere to the Declaration at Sanquhar, and the testimony at Rutherglen, and the papers found on worthy Mr Richard Cameron.
 - "8. I adhere to the Excommunication at the Torwood.
- "9. I adhere to the excommunication of the bishops and their underlings [The bishops were deposed and excommunicated by the General Assembly, at Glasgow, session 20, December 13, 1638.— Eb.]; and I die in the faith of it, that the Lord hath ratified that in heaven, which His faithful servants have done on earth, as to the casting out these traitors to God out of the Church.

"And now I desire to bless the Lord for my lot. My lot is fallen to me in pleasant places, and I have a goodly heritage.

"I leave my blood upon the traitor that sits upon the throne; then on James, Duke of York, who was sitting in the Council when I was examined the first day. And I leave my blood on the bloody crew that call themselves rulers. And I leave it on James Henderson in the North Ferry, who was the Judas that sold Archibald Stewart and Mr Skene, and me, to the bloody soldiers for so much money. I leave my blood on Sergeant Warrock, who took me, and brought me to prison. I leave my blood on the Criminal Lords, as they call themselves, and especially that excommunicate tyrant George Mackenzie, the Advocate, and the fifteen assizers, and on Andrew Cunningham that gave me my doom; and on that excommunicate traitor Thomas Dalziel, who was porter that day that I was first before them, and threatened me with the Boots.*

"I give my testimony against the burning of the Covenants, which were solemnly sworn by the three nations with uplifted hands to the great God of heaven and earth. I leave my testimony against all the bloodshed and massacres of the Lord's people, either on scaffolds or in the fields. I protest against banishings and finings, and cruel murderings, especially the inhuman murder of worthy David Hackston. I leave my testimony against the paying of the cess, employed for the bearing down the preaching of the Gospel, and the taking and killing the poor followers of Jesus Christ. I leave my testimony against the professors that say this is not the truth of God for which I suffer, and call the way of God delusion.

"I leave my testimony against Mr Archibald Riddell, who became servant to the bloody lords, and made it his work to make me deny Christ, and betake myself to the ungodly laws of men, and to call the truths of God delusions, which I am to seal with my blood; and I rejoice that ever He counted me worthy so to do. Oh! I may say, What am I, or what is my father's house, that He should have called me out to seal His truths with my blood?—which truths, both ministers and professors have counted prudence to disown and deny; for which the land will be made to mourn, and sorely to smart ere all be done. I leave my testimony against Mr John Blair, that said I had no more grace than his staff had, and was witness to my sentence that day I got it; and his wife, that said I had no more grace nor [i.e., than] her old shoes, as if grace were not free, and as though ist had not enough to give me. I leave my testimony against n ministers and professors that have joined themselves in any of se courses of defection with the enemies, and are fast in their sps.

^{*} Understand this paragraph with the caution, given page 95.

"I leave my testimony against Popery, Prelacy, Quakerism, and lulgency, and desire to mourn for it that ever I joined with them in ring them, or any of those that connive at them. I leave my testiny against all Jesuitical principles, although our professors say that I here to them; I deny it; and I take God to be my witness that I te all opinions that are contrary to the sound truths of God. ce ever God called me to follow His persecuted Gospel, it was still desire to stick close by Him, and the rule He has set down for poor mers to walk by; and it was always my rejoicing to serve Him, d to act and do for His truth, and to vindicate it. And many sore heart I have had with them, in vindicating His truths, when by have been denying them, and casting dirt in the faces of faithful messes of Jesus Christ; and I desire all these that are endeavouring contend for Christ and His truths, that they would be faithful in ir witnessing for Him, and eschew the least appearance of sin. r I, a dying witness of Christ, obtest you, as you will answer when stand before Him in the day of your appearance, that ye be thful in owning Him in all His truths, and not yield a hoof to se ungodly, perjured, bloody and excommunicate traitors and ants; for there is much advantage to be had in faithfulness for rist, and that I may set to my seal to the truth of. And I think rist is taking a narrow [i.e., close] view of His followers at this e; for there are few that yield a hairbreadth of the truths of God t readily win [i.e., get] to their feet again, but go from one degree lefection to another.

"And again, I desire to bless and magnify the Lord for my lot, and say, He hath brought me to the wilderness to allure me there, and ak comfortably to my soul. It was but little of Him I knew when me to prison; but now He has said to me, because He lives, all live also; and He has told me, 'I am He, that hath blotted thine iniquity for my own name's sake.' Kind has He been to since He brought me out to witness for Him. I have never the anything from Him that was for His glory, since I came to on, but He granted me my desire. For the most part, I have all Him in everything that hath come in my way, ordering it neels for His own glory. And now I bless Him that thoughts of death are not terrible to me. He hath made me as willing to down my life for Him as ever I was willing to live in the world.

"And now, ye that are His witnesses, be not afraid to adverupon the cross of Christ, for His yoke is easy and His burde light. For many times I have been made to think strange makes folk cast at [i.e., object to] the cross of Christ, that has so light to me that I found no burden of it at all; He bore and it both. Now, let not the frowns of men and their flatt put you from your duty. Keep up your societies and the asseml of yourselves together, for there is much profit to be found i Many times hath it been found comfortable to me to hear of the in Scotland in which Christ was delighting; and that there was n love to God's glory and zeal for His honour amongst them.

"Now, be humble and lie in the dust, and never give over ci in behalf of the Church, which is so small that it can scarcel discerned, and never give over till He appear, for I think He is Oh! watch, and double your diligence, and hold fast at hand. He come, and let none take your crown, for He is good to the If I were to live again, I would let that perj that seeks Him. crew see that I should be more guilty of that which they call rebel in serving my lovely King, and in acting and doing for Him and glory, if He called me to it; and it is my grief that I have not 1 more faithful for my master Christ. All His dealings with me been in love and in mercy. His corrections have been all in and free grace. Oh! free love! Oh! I am oft made to wo what it was that made Him take a blasphemer to witness for I and His truths. I may say, I am a brand plucked out of the I am a limb of the devil plucked out from his fireside. Oh!] made to wonder and admire at His condescending love.

"Now I leave my testimony against Jean Forrest, for saying I was going to the grave with a lie in my right hand, and char my blood on my own head. Oh! my friends, come out from an them, and touch not the unclean thing. It will never be well there be a separation from sin. I bless the Lord that ever I h Mr Cargill, that faithful servant of Jesus Christ; I bless the I that ever I heard Mr Richard Cameron; my soul has been refre with the hearing of him, particularly at a communion in Carrick those words in Psalm lxxxv. ver. 8: 'The Lord will speak peac His saints and people, but let them not return to folly.'

"Now, I leave my testimony against all the backsliding minis ch I am to lay down my life for at this time, but now they are ned in a combination against God, and for the most part are all at enemies' will; for when I got my sentence, the bloody traitors mised to bring any of our own ministers to us, when before them; I so this gives me ground to say, they are become their servants. When I saw some of them there, and they offering us any of the it, it gives me ground to set it down with a sore heart.

"Now, what shall I say? I have sinned against Him, and I am ilty of the defections, for which my carcase must lie in the wilderss, and not see the King come home to His habitation. But oh! Imm content, and heartily content, that He gives me my soul for a ey; and well is me for it; I think myself not behind. Oh! my ve; Oh! my love; Oh! my love; my altogether lovely Christ!

"The common report through the country is, that I might have d my life on very easy terms; but I could have it on no easier ms than the denying of my Lord and Master, Christ. First, they ked, if I would retract my former confession, and particularised the papers I had owned before, and if I would not call Charles tart a usurper and the devil's vicegerent. I told them I would t go back in anything, 'for ye have nothing,' said I, 'to lay to but for the avowing Christ to be King in Zion, and head of His n Church.' And they said, they did not usurp Christ's crown. t I said they were blinded and did not see. They said there were ta few of us for these principles. I said they had all the wyte hame] of it, and it was most bitter to us, that our ministers had ken against these truths.

"And, indeed, I think they had not been so cruel to me, were not these ministers. And so I think our ministers are not of our blood; for when they spake against us and the way, it dened these bloody traitors, and emboldened them to take our I leave my testimony against them, for they have caused many things to err from the way of God, and many have made ministers ir rule, and so the blind have led the blind, and both have fallen the ditch together. And some think and say: 'Oh! can we to many godly ministers? We dow not [i.e., cannot bring ourses to] quit them.' But I assure you ye shall get a share of the th and stroke which God hath prepared for these backsliders and rayers of their trust. Oh! I wonder what is the reason that men count it their wisdom to deny God, who has been so kind to them, and who have many a day delighted to commend His love to me, with the hazard of their lives; for which I shall be a witness against them.

"Now, I have no more to say: be faithful unto death, or else, woe! woe! woe! to you that are owning Him at this day, if ye do not own Him in all His offices, as King, Priest, and Prophet. Oh! my dear love! well is me that ever He let me know that His love was better than life. Woe to that creature that will not love my lovely Lord Jesus Christ.

"Now, farewell holy and sweet Scriptures, which were aye my comfort in the midst of all my difficulties. Farewell faith, farewell hope, farewell wanderers, who have been comfortable to my soul, in the hearing them commend Christ's love. Farewell brethren, farewell sisters; farewell Christian acquaintances; farewell sun, moon, and stars! And now, welcome my lovely and heartsome Christ Jesus, into whose hands I commit my spirit throughout all eternity. I may say—'Few and evil have the days of the years of my pilgrimage been,' I being about twenty years of age.

"From the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, the women-house on the east side of the prison, Jan. 11th, 1681.

"MARION HARVIE."

sex (which heightens the discovery how brutally furious and mad these persecutors were), was so singularly assisted of the Lord in His cause, and had such discoveries of His special love to her soul, that she was nothing terrified by her adversaries when she was brought from the tolbooth to the Council-house to be carried to her execution. As she came out of the tolbooth door, several friends attending her, she was observed to say, with a surprising cheerfulness and air of heavenly ravishment: "Behold, I hear my Beloved saying unto me, Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away."

And being brought to the Council, Bishop Paterson being resolved, seeing he could not destroy her soul, yet to grieve and vex it, said, "Marion, you said you would never hear a curate, now you shall be forced to hear one;" upon which he ordered one of his suffragans, whom he had prepared for the purpose, to pray. So soon as he began, she said to her fellow-prisoner, Isabel Alison: "Come, Isabel, let us sing the twenty-third Psalm," which accordingly they did—repeating the Psalm, line by line, without book—which ded the voice of the curate, and extremely confounded the pers.

ng come to the scaffold, after singing the eighty-fourth Psalm iding the third of Malachi, she said: "I am come here to-day wing Christ to be head of His church and King in Zion. Oh! Iim, sirs; seek Him and ye shall find Him. I sought Him ind Him; I held Him and would not let Him go."

en she briefly narrated the manner how she was taken, and ulated in short the heads of her written testimony, saying to ect—was going out of Edinburgh to hear the persecuted Gospel in ds; was taken by the way with soldiers, and brought in to the afterwards I was brought to the Council, and they questioned I knew Mr Donald Cargill, or if I heard him preach. I ed, I bless the Lord I heard him, and my soul was refreshed earing him, for he is a faithful minister of Jesus Christ.

hey asked, if I adhered to the papers gotten at the Ferry. I did own them, and all the rest of Christ's truths. If I would enied any of them, my life was in my offer; but I durst not do not for my soul. Ere I wanted an hour of His presence, rather die ten deaths. I durst not speak against them lest I have sinned against God.

adhere to the Bible and Confession of Faith, Catechisms and ints, which are according to this Bible (whereupon she clapped ids upon the Bible).

also adhere to the testimonies given by the faithful witnesses st, that have gone before us on scaffolds and in the fields.

leave my testimony against all Quakers, Jesuits, Indulgences, I profane and ungodly persons, and mainly all covenants, and persecutors of His way and truths, which I am here to the my blood; against all payers of cess, and bonders, and all oppression or murdering. They say I would murder; but re I am free of all matters of fact. I could never take the a chicken but my heart shrinked. But it is only for my nt of things I am brought here.

leave my blood on the Council and the Duke of York." At soldiers interrupted her and would not allow her to speak But she cried out: "I leave my blood on all ungodly and proetches."

The most of her discourse was of God's love to her, and the commendation of free grace; and she declared she had much of the Lord's presence in prison, and said: "I bless the Lord the snare is broken and we are escaped."

And when she came to the ladder foot she prayed; and going up the ladder, she said: "Oh! my fair one, my lovely one, come away;" and sitting down on the ladder she said: "I am not come here for murder, for they have no matter of fact to charge me with, but only my judgment. I am about twenty years of age. At fourteen or fifteen I was a hearer of the curates and indulged; and while I was a hearer of these I was a blasphemer and Sabbath-breaker; and a chapter of the Bible was a burden to me; but since I heard this persecuted Gospel I durst not blaspheme, nor break the Sabbath, and the Bible became my delight." With this the major called to the hangman to cast her over; and the murderer presently choked her.

[Wodrow adds: "I am informed they were executed with some three or four wicked women, guilty of murdering their own children, and other villanies, which was very grievous to these two. One of the Episcopal ministers of the town, who waited upon the others on the scaffold, railed bitterly upon these sufferers, and assured them they were in the road to damnation; while he, without any evidence of penitence, was sending the other wicked wretches straight to heaven. However, Isabel Alison and Marion Harvie were not commoved, but sang some suitable Psalms on the scaffold, and prayed, and died with much composure and joy."—ED.]

William Gouger, Christopher Miller, and Robert Sangster.

Sangster is described as a Stirlingshire man; and Christopher Miller a weaver in Gargunnock, a village six miles to the west of Stirling. Miller was tried March 2d, 1681, on the charge of treason. He confessed that he had been at Bothwell Bridge, and that he might lawfully rise in arms against the king for the Covenant. He declared he could not write. He was found guilty, and sentenced to be hanged on the 11th inst. Gouger and Sangster were tried March 8th, on the same charge as Miller. Their confessions were similar. Both were condemned to die on the 11th of March. As will be seen from the statement by the compilers of the "Cloud," at the close of the joint testimony, the soldiers showed great cruelty to Gouger on his attempting to speak to the people. He was hanged immediately, without giving him time to pray.—Ed.]

HE JOINT TESTIMONY of WILLIAM GOUGER, CHRISTOPHER MILLER, and ROBERT SANGSTER, who lived in the Shire of Stirling, and suffered at the Grassmarket of Edinburgh, March 11th, 1681. Directed to the Shire of Stirling.

"The Lord, in His holy providence, having singled us out of that shire to seal His controverted truths with our blood, we could not but leave a line behind us (we being Stirlingshire men), to let you know wherefore we are come here this day, to this place of execution; that it is for adhering to that which ministers and professors are disowning. And the Lord seeing it fit to honour us beyond others, now in this day of defection and backdrawing from the truth, we tell you that it is truth we are to suffer for. Although ye condemn us in it, and say that we have a hand in our own death, yet we durst not, for our souls, do otherwise, or else we would have been sure of the broad curse of God on us and our lives both. You may think that it is a novelty of our own head, that we are brought hither for; but if any of you had that love to the Lord that you seemed to have once-a-day, you would count it your duty, as well as ours, to contend for the sweet truths of God, when you see Him so wronged, and His rights so usurped and taken from Him; who was both sweet and kind to poor things at hill-sides, and especially among you of that shire.

"Oh sirs! you may take shame to you, for all that you have done

against the honour of God; that have seen His goings so stately among the meetings of His people; that will not contend for lovely Christ. Oh! do ye not think that a sad day will come on you for joining with God's enemies, who have broken Covenant with Him, and shed the blood of the saints, and trampled on the honour of God? And ye will not fear to join with them for all the blood they have shed; you will still go on with them; and, though you profess that you have love to the Son of God, and that your zeal for the Lord God of Hosts is not abated, yet you will go on with them, and bond and comply in paying of cess and militia money, to maintain a party against God and His work, which once in a day you were forward to maintain, and would have ventured your life in the maintaining of it against all the Lord's enemies. You may justly take shame to yourselves, for your preferring the things of time to the sweet cross of lovely Christ. Oh sirs! what think ye will your doom be, that have done so much against the honour of a holy God? Indeed you may look out for wrath, and that of the saddest sort.

"Now, as dying men, we tell you that there are sad days abiding you, for what you have done to the honour and glory of God, if ye get not speedy repentance. Therefore, as you would answer in the great day, make conscience of what ye do. Remember that you will count and reckon for all that you have done, and will be reckoned as guilty of the blood of the saints—as the worst enemies amongst them all. Therefore, as dying men, we charge you take with [i.e., acknowledge] guilt, or else it will be worse for you.

"Oh sirs! fear the Lord's wrath, and fall to and mourn for what you have done. Oh! cry mightily for repentance, or else you will get Judas's reward; for you are the persons that have betrayed the Son of God, and expelled Him out of your coasts. You were thinking that He was like to prove a costly Christ, and therefore you of that shire would give consent to banish Him away from among you. You would not hear tell of a field preaching for fear of hazard!

"Oh sirs! take it to consideration, and lay to heart what a hand you have in banishing Christ and the Gospel out of Scotland; and we are sure, it was not your parts to have done so. No, no! it was not your part to have given lovely Christ such an affront; the sweet days that you have had long since, might have made you give Royal Jesus better quarters, though you should go to the gibbet for it, and lose your gear. For, your doing as you have done, is a denying of Him before men.

"Take it as ye will, we must tell you, as in the sight of the living God, before whom we are now to appear, and get our sentence for all that we have done, you are the only shire that has denied lovely Christ quarters; for He sent an offer to you to the Torwood, and ye would not hear it. Well, it is likely there are many of you that will never get another; there are some of you that would not go to hear, but forbade others to go, and thought it was duty not to go; and some of you were at that preaching, and made a bad use of it. Oh remember, sirs! you have rejected Christ. We tell you it as dying men, you will count for it ere it be long; for our Lord did not send the Gospel to the Torwood for naught, but it will accomplish that for which it was sent.

"Oh sirs! be afraid and tremble, for judgment is at the door; and indeed your sentence will be sore to bide [i.e., endure]—it will be more tolerable for open enemies in the day of judgment, than for you. We are afraid when we think what judgments will be on you shortly; for, considering what pains have been taken on you of that shire, and how tender the Lord has been of you, in training you up for suffering; and has given you trials, and you have endured them; and He has taken them off again, and given you sorer trials, and He has delivered you out of these; it had been better for you that you had been at that preaching, though you should have gotten the gallows the very next day, than to have done what ye did; and that you will find ere it be long.

"Oh! what of His kindness have you met with at such places! You dare not say, that He has been a barren wilderness or a land of drought to you. Testify against Him, if He was not kind to you; so long as ye abode by Him, He abode by you; and He was tender of you, so long as ye kept faithful to Him; but after ye turned into the enemies' camp, then He turned to be your enemy, and fought against you; and in all that you do, God will be seen to be against you. You may thrive in the world, but it will be a dear thriving to you; you will get the wrath of God with it. But ye have done with thriving in the worship of God; indeed, there are many of you that hold your life no more of God. Remember, we tell you of it, who are within a few hours to eternity.

"Now, it is like, you will not notice what the like of us say, but will allege that we are dying as fools, and have no Presbyterian principles, but notions; but we say the contrary. We say, we are not fools as to that, however the world may think and look on us as such. We say, we have Presbyterian principles, and are Presbyte in our judgments, and will make it appear, that we die as Chris and as those that own the truths of God, and are standing to ministers once taught us; although this day they are turned to contrary, and condemning us, and saying, that we have nothin notions of our own heads, that make us do such things. But the not find it so in the Day of Accounts.

"1. You may say, that it is not a Presbyterian principle to off magistrates.

"We grant with you; but where are the magistrates? In they were once placed such; but they cast out themselves, they brake the Covenant, and set up a cursed Supremacy, inst over the Lord's inheritance; and when they have done that, we they are no more to be owned as magistrates by Presbyterians to be cast off, and witnessed against; and when it comes to that of the play, do ye not think, that it was our part to contend for t

"Oh sirs! do ye not believe Jesus Christ to be the et Son of God, and that all things were made for Him, and by whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or pov What is not His; and that by free gift and donation—b eternal decree-intimated to us in the second Psalm, wher more particular manner, He is declared to be King in Zion, all the heathen promised to the enlargement of His kingdom? sirs! do ye not believe, that Scotland became His, with its consent, as the product of that decree, and the fruit of His cession and purchase; and that He allows no authority to be ov and submitted unto in Scotland, but only in so far as they the line of subordination to the Son of God? Or do you be that Scotland should have no other magistrates but such as sl be of God's choosing, men of truth, able men, fearing God, h covetousness; and that the land was bound by Covenant to such, under the pains contained in the law, and danger both of and body, in the day of the Lord's fearful appearance to judgn We believe many a man's wit in that day shall be counted fo ness.

"Then, if this be a ground, we are sure ye must say, that that Charles Stuart was crowned, perjury became national; only fessors as to this point were free. Do ye think we would, wi perjury and treachery to God, own Charles Stuart's authority longer, when he held not his authority of God? But it fest, that in Middleton's Parliament [held at Edinburgh, January , in the Acts asserting the king's majesty to be supreme in suses, civil or ecclesiastical, and denying the obligation of the nn League and Covenant.—ED.] he disclaimed that title to rity, we think we were bound to witness our loyalty to Another, hat we were freely absolved from obedience and fidelity to him and could not own his authority without gross perjury; he ring, 'he would have no homage upon the account of the Cove-Would ye not count him a distracted man that would cleave n on that account, whether he would or not? Yea, and whodo it, we know they will find themselves fools. Do you believe, n the day that Covenant was taken, any within the nation was ound to perform and prosecute it, and that God will [not] punish estroyers of that Covenant? Do ye think that Act explanatory ESupremacy is not a plain renunciation of the word of God, the f nature, the Covenant, and human society, and setting up devilism confusion, without a full, free, and direct public testimony to the We are sure, that every public breach of Covenant res public repentance. We think there can none be absolved out this; for in express terms our Lord says, 'Whosoever denies efore men, him will I deny before my Father which is in heaven.' there should not only be a testimony given, but a walking acng to it afterwards.

Oh sirs! would you have none to witness against the abominaof this day? Indeed you are all mistaken, for our Lord will vant witnesses to witness for Him, however few and feckless seeble] they be; yet He will make the things that are not con-I the things that are. Oh sirs! think you it not a sin, to join them who have rejected the living God, and will not have Him ign over them? Do ye not think it duty to protest against , that are trampling our Lord's glory under foot? Oh sirs! e not think yourselves guilty of breach of Covenant, that have ved at these men, that have their hands reeking in the blood e saints, when you are strengthening their hands in the doing We think you guiltier nor [i.e., than] these wretches; beyou join with them in sin, whereas you should have protested st them in the committing of such acts. We wot [i.e., know] if ye read the Bible, ye will count yourselves as guilty as they nd the guiltiest of the two; for it was your part to have coned for the truth, and stood in defence thereof, unto the losing of lives and liberties, and all that you had. The Lord has cast them off, and yet you will do what in you lies to hold them up, who shed the blood of those who were once in a day your dear brethren!

"It may be, you will say, that Samuel knew that Saul was rejected of God, and yet he did not cast him off. We answer, he did what lay in his power to get him cast off; for he went and anointed David in his stead, and durst not do it publicly, but secretly, for fear of Saul; neither did Samuel converse much with Saul after that.

"Next, you say, That David's heart smote him, for taking and cutting off the lap of Saul's garment, and said, that he would not stir [i.e., hurt] the Lord's anointed. Now, we say, he had two reasons, which we have not. First, he had that reason, that he was the Lord's anointed. Secondly, it was his own particular quarrel; because he was to reign in his stead. So we say, that Charles Stuart is not the Lord's anointed, neither is it our particular quarrel, but in defence of the Gospel, and in so far as he is an enemy to God and the way of salvation; which is sufficient ground to cast any person out of the Church, and witness against him, in the defence of the Gospel, unto the losing of life and liberty, and all other things.

"And, believe us as ye will, we do not think them Christians, that will not contend for lovely Christ and His sweet truths, in witnessing against this bloody excommunicate traitor, and not owning them as rulers; seeing they have disowned the just and holy One, and are trampling on His sweet truths, and would never have them to rise again, but would have the stone sealed, that there might be no more mention made of the honour of God.

"And you have a deep hand in this, because ye are not faithful and free in witnessing for His despised glory. And if ye will not do it, delivery to the Church shall come from another airt [i.e., quarter], and you shall all be destroyed; for He will be up again in spite of all your hearts; and He will make your fears and theirs both come on you, for He will make inquisition for all His truths; and when He comes indeed, we would not abide the reproof that you, the professors of Stirlingshire, will get, for all the gold in Europe. There will be no excuse heard then; your wife and children, or lands, will be no excuse; for He hath told us in express terms, that who-soever will not forsake all, and follow Him, cannot be His disciple. Wife and children, houses and lands, must all go for Him. And you must take up His cross daily, and wander through at His back; it be, hard bestead, with a borrowed bed, and a borrowed fireside, ive upon providence. We wot [i.e., know] well, there are some ou that can say, to your sweet experience, that you never lived r than on God's providence; although now you have rejected and ten yourselves to the world. Have you done so? Well, you may sing; but ere long you will rue it. Remember we told you it, we were going into eternity, that you would meet with much and sorrow, for what you have done against the honour of God, I repent not.

2. You say, It is not a Presbyterian principle to own that that is jeoparding their lives for the honour of God, and ssing for His despised truths, that this day is so abused, and named by you and others.

But we say, It is; and maintain it to be a Presbyterian principle, vn that despised party; for they are the party that are only ning the glory and honour of God, and have no other view e them but His sweet truths, which are dear to them; and will quit with life and liberty, before they quit with an hoof uth, which has been made out by their valiant sufferings. but truth has been sweet and dear to them! They have not ed their lives dear unto them, on the account of it. fully gone to the scaffold for truth, and have been honourably ed through, and the Lord's presence seen in their through-bearas we hope, shall be made out on us, ere it be long. study to spend their time and strength for God. When all other s have failed them, they study to keep up that mean of reading, 1g, and praying, as the Lord will assist and help them: although ndulged and their comforts have a great envy at them, and do they can to get them off the earth. For they are the main s in taking of that poor party. And all is, because their praccondemn theirs; although they take the Scripture for their rule, study to walk so as they may get God's approbation in the day compts [i.e., accounts].

3. You say, It is not a Presbyterian principle to own these s, that our worthies have set out, or the work that they have , which many of them have sealed with their blood.

But we say that it is a Presbyterian principle; because all that they as agreeable to the Word of God, and our Covenants. For, conthese papers when you please, you will find them consonant to criptures, and just and lawful for Presbyterians to own. And, say the contrary who will, we do not think them Presbyterians, nor yet Covenanters, that will not own them; for there is nothing in them, but what we will with all our hearts seal with our blood as Presbyterians, and as having these principles.

"4. You say, It is not a Presbyterian principle, to confess all these things.

"But we say it is a Presbyterian principle to confess and avouch Him and His truths, before this adulterous generation. when the quarrel is thus stated, we should not put them to prove Stephen made a free confession of his faith, and what is truth. so have all our worthies. And now, seeing we own these things, and they being the controverted truths of the day, and the Lord calling us to own and maintain them, we never thought it our part to smother and hide them, but with courage to avouch them, to the losing of our lives in the quarrel; we seeing our dearest Lord's truths so trampled on, and a pack of you that seemed to be fair before the wind for owning of truth, and witnessing for Him, never so much as putting to your hand to help, but turning your back on truth and the way of God. Indeed, we fear, that ye shall never be honoured to witness for God any more. It is like you care not for that honour. But we tell you that you will rue it, when you will not get it mended. And remember, we tell you here, as dying witnesses for truth, you will meet with as sad a judgment as ever a shire met with, if you repent not; your judgment will be unparallelable for your denying Him before men.

"We are come here this day to witness freely and faithfully against you and all others, for their complying with the enemies against the work of God. And we say, as in the sight of a living God, you will count for it ere it be long. Oh! but we think it a sweet thing to be honoured this day to contend for truth, and to be overcomers by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of our testimony. Indeed, we are called to it, to contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. And we think, if we had not been free and faithful before these bloody wretches, we would have held our life no more of God, if we did not speak for His truths before them, when He bade us speak; for He sought a proof of our love to Him, and His nick-named, despised way, and to poor Zion, whom no man is seeking after.

"And think you that we durst hold our tongue and not speak when He bade us? Indeed, our life was not dear to us when His came in question. We might have gone away with our life, and broad curse of God upon it to go with us; if we had denied Him is time, we would have held our lives no more of Him, of whom eld it all our days; and now we might cheerfully lay it down at command and bidding: for this we knew, that devils or men I not stir a hair of our head, without our Lord's determination, therefore we are the less afraid of what they could do.

And now, as dying men, we charge you not to speak of that party, that this day is so reproached and spoken against by a of them that are called ministers and professors. Oh! take to you altogether; and as you will be answerable in the day counts, we tell you not to have a wrong thought of them, for all reproaches that can be said against them; for they are a godly ble, and have much of His mind.

'And if you go on with enemies and others that have turned backs on the way of God, go your ways; but it were better a millstone were hanged about your neck, and ye cast into the it of the sea, than that ye should speak at such a rate as ye do; et you and others reproach as ye will, they design nothing but nonour of God, and have the Scripture to be their rule, and walk ecomes the Gospel; and they study a holy carriage.

Although there be many among them that have an unsuitable age, by reason of whom the way of God is evil spoken of; yet way of God is not an hair the worse to be liked. It may be is a Judas among the twelve; and what of that? We say rest are not to be cast at [i.e., objected to] for all that, seeing keep the truth. We know there are many of you who say that lo not keep by the Scriptures. But we declare the contrary, for all our heart we set to our seal and testimony to the holy Scripi, which have been sweet to us; and our testimony to the National Solemn League and Covenant, and to the Confession of Faith, greeable to the word of God; and to the Catechisms, Larger and ter, and to all that our worthies have done in the defence of the pel. We join our hearty testimony to all their appearances in the s, both first and last.

'And we protest against all the actings of the enemies against the l's people in all their proceedings, both first and last, and everythat they have done against our worthies, when they were in nce of the Gospel; and we abhor and testify against Popery, acy, Quakerism, Erastianism, Indulgency, and all the connivers with them, be who they will; and against Jesuitish principles, which you say we hold, which sect we most basely abhor, and give our testimony against all such erroneous sects and principles. We give our testimony against all you that say we have such principles, and that we have got new principles and new light. But we do say the contrary; and declare that we do hold by these principles which ministers did teach both you and us to stand to in the defence of, until we had lost our lives and all in that quarrel.

"Now, you that say such things of us, we exhort you to repent, or else you will meet with a sore day of wrath; for it is not a light thing to speak of sufferers, as you do. Therefore, we obtest you in the bowels of Jesus Christ, to be sober in your speeches against that party, and make a right choice, and fairly side yourselves, and come out from among the tents of the wicked, and be separated from among them, and join yourselves to the poor suffering remnant, and Do not think that be not at ease now in the day of Zion's trouble. you will enjoy your ceiled houses, and your warm firesides, in such If you be single for God, He will have you out from a day as this. all these things, and denied to them all; for woe to him that is at ease when Zion is in trouble, and is not concerned in all the afflictions of Joseph! You must either now get a wakening, or else you will get a wakening when the wrath of an angry God comes on the land for sin-

"Indeed, sirs, we think that religion has not cost you much heart We think you have not been at much pains in seeking of God, for as fair a show as ye seem to have. Indeed, when the Gospel was in its purity, and many seeking to preachings, the Lord seemed to be kind to you, and you seemed to have much love to Him and His despised way, and you seemed as if you would have ventured your life in the defence of the Gospel. But when we would have looked through you at preachings, and going to them, and in coming from them, it would have made some of us a sore heart to see your unconcernedness and unsuitable carriage, even among you that seemed to be the heads of them. And when we would have been in some of your companies, either coming or going, your talk did aye [i.e., Oh! repent and always] smell of the world, and so is come of it. come out from among your lusts and idols that you are so wedded to, and take hold of a Mediator and seek the Lord with all your heart.

"Oh! you town of Stirling and the shire, repent; for sentence is passed against you for what you have done, although it be not put in execution yet. But it will be put in execution ere long, if you repent hough the Lord is seeing it fit to take us away from the evils are coming on this land, for breach of Covenant and a slighted el. We tell you, it may be you will find it when we are gone; setter to endure all the torments that devils and men can inflict u here, than to endure one drop of the wrath of an angry God, that e poured out without mixture on all ranks that have not the work eday upon their spirits, be who they will, ministers or professors, ged or not indulged; for, if they be not taken up and concerned the case of the Church of God this day, as it is stated, He will and reckon with them all, and count them all turners aside, vill lead them forth with the workers of iniquity, when peace be on Israel. Therefore, we would desire you to have a care, ook well about you what you are doing, and beware of speaking st that party.

There are some of you that say, they are of bloody principles. should beware of speaking these things, for the contrary is known they are not murderers, nor have any such intentions, as some of elves know, although you be speaking the contrary; for you heard of their killing any, except it was in the defence of the el, and their own defence.

Likewise you say that we are cursers and criers for vengeance le land. Now we must not stay to argue this out, we being this o lay down our lives; but we think any that has tender love to on of God, and His cause, cannot but be grieved to see ministers professors so avowedly betray the truth that is sweet and dear to ea, dearer than our lives. And, when we think on what you have to the sweet truths of God, we cannot but pray against your ses. As for anything ye can do to us, we heartily forgive you. the wrongs you have done to a holy God, we cannot get them e, for they are weighty to us. If it were our enemies, we would with it; but when it comes from the like of you, we cannot get rne.

Truly, sirs, we think ye will embrace Popery ere it be long. entertaining of that excommunicate Duke of York, a professed st, says that you would do more yet. There was not one of all in town or shire that moved your tongue against him; but, as u had all been professed Papists, you let him come in among and kindly entertained him. We leave our testimony against so doing.

In the preceding month—the beginning of February 1681—the Duke of York visited Linlithgow and Stirling, and was "entert in the best manner the country could afford."—ED.]

"But we break off, having no more time; and request you to these things to your consideration, and lay sin to heart, and n bitterly before the Lord for what you have done. We here o you to come off these ways of yours, and make conscience of as in the sight of a holy God, before whom ye must shortly ap Slight not time, for it is precious. Wrath is at the door. Oh! haste, and lay these things to heart, and study to have a more to respect to the honour of God. We desire to leave it on you when we are going into eternity, that you would mind your en ments and vows to God. And so we bid you farewell, and bid mind the poor groaning Kirk that we are to leave behind us, v was dear to us.

"Now we bid farewell to poor desolate Zion, and pray the may mind her case. Farewell all things in time, and well Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

"Subscribed at the Iron House, a little before we went out to scaffold, March 11, 1681.

- "WILLIAM GOUGER.
- "CHRISTOPHER MILLER
- "ROBERT SANGSTER."

paper in his Bible, which he minded to throw over the fold; but when he was taken into the Council House the other two, it was someway got by the murderers, who, he read it, commanded the executioner to tie him straighter nor [i.e., 1 ordinary, so that he could scarce go up the ladder; and afterwithey stopped him from praying.

When he was upon the ladder, he began to speak, and said am come here for owning Christ to be head and king in Z Whereupon they caused beat the drums, seeking to damp and asto him, that they might trample upon his conscience; and when offered him his life upon condition he would own the king, he rer "I will own none but Christ to be king in Zion." Then they "Will ye not retract anything, sir?" He answered, "No, no; I all; I adhere to all." Upon which they immediately called to executioner to throw him over, which he did incontinent [i.e., in diately], not allowing him to recommend his spirit to the Lord.

There are extant particular testimonies of these three martyrs; but, because it is doubted that they may not be genuine, but vitiated by John Gib, or some of these that were tainted with his errors, therefore they are here omitted. And moreover, whereas some are suspicious that these three martyrs themselves, or at least the two last, were in some danger from the errors of John Gib, yet in regard that it was not upon any such account they suffered, but for testifying against the Ecclesiastical Supremacy, they ought to be recorded among the rest, as dying witnesses for Jesus Christ.

Laurence Hay.

AURENCE HAY and Andrew Pittilloch, whose testimonies immediately follow, and an Adam Philip, "three country people in Fife," were brought before the Justiciary Court, July 11th, 1681. The three were members of a society in Fife for prayer and pious conference. The society had, in the preceding month of June, agreed to a paper entitled "a Testimony against the Evils of the Times." This paper, which seems to have testified against the king as false to his Covenant engagements, was produced at their trial, and is referred to in their testimonies. They were found guilty of treason, and sentenced to be hanged at the Grassmarket upon the 13th July, and "their heads to be severed from their body and affixed to the tolbooth of Cupar." Wodrow, valuable as his history otherwise is had no liking to Cargill and his followers. Hence he says, "their paper is very wild, and seems to smell of Gib and his delusions." It will be seen, however, that both Hay and Pittilloch expressly condemn the principles of Gib. Crookshanks justly says their testimonies "breathe a spirit of true piety."---ED.]

HE DYING TESTIMONY of Laurence Hay, Weaver, who lived in Fife, and suffered at Edinburgh, July 13, 1681.

"MEN AND BRETHREN,—Having by serious consideration, joined in giving a testimony against the enemies of God, and all that have joined with them in anything which has tended to the overthrow of the work of Reformation; for which I am come in your sight to lay down this life of mine, which I engaged to do in that testimony, through His strength, if He called me to it; because it was according to the word of God and the Covenanted Reformation; and seeing I engaged in the strength of the Lord to seal it with my blood (and now He in His holy and wise providence has put me to seal it; although I be the fecklessest [i.e., feeblest], and unworthiest of all that society), I here in your presence, with all my heart, set to my seal to it with my blood, as was promised at the end of the paper. And if all the hairs of my head were men having lives, I would think them all little enough, to seal the cause of my dearest and sweetest Lord Jesus, who has been sweet and kind to me, in carrying me through every step of the work, which He put in my hand.

"Oh! love Him, sirs! Oh! but He is worth the loving! Oh! but He has been kind to me, since I was apprehended! for He told me then that Satan would cast some in prison, that they might be tried; and He bade me be faithful to the death; and He promised me a crown of life; and He hath helped me since to fulfil the conditions, and hath also given me a right to the promise. And this was all my desire; that the trial of my faith might be found precious to the praise of His sweet name; that His cause might not be wronged, nor His ark get a wrong touch by me: and herein He hath heard my desire, according to that Scripture, 'He will hear the desire of the humble, and the expectation of the poor shall not be lost.' For He keeps covenant with thousands of them that love Him, and keep His commandments; and 'His commandments are not grievous'; but 'His yoke is easy, and His burden light.' And He has said, 'He that forsaketh wife, or children, houses or lands for My name's sake, and the Gospel's, shall receive life an hundredfold, and in the world to come life everlasting;' He that loveth father or mother more than Me, is not worthy herefore, dear friends, give not over to contend for His borne-truths, that this day are in debate betwixt Him and His s in Covenanted Scotland; according to the Scripture, 'Conrnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints.' Oh! contend, d, and give not over; for He will arise for the oppression of or and for the sighings of the needy; for He will have an inity to be about with [i.e., avenged on] all His enemies, and veary with forbearing. Therefore, trust in the Lord; trust in all times; for they that trust in Him shall not be ashamed; sy shall stand in the gate unashamed to speak unto their h! sirs, give Him much credit; for He hath disappointed me fears—in that wherein I feared—appearing before men; and me to stand before them; so that I had no terror, nor amazenore than they had been the meanest of creatures. Although ot say that 'I have fought the good fight,' as that eminent : said, yet I can say, praised be God, He hath given me the through Jesus Christ my Lord, over principalities, and hath led to me, that neither death, nor life, nor any creature shall e me from the love of my sweet Lord Jesus Christ, who is orthy, praise-worthy, worthy to be feared and honoured; who, absolute sovereignty, set apart poor me, to give a testimony glorious and honourable work of reformation, who am less ne least of all saints. But He is an absolute Lord, and mercy to whom He will show mercy, and whom He will He eth: and He keeps the souls of the faithful, and plentifully ; the proud doer.

herefore, I am called to suffer this day, in this place, for the 1g of my duty; and for that in particular, in giving a testimony the dreadful defections of these times, by the means of these ding ministers, who have left our sweet Lord Jesus, with His t the wall, and His poor flock scattered upon the mountains, 1p having no shepherd. But, dear friends, comfort yourselves that in His own time, He will search His sheep and find 1ut; although, alas! I fear lest they shall be sorer scattered 12t they are. But wait on Him; for He that shall come, will 12 and 12 will not tarry. And His reward is with Him, and His work is before Him. And the Lord whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to His temple, even the messenger of the covenant.

"But oh! dear friends, labour to be steadfast and unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. And give all diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if you do these things, you shall never fall. And commit the keeping of your souls to Him in well-doing as unto a faithful Creator; for He is able to keep that which is committed to Him against that day, and to present it spotless before the Father. Although, alas! I was loath to adventure or to credit in His hand; but now He hath discovered to me that He is the best hand that I can venture on, and has gained my consent, and has become the surety for me of a better covenant, well ordered in all things and sure.

"Therefore, considering my engagements unto Him, I leave my testimony to the holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament and the version of the Psalms in metre, and to the work of Reformation, Covenants, National and Solemn League, the Solemn Acknowledgment of Sins and Engagement to Duties, the Causes of God's Wrath, the Confession of Faith, as being conform to the Scriptures, and the Catechisms Larger and Shorter. I give my adherence to all the faithful testimonies given by the worthies, to the maintenance of the work of Reformation, from the year 1660, until this day, either by their appearances in the fields, or on scaffolds, or in the seas. to the Sanquhar Declaration, and the Torwood Excommunication, and the papers found at the Queensferry, and to that joint testimony given in the shire of Fife by that society whereof I was a member (though a worthless one), and I adhere to all things contained therein, because they are according to the Scriptures. And I give my testimony to the faithful preachings in the fields, and to the keeping up of societies and Christian fellowships commanded in the word of God; 'Not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is, and so much the more as you see the day approaching;' especially now when His glory is at the stake, which is of more worth than our souls: and when men are seeking to get His work razed and the name of Israel blotted out, that it may be no more in remembrance.

"Likewise I leave my testimony against all these who have joined with the declared enemies of the Lord Jesus Christ, both ministers and professors; and against all these who maintain any principle contrary to the Word of God; especially these who deny the authority

Scriptures, and all the work of reformation, and have razed the nentals of true Christianity; some of whom the Lord has given strong delusions, to believe lies, and deny Jesus Christ to be n of God, and maintain new lights, in meddling with the deof God, which His word never approved; and against every their principles.

likewise, I leave my testimony against all who brand us with an it faith; which one declared to myself in my hearing, in the below where I was prisoner; which I questioned, if he durst science say, that I lived by an implicit faith, or the example ers. So he said, that there were some in the room with me, ad been murderers of others who had suffered. And I told nat the 15th Psalm reached him a very sad reproof, for speakil against his neighbour; and also I said, 'We speak what know, and testify what we have heard.' And I declared, that seen no such thing of any that was in the room with me; but we wronged, said I, God and His cause, by shifting His cross, erefore you will not stand [i.e., hesitate] to wrong your neigh-and as for our being branded that we hold our principles of men, e dying to please men; I altogether abhor such aspersions, for my principles of none, but of God and His word; and that carries the sway with me is the controverted truths of Jesus, that are this day in debate, betwixt Him and His enemies; ally His kingly office, on which I dare venture life and liberty, y salvation also, because the Father hath declared Him to be in His holy hill of Zion, by an unalterable decree; and there in till all His enemies be brought under His feet. Therefore ave left my testimony against all who cast such aspersions on any other who have suffered in this manner, I leave my blood witness against them, who will adventure to do it, whether es or pretended friends.

Likewise I leave my testimony against the encroachments made the rights of our Lord Jesus Christ and the privileges of His h, by that usurper Charles Stuart, and all the bloody crew him. Likewise I leave my testimony against that excomate traitor, the Duke of Monmouth, for his appearance against ork of God and His people, joined for the defence of the l and interest of Jesus Christ, and all that joined with him. ise, I leave my testimony against that avowed Papist York. Also, I leave my testimony against that designed Parliament to put power in his hand. Also, I leave my testimony against these abominable wretches that sat in these associations, and falsely accused and sentenced me to death; and against these fifteen assizers, who gave me my sentence, and against that wretch called the Clerk, and Andrew Cunningham who gave me my doom.

"Likewise I leave my testimony against all who have joined with the declared enemies, whether ministers or professors, especially in the shire of Fife, who have delivered up the testimony to these abominable wretches; particularly Balgrumma and Vederstar.

"Likewise I leave my testimony against Popery, Prelacy, and that woeful Erastian Supremacy, and Indulgences first and last, which have been the dagger, the helve whereof hath gone in after the blade, and hath wounded the Church in the innermost part of the belly, and the dart that hath stricken her through the liver. Oh! how sharp are the wounds of a friend! They go down to the innermost parts of the belly. If it had been an enemy, I would have borne it. And it is evidently seen, that our mother Church hath been, and is this day, wounded in the house of her friends; for which the Lord will sadly reckon with all such as have done so, if they do not repent and mourn for it.

"Likewise I leave my testimony against all them that are any way instrumental in bearing down our poor mother-church, either by appearance in arms, or furnishing of others for that effect; by paying of cess or militia-money; or any other way homologating the acts, or strengthening the hands, of her declared and avowed enemies.

"Now, dear friends, being straitened for want of time, I am forced to draw to a close; only desiring you to be earnest in contending for the broken-down work of Reformation, that this day is brought very low. But be not discouraged, although His ark be tossed this day upon the waters, and the poor ship in the midst of the sea, and the poor disciples afraid lest they should sink, and the Master asleep, as it were upon a pillow; yet go to Him and cry, Master, Master, save us, else we perish; for He is easy to be entreated, and He likes well to have His poor people coming to Him, in the time of their distress; for He is a present help in time of need, a God rich in mercy, and near to all that call upon Him in truth.

"But, oh dear friends! beware of backdrawing, for He hath said, If any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him. And he that putteth his hand to the plough and looketh back, is not fit for the kingdom of heaven; but he that endureth to the end, the Be not ashamed of Him, for if any man be same shall be saved. ashamed of Him, or His words, of him also will He be ashamed tefore the Father and the holy angels. Oh! dear friends, the more that you see a perverse generation crying Him down, be ye the more at that work of crying Him up; for He is well worth the commendation of all that can commend Him. Oh! dear friends, in all things let Him have the pre-eminence, and count all things loss and dung that ye may win Christ; and press forwards towards the mark, for the prize of the high calling of God that is in Christ Jesus; looking unto Jesus, who is the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before Him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God. Strive to enter in at the strait gate; for many shall seek to enter in, and shall not be able.

"Now, friends, beware of sinning and beware of snares; for they are at this day very thick and many; but our God has promised that He will not suffer His poor people to be tempted above what they are able, but will, with the temptation, make a way that they may escape.

"So I bid you all farewell; desiring you to be kind to my wife and children when I am gone. Farewell sweet Bible, by His blessing. Farewell sun moon and stars; farewell meat and drink; farewell all created comforts and enjoyments, wherewith I have been abundantly supplied. Farewell, my dear wife and children; the Lord be better to you than ten husbands, when I am gone. Farewell mother, brethren and sisters. Farewell sweet societies, and preached Gospel, whereby I have been begotten by the seed of the Word. Farewell sweet prison, and reproaches for sweet Christ, and His cause. And welcome Father, Son, and Holy Ghost! Welcome everlasting life, and the spirits of just men made perfect! Lord, into thy hands I commit my spirit!

"At the Iron-house, July 13, 1681.

"LAURENCE HAY."

Andrew Pittilloch.

HE TESTIMONY of Andrew Pittilloch, Land Labourer in the parish of Largo, in Fife, who suffered at the Grassmarket of Edinburgh, July 13, 1681.

"MEN AND BRETHREN,—Wherefore are you come here this day? Will you tell me, if that be your intention, to be edified by the words of a poor thing, witnessing for my lovely Lord Jesus Christ? And if that be your intention in you coming hither, it is well. Now, when I am going off time, to bid farewell to you all, Oh! that I could commend my lovely Lord Jesus and His sweet cross to you.

"Oh! sirs, will you come, taste and see that the Lord is good." You will never do better, nor [i.e., than] come and see; for since the Lord honoured me to be his prisoner, He has letten me know nothing but love; He has made my prison no prison. Oh! sirs, all His ways are ways of pleasantness, and His paths peace. And His cross is sweet and easy; although worthless, I cannot commend it to you. But oh! sirs, scar [i.e., start] not at the sweet cross of royal and sweet Jesus, but contend for Him and His noble cause, for I can assure you, I had never such a sweet life as I have had since He brought me to the like of this trial. Oh! sweet indictment! Oh! sweet sentence for my lovely Lord! Oh! sweet scaffold for contending for the cause, Covenant, and work of Reformation Oh! sirs, quit all for holy Jesus, for I can promise you, that you will never die better than for contending for King Christ. Indeed, sirs, ministers and professors, as they call them, say that we are dying as fools and giddy-headed professors; but glory to His holy and sweet name, that has made it out to my soul that it is other-And now that my conscience doth not condemn me, how dare any mortal creature condemn me?

"Oh I friends, what is the reason that you will not take Him, who is the chief among ten thousands, who is altogether lovely, and compare? There is no spot in Him. Oh! prefer Him to ief joy! There are many of you who have preferred other o Him. Oh! fear and tremble, for wrath will be upon you ldenly! Oh! be afraid, for our Lord hath said, if ye will all for Him, ye cannot be His disciples; and so you have part nor lot in our sweet Lord. You may read the tenth of v from the 16th verse to the end. Oh! sirs, go not with the d, nor yet side with them; cleave to the Lord with all your nd be not put off with anything but Himself. Oh! He is be with. Oh! His way is sweet to keep; but I cannot id Him to you; His sweetness is without compare. Oh! im, and be restless till ye get Him to your mother's house, he chamber of her that bare you.

ay much for your mother-church, that ministers and others conged; I witness and testify against them for their unrighess, both first and last:

For leaving of their kirks, without a public testimony against, at the incoming of Prelacy.

For their conniving at one another's sins.

For their leaving the fields, when there was so much need of ng to poor things; when wrath and judgment were coming on l, they did not set the trumpet to their mouth, and give the a faithful warning. They say, we have cast them off, but : mistaken, for they have cast themselves off, by changing And the Scriptures have cast them off, and I cannot I would with all my heart have a ministry; but I nave it according to the word of God; men that will preach on and out of season, whether people will hear, or whether I forbear; that will be faithful in preaching against sin of all id will hide nothing of the mind of the Lord; but they do t and loose in the matters of a holy God, and will not witness enemies. I own none of these, but I leave my testimony them for their unfaithfulness. They will preach to poor o stand for God and His truths, and not yield a hair for the of their lives; and yet they yield and comply themselves; en they come before enemies, never a word of testimony hem, but pass the sworn Covenant and Work of Reformation. ce, and, for fear of their lives, will not hit them on the sore. they will wale [i.e., choose] their words, so as they may not ir enemies offence.

"You condemn us because we do that, which once a day you would have accounted your honour to do, and say that we are all distracted, and have distracted notions in our heads! you so? Wilt thou tell me, man, if thou thinkest that a distracted notion, to confess the Covenant and Work of Reformation? But you will say, it is not for that which I lay down my life, but for the subscribing of that paper; and I do think it well worth the sealing with my blood. And will you tell me what could we do less? You ran away and left the work, and the enemies were carrying all before them; and we durst not but leave testimony against them. heart was like to bleed when I saw enemies carry the day, and robbing the Lord of His rights, His crown, and kingdom, and not so much as one to move their tongue against them, and say, that it is ill done that they have done. I leave it to God and your own conscience, whether or not it be duty to contend for truth this day, when it was so much neglected.

"I leave my testimony against you and your hearers, and the joiners with you, ay, and while [i.e., until] they repent. I bid you repent and come off, and witness for the Lord, and if ye will not do it, as sure as God is in heaven, He will be about with [i.e., avenge Himself on] you; escape who will, ye will not escape; for it is like He will begin at the sanctuary. Take warning in time. I leave it on you now, when I am going into eternity; for I am persuaded this is the way to the kingdom of heaven; for the Lord hath confirmed it to my soul, and hath made my life a sweet life to me. Oh! read the 41st of Isaiah, for it was sweet to me when I was taken. And oh! that I had as many lives to lay down for Him, as there are hairs on my head; I would think them all too little! Oh! what is my life? Nothing in comparison of His glory. Oh! woe to you idle shepherds, for ye deceive poor things; if it were possible, I think you would deceive the very elect. You take God to be your witness, that you are in His way yet, and have not quit one hoof.

"But your practice condemns you, and the word of God condemns you. You may read Malachi ii. 1, 2, 3: 'And now, oh! ye priests, this commandment is for you. If ye will not hear, and if ye will not lay it to heart, to give glory to my name, saith the Lord of Hosts, I will even send a curse on you, and I will curse your blessings; yea, I have cursed them already, because ye do not lay it to heart: Behold, I will corrupt your seed, and spread dung upon your faces, even the dung of your solemn feasts; and one shall take you with it:' the 7th of Matthew 15, 16: 'Beware of false prophets, come to you in sheeps' clothing, but inwardly are ravening s: Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes irns, or figs of thistles?' And that 34th of Ezekiel, second 'Son of man, prophesy against the shepherds of Israel, pro, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God unto the shep; Woe be to the shepherds of Israel, that do feed themselves—not the shepherds feed the flocks?'

I leave my testimony against them that say, we hold our prinof men, and that we die for pleasing men. But it is not so; never thought that little of my life, as to lay it down for the pleasany; so it is but a most base aspersion of some cast on us, se our practice condemns theirs, and they can get no other thing and us with but that. And glory to the Lord, the contrary is both by our practices and our through-bearing: and it is made hat we hold our principles of none, but of God and His word.

I leave my testimony against the four men in the Canongate ooth [i.e., Gib and his three associates then in prison. See ll's letter to them, p. 19.—ED.] or any other that join with them ronging of the holy and sweet Scriptures. Some brand me that, that I am of their judgment, which thing I exceedingly and detest as the mire in the streets, and I count them guilty ath for wronging of the Scriptures. If we had judges in the that were for God, they should not live.

I leave my testimony against that tyrant on the throne and all nderlings; and I say it will never be right with our land till in and his ten sons be hung up before the sun.

I leave my testimony against them that rule as judges, and I my blood on the assizers, dempster [i.e., doomster], soldiers, ll of them, and all that acknowledge or aid them as magistrates, id while [i.e., until] they repent.

I leave my testimony against all enemies of all sorts, and against rts of compliance in less or more, and against all that has been against the work of God these twenty years bygone; against est, and compliance with, or compearing before God's enemies s or more.

I leave my testimony against the ministers and professors in Fife, e wrongs they have done to my lovely Lord and His sweet cause; ny head shall be a standing witness against them, and preach to from Cupar Tolbooth, ay, and while [i.e., until] they repent.

As for anything that they have done to me, I freely forgive them, and pray that the Lord may forgive them.

- "I leave my testimony against all them that will not hear Mr Donald Cargill, and own him as a faithful minister of the Gospel; and none but he is faithful this day.
- "I leave my testimony to the holy and sweet Scriptures, which many a day I have been refreshed with. I bless the Lord that ever I could read a line of them. Now I adhere to the faithfully-preached Gospel and to all that our worthies have done, which I need not particularly mention here.
- "And you that are the people of the Lord, oh! be busy and improve your time, and make use of your Bibles while you have them, for it is like there may be a bonfire made of them yet, as well as of the Covenant. And covenant with Him, and contend for Him to the utmost of your power; for I have found more of His sweet love in contending for Him than ever I got in prayer or hearing the word. Oh! His sweet word; let it not slip through your fingers.
- "It is like ye will have sad days of it when I am gone. Popery is begun, and it is like to overspread the whole land, and there is none to move their tongue against it, although the land be sworn in solemn oath against it. Oh! sirs, lift up your voice for the remnant that is left. Fast and pray; cry and weep; let not the apple of your eye cease; the wrath is like to be great that will overtake us; Oh! cry that the days may be shortened for the elect's sake, lest no flesh should be saved.
- "Oh! look out for sad days, dear friends; it may be ye will get the saddest stroke that ever a poor land was trysted [i.e., visited] with. Ye may read through the Scriptures, and ye will find what judgments followed such sins; pestilence, sword, and famine; which ye may look for. I leave it on you, that ye be not slack-handed, for it may come to that, that the tender and delicate women may eat their own children for straitness in the siege. It is to be feared that the plagues that are coming on Scotland for a broken and burnt Covenant will make their ears to tingle that hear of them. But I will not be to see it; the Lord is taking me away from the evil to come, which was often my desire; for the sad heart that ministers and professors have made me with their complying and wronging His glory, made me oft wish to be away.
- "And now it does not trouble me to lay down my life in your presence this day. Oh! it is sweet to be a sufferer for truth! I wonder doth ail the generation, to scar at [i.e., fear] Him or His sweet; for there is no cause of rueing or wearying, for all that is come. is a beauty in holiness. Oh! commend Him, sirs! Oh! and praise Him that ever He honoured such a wretch as I am a martyr for His sweet truth! Oh! sweet honour He puts on things! Oh! sirs, cast in your lot with the suffering remnant his day is in the furnace. Sink or swim with His Church. Oh! Jerusalem to your chief joy!

But oh! be persuaded to come and taste of His goodness; s the way, although the whole world should condemn it. ot be the learned clergy, or great heads of wit, that He will ir with carrying on of His work; for they have all denied Him. are none of the ministers that will witness for Him, nor yet nat the Lord has bestowed great parts on; their wit leads them ne cross and beyond suffering. They will not suffer if petitioning o it; or hiring of advocates or learned speakers. They can put itions, and say they never intended the death of any man but in efence of their life; but never a word of the defence of the el, the work of Reformation, or the sworn Covenant. had done that, their life would go; but they were bound by nant to own and maintain religion against Popery, and Prelacy, erism, Indulgence, and whatsoever else is contrary to sound ine, with their lives in their hands, and to quit with all for the once delivered to the saints. And though they never mention d of all this, yet they will say they came clearly off; but I say when I am going into eternity, that God's wrath will be on such erty, and God will count with them for what they have done st His honour; for there can none come clearly out from g their hands that is once before them without wronging His

Oh! fear and tremble, sirs; you that get the favour of enemies, and yield your conscience to the lusts of men.

I leave it on all persons, now when I am to appear before my; that they do nothing but what is according to the holy and Scriptures. Take them to be your rule, and go no further than allow you; they do not bid you to petition enemies for your y, nor yet to hire advocates.

Now, my advice to you that are taken prisoners is, that you no favour of God's enemies. Black not paper with them, in cheap, nor dear. Stand for your sweet Lord, with your life in hand. Own and avouch Him to be King and head of His own church. Count not your life dear unto you, when it com competition with truth.

"And now, as for you that are the poor seekers of the Lord act faith on Him; give Him much credit; live as brethren, dw unity, let peace and truth be among you. But, good Lord, let peace be without truth! Keep up fellowship and society-meet for my soul hath been oft refreshed in the fellowship of the saints. stand for your despised Lord, and His wronged glory.

"Now I being straitened for want of time (it being short), bear, and bid you be strong in the Lord, and the power or Now, farewell my dear friends. Farewell holy and Scriptures. Farewell sun, moon, and stars. Farewell swee proaches and crosses for my sweet Lord Jesus. Farewell all t in time; reading, praying, and all duties. Farewell relations. well my dear wife; the Lord be to you better than ten husb Glory be to His great name, that made me so sweetly to subn His will, whatever He trysted [i.e., visited] me with. Farewell m and sisters, and all relations. Farewell all my Christian acquaint for a while. Farewell sweet society in Fife; the Lord's blessir And now, welcome Father, Son, and Holy C on you all. Welcome sweet company of angels, and the spirits of just made perfect. Welcome everlasting songs of praise. Now int hands, holy Father, I commit my spirit.

" Sic subscribitur.

"ANDREW PITTILLOCI

William Thomson.

Up till 1679 he had taken no interest in religious ma but the preparations made for defence of Gospel truth Drumclog excited his attention; he joined the Covenanters, and e battle of Bothwell Bridge. He seems to have escaped, and to been unmolested till two years after the battle, when, on the last ath of June, he was seized at Alloa while coming from Fifeshire, e he had been hearing Donald Cargill. He was examined on 12th of July, before the committee for public affairs. Wodrow the substance of his examination; that he was at Bothwell; he hath not taken the Bond; that he assisted at the relief of two ners in the town of Airth. As to Bothwell rising being rebellion, ing's authority, and the archbishop's death, he refuses to answer. g asked if it was lawful to kill the officers of the army, he asked e committee if it was lawful for them to kill the people of God? ag that, if they pleased, they might lay the one to the other. g asked, if to save his life, he will say 'God save the king;' askers, that he will not beg his life at so dear a rate as to commit sin.

He was tried on the 26th along with Donald Cargill, James Boig, er Smith, and William Cuthill. His sentence was, that he be ed next day, July 27, 1681, and that his head be fixed on the Port. Nothing is now known of his end, save that he remained ful unto death. As might be expected from his position in life (a int), his testimony is not so well written as those of his fellow sufs, Cargill and Smith. It is that, however, of a pious, God-fearing who had cast all his care upon Christ, and trusted Him for all is.—Ed.]

HE TESTIMONY of WILLIAM THOMSON, who lived in the shire of Fife, and suffered at Edinburgh, July 27, 1681.

"MEN AND BRETHREN,—I being a prisoner for Christ's sake, and for my adhering to truth, being taken at Alloa, coming out of Fife, from hearing of the Gospel preached by Mr Donald Cargill the last Sabbath ane, this present year; and not knowing when I may be taken murdered by the stated enemies of our Lord; for they neither after the equity of their own law nor God's law; I have, for fear of inconveniences, laid hold of this opportunity, to set down under my hand, or from my mouth, an account of my life and conversation, and my testimony to the truth of Christ, and against all the abominations of the times.

"I was before the year 1679 running away, with the rest of this generation, to God-provoking courses, and about that time, when I saw the people of God going to draw together to adventure their lives in the Lord's quarrel, the Lord took a dealing with me at that time, so that I could neither get night's rest, nor day's rest, till I resolved to go with them; and, on the other hand, was afraid lest I should have been the Achan in the Lord's camp; but again, I remembered the Lord's promise, that is held out in the word, 'Turn ye unto me, and I will turn unto you, saith the Lord' (Mal. iii. 7). Now I do with all my heart bless the Lord, for His wonderful workings with me, since He began with me. I think, when I look on His dealings since that time till now, I must say, that I am a brand plucked out of the fire. Oh! that my heart and soul could praise Him for all that He hath done for me! And now I am content to die a dyvour [i.e., debtor] to free grace, and in Christ's debt.

"I was charged with being guilty of rebellion against their prince. I answered, I was not so, for I was there a prisoner of Jesus Christ and for His sake, and told them, I adhered to His covenant, and all things in it. I am not convicted from the word of God of any crime as to him whom they call king; who is not my king; nor of anything worthy of death committed against any man, either in thought, word, or deed; so my blood shall cry, with the rest of the innocent blood shed in the land, for vengeance from heaven on the inhabitants of the earth, great or small, who are in the least accessory thereto, ay, and while [i.e., until] they repent.

"It is not my doing, but their own, that hath procured it; and God is just to seek after them for the same; neither is it in any man's power to forgive that, as being a breach of God's holy law, without repentance, nor then neither; for the furthest they can come is but to declare unto them from God's word, that this and their other sins shall never be charged upon them, if they have truly received Christ upon His own terms, and walked worthy of the Lord unto all well-pleasing. But now the thing is clear; the ground whereon they intend to take away my life is, the disowning Charles Stuart for my king, because he will have no homage upon the account of the Covenant from me, or any other; and God only the performing of vows, and keeping and fulfilling the Coves. 1. So in this case, I cannot serve two masters; and I o obey God rather than man.

w, I here, as a dying man, ready to step into eternity, having nd strength, and being in my right mind, declare:

dhere to the Protestant religion, as that which is God's true and the Christian religion.

dhere to the holy rule of the word of God, the Scriptures of and New Testament, containing the will of God to man, and an; and that the Scriptures are a full rule of faith and man18.

dhere to the work of Reformation in Scotland, to the Coveational and Solemn League, the Solemn Acknowledgment of Engagement to Duties; the Confession of Faith, in regard it ith the foresaid writings; the Larger and Shorter Catechisms, seasonable, sound, and according to the Scriptures, and well ne reading, considering, and practising what is therein held dhere to the Rutherglen Testimony; to the paper commonly Ir Donald Cargill's covenant, of the date June 1680; I say, to the original copies of these papers, as they were corrected sed by the authors.

d, likewise, I adhere to every sound paper, tending to the religion, as the Directory for Worship and Catechising; and unto the doctrine, discipline, worship, and government of rch of Scotland.

bear my testimony unto all the lawful wrestlings of the people for truth, and in the defence and preservation of their civil, and divine rights and privileges, contained and held forth in said papers, against all encroachers thereupon and betrayers especially by the sword, as a mean most lawful and comof God, to be made use of in that quarrel; which is to be to preachings, and other assemblies of the Lord's people, and the more, as the enemy discharges it, as the case now stands, the last place, I give my testimony and protestation against gs and injuries done to God and His people throughout the world this day; and more particularly against all that hath one in Scotland since the beginning of the work of Reforunto this day, in prejudice to God's glory, His work and and especially these crying sins:

- "1. The corruption of the worship of God, profanation of His holy things, mocking, misbelieving and belying of God, and carrying, as if there were no God; yea, which is worse, saying He approves of all that they do. Oh, this heaven-contemning generation!
- "2. Against the defrauding, mocking, murdering, and oppressing the people of God, in their bodies, consciences, and estates, and punishing them as evil doers; yea, as the vilest monsters of cruelty; and that only for following their duty, and making them to stink, as it were, above the ground, and making their names to rot by calumnies and reproaches, and doing all they can to drive them to sin; and then blaming them, as the main instruments of all the mischievous villanies and abuses in the land; so that it is come to that with it, 'The man that departs from iniquity makes himself a prey.' And scarcely can these, who design honestly, get a night's quarters in any house of the land; so that the people of God are become a scorn to their foes, and a fear to their friends, and especially reproached of those who are their nearest neighbours, as the Psalmist complains.
- "3. I leave my testimony against all that make peace with the stated enemies of God, these Christ-despisers, these heaven-contemners and none-such fighters against God; whether by bonds, oaths, or promises; they being persons worthy of no credit, nor trust; who will not keep faith, nor trust upon any account, but where it may contribute for fulfilling their lusts, and prosecuting their wicked designs, and hell-hatched enterprises. If they were brought to straits, possibly they might feign themselves; but he is unwise that will give them so much trust as a dog. As Solomon says, 'When he speaks fair, believe him not, for there are seven abominations in his heart:' which I have a proof of, in my taking by a poor wretch who had sold soul and conscience to the lust and arbitrament of a faithless apostate wretch like himself.
- "And if ye will not be persuaded to leave off seeking their peace, and covenanting with them by bonds, oaths, and promises, well, see what David, the king of Israel, says, by the Spirit of God, when he is making his testament, 2 Sam. xxiii. 6, 7: 'But the sons of Belial shall be all of them as thorns thrust away, because they cannot be taken with hands: but the man that shall touch them must be fenced with iron, and the staff of a spear; and they shall be utterly burned with fire.' But ye, that are much more seeking peace with enemies than with God; think with yourselves to which of them are ye most en, and which of them have done you most good; which of ave most power over you? Which of the two hath the best by the end? Which of the two is most precious and lovely? hich of the two will be your judge at the last day? Well, if done well in seeking the peace of enemies with the loss of ce of God; then rejoice ye in them, and with them, and let o so with you. And if otherwise, the Lord, no doubt, will you, as the cause requires, for what ye have done to God's ause, covenant, and people.

I leave my testimony against all that contribute of neans for the down-bearing of God's work and people, and ing His and their enemies (seeing it is so expressly against venant; and in that case they, being called to suffer, and not to which practice is annexed a gracious promise, He that ife, land, goods, or relations, for Christ's sake and the Gospel's, ceive an hundredfold in this life, and in the world to come erlasting); and against all that otherwise waste and abuse o God's dishonour, but only using this world, as not abusing all within the nation being dedicate and given away by int to God; and this being often renewed, calls all men to be of the oath of God, and to see how they administer their lship, for to Him they must be accountable. But alas! for count which many of them have to make!

leave my testimony against the rendering up the power of the nd State into the hands of malignants. I do really think, they een all dreaming, or wilfully and wickedly sinning against the their own consciences. Well, God hath discovered them since, gly manner; and now they sin more and more. They hold ceit; they refuse to let it go, and will not return. fessors and ministers I mean in a special manner; but more larly the ministers; for, when the time was to speak, they held eace, and slipped from their Master's back, without so much e testifying against the horrid sins then committed, and did to this day make up the hedge, and build that which they lown. And, as I am informed, a great part have been dreadful ers with, and conformers to the sinful courses of this apostatisieration; yea, open persecutors of their more godly and faiththren, ministers, and professors; and now they are the greatest rs of the work, and persecutors of the godly, both underhand their face; and, instead of edifying and binding up the weak, strive to break all they can, and especially when they are a the enemy's hands.

"In the last place, I bear my testimony to the cross of Ch the only desirable upmaking and rich lot of the people of Go day in Scotland. Oh! it is the portion of poor things, who de seek God, and design honesty in the land! I think they w good bargain of it that want it, and I think they want nothin have it, and get leave to carry it heartsomely, and His prounder it; I would advise you all to take it on. I dare say this for your encouragement, that it is easy and sweet. There better way to carry the cross right, than to cast all our care Christ, and trust Him for all things, and use our single ender in the matter, and speak what He bids us, and when He bi and obey His voice in all things.

"Now, I declare I hate all ungodliness. Now, farewell all wherein I have been troubled with; a wicked world, and evil he misbelief, a subtile, powerful, and malicious devil, and tempte a company of men who have shaken off the fear of God. welcome Lord Jesus!—into thy hands I commit my spirit.

" Sic subscribitur,

"WILLIAM THOMSO

William Cuthill.

LL that is known of William Cuthill, is contained in his fession, read at his trial. He was taken by some (Earl of Mar's men, with two pistols and a dirk about "Being interrogated, if it be lawful to kill the king? answer king has broken the Covenant, and presses others to do so t forces, and therefore he thinks he deserves to die, and denie authority upon that account. As to the murder of the Archbi he thinks the persons who did it had the glory of God before eyes; and refuses to sign."

must be remembered, that we owe this confession, which I not sign, to his enemies, and they may purposely have made iguage stronger than it really was. Like William Thomson, he ed at the same time with Donald Cargill.

veral allusions in Cuthill's Testimony need explanation:

The commissioning Montrose. On the death of Charles I., cottish Parliament proclaimed his son, Charles II., but at the time resolved not to admit him to the throne till he gave ty for the liberty and the religion of the kingdom. Delegates despatched to wait on him and offer him the throne on these

But James Graham, Marquis of Montrose, and a few other s of like mind, were already with the king, and counselled him ect the proposal of Parliament, and offered to do their utmost ice him on the throne by force of arms. With characteristic city Charles listened to both. While he favourably negotiated he delegates, he commissioned Montrose to make a descent on ind. In April 1650, Montrose, with about a thousand men, I from the Orkney Islands upon the mainland, but rumours of r cruelties had gone before him, and the country people fled at lvance. He himself was surprised by Strachan, an officer under ral David Leslie, and taken prisoner near the pass of Inveron, on the confines of Ross-shire. The commission itself, and traging letters from the king, were found upon him when he was ered up to Leslie.

For the Causes of Wrath, see page 27.

The Remonstrance of the gentlemen, ministers, and commanders ling the forces in the west, in the year 1650, was written by k Gillespie, and was addressed to the Committee of Estates. nsured their rashness in admitting the king to desecrate the nant by swearing contrary to his known intentions, plainly seen the commissioned invasion of his favourite, the Marquis of rose.

The Public Resolutions rose out of an Act entitled "The Act asses," passed February 17, 1649. It "Ordained that no person is malignant and disaffected to the present Work of Reformand Covenants, nor any person given to drunkenness, swear-incleanness, or any other scandalous offence, shall hereafter be not to be officer of an army belonging to the kingdom, or emd in any place of public power or trust." The effect of this was, that many of Charles' friends were excluded from office.

In order to have some plea for repealing this wholesome statute, it was thought desirable to gain the consent of the General Assembly. A few members of the Commission of the General Assembly, December 1650, passed two resolutions favourable, with one or two restrictions, to the admission into the army of all fencible persons in the kingdom. The Parliament immediately repealed the Act, and Montrose and many notorious enemies of the liberties of the subject were speedily put in places of trust. Keen debates arose in the General Assembly, and those who approved of the resolutions were called the Resolutioners, and those who disapproved were the Protesters.

5. Naphtali was the precursor of the "Cloud of Witnesses." title explains its nature or contents: "Naphtali, or the Wrestlings of the Church of Scotland for the Kingdom of Christ, contained in a true and short deduction thereof, from the beginning of the Reformation of religion until the year 1667, together with the case, speeches, and testimonies, of some who have died for the truth, since the year Its first part was from the pen of James Stewart, afterwards Sir James Stewart, and King's Advocate after the Revolution. written with a fiery eloquence, and is remarkable for its happy use d Scripture, and the ability with which it shows the unscriptural nature of Prelacy, and defines the respective provinces of Church and State. The second part is the larger portion of the volume, and is mainly It was written, says Wodrow, by a very worthy minister, the Reverend Mr James Stirling, minister of the Gospel at Paisley. By a Proclamation of Council, December 12, 1667, Naphtali was ordered to be burned, and copies of it were ordained to be brought into the nearest magistrates before February 1, 1668; and all persons, after this date, in possession of copies, were to be fined ten thousand pounds Scots. This proclamation is the best testimony to the real merit of the book, for it is one of the most readable books of that period, and of no great size.—the edition of 1680 is an 18mo, of 243 pages,—and is just the book that Prelates and the supporters of arbitrary power would find easier to burn than to answer. to the first edition is an appendix, containing the speeches and testimonies of the Marquis of Argyll. James Guthrie of Stirling, Lord Warriston, etc. The edition of 1680 contains a second appendix of "Papers left by Mr James Mitchell, sentenced to die January 18, 1678;" "The Speech of the most faithful and pious servant of Jesus Christ, Mr John Kid, minister of the Gospel, who suffered at Edinthe 14th day of August 1679," etc.—ED.]

HE LAST TESTIMONY of WILLIAM CUTHILL, Seaman in Borrowstounness, who suffered at Edinburgh, July 27, 1681.

(This testimony having a large preamble, wherein he gives his private opinion concerning some things then in debate, which do not relate to the causes of his suffering, and which are of no use now; these vain ngs and unprofitable strifes of words being ceased, and his in about them not being a testimony for truth, nor espoused y of the godly as a head of suffering or contending for; the ragers of this work have thought fit that the preamble be passed in the Testimony itself only published.)

I here, as one ready to step into eternity, and one of the subjects ingdom covenanted to God, and one of Christ's sufferers, enter otestation, and give in my testimony against all that hath been against Christ's reigning, and the thriving of His kingdom in .nd, since the beginning of the work of Reformation; and particularly against all the several steps of backsliding:

As 1. The admitting of Charles Stuart to the exercise of kingly; and crowning him, while they knew he carried heart enmity it the work and people of God, and while, in the meantime, was so much of his treachery made known to the Parliament.* s commissioning James Graham, Earl of Montrose, to burn and he subjects of this kingdom, that would not side with, or would and him in the prosecuting of his wickedness, which is recorded: Causes of Wrath and the Remonstrance of the gentlemen, ters, and commanders attending the forces in the west, in the 1650.

2. Against the unfaithfulness, connivance, and compliance nisters and others at the wickedness perpetrated in the land, his ought not to be understood of the manner of his coronation, which is by all Presbyterians to have been most consonant to God's Word, and the I constitution of Scotland; but of his disposition and practice, which was dently contradictory to the sacred engagement he came under.—Note by the rs of the "Cloud."

during the time of Cromwell's usurpation; for, as I am inference testified against him, for trampling all the interests of Christ under his feet, in giving a toleration to all sectaries (we the abominable and blasphemous Quakers are a witness, religion is nothing but refined Paganism at the best; yea, I this much worse); which was to set up their thresholds beside C and their altars beside the Lord's, in a land covenanted to never to suffer the like, and lying under the same bonds.

- "3 Against the Public Resolutions for the bringing in nants to places of power and trust; which have been the God's hand above the heads, and upon the backs of God's pever since they lusted after them. And now, I suppose the convinced (at least some of them), that God hath given them finger-ends for it. But we have not seen them confessing befor and His people in public; for it should be as public as the sit that they have added this sin to all their other sins, in asking thing, whereas the Lord was their King.
- ministers, in quitting their charges; and that (which doth more vate their guilt) at his [Charles II.] command, who had no power not right to be obeyed, neither in that, not yet in civil things; fo he had unkinged himself; and their going away without almost a testimony, who should have been the main men that should told the people what to do. Oh! and alas for that practice! you were put away without being convicted of any crime done against But is it not against Presbyterian principles, that a king shot pose ministers of the Gospel; though he had a just right, a time, to rule the civil state? For it was without controversy, that imprinced some of Christ's ministers, without being eventured or treated by any legal providing as Naphali record toward the coolesiastic officer's seat, to depose the rest of their
- "

 7. I hold it one of the Cames of God's Wrath again back, and one of the cames of God's breaking and scamerin page bandful of men at Penaland, that remewed the Coven

 Lamach, and did not keep out like interest out of x: for i binds up to its maintainers, not to xe destroyers.

- "A I have bestiment against the procedure of the min whos ther came to the fields again after Pentianal became to we tru begin with public and present their and make up the major, he the Church of that is foreigned, and then only p cases of conscience, and not catechising the people, nor g them in the duty of the day; but did let them pay curates', and other revenues of that nature. But I think they were to God, under the pain of losing soul and body, in the day s fearful judgment, to tell the people to chase them out of. Seeing Prelacy was abjured and cast out like an abominanch, as it was, were they not worthy to die the death, that against so much light, defile God's land with that abjured tion? but forsooth, to this day they must be fed like birds in upon the fattest of the land, and the spoils of Christ's crown! I bear my testimony against that course carried on by the s; their conniving at, countenancing of, and complying with idulged that have quit Christ, and taken on with another

Oh, the treacherous dealers have dealt very treacherously! by were open persecutors of the really godly thereafter for ithfulness, and were about to stop their mouth, and to make lulgence the door by which all the ministers were to enter to nistry.

I bear my testimony against their treachery at Bothwell in stopping the drawing up of the Causes of God's Wrath, and a fast day, and changing their declaration; and in hindering ging of the army; and to mend all, they raised the ugliest and report upon them that minded and spoke honestly and at could be.

I bear my testimony against their treachery at Edinburgh, proclamation came out to the view of the world, blaspheming ue religion, and declaring that all that belonged to God was Charles Stuart, which is the plain sense of the Act; and they n assembly, and voted for a liberty coming from him to preach ugh that same very day that this was proclaimed, two of their orthy and faithful brethren [Messrs John King and John Kid] urdered. [The Indemnity after Bothwell, published August 9.] I think this people are grown like brute beasts.

h, how much pomp and joviality was that day in rejoicing ruins of the work of God and His people, yea, over Himself. vas first a scaffold made on the east side of the Cross, and a the set down on it, and two green forms; and then the Cross rered, and, about twelve hours of the day, the Pursuivants, and s, and Lyon King at Arms, and eight trumpeters, went up to ss, and fourteen men on the foresaid scaffold, and seven of them with red gowns of velvet, and seven with black, and then that Act was read, and at night the bells were ringing, and bonfires burning. Oh! I think it was a wonder, that God made not all the town, where such wickedness was acted against and in despite of Him, to sink to the lowest hell.

- "10. I leave my testimony against them for running away and leaving God's flock after Bothwell Bridge, when they had drawn them to the fields. The Lord be judge this day between them and His flock, and let their sentence come out from before His presence, and let His eyes behold those things that are equal. Oh, their skirts are full of the blood of souls! They say, the people hath left them, but it is more evident than that it can be gainsaid, that they have left the people. Does not the Scripture say, that they who are in the watchmen's place should warn the people when they see the sword come; and have not the ministers of Scotland had the first hand in all these courses of backslidings? Should they be pure with unclean hands, and the unjust balance (so to say), and the bag of deceitful weights? Well, their sins are known to be no more sins of weakness, but sins of wickedness.
- "11. I bear my testimony against them, because they did not join with their brethren, in the work of the day, in preaching to the people in the fields, with Mr Richard Cameron and Mr Donald Cargill. And will ye tell me, although there were never one to open their mouth in that thing, does not the work of the one confound them to silence, and the work of the other justify and plead for them? But there is one thing I have learned from the practice of all this people, and God's dealings with them; they have sought their own and one another's credit, more than God's, and He hath discovered their wickedness in their ugliness.
- "12. I bear my testimony against their obstinacy, in refusing to return and amend their manners. They hold fast wickedness, and refuse to let it go, and that is against the light of God's word, their own consciences, their vows and engagements to God, the cries of bloodshed, the cries of wrong done to God and His work, and against these their former preachings and practices; that they will not come out and rid the ground, so to speak, and seek out the causes of God's wrath, and set days of humiliation apart, and see that they be kept, and renew their engagements, and carry themselves like ministers of Jesus Christ afterward. Is this erroneous? Is not this according to Presbyterian principles? Does not the Confession

Faith say, These who offend the Church, and their brethren, make their repentance as public as their offences have been? this the plain meaning of that article, yea, the very words of the Confession of Faith, chap. xv. sect. 6? Without which e done, if any would take my counsel, who am looking to the sentence of death every hour, I would say, meddle not m, for they have not only sinned against the Church of God, ir brethren, and their own souls; but against God. ey not been light and treacherous? whereof many instances given. Have they not polluted the sanctuary? ne violence to the law? Have they not been unfaithful? y not walking very openly amongst God's stated enemies, e people of God dare not be seen? I fear, if they make not come off these courses, that God's wrath shall overtake them e long.

nd lastly, I bear my testimony against them, for their untenderweak consciences, and making use of their gifts and parts to ne word of God, to put out that light, which God has given ngs; of which I, among others, have a proof; for one of them to the prison, and told me, that he had been dealing with o had been pursuing us to death, (the king's Advocate) that ld not take innocent blood upon him, and out of love and ess to our souls, he came to pay us a visit; and said, he was a curate nor an Indulged man, but a minister of the Gospel. said, that we would be well advised what we were doing, for vocate had said we were shortly to be before the criminal And I asked, what he advised us to do? and began to tell him and whereupon we were accused, which was this; that Charles having broken and burnt God's Covenant, and compelled all could by his forces to do the like, and slain many upon that :; upon this head I declined his authority; and being hard ned, confessed that I thought it lawful to kill him, but I did by whose hands. And he said, all that would not free me eing his subject, and instanced Zedekiah's case to prove it. was not in case to speak to him (being confused with a disman who was in with us). Only I told him there was as great a ice betwixt that of Zedekiah, and this in hand, as east was from And he called us Jannes and Jambres, who withstood the when we would not hear him; and said, there was no such as any condition holden out in the form and order of the coronation, that did free us from allegiance to Charles Stuart upon that account.

"But what do they think, that every one can reason and debate with them; or else that they are not Christians, but gainstanders of the truth? Hath not God given to every man his measure of light and grace both? If they know not this, and walk not accordingly, they were never worthy to be ministers of the Gospel. He said, that he could send me any of the ministers, whom I pleased to call for. I said, that I heard tell Mr Donald Cargill was taken; would he send him to me, and I would take it as a great kindness off his hand? But he said, that he had taken a way by himself. But what shall I say; my heart is like to sink, when I think on them, and the case of the land. Oh! I think, it is a desperate-like case! only I know God can, and I hope He will cure it.

"Next, I bear my testimony against all that pay cess and locality to uphold Christ's enemies, the bloody soldiers, or any of that cursed crew; yea, against all that give them meat or drink when they come to their houses, it being so expressly against Christ and the Covenant; and against all that pay customs or duties, belonging to the crown of Scotland, unto Charles Stuart, his officers, collectors, or tacksmen, seeing all that is employed against Christ; and against all that shall do it, till they wit [i.e., know] well that it be otherwise employed; and against all bonders with them, or to him, or any in his name, or delegated by him, or clothed with his authority; seeing they are persons worthy of no credit; whereof I have a proof in my taking. Ye would do well to believe the wise man Solomon, who says, 'When he speaks fair, believe him not, for there are seven abominations in his heart.'

"Next, I leave my testimony against all that side with, or strengthen the hands of the adversaries of the Lord, in less or more, against clear conviction from the word of God, or sound reason; and particularly against this duke [of York], that bold and truculent Papist, who hath defiled the Lord's land with his altars and images. And I protest against this ensuing Parliament, for putting power in his hand, to do what he pleaseth; for by the word of God, and the laws of the land, he should die the death. And also, I bear testimony against these who have sided with, or strengthened the foresaid enemy, and will not come off again. Oh! if they will not help the people of God, that they would let them alone, and not help their adversaries.

"Next, I leave my testimony against the gentry and commonality, for letting so much innocent blood be shed; some of which ranks, I think, God hath a turn [i.e., piece of work] to put in their hands yet, if they would espouse His quarrel, and turn to Him with all their hearts, and not suffer the work to go as it does. But indeed they must keep company with God's stated enemies, and learn the Court fashion. I will tell you one thing; ye have lost the manners of the Court of Heaven, by learning the manners of the Courts of men. think ye to do, or how think ye to be accountable to God? but speak your minds, who ye think hath the best end of the controversy? Will ye let the fear of men and the devil prevail with you, more than the fear of God? Or what think ye this duke would do to you, when he sees his opportunity; will ye trust bloody It may be ye be put to suffer on worse accounts yet, Papists? if ye will not own God and His people.

"But there are but very few of you now who are aught but mockers. Will ye turn to the Lord with all your hearts? Is it any shame to you to take shame to yourselves in glorifying God by confessing your sins and turning from them? But will ye tell me now; who, think ye, can be at one with you while ye are standing out against God? Will ye read but the first chapter of Isaiah, and consider it and the first two chapters of Jeremiah, the second of Joel, the prophecy of Haggai, Isaiah xxii., Ezek. vii. Oh! consider, and if not, the Lord and you take it between you. Read and consider Psalm 1. 5.

"Now, what shall I say to you who own and adhere to God's cause against all the enemies? Oh! that I could let you see the inside of my heart! Will ye learn Christianity? Seek the Lord and get Him on your side. I think it is a good token of a sanctified heart that longs more to be in God's company nor [i.e., than] other folk's—that sees that the worst of evil lies in committing sin. Beware of heart-risings, and grudgings one against another. Know that there is a great difference between sins of weakness and sins of wickedness. Ye may not mark every failing; for if ye do, ye shall not have two to stay together in Scotland.

"Oh! but there be much need of the Gospel; and these ministers will not come out and contend for Christ; without which, though I were at liberty, God knows, I durst not meddle with them, and I would rather keep back from them nor [i.e., than] other folk. For I think there are many of them either unconcerned, or then dreadfully misled; for how can it be otherwise? not bearing with tender consciences; for they will rather strive to break folk nor [i.e., than] build them up. But how can any that has love to Christ look on them with good-will? I do verily think, if ever they turn again, the world shall hear tell of it. It is beyond all controversy, that they have quit their first works and their first love.

"Oh! will ye learn to be sober and grave. Cleave to your covenants and engagements; I say, mind your engagements. Look what becomes of covenant-breakers. I would say unto you, take no courses by the end till God give you clearness. But, indeed, I know that God will reprove many in this generation, because they put away light from them.

"Now ye are deprived of all cleanly preaching. But will ye observe Christ's answer to the spouse in the Song, when she says: 'Where makest thou thy flocks to rest at noon?' He says: 'If thou know not, Oh! thou fairest among women; go out by the shepherds' tents.' Beware of turning aside to the flocks of His companions.

"Beware of these ministers of Charles Stuart, these Indulged, and these Prelatic, these mockers of God and contemners of the godly, these Christ-deserters, these undervaluers of heaven, these scandalous and insignificant time-servers, whom God hath blasted to the conviction of all the generation that see anything; these monsters of men, the disgrace of the ministry, the just contempt of the generation. God hath sometimes had a Church without a ministry, but He never had a ministry without a Church. Doth not the Scriptures say, that for many days Israel shall be without a priest, without teraphim? Do we not see in the Revelation the two witnesses slain, and lie three days and a half? But oh! cry to God, that He would send forth labourers into His vineyard; for verily the harvest is great, but the labourers are few. If there be a casting at [i.e., rejecting] the Gospel on the people's side, then I think they shall be in extreme hazard of losing their souls, if God's mercy prevent it not; for then they refuse to be guided by God. when the hireling sees the wolf come, he run away and leave the sheep, because he is an hireling, then I think the mercy of God is engaged for the sheep, because they have no shepherd. It is not the first time that Israel has been scattered as sheep having no shep But it is as sure as the sun shines, none can keep himself nor guide himself; it is not in him that walketh to direct his steps.

And God hath sown a joyful light to the upright. And He has said: 'He that sitteth in darkness and hath no light, let him trust in the Lord, and stay himself upon His God.'

"But could the spouse rest in Jerusalem, and her husband not be found? It is beyond debate, that she made all the fields ado [i.e., sought over all the fields] before she wanted Him. Can the spouse see another wear her husband's clothes and be well satisfied?—yea, one that has robbed, spoiled, and shut him to the doors with disgrace, contempt, and shame, and as one unworthy to manage the affairs of his own house; and has defied him to take anything back again, and has set up legs and arms, heads and hands, and quarters of the children as trophies of victory over the good-man of the house, and has triumphed with spite and contempt, and is only seeking it off the poor widow, the wife and the bairns, to be quiet, and accept of him for a husband and father. So I say, shall the wife and children of such a husband and father be peaceable to see this? I trow [i.e., believe] there are few earthly folk would do so.

"But oh! who can show the difference here? As to searching out, it cannot be. The Lord keep you from dwelling at ease under one roof with such an one. Beware of making any treaty of peace with such a robber and murderer as this. Beware of feeding these his soldiers, or giving them quarters when they come to your houses. Oh! but the kings of Assyria knew well enough that the kings of Israel were merciful kings! If ye will not use the sword at God's bidding, God will put it (as He hath) into the hands of His and your enemies, to use it against you. Indeed I think, till Saul's sons be hanged up before the Lord, the plague of famine shall not be stayed from Israel.

"Now, in the next place, I witness, by this my testimony, my adherence to the Scriptures of truth, the holy Bible, the Old and New Testaments, which have been made sweet to me. The fault is not in them that we understand them not, but in us; and this we have as our old father Adam's heirship.

"I witness my adherence to the Covenants, National and Solemn League; Confession of Faith; only there is in it something concerning the magistrate calling a synod of ministers, by virtue of his magistratical power, which ought to be cautiously understood, according to the General Assembly's explication.

"I adhere to the Catechisms, Larger and Shorter, Psalms in metre, Directory for Worship, Form of Church Government, the doctrine of the Church of Scotland as it is held out in the word of God, and laid down in the foresaid papers.

"I adhere to all the faithful testimonies for truth in Scotland, of one sort and another, and particularly these three, the papers found at the Queensferry, of the date the 3d of June [1680], the Sanquhar Declaration, the Rutherglen Testimony, and every paper tending to the good of religion, particularly the Causes of God's Wrath; and I request all to read and consider them.

"I leave my testimony against them that say, that I am a self-murderer, because I spake that which God gave me to speak before His adversaries. And I think that it is my great mercy, that He hath helped me to be free before them in matters of truth, relating to the disowning of them, and standing to our God's and our own rights.

"This paper I leave as my testimony and formed and deliberate thoughts; and request all to bear with faults of weakness, especially when the sword of the adversary is above a man's head.

"Now farewell world, and all things in it. Welcome Lord Jesus Christ; into thy hands I recommend my spirit.

" Sie subscribitur.

"WILLIAM CUTHILL."

Robert Garnock.

OHN HOWIE in his "Scots Worthies," has given a life of Robert Garnock, taken from a manuscript autobiography written by him while in prison. It is one of the most interesting lives in the volume. He was a smith or hammerman in Stirling. Patrick Walker says he was esteemed by all to be a singular Christian, of deep exercise, high attainments, great knowledge and experience in the way of the Lord. He was apprehended at Stirling May 8, 1679, shortly after a skirmish between upwards of sixty soldiers and a small number of people who were assembling for a field-preaching in the neighbourhood. He lay in prison for more than two years untried. At last he was tried, October 7, 1681, along with Patrick Forman, David Farrie, James Stuart, and Alexander Russel, whose testimonies follow Garnock's in this volume. George Lapslay, who signed along with them a joint protestation to the jury, had his trial delayed, November 7; but in the interval he escaped from prison.

The substance of Garnock's indictment is in Wodrow. With the other four he was sentenced to be hanged at the Gallowlee. Forman's right hand was to be cut off before death, and the hands and the heads of the others after death. Wodrow says that the sentence was executed against all of them at the Gallowlee, and the reason of this change of place was, that the executions at the Cross and Grassmarket drew so many spectators, and the carriage and last speeches of the sufferers made such an impression, that it was found advisable to take them out of town, to a place where some of the most notorious criminals used to be hanged.

The Gallowlee was in Leith Walk, half-way between Edinburgh and Leith. It was a slight rising ground formed of sand, near the site of the toll-house, and on the west side of the road. When the New Town of Edinburgh was in the course of building, the sand of the Gallowlee was an object of value for mortar, so that, instead of being a rising ground, it became a hollow, and is now a nursery garden. It was the usual place where were suspended all criminals whose bodies were sentenced to be hung in chains. But the bodies of Robert Garnock and his four companions were buried at the gallows foot.

Patrick Walker gives a vivid description of their execution, of what was done with their remains that evening, and of their reinterment many years afterwards:

"The never-to-be-forgotten Mr James Renwick told me that he was witness to this public murder at the Gallowlee, betwixt Leith and Edinburgh, where he saw the hangman hash and hag off all their five heads, with Patrick Forman's right hand. Their bodies were all buried at the gallows foot. Their heads, with Patrick's hand, were brought and put upon five pikes on the Pleasance Port. Some honest old men told me of late, that they were witness to the same, and saw the hangman drive down their heads to the foot of the pike, and thereby broke their skulls. Mr Renwick told me also that it was the first public action that his hand was at, to convene friends, and lift their murdered bodies, and carry them to the West Churchyard of Edinburgh, and bury them there. Then they came about the city to the Nether Bow Port, with a design to take the heads, hands, and other parts of our martyrs' bodies, down; but a woman, holding over a candle to let some people see the street, marred them. Then they took down these five heads and that hand; and the day being come, they went quickly up the Pleasance, and when they came to Lauristoun Yards, upon the south side of the city, they durst not venture, being so light, to go and bury their heads with their bodies, which they designed; it being present death, if any of them had been found. Alexander Tweedie, a friend, being with them, who at that time was gardener in these Yards, concluded to bury them in his yard, being in a box (wrapped in linen), where they lay forty-five years, except three days, being executed upon the tenth of October 1681, and found the 7th day of October 1726.

"That piece of ground for some years lay unlaboured; and, trenching it, the gardener found them, which affrighted him; the box was consumed. Mr Schaw, the owner of these yards, caused lift them, and lay them upon a table in his summer house. Mr Schaw's mother was so kind as to cut out a linen cloth, and cover them. They lay twelve days there, where all had access to see them. Alexander Tweedie, the foresaid gardener, said, when dying, there was a treasure hid in his yard, but neither gold nor silver. Daniel Tweedie, his son, came along with me to that yard, and told me that his father planted a white rose bush above them, and further down the yard a red rose bush, which were more fruitful than any other bush in the yard. And he is persuaded that some others of our martyrs' heads were buried there, as Archibald Stewart, John Potter, William Cuthill, William Thomson; and others whose heads were fixed upon the West Port, but shortly taken away by friends.

"There were six of us concluded to bury them up, on the 19th day of October 1726, and every one of us to acquaint friends of the day and hour, being Wednesday, the day of the week upon which most of them were executed, and at four of the clock at night, being the hour that most of them went to their resting graves. We caused make a complete coffin for them in black, with four yards of fine linen, the way our martyr-corpses were managed. And having the happiness of friendly magistrates at the time, we went to the present Provost Drummond and Bailie Nimmo, and acquainted them with our conclusions anent them; with which they were pleased, and said;

	₹₽
	•

NATHERBOW FORT, EDINBURGH.

FROM THE EAST.

were sure that they were our martyr's heads, we might bury lecently and orderly.

accordingly, we kept the foresaid day and hour, and doubled en, and laid the half of it below them, their nether jaws being from their heads, but being young men, their teeth remained. re witness to the holes in each of their heads, which the hangroke with his hammer; and, according to the bigness of their we laid their jaws to them, and drew the other half of the bove them, and stuffed the coffin with shavings. Some pressed) go through the chief parts of the city, as was done at the But this we refused, considering that it looked airy and ition. to make such show of them, and inconsistent with the solid, observing of such an affecting, surprising, unheard of dispen-; but took the ordinary way of other burials from that place, to : went east by the back of the Wall, and in at Bristo Port, and the way to the head of the Cowgate, and turned up to the yard; where they were interred close to the Martyrs' Tomb, he greatest multitude of people, old and young, men and 1, ministers and others, that ever I saw together.

However, some deny and others will not believe that all this ter of fact; far less will many believe it forty, fifty, or sixty years nis; when boys and girls of six, eight, or ten years of age, who ritnesses to it, shall tell, That we saw five heads, wanting bodies, and forty-five years after they were murdered, for maintaining region principles, in a time of persecution that was in the days fathers, by the Popish, Prelatical, and Malignant faction.

However some may reckon of that dispensation of the earth's isclosing (as not being able any longer to cover) the blood of slain witnesses, yet, doubtless, they are five witnesses, forty-ars old, of the tyranny and cruelty of that never-to-be-forgotten this notice of the five martyrs, he adds a funeral poem, upon five martyrs' heads. It extends to fifty lines, but its merit as n is small. Its best lines are its opening ones, viz.:

—ED.]

[&]quot;When for our fathers' sins, by angry Heaven,
To persecuting Prelates power was given;
Then they became the nation's scourge and rod,
And for a season on the saints they trode."

HE DYING TESTIMONY of ROBERT GARNOCK, Hammerman in Stirling, who suffered at the Gallowlee, betwixt Leith and Edinburgh, October 10, 1681.

"MEN AND BRETHREN,—I, having received a sentence of death from men, for adhering to the truth against Popery, Prelacy, Erastianism, and Indulgences first and last, and all that was contrary to sound doctrine; am now to leave a line behind me, as the Lord will help me to write; and to tell you, that however this generation may condemn me, as having a hand in my own death, I declare that it is not so; for I die a Presbyterian in my judgment. For I, considering how solemnly Scotland was bound to defend truth against all encroachments made thereon, with their lives and liberties, and how they of this nation had so easily broken their vows and engagements; and then seeing, through the Scriptures, how deep Covenant-breaking draws, and what a great and heinous sin this is in the sight of God; could do no less than give in my protestation against all their proceedings, in these hell-hatched acts that were so contrary to the word of God, and our sworn Covenants. And it is for that, that I am come in your presence this day, to lay down this life of mine; for which I bless the Lord, that ever He honoured the like of me with a gibbet and bloody winding-sheet, for His noble, honourable and sweet cause.

"Oh! will ye love Him, sirs? Oh! He is well worth the loving, and quitting all for. Oh! for many lives to seal the sweet cause with. If I had as many lives as there are hairs on my head, I would think them all too little to be martyrs for truth. I bless the Lord, I do not suffer unwillingly, nor by constraint; but heartily and cheerfully. Oh! but the Lord hath taken great pains on me, to train me up for this great work. I bless His holy name, that ever He counted me worthy of such honour. His love hath been to me beyond many.

"I have been a long time a prisoner, and have been altered of my prison. I was among and in the company of the most part who suffered since Bothwell; and was in company with many ensnaring persons, though I do not question but they were godly folk. And yet the Lord kept me from hearkening to their counsel. Glory, glory be to His holy and sweet name. Oh! but it is many a time my er, how I have done such and such things. But it is He that done it. He hath done all things well, both in me, and for me is His name. Oh! if I could get my royal King Jesus cried all the world down! Oh! will ye fall in love with Christ, s? what ails you at Him, and His sweet cause? I can assure he is no hard master to serve. Oh! He is lovely! 'He is and ruddy, the chief among ten thousands.'

I desire that none of you think I suffer as an evil doer, or busybody in other men's matters; or that it is out of blind that I am come here this day. No, for it was after serious deration that I did it, and after great weights and pressures. s great grief of soul to me, to see my Master's truth so wronged, oled on, and abused by a God-daring generation, and none to for Him. And now my Lord is highly honouring me for that. to His great name for it! For He hath honoured me and my bours with irons, and the thieves' hole, which were sweet and hful to us; and then honoured us wonderfully to go in before bloody men and get our sentences.

Our interrogations are known. I have not time to write them. disowned them for disowning of the Covenant, and I adhered to rotestation given in against them; and now am come to the wlee, to lay down my life, and to have my head cut off and put a port. It is known, how barbarously I have been used by them, how honourably such a silly [i.e., feeble] wretch as I am hath carried through. Glory be to His sweet name for it! Indeed, it he bargain betwixt Christ and my soul long since, that through trength I should be for Him, and at His bidding, whatever piece ork He put in my hand. And He promised, that His grace d be sufficient for me; and that His strength should be seen in eakness; and that go whither I would, He would go with me gh fire and water, the flames should not scorch me, nor the s overflow me. Oh! take Him, sirs; for He is faithful who promised, and He will perform.

Now, as a dying martyr for Christ, I would leave it on all of to make haste, and prepare for strokes, for they are at hand; do not think that they will not come because they are delayed. He will come, and that as a thief in the night, and will surprise of you, if not all. 'Watch and pray, that ye enter not into tation.' I would not have you secure, but take warning in time, e His wrath break forth. He hath waited long on Scotland's

It is like, He will not bear much longer. Do not sleep as do others, but arise, make haste, get on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand. It is dangerous now to be out of God's gate [i.e. way]. It is not good, siding with God's enemies. dangerous to be found in their camps. I would not be in their stead, for all the gold of Ophir, who have saved their lives with prejudice to the work and people of God. I would have them take warning. They say, they have done nothing but what was lawful and right. But they commit transgression, and (with the whore) wipe their mouth and say, they have done no evil. Indeed they may put off men so. But they will not get God and their own consciences put off. need never go about the bush; for I see not how any that is faithful, being once brought before them, can win [i.e., get] honestly off; for if ye will but say, ye disown their authority, then your life must go. For they had as little to lay to my charge as to any, yet I could not win off with a good conscience, but to the gallows I must go. glory to His great name, who hath honoured me, or that ever He gave me a head to be set on a port for His sweet name and cause!

"Now as for what I own or disown, I, being straitened by reason of the want of time, cannot get it set down here. And another thing I see, that martyrs' testimonies are of no value, and very lightly esteemed.

"I give my testimony to the holy and sweet Scriptures, Covenants, Confession of Faith, which are according to the Scripture, Catechisms Larger and Shorter, the Acknowledgment of Sins and Engagement to Duties, and to all that our worthies have done in defence of the Gospel, at Pentland, Loudon Hill, Bothwell Bridge, and Airsmoss; to Rutherglen Testimony, and Sanquhar Declaration, Queensferry papers, and Torwood Excommunication, the Fife Testimony, D—ie, K—le, and P—s Protestations, and all that hath been done in defence of the Gospel, wherever it hath been done.

"And I, as a dying martyr for the truth, give my testimony against all the encroachments on our Lord's rights, in less or more; as Popery, Prelacy, Erastianism, and Indulgences first and last, and all that side with them. And I, as a dying witness for Christ, desire friends to the cause of Christ, to beware of them; for, if it were possible, they would deceive the very elect. They will neither enter the kingdom of heaven themselves, nor will they suffer others to go in thereat. Beware of their fair speeches, for they and the devil thought to have made me break with my lovely Lord Jesus Christ, that noble bargain betwixt Him and my soul. Oh! but the professors of this generation

l and bitter against the sweet way of the Lord, and His poor

Text, I give my testimony against all the enemies of God, and t join with them, in paying cess, locality, militia-money, or er is for the strengthening of their hands. And now I leave it on you, that ye would not brand me with having a hand in my For I could not get my life saved, unless I had taken me all the blood of the people of God, and owned that as authority, which had taken away my dear brethren's lives, and nat it was just and right what they had done. And indeed, eek no more of any, if they will but own them in what they do. think, they are right enough in taking away our lives, when ho are called Presbyterians own them, and their tyranny, to be And now when I am to go my way, I would have you to heart how deeply owning of them draws; and how much of the of God ye draw on you, in so doing. Oh! sirs, I would have eware, and look what a weighty business it is, and obey God than man.

bless the Lord, I am this day to step out of time into eter-And I am no more troubled, than I were to take a marriage earth, and not so much. I bless the Lord, I have much peace science in what I have done. Oh! but I think it a very y business, for me to be within twelve hours of eternity, and publed. Indeed, the Lord is kind, and hath trained me up for sy; and now I can want Him no longer. I will get my fill of his night; for I will be with Him in paradise, and get a new put in my mouth, the song of Moses and of the Lamb. I will amongst the general assembly of the first-born, and enjoy the presence of God, and his Son Jesus Christ, and the spirits of en made perfect. I am sure of it.

Oh! dear friends, I would, as one going to eternity, obtest you, ou make good earnest in religion, and be restless until you get mess of an interest in Christ; for it is a dangerous time to live dark. I would have you consider what a weighty business it leny the Lord of glory before men. There have strange things s nature fallen out, in this our day. Oh! look to yourselves, I entreat you, to be for God, and He will be for you; confess and He will confess you. As good soldiers endure hardness; aliant in suffering. Resist unto blood, for it is the cause of hat is at stake.

"Oh! there are none of you lamenting after God. Ah! is there none of you that hath love to the Lord, and will take part with Him, against all His enemies? Oh! but it be sad, to see you with such whole hearts, and so little grief among you, for the robbery that the Lord of glory is getting. I declare my suffering is nothing; but when I see you who are professors, what an unconcerned people ye are, it makes my soul bleed to see you in such a frame, when the Church is in such a condition. I wish the Lord may help poor young ones, that are brought up under you with the want of the Gospel. Oh! for the Gospel back again to Scotland! Oh! for one faithful minister in all the land! Oh! but the harvest be great, and the labourers few! As for my part, now when I am going to eternity, I declare, I see not, nor hear not of a minister in all Scotland, who is at the duty the Lord calls for at ministers' hands, in preaching against all sort of sin, in season, and out of season, rebuking and reproving, and exhorting. As for my part, I cannot join with them who are not so.

"Now my Lord is bringing me to conformity with Himself, and honouring me after my worthy pastor, Mr James Guthrie, although I knew nothing when he was alive; yet the Lord hath honoured me to protest against Popery, and to seal it with my blood; and He honoured him to protest against Prelacy, and to seal it with his blood. The Lord hath kept me in prison to this day, for that end; his head is on one port of Edinburgh, and mine must go on another.

"Glory, glory to the Lord's holy and sweet name, for what He hath done for me. Oh! set days apart, and bless His holy and never enough exalted name, for what He hath done for me. Oh! sirs, His cross hath been all paved over with love to me all along, and it is sweeter now than ever. Oh! will ye be persuaded to fall in love with the cross of royal Jesus? Oh! take Him. Will ye be entreated to come and taste of His love? Oh! sweet lot this day, for me to go to a gibbet for Christ and His cause! I think the thoughts of this do ravish my heart and soul, and make me to fall out in wondering that I am within so few hours of that endless joy; that paradise, among these flowers and trees, that are on each side of that pure river clear as crystal, where the tree is that bears twelve manner of fruits, and the leaves of the tree are for the healing of the nations.

"Oh! that I could leave this weight upon you; yea, with as great weight as it lies on my spirit, to see how few of you are travelling to that land. Oh! be much above, and be here as strangers,—I mean, in respect of conformity to this world, though hated of it—and studying to live the life that our Lord hath commanded in His word; and suffer affliction with the people of God rather than enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. Now I bless the Lord, I am not, as many suspect me, thinking to win heaven by my suffering. No, no; I know there is no winning of it but through the precious blood of the Son of God.

"Now, ye who are the true seekers of God, and so the butt of the world's malice, oh! be diligent and run fast. Time is precious. Oh! make use of it, and act for God. Contend for the truth. Stand for God against all His enemies. Fear not the wrath of men. Love one another. Wrestle with God mutually in societies. Confess your faults one to another. Pray one with another. Reprove, rebuke, exhort one another in love. Slight no commanded duty. Be faithful in your stations, as ye will be answerable at the great day.

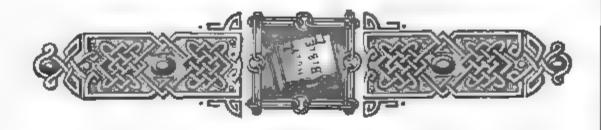

"Now, having no more time, I bid farewell to you all. Farewell, holy and sweet Scriptures, wherewith I have been refreshed many a day. I would have you read much of them, and pray over them to the Lord, that ye may get His blessing with, and the right use of them. Oh! make use of your Bibles, my dear friends, so long as you have them. Seek not counsel from men. Follow none further than they hold by truth. Now I request you, have a care; this land is like to come under great errors.

"Now, farewell sweet reproaches for my lovely Lord Jesus; though once they were not joyous, but grievous, yet now they are sweet; I bless the Lord for it. I heartily forgive all men for anything they have said of me; I pray that it may not be laid to their charge in the day of accompts [i.e., accounts]. As for what they have done to God and His cause, I leave that to God and their own consciences.

"Farewell, all Christian acquaintances and relations, father and mother, brethren and sisters. Farewell, sweet prison for my royal Lord Jesus Christ; it is now at an end. Farewell, all crosses of one sort or another; and so farewell, everything in time—reading, praying, and believing. Welcome eternal life, and the spirits of just men made perfect. Welcome Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, into thy hands I commit my spirit.

" Sic subscribitur,

"ROBERT GARNOCK."

Patrick Forman.

the parish of Alloa, and was tried and suffered along with Robert Garnock. Patrick Walker tells of his being a hearer of Cargill at a fast-day service held at Loudon Hill, May 5, 1681. At the close of the afternoon sermon, a cry was raised, "The enemies are coming upon you," and immediately the dragoons came in sight All fled. A shot fired at Cargill missed him, but the ball ploughed its way through Patrick Forman's hair, doing him, however, no other harm. Soon after this escape he was apprehended. He was charged with disowning the king. According to the account given by his enemies of his declaration before the Council, a knife was found on him with the inscription, "for cutting tyrants' throats." This may be the reason why his right hand was ordered to be cut off before death.—Ed.]

HE LAST TESTIMONY of PATRICK FORMAN, who lived in Alloa, and suffered at the Gallowlee, October 10, 1681.

"I THOUGHT it fit, being sentenced to die within three days, to write this testimony, to show you that I die not as a fool; and I declare I am in my right mind, and not prodigal of my life, as some allege; but I love life as well as any, and would do as much to save it. But when my life comes in competition with the truths of Jesus Christ, I dare not buy it with the denial of the smallest of truths (if any of them may be called small), but know, that the least of the truths are of greater moment than the whole world and the inhabitants thereof. Now, therefore, do not asperse me, when I am gone, with ng a Presbyterian; for (though in great weakness) I am a Presn, both in profession and practice, though my failings be many. I believe that there is but one God; Father, Son, and Holy one Redeemer; one way of salvation; and that it is through Christ, according to that word (John xiv. 6), 'Jesus saith unto am the way, and the truth, and the life; no man cometh unto ther, but by Me.' And likewise I leave my testimony to the criptures of the Old and New Testament; and my soul desires the Lord that ever they were in our mother tongue. een refreshed in conversing with them, when the Spirit of the as backed them. But I know likewise, they are but a killing without the Spirit. Yet this I would advise you, as a dying for Christ, to search the Scriptures and seek the Lord's mind n; for there are none noble, but these who search the Scrip-And oh! that I could recommend them to you, as they have weet and refreshful to me. Yea, they are as a garden of melling flowers; in them are cures for all diseases, and refor all distempers; yea, they commend themselves; they one of my commendation. Make good use of them while ye hem; for if idolaters get their will, they will not be long st you. I pray the Lord may prevent it.

I leave my testimony to the Confession of Faith, Larger and · Catechisms, the Solemn Acknowledgment of Sins, and Engage-Duties. I bear my testimony to the National Covenant, and League and Covenant. Likewise, I adhere to all the faithful nies that have been given for the truth, since the year 1638; lly the Sanquhar Declaration and Rutherglen Testimony, and pers found on Henry Hall at the Queensferry, called the New int; and to the lawfulness of Torwood Excommunication, and testimonies of the martyrs who are gone before me according ruth, both in fields, on scaffolds, and in the seas. And likeleave my testimony to that poor persecuted remnant, that are as berries on the tops of the outmost branches, wandering being desolate, afflicted and tormented, groaning under that e of tyranny. Oh! Lord, deliver them in Thine own way and nd encourage them now, when there is no encouragement en, and their eyes cannot behold their teachers.

d now, my friends, I tell you, being within a few hours to step time into eternity, that ye beware of casting aspersions on any Lord's people, for owning their duty; which is, avowing and declaring Jesus Christ to be King in Zion, head of His people, and only Lord of our consciences, and declining all powers, which are contrary to, and inconsistent with, our Lord's kingly power.

"And now I declare I own magistracy, as it is an ordinance of God, and offered my willing subjection unto them; but when the magistrate becomes a tyrant by overturning the whole law of God, and the just laws of the nation (he or they being once covenanted to the contrary) then I think it my duty, as I am bound by the Scripture, and our Covenants, and my own conscience, to show, in my station, my dislike of the wrongs my lovely Lord and Master is getting. as the Scripture declares, 'There are no powers but of God, and the powers that be, are ordained of God.' Then consequently that power cannot be of God, that murders the people of God; otherwise ye must say, that the Lord is the author of evil; which were homid Now, therefore, my dear friends, suppose that they will blasphemy. take away our lives, under the name of treason and rebellion (as they have done to our brethren these twenty years), yet it is not so; but for religion and loyalty to our Lord and Master, and to every ordinance of man, as it is consistent with the law of our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore, as ye would be answerable at the day of our appearance, when we shall stand naked and bare before the Judge of all the earth, speak not against us, lest ye be reckoned amongst the fighters against Jesus Christ; for I declare, I have owned nothing but that which is the duty of the whole nation, as well as mine And I doubt not, but the Lord will reckon with this generation ere it be long, for maintaining that throne of iniquity these twenty years.

"And now, I declare as a dying man, that it is but justice that is come upon this poor nation; for, when the Lord set them free from that yoke of bondage they were lying under by that old tyrant Charles First (who designed to cut off the Lord's people, which he put in practice, in murdering the Lord's people in Ireland by the hands of the bloody Papists, and thought to have done so to England and Scotland; but the Lord prevented him, and put a stop to his tyranny, by suffering men to take away his life, and causing his family to be banished, and brake the yoke off our neck, and became our Lord, King, and Head), we soon wearied of the Lord, and cast Him off, and said, we will have a king to rule over us like the nations; and ye may judge whether he has reigned Saul-like or not. And I doubt not but he shall be taken away in wrath, because he was given in the Lord's anger; and though his time has been a groaning time, yet his

l be terrible, and the people shall find the smart of it; as the of Israel did, when they fell at Gilboa.

t you, as ye would tender the glory of God, and desire the of your own souls, mourn for the wrongs ye have done to of God, in your owning of that tyrant, who is the malignants' d god. And now I am sure, ye are left without excuse, if ye cast him off; and they, who will say he hath power over atters, must say God is unjust, and He is the author of evil; were horrid blasphemy.

ne matter of my condemnation is, because I will not yield to iquitous laws, and call tyranny authority, and a constitution edness a constitution of God; which I dare not, for my soul, ne least thought of. And now, my friends, I am to die for ng against Popery, and the inbringing of that Papist the Duke k], to defile the Lord's land; and declining their power, behey had murdered my brethren these twenty years, and testigainst all the wrongs my lovely Lord and Master hath got. ore, I charge you, to beware of speaking against me, or any brethren; for my head and my right hand shall be a witness you, who shall condemn us; whatever I have been, I am ghly honoured to witness for Christ's cause.

and now, my dear friends, I must tell you, that grace is free, am a debtor to free grace, and I am as a brand plucked out fire; yet my Lord hath loved me with an everlasting love. bless the Lord, I am in my right mind, and have hatred: no man's person, but in so far as they are fighting against d, and plotting against His holy child Jesus; as it is written, ii. 9, 'Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt them in pieces like a potter's vessel.'

leave my testimony against Charles Stuart, for his breach of ant, and for his setting forth that hellish Act of Supremacy, by he rescinded the law of God, and the just laws of the land, might murder the Lord's people. I likewise leave my blood him, and these bloody Counsellors, Justiciary and assizers, bethey take away my life, and the lives of my brethren, without ow of law or justice; for there were none of us guilty of action nes, and the protestation we gave them shall be a standing against them.

leave my testimony against Prelacy, because they have taken upon them the place of lords, which is proper to none but Jesus Christ; for we have but one God, one Lord, one Saviour and Master; and they have our blood upon their heads.

- "I leave my testimony against all the proceedings against the Lord's people, their murders in the fields, and in the sea, and on scaffolds.
- "I likewise leave my testimony against the bringing home of that tyrant, Charles Stuart, after they knew that he had broken all bonds that could bind men, and was no more to be believed.
- "I likewise leave my testimony against the Duke of York, and against the reception of him first and last; because they knew he was a professed Papist, and was seeking nothing but the lives of the Lord's people, as his actions declare. First he behoved to have a draught of these five mens' blood at Magus Muir [Thomas Brown, Andrew Sword, John Clyde, James Wood, John Waddell. Their testimonies are in the Appendix to "Naphtali."—Ed.], and next, of Mr James Skene, John Potter, Archibald Stewart, and the rest of our brethren since. Oh! bloody wretch, he is filling himself drunk with the blood of the saints; and when he was declared Viceroy and High Commissioner, as they call him, he behoved to have a draught of blood to sit down with, viz., of that faithful minister of Jesus Christ, Mr Donald Cargill, and the other four.
- "And then they sat down to their Parliament for enacting these hell-hatched Acts, placing Charles Stuart and his succession for their God, and that they call law and authority for their Bible. And now, when they have taken their breath, they must have our blood to slocken them [i.e., quench their thirst]. I leave my testimony against the Parliamenters, and my blood upon them. I am sure they will find it, and my brethrens', lying heavy upon them.
- "I likewise leave my testimony against bonders, cess and locality payers, for strengthening the hands of these wicked ruffians, the troopers and soldiers, who destroy the Lord's people. Now, therefore, dear friends, I warn you, as ye would flee from the wrath to come, shake yourselves of these things, if so be there may be hope. It may be, if ye be serious, ye will be hid in the day of the Lord's anger. Take warning, and flee from the wrath that is to come.
- "Likewise I leave my testimony against the unfaithfulness of the watchmen of Scotland, for they have not fed the flock, but fed themselves. Therefore I, as a dying man, must tell you, that it will be a wonder, if ever ye be honoured to be faithful, for your turning your backs on your Master, when all men are set against Him, and f • t t 7 evil company hath been made useful to me. Yea, these antisc turists were made instructive to me; for I saw these four men mean John Gib and his followers) were once as fair on the way, appearance, as any I knew. But I see gifts are not graces; a now, I think, they are hopeless; and I advise none that tenders [regards] the glory of God to meddle with them; for they are turn horrid blasphemers and deniers of the Scriptures. Beware of the for I have no time to give you a particular account of them.

"Now, my dear friends, farewell, with whom I have been freshed many times; the love of God be with you, and carry through. Farewell Holy Scriptures, wherewith I have been conforted. Farewell praying. Farewell sweet imprisonments. Farewell sweet stocks and irons, for Christ's sake. Farewell wanders and sweet reproaches for my Lord's sake. Farewell sun, moon, a stars. Farewell day and night. Farewell all created comforts. We come death, welcome gallows, for Christ's sake. Welcome etern Welcome angels. Welcome spirits of just men made perfect. We come praises that shall never have an end. There I shall through all the ages of eternity in Emmanuel's land. Welco Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; into Thy hands I recommend my spin "Sic subscribitur,"

"PATRICK FORMAN!

David Farrie.

IKE his fellow-sufferer, Patrick Forman, little else is kno of David Farrie, besides what he tells in his last Testimor He was a stranger to the power of Divine grace till ab four years previous to his martyrdom. According to his confessi before the Council, he disclaimed the king's authority, called him tyrant, asserted it lawful to kill murderers, and said the king is murderer, because he hath murdered the people of God.

the first field-preaching he ever attended—evidently in 1677 says he entered into covenant with the Lord, and at a comn in Irongray he had a clear manifestion of his interest.

ris communion was that of which John Blackader, the ejected er of Troqueer, gives so graphic an account in his Memoirs. k place in the summer of 1678. The services of the Saturday held at Meiklewood in Nithsdale, about seven miles from ries. Blackader preached in the forenoon from 1 Cor. xi. 24, this in remembrance of me;" and John Welch, the ejected er of Irongray, in the afternoon; but his text has not been led. On the Sabbath, the congregation assembled in a small in the Skeoch Hill, Irongray. Here they were secure from vation, as they were shut in by the rising ground all around; while, from the heights above, sentinels could command a of the surrounding country for many miles. Upwards of three and, including "gentlemen from far and near," were present.

Mr Arnot, late minister of Tongland, lectured in the morning, Mr Welch preached and broke up the action, which was his ary. The rest of the ministers exhorted and took their turn at able service. Mr Dickson preached in the afternoon. The was closed in the evening without disturbance. It was a ly and gloomy day, the sky lowering, and often threatening ers; but the heavy clouds did not break, but retained their ture, as it were to accommodate the work; for ere the people o their houses and quarters, there fell a great rain, which that waxed the waters, and most of them had to pass through both Lairn and the Cluden."

ust when the large assemblage was about dismissing, an alarm given that the dragoons were coming. The men who had arms d they made a troop of horse and four or five companies of foot stantly made preparation to receive them, and for three hours ined expecting their approach. But the tidings had either been, or the dragoons, alarmed at the large number they found asoled, did not advance, for no enemy appeared.

Next day Blackader preached from Heb. xiii. 1, "Let brotherly continue," on a hill-side in the same parish, but about four miles the Skeoch.

The spot where the communion took place is carefully preserved he surrounding inhabitants, in much the same state as it was in 3. A tenant who some years ago removed a few of the Communion Stones to build a dyke, was compelled, in order to silence the voice of his neighbours' indignation, to put them back where he found them. The stones that were used for seats when receiving the Sacrament are placed in four rows, each two rows forming one table, and giving accommodation in all for about an hundred and twenty communicants. Down the middle of each pair of rows are a few stones on which boards for the tables were fixed. At the one end there is a heap or pile of stones about four feet high, on which the bread and the wine were placed.—Ep.]

"DEAR FRIENDS,—I desire to bless the Ladthat I am sentenced to be a martyr for Christ and Recause by wicked men, whose actions prove what the are; yet glory be to the name of God, that this day I do not suffer as an evil-doer, but for the testimony of the truth in owning Jesus Christ as head in His church; yea, in the Church of Scotland; and not only so, but covenanted to be so, as He was with the children of Israel, in the sight of the nations; which Covenant, made betwixt Jesus Christ and this land, I bless the Lord, that by His strength, I have been enabled to own before all these accusers of mine, especially the bloody Committee, the bloody Council, and the dreadful bloody assizers of the people of God, and givers of them their sentences of death; all instituted by Charles Stuart, who was once by his profession, and by his oath, an owner of that Covenant.

"Now the grounds of my sentence are to be seen in my interogrations before the Committee, Council, and Justiciary, so called. At which I was asked, if I owned my former speeches. I said, What I had said, I had said. But in case that any might think, that I had heart malice at him, whom they call king, I told them, I wished neither him nor them, nor their souls, any more evil nor [i.e., than] I wished my own; but since he had broken the Covenant with God, and turned out all our ministers, obtruded Prelacy on the Church, and overturned the whole work of Reformation, I could not own him as king, and them as judges; seeing he and his emissaries were proceeding to bring in Popery into the land. And I disowned them as my judges, and told them, There was a day coming, wherein they and I would be arraigned before a Judge, ere it was long, and receive righteous judgment, and that I, in that day, would be a witness against them for their unrighteous sentences against the people of God, and their unrighteous proceedings against us, to take away our lives for owning and adhering to the word of God and our sworn Covenants. And when I was asked again the same questions, I answered, What I had said, I had said; for I had said as much as would be for the woe and sorrow of all present, except those that were penitent.

"Now let men judge, whether or not it becomes any to own Charles Stuart as king, and them as judges, seeing they have broken the Covenant, and over-turned the work of Reformation, and shed so much of the people of God their blood; and not only so, but also have made a Duke, popish by profession, heir to the crown, to be the door whereat they may receive Popery into the land. For I think there are none but in some measure they allow Popery, that will not witness against and withstand him and them in their proceedings; especially that black Test, which that wicked Parliament hath put forth, among all their other proceedings these twenty years against God, His work and people; whereof the overturning our ministry, and thrusting in of Prelacy, the unlawful Acts of Indulgence, first and last, the killing and murdering of the people of God in fields, and scaffolds, and seas, in one place and another, are a witness.

"Oh! the Great Witness, that is, and will be standing against the said Charles Stuart, and his unlawful Council and Parliaments, and all their proceedings! The Lord, in the second Commandment, threatens His wrath against the children for the fathers' iniquity, unto the third and fourth generations of them that hate Him. And if the Lord visit not the successors of this generation aforenamed with dreadful judgments, I am mistaken; yea, and all these that join and comply with them, either ministers or professors (I mean the indulged), and all these that bond with the enemies, or give them clats [i.e., scrapings together] of gear for their liberation, when they are brought to prison upon the account of owning the truth; or in any manner of way acknowledge them as magistrates; I say (without repentance), I see no way that they can miss God's wrath.

"But I think I need not insist much on these subjects; for all the warnings they have gotten (which are many) by ministers and professors, one way or other, especially on scaffolds, since Mr James Guthrie [of Stirling] to this day, have not been effectual; their actings prove them to be more hardened in their sin than when they Therefore I think, it seems that the Lord will either give them no more warnings, or else take them shortly away, or both. Indeed, He may give them more warnings, but if ever they do the most part of this generation any good, I greatly question. I mean these whom I have named; for I think, with several others who are gone before me, and are going off the stage by death, that there will be dreadful judgments to follow on this generation, for breach of Covenant with God, and open rebellion against Him by these iniquitous laws of theirs, in taking away the lives, liberties, and privileges of the people of God; and not only so, but in making Charles Stuart head of the Church, which becomes not him, nor any mortal; for Jesus Christ is head of His own Church, and Lord over the con sciences of men.

"And as for me, I would not have my conscience tied by Charles Stuart's belt, nor any who are called his subjects, though I were to live an hundred years; no, though I could have the whole world for my pains; for I might as well tie my conscience to the devil and my own corruptions, as do it, by yielding submission to his iniquitous laws, by either bond or cess, or anything relating thereto. Now, I bless the Lord, I hope that He, who hath led me hitherto, will lead me away from him and his, and my own corruptions, and the devil, ere the tenth day of this month pass over [i.e., the day of his execution].

"And as for my own particular interest, I bless the Lord I am in some measure as clear of my interest in Christ, as I am that my pen is writing on this paper. For I hope that the Lord will carry me honourably through, and give me that which He hath promised; ay [i.e., always] when I asked of Him faith, He gave me faith, life, light, and a heart to believe; and love to Him, and His glory, interest, cause, Covenant, and work of Reformation; and strength to stand, and withstand my enemies, inward and outward, who many a time have assaulted and tempted me, striving to drive me away to sin. Indeed, it is true, I lived most lewdly, ay, till within a little more nor [i.e., than] these four years.

"Oh! if I could go to the stage, blessing and magnifying the Lord that it hath pleased Him to bring me from the devil's fireside, as it were, and draw me out to hear the Gospel of Christ! I bless Lord, the first field-preaching that ever I heard, I entered in nant with Him, to follow Him though it should cost me my and at a communion in Irongray, in Galloway, I had the clear festation of my interest. Oh! free grace! oh, free love! oh, free y! Oh! what am I, that He hath been so kind to me, oh, me! oor me! And not only so, but also when He discovered the of the woeful Indulgence from the Supremacy, that He made it n to me, and also made me stand and withstand that woeful and to join with that party, by the Bond found upon Mr Richard eron, whom He honoured to witness against it. And for this, I e to bless Him.

Oh! I think, it is Scotland's mercy this day, that He hath ed the eyes of the blind to see these abominations, especially ig the ministers, I mean the indulged, and these who plead for. Oh! Scotland's mercy hath been great, that, notwithstanding feir rebellion and joining with rebels by that Supremacy, the opened the eyes of the blind, to see these abominations, and stify against them. Oh! I say, this is Scotland's mercy, though may think otherwise; for if the Lord had not opened up that o poor things, it had been a token that He would have gone His and not owned His Covenanted land any more. But it is a token good yet to the land, that notwithstanding of all our rebellions at Him by breach of Covenant, He continues yet to discover to people what is sin and duty.

And this also is a token that the Lord will not leave Scotland, th He may chastise it very sore; His taking the blood and of His saints on fields, seas, and scaffolds, to witness for His nants; for the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church. this is another token for good to the Church, that there is a ant (though small) that is weeping and lamenting over the en case of the Church, and over the unconcernedness of the le of God; or of these who say, they are the people of God; and here are so few to keep clean garments, and to wrestle and witness st the sin of this generation of Covenant breakers and usurpers. sirs, is not this a sweet cordial yet, for all that is come upon Oh! sirs, take courage, and plead with the Lord, and also, igh His strength, plead with your whorish mother, viz., the ined, and their deeds, which they have done, and those that plead Oh! plead, and plead in patience: let not self rise, let passion rise and vex you; be sober, be not soon angry; fear not reproaches; but beware of giving the enemies, or priends, just ground of reproach.

"Walk in the sight of God and man both, without offer then, if men will be offended, let it be for your duty, and not But oh! be tender of the glory of God; let there be janglings, or foolish and unlearned questions among you, that they gender strife. Be tender one of another; do not every small circumstance, till ye have God with you in your and the thing be a known sin. Avoid evil company, and rat yourselves to prayer when alone, and with company when have the occasion; and miss no occasion; for it will be t way to cause the Lord to leave you and the land; and the Oh! invite one another to you, if He depart from you. especially young folk, for I think, if the Lord do good generation, it will be to young folk. Oh! babes and suck to the work; for the Lord hath promised, that, 'out of the: babes and sucklings He will perfect praise.' Who knows at your duty, but the Lord will yet send teachers who will the gap, to hold away wrath, but till the Lord send them, the gap yourselves; and when ye have got them, lay no stress upon them, lest the last plague be worse than the first

"Oh! keep warfare against corruptions, and the devil, thing. Oh! do not make an idol of the godly, though they godly, zealous, judicious and prudent; I do not mean the that the deniers of Christ and His kingly office mean. your only God, and not another. Use all things to the use ing, and strengthening one anothers' hands. Own and your brother's just cause, when it comes to an hearing, espthe matters of God, and receive one another, but not to disputations. Join with and own the godly who are peniten there be faults and failings, providing they be sensible of th for the Lord maketh more of one prodigal, or of one lost sh is come home, or is found, than He doth of ninety-nine, v So ought ye to do among yourselves: but b not astray. any sinful union.

"Do not grip after ministers, till they at least come up the work where Mr Donald Cargill left it. Ye will them honest till ye find them so; for I know there is n will venture all for Christ and His cause, (I mean their lives, and fortunes,) till they be such: and there are none but s can be counted faithful; for He hath said, 'He that loveth father or mother, wife or children, houses or lands, better than Me, is not worthy of Me;' and that they who do so, 'cannot be My disciples.' Therefore you must of necessity look to these things among yourselves, till the Lord send shepherds who will search for the flock, and not heave nor tear the flock in delivering them into the hand of their enemies; as we have the sad experience of it this day. Oh! I would not be in the case of the ministers of Scotland this day, for the world.

"Consider Luke xvii. 10: 'So likewise ye, when ye shall have done all these things which are commanded you, say, "We are unprofitable servants!"' Let the law of God be your rule; and when ye have done all to keep the law, yet consider that it cannot merit any good thing; but you must lean only to the merits and sufferings of Jesus Christ; but yet the law must be observed and obeyed. It is true, no mere man is able perfectly to keep the commandments of God; but let not this be your snare, for it is the snare of many of this generation. Oh! sirs, study the Scriptures. Walk by the strictness of the law of God, and the liberty of the gospel of peace; but do not abuse your liberty, to cause the way of God to be evil spoken of.

"I speak as a dying man; that which I have learned from the word of God, and the turnings of dispensations. Oh! He hath taught me, by His word and gospel, and the teaching of His Spirit, many things that I cannot express; not one of a thousand. Oh! He hath filled my mouth many a time with arguments, till I could go no further; I desire to speak it to the commendation of free grace. Oh! if the enemies knew what true grace was, they would not do as they do. But truly I think the judgment shall be terrible that they shall be trysted [i.e., visited] with. Oh! it hath been weighty to me, to think on their destruction and misery, which I have thought upon many a time to be eternal; and yet I have thought, upon the other hand, that it was my duty, when God's justice passed the sentence, to say, Amen (as it were) and so have desired that the Lord would let His determination be executed upon them.

"Now, there needs none of the suffering remnant be discouraged, for God is God, and His Word is His Word; and there is no change of times, nor alteration of dispensations, but the Word will clear all, in some place of it; and there is no sin that can be committed, but there is a reproof in the Word of God to suit it; nor one objection in the heart, but there is an answer for it from the Word: so study the Word of God, and implore His presence in reading of it. Make much use of the Confession of Faith, the Larger and Shorter Catechisms; mind our Covenants, National and Solemn League. Be not drawn away with the tyranny and perjury of the Know that God is God, and that He will not sit with [i.e., endure] the wrongs He hath gotten by the tyranny and perjury of these men; I mean him whom they call supreme magistrate, Charles Stuart, and these under him. God be thanked, His Church is well quit of him; though a gallows be set up for the Church, and all the Jews, yet it is like, Haman must have a swing of his own weight on the gallows he hath prepared, or else some more disgraceful death. Mind Rutherglen Testimony and Sanquhar Declaration, and the papers found at the Queensferry. Do not think that these will fall to the ground. Mind our martyrs' testimonies, and everything consistent with the word of God.

"Do not think, but God will be about [i.e., deal] with this generation, for setting so light of such things, and casting them behind their backs. For I declare, I adhere to every sound writing that is according to the word of God, be the author who will; I say, I declare it as a dying man. Indeed this generation think no better sport, than to take any person and cast him into prison; and if they but find (when they have searched them most barbarously) a paper that there is any religion in, be they man or woman, lad or lass, presently they impeach them with treason; yea, but I am sure of this, that God will not sit with [i.e., endure] such things, but He will be about with them, be who they will. Oh! but it is sad to see such things; this land doubtless is ripening for a stroke, and a judgment will pursue it. Oh! who would have thought that Scotland would have quit with their covenanted God, and have trode upon all who have the image of God in any manner to be seen in them.

"It is true, all things work to the good of them that love Him. It is this that makes a prison, a banishment, a gallows where none uses to be hanged but murderers, sweet indeed. They think it will be for our disgrace, ignominy and shame, to take us to the Gallowlee to be executed; but they are all beguiled; it will be for our honour; our God is wise enough for all that. They think it is the disgrace of the Presbyterians in Scotland, to have our heads hanging, and to be hanged up before the sun. Nay, but they are all beguiled; for it will be recorded from one generation to another, that there was a party of ministers and people, who sealed the Covenant with their

I, and their heads were set up for a token of the Lord's kindto the land. But, for my part, I think myself unworthy to be oned among such; yet I hope that it shall be said amongst them ese days, that, if there had not been a party to suffer in our cities, would have had nothing but vile Popery in the land, and [there] be rejoicing that ever there was any to suffer for Christ in Scot-

Oh! Scotland, is there any land so highly honoured as thou None that is to be seen or heard of; but yet thou hast been of ations the most treacherous and bloody. Was ever a land so dthirsty!

'I can say no more; but oh! be earnest with God, and do not coff your duty, or otherwise I can see nothing but that the dful judgment of God shall both pursue you and the land. ed, if ye remain at your duty, it may be that ye shall prevail with Lord, both for yourselves and for the land. But I must leave to Him, who is your God, to lead and guide you in all truth and esty, both towards God and man, so I leave you to Him. farewell, thou vile Scotland; farewell thou highly honoured land. Farewell ye friends in Christ; and all friends and acquaines. Farewell life, and liberty in this life. Welcome Christ, yen and eternal salvation, for ever and ever!

" Sic subscribitur,

"DAVID FARRIE."

James Stuart.

odd of James Stuart is—"He was a young man, I might almost have termed him a boy, of good and serious inclinations, who had never been, as far as I can n, engaged in anything for which the law could have reached him, came in from the west country to see a relation of his [a brother] rison at Edinburgh. By what means, I know not, the other got out, and he was found in the room whence the other escaped. Where upon he was brought before a committee of Council, and soon ensured by their questions. When he was silent in some heads, and would not answer, some papers before me bear that Sir George Mackenne threatened to take out his tongue with a pair of pincers. [Stuart states this in his testimony.] Precisely upon his answers he was condemned, and in a few days after was taken and executed with the rest at the Gallowlee."—ED.]

HE LAST SPEECH AND TESTIMONY of JAMES STUART, who suffered at the Gallowlee, Edinburgh, October 10th, 1681.

"DEAR FRIENDS,—I being in prison for Christ, and His persecuted cause, though some may say otherwise, and that upon the account of my taking; but I do not care what any say, for I have had, and yet have, great peace in my sufferings.

"But some will be ready to say, that it was an imprudent and an unsure action, and so might have been forborne; and suppose it be so, it is not the head of my suffering, for it was not that upon which I was staged [i.e., accused]; for I was presently staged for the truth, the next day after I was taken, being brought before a committee, though indeed I was not so free as I should have been. There is a passage, Acts xxi., of Paul's going up to Jerusalem, which some say he might have forborne—but more especially his going up to the temple and doing these things which are according to the law. He might (I say) have forborne this, and walked consonant to his former practice, doctrine, and writings; but though his going to the temple was the occasion of his taking, yet it was not the head of his suffering.

"So I say, though that which I did in relieving my brother was the occasion, yet my suffering was stated on another head. But I cannot see how it is as ye say, for I, seeing it my duty, and finding opportunity, had a clear call for all that I did. And besides all that, we being bound in covenant to defend and maintain one another, we nd as well to relieve one another out of prison, when there is bility seen.

ut I need not stand much in making this out, it being the it the Lord took to bring me to my suffering. And I am content with my lot, and desire with my soul to bless Him for ough I was dreadfully aspersed, when that Bond of liberation ered to us; for though some had clearness to take it, yet I never have thoughts of taking it in peace; and I bless the ho kept my hand from it. It was neither strength nor sharpness in me, that withheld me from yielding to the temptation; Lord hath showed Himself graciously favourable and kind e now, when I am set up like a beacon upon the top of an d the eyes of many being upon me, and all are wondering at d calling me distracted, and saying I am a fool; but, the Lord iked! I have all the senses that ever I had; though distressed, espair not.

There is nothing in it meritorious, I conor all my suffering He may put me into hell. But I say, the g of reproaches, and the scourge of tongues, is a symptom or f His way when it is for His sake: 'Blessed are ye, when men vile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil you falsely, for My sake' (Matt. v. 11). It is for His name's nat I am suffering, and this confirms me of it: 'Ye shall be of all men for My name's sake; but he that endureth to the all be saved' (Matt. x. 22).

ow, it is for Christ's kingly office that I am suffering; and ing the main head on which my suffering is stated, even that ruth, viz., that Jesus Christ is king and head of Zion; I desire arge you to beware of misconstructing my sufferings, and sayit I was suffering for disowning of authority, and declining of ; for it is not so, I being a Presbyterian in my judgment, and both magistracy and ministry, according to the word of God, He hath ordained them. But if Charles Stuart's authority If he be exercisording to the word of God, I am mistaken. power to the terrifying of evil doers, and the encouraging of nat do well, I die in an error. I say, beware of your judging; a Presbyterian in my judgment, and a member of the Church land, and am to seal it with my blood.

adhere to that blessed transaction, between the Father and the Son, that holy device devised from all eternity, the Father to send His Son, and the Son to come and satisfy Divine justice, and so redeem lost man.

"I adhere to all the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, which are all standing in force until this day, and obligatory upon us, except the ceremonial law, with a part of the judicial, which is now abrogated and abolished by our Lord's coming, He being the end of the law.

"I adhere to our glorious work of Reformation, Confession of Faith, Larger and Shorter Catechisms, Acknowledgment of Sins and Engagement to Duties; though they be abused and misconstructed by many. And I adhere to the Sum of Saving Knowledge, wherein is held forth the life and marrow of religion.

"I adhere to all the testimonies that have been given; Mr [James] Guthrie, Argyle, and Warriston. They gave in their testimony according to the light that the Lord gave them; and I do not condemn their testimony (as some say), for, at some times the Lord gives more light than at other times; and so it cannot be said, that we contradict or disown their testimony, though it hath pleased the Lord, through continuance of time, to give more light of the abounding abominations that are still growing and abounding in this generation; and so, whatever they omitted through want of that light, which it hath pleased the Lord to let us see, makes no contradiction.

"I adhere to the Rutherglen and Sanquhar Declarations. I adhere to the paper found upon Mr Richard Cameron at Airsmoss, July 22, 1680. I adhere to the papers that were found at the Queensferry upon Henry Hall. I adhere to any writings that are according to the Word of God, for truth is truth, come by whom it will.

"Now, as a dying man, I adhere to all these things. And, I having received an unjust sentence from men, for owning and adhering to the same, and for protesting against the inbringing of Popery to defile the land, and likewise upon these accounts, I disown Charles Stuart to be my king and sovereign. First, Because of that hellish Act of Supremacy, and that Act Rescissory, whereby they have overturned and wrested all the laws, acts, and constitutions of the land; for in the foresaid act, he assumeth that unto himself, which belongs properly to our Lord and Master, and says that he rules over all things, both spiritual and temporal; and then, when he hath made himself ne over all things, he rescinds the laws that are of God, and sets er laws, to satisfy his own lusts, in murdering, killing, and deng the Lord's people; and this is the reason why I disown him; kewise his dreadful prejury and blasphemy in his Covenanting. I decline them as judges, for the opening a door there to y, which they have done, by receiving that popish Duke in; them, which I protest and leave my testimony against; it contrary to our engagements, to suffer Papists to dwell amongst d to have a professed Papist to usurp over us; it being repugo our principles.

leave my testimony against Prelacy, it being a limb of that ristian whore of Rome. I leave my testimony against all the nations of this generation, as blaspheming of the holy name Lord, drunkenness, stealing, whoring, sodomy, and all manner I leave my testimony against all indifferency cleanness. 1 leave my testiagainst the Indulgences first and last, as having a greater in the breaking of the Church of Scotland, nor [i.e., than] e enemies living in it could have done; for they sold their er's truths, and did give away their pleasant things with their hands, and so came in under Charles Stuart, and took him ieir head, and have cast off their rightful head Jesus Christ; nave put all things under his [Charles Stuart's] feet, and have him to be head over all things to the Church. Woe will nto them, for what they have done to the poor Kirk of ind.

I leave my testimony against silent and unwatchful ministers. Ember, there are many taken away, and, it is to be feared, in their ity; and do ye think that ye are free of their blood? Ye may what warning ye have given, and if it be faithful, then ye may hat ye are not guilty. But there is not a minister this day, who say he is at his duty. They refuse to give counsel when asked I myself can witness; for when that liberation was granted, I to one of them, and charged him, as I judged him faithful, to se his mind, which he refused; and said, 'Silence might serve for swer, I was not suffering for truth.' But I heartily forgive him, all men, what they have done to me, as for my own particular; ow they have reproached Christ and His way, it is not mine to re them.

Oh! the ministers of Scotland are become light and treacherous persons, as well as revolters. They are become ravening wolves; so I cannot see how they have not unministered themselves. If Abiathar was turned out of the priest's office for leaving David, and following Adonijah, how much more ought the ministers of Scotland, for leaving of Him who is the true head of the Church, and choosing Charles Stuart for their head? It is not long since they were preaching that to be sin which they are now practising.

"I have no doubt, but ere long, there shall come out fire from Abimelech, and destroy the men of Shechem, and fire from them, And ere long, Mr Donald Cargill and Mr Richard and devour him. Cameron, their names, that now stink among ministers and professors, shall have a sweet smell; and these that calumniate and asperse them, their names shall go away with a stink, and flee away with a But I am sure, that the now glorified martyr, Mr Donald Cargill, his name shall last from generation to generations; and he shall have cause to rejoice in his King, Head, and Master, who is Jesus Christ, when those who condemned him shall not know where to flee for shelter, and shall be weary of their head, king, and master, who is Charles Stuart. And what brethren (disaffected as they were) did cast upon him as a shame, was his glory and decorment. was of a high heroic spirit, and was free of a base and Simonian carriage. He was a man hated of his brethren; but the great Elijah Time and tongue would fail me, to speak to his in his time was so. He was the man who carried the standard, without commendation. the help of any visible; but he had the help and assistance of his Master, at whose command he was aye [i.e., always] wandering here without residence; yet knew of one above, and had full assurance of his dwelling-place.

"I leave my testimony against uplifting, or causing uplift, cess or excise, or anything for the maintaining that tyrant, or any of his emissaries; it being for nothing but maintaining these ruffian troopers and soldiers, who are kept for nothing but to suppress and bear down the Gospel, and banish it out of the land. I leave my testimony against all declaration takers and bonders, especially the taking that Bond of Liberation, as they call it, of the date of August 5, 1680, as far as they were convinced it was sin, as some of themselves said it was. I leave my testimony against that Test, and all the rest of their proceedings, and Acts of Parliament.

"I leave my testimony against jailor-fee paying; it being an acknowledgment of their tyranny to be lawful, which, how unjust it is, a proof among others; for that night that I was before York rest, being October 1st, 1681 (I being examined by Sir George nzie), York and Mr William Paterson coming unto me, when I ent, and would not answer to some things they asked at me; atened to take out my tongue with a pair of pincers, if I would not he held him as a witness against me. And though I told at he was a judge the other night, and would ye hold him as ess against us before your Justiciary? yet they did it; which ither according to law nor reason. If there were no more but he passage, it proves them to be unjust judges, as there are worse than that is.

leave my testimony against the mounting of militia, and upof money for his service. I leave my testimony against everythat may strengthen his hands, or weaken the hands of the of the Lord.

low, I desire you, as a dying man, who am within forty-eight or little more, of eternity, to disown Charles Stuart to be your ad sovereign. I charge you so to do, as you would have peace iod; for I never knew what true peace was, till I did it, and esus Christ for my king and lawgiver. This is not that I disings or kingly government, for I own both; but when their ; are such as his are, and a covenanted king as he was, we in conscience yield to him. For he hath murdered the Lord's our brethren; and when we acknowledge even his civil ity, I cannot see in what way we are clean of their blood, it by a shadow of law and authority that he takes away their lives, we cannot own him in that; and to own him in ecclesiastic s, I think there will be none so absurd as to say we should t, he having nothing to do in Church matters; he only received eptre in his hand, to be a hedge about, and to defend her t all opposition; and now ye may see how he hath destroyed stead of defending her.

give you it in short, and desire you to ponder and consider it, will not find me so mad, as many of you say I am; for I am odigal of my life, neither have I a hand in my own death; for my life as well as my neighbours, and it is as dear to me as yours is to you. But when it comes in competition with my truths, I dare not seek to save my life with prejudice there-Neither am I wearied of my life, though it is true, indeed, s nothing here to be coveted, that is not enough to weary one.

Neither am I wearied of it; therefore I charge you, that ye do not brand me with aspersions when I am gone.

"I leave my blood on all the assizers, who, after we had given in our protestation against all their proceedings, both in their Council and Justiciary, and told them that it was for no action that we were suffering, but only on the matters of conscience and judgment that we were pannelled; yet, notwithstanding of our charging them with our blood, they most unjustly took away our lives. Do not think that this flows from a spirit of malice, spite, bitterness, or revenge; for I desire to bless the Lord, I am free of the spirit of bitterness and revenge; but that they take away my life without and against any just law, I cannot get it passed.

"Do not think that I am enthusiastic, and take on me a bare impulse of the spirit for a call to suffer on, or the word as it lies literally, for a call; for it is not so; I having desired and used some endeavours, though it has been in great weakness, I confess. Yet, I dare say, in some respect my desire to the Lord about it hath been sincere, that He would help me to get His word and my own conscience consulted, and to try the word by the spirit, and the spirit by the word; for it is but a dead letter without the spirit.

"And likewise, my blood is lying, and will be heavy upon that And I will not say, but the Lord will permit him to Popish Duke. usurp the crown of Scotland; but the blood that he hath got to welcome him home to it, and to satisfy his own lust, will weight him down from the throne; but, indeed, I fear that he get his design drawn to a great length, and get the ark carried away, even to your apprehension, out of Scotland. But remember the Philistines carrying away the ark, and the men of Bethshemesh looking into it, how the Lord smote them. And, so I think, when they have got the Church banished and destroyed, and the witnesses all killed; when they will look on the Church as carried clean away, and thereupon shall turn secure; will not the Lord be avenged on them, and charge them But, indeed, we with all the blood they have so heinously shed? have deserved no less, than the Lord's leaving of this land, and to give them into the hands of their enemies; but as long as there is no appearance of a better Church in the whole world, ye need not fear that the Lord will enhance Scotland's right of a Church to any other. He suffered the children of Israel many a time to fall into and lie under the hands of their enemies; but He never forsook them altogether, until there came a better in their place. Likewise my blood all these Parliamenters and Councillors, and these of the Justi, as they call it.

Now, dear friends, I am going to eternity, ere it be long, from ce I cannot return, and, as a dying man, I give you warning, old you take heed what you are doing. Be tender of the glory od, and take no unlawful gate [i.e., way] to shun suffering, nor shifts to come by the cross. But when there is a cross lying e way, see that ye seek not to go about it; and venture upon ing before sinning; for He never sent any a warfare upon their charges. If any knew the sweetness of a prison, they would not a fraid to enter upon suffering; ye would not join with the 's enemies, as ye are doing.

Oh! dear friends, take warning now, for it is a question if ever et any more warnings of this kind. For it is a sad juncture, or mstance of time, that your lot and mine are fallen into; but now going away home. Oh! the Lord is kind to me, who hath ured me so highly, and is also taking me away from the evil is to come; for indeed I think there are sad days abiding Scotland. Oh! sirs, be busy and venture all upon Him, and ill in His hand; and whatever you have been, let not that scare If you have been a great sinner, I say, let not that hinder you coming to Him, and closing with Him; for the greater sinner be, the more free grace is magnified in reclaiming you. k this from my own experience; for I was as a brand plucked of the fire; and He hath brought me through many difficulties, stations and snares, and made my soul escape as a bird out of cunning fowler's net, and brought me to a prison at length, to r bonds for Him. He made all things sweet to me, the company et to me, even bad company; He made reproaches sweet. been made to wonder at His kindness and love to me-ward. l now He hath brought me this length, without being feared what nies can do to me, and that is a great confirmation to me of love, that perfect love casts out fear. Now He is faithful, into se hand I commit my spirit and soul, and He will keep it against day.

"Now when I am going, farewell all friends and Christian acintances. Farewell sweet and holy Scriptures, wherewith my soul been refreshed. Farewell reading, singing, and praying. Fare-sweet meditation. Farewell sun, moon, and stars. Farewell all ted comforts. Welcome death; welcome sweet gallows, for my sweet and lovely Lord. Welcome angels. Welcome spirits of j men made perfect. Welcome eternity. Welcome praises. V come immediate vision of the Sun of Righteousness!

"Sic subscribitur,

"JAMES STUART.

HERE suffered also at the same time and place, one Al ander Russel, whose Testimony differing nothing in s stance from the rest, and being in some things not v conveniently expressed, it is not thought necessary to be publish at large; only these heads of it are remarkable.

- "1. He declares, That for the space of fourteen years, while heard the curates, he was a person given to all manner of licentic ness, keeping company with the profane; drinking, swearing, Sabbi breaking, and reproaching the people of God.
- "2. That the first field-preaching ever he heard, to which went merely out of curiosity, it pleased the Lord to convert him.
- "3. That the means of his being called out to the help of Lord's people at Bothwell, was the death of three of his child within ten days' space, which extraordinary providence impressed heart so, that he durst not sit [i.e., disregard] God's call to that we
- "4. He confesseth his having taken the Bond for living order (as it was called), and with great remorse acknowledges his failing, that he took not opportunity to confess that sin publicly. All other heads do coincide with the testimonies of the other four was suffered with him.

[Patrick Walker, who, along with his Defoe-like power of descrition, is ever finding fault with all others who had written about martyrs, now with Wodrow, and now with the compilers of the "Clo of Witnesses," blames the publishers for withholding Russel's te mony, and says, "it would have tended much to the commendation of the riches of the Lord's free grace, in strengthening, supportion and comforting him in all his sufferings, and in undergoing a valent death." Doubtless, however, the reasons the compilers giramply justify them for not publishing it.—Ed.]

Robert Gray.

DBERT GRAY, an Englishman, was apprehended in June or July 1681. From a sentence in the close of his testimony, it is evident that he had been known in Northumberland as attached to the persecuted cause; but nothing is said of this idictment. In April 1682, ten months after his apprehension, still in prison in the Canongate Tolbooth, and untried. On the wrote the letter (given in a following page) to John Anderrisoner in Dumfries. Anderson was a stranger to him, but had f his imprisonment, and written to him. Robert Gray's reply letter fell into the hands of the authorities, and formed the of his 'Interrogations' by a committee of the Council, May 13. tried on the 17th.

indictment strikingly shows for what little reason life was way in those times. It says nothing of the fact that he had been in prison for nine or ten months. After the usual le it proceeds:

rue it is that you, the said Robert Gray, having shaken off of God and respect to His majesty's laws, did most treasonite a letter upon the 18th of April last, to John Anderson, r also for treason in the Tolbooth of Dumfries, wherein you clare our present sovereign, the best and most merciful of o be a tyrant, and that therefore he ought not be owned as ewise, you did by that letter incite his majesty's subjects not him, and did deprave the late Act of Parliament made for the Test, calling it the Black Test, and destructive of all the Reformation.

nd you being called before the Lord Chancellor, and a comof Council, upon the 13th of May instant, you did of new ot only adhere to the said letter and all that was in it, but did commit the foresaid crimes, by declaring that you owned all these principles, and that it was a duty upon you to write so to your brother who was in prison.

"Of the which treasonable crimes, you, the said Robert Gray, are guilty and actor, which being found by an assize, you ought to be punished with the forfeiture of life, lands and goods, to the terror of others to commit the like hereafter."

He was sentenced to be hanged on the 19th. An account of his execution is given at the close of his Testimony. James Renwick was present at his execution. Alexander Shields records that Renwick told his mother, that, at the last execution which he was witness to (which was Robert Gray's), he thought, and had a strong impression of it, that he himself would be the next that he should see executed. And therefore, from that time he durst never appear, even though he was not known at an execution until he was brought to it himself.

"Barscob," mentioned in the postcript of Robert Gray's letter to John Anderson, was Robert M'Lellan, a son or brother of John M'Lellan, laird of Barscob, who was so prominently concerned in the rising that ended in the battle of Pentland.

Major Learmont was fined £2000 by Middleton's Parliament He commanded in the second attack at the battle of Pentland. Law, in his Memorials, quaintly but expressively tells the story of his life: "March 1682, Major Learmont, an old soldier, and now about seventy-seven years, and a tailor to his trade, who was at Pentland Hills in the insurrection, 1666, and at Bothwell Bridge insurrection, 1679, was taken in his own house within three miles of Lanark, in a vault which he digged under ground, and penned [i.e., arched] for his hiding. It had its entry in his own house, upon the side of a wall, and closed up with a whole stone, so close as that none would have judged it but to have been a stone of the building. descended below the foundation of the house, and was in length about forty yards, and in the far end, the other mouth of it was closed with fail [i.e., turf], having a fail dyke builded upon it, so that with ease he shut out the fail and closed it again. Here he sheltered for the space of sixteen years, by taking himself to it at every alarm, and many times hath his house been searched for him by the soldiers, but where he sheltered none was privy to it but his own domestics; and at length he is discovered by his own herds-He is carried before the Council, and examined; confesses he was at Pentland Hills, and at Bothwell Bridge fight, but came there to advise the people to accept of the Duke of Month's offers he made them in the king's name. He was sented on the 8th April, but he was reprieved to the 28th. During nterval his friends got the sentence changed into perpetual connent on the Bass Rock. He refused to take the Test, and was prisoner for five years. The rigour of imprisonment so told on tealth that his physicians declared he was dying, and he was let in bail. Freedom revived him, and he lived to see the Revolution 588; and he returned to his own house at Newholm, where he shortly afterwards in the eighty-eighth year of his age."

Hugh Macklewraith of Anchen floor, and Robert Fleming, seem, as Gray reports, to have taken the Test.

In the Appendix, in the 'Short Relation concerning the Reverend Richard Cameron,' will be found an explanation of the references at martyr, in the course of Robert Gray's Testimony.—Ed.]

HE LAST TESTIMONY of ROBERT GRAY, in North-umberland, who suffered for the truth, in the Grass-market of Edinburgh, May 19, 1682.

His Interrogations by a Committee of the Council, May 13.

"Robert Gray being called before the Chancellor a committee of Council, appointed for public affairs, and interrod, if he knew John Anderson, prisoner at Dumfries?

'He declared he did not know him, but had writ a letter to him; that letter being produced to him, he owned the same, as he tesd under his hand-write and subscription at the end thereof.

"And being asked, if he thought of the king and government as spressed in that letter?

"He said, he did, and he owned that in his judgment.

"And being asked, if he thought the king a tyrant?

"He said, he had written so, and owned it, and that he wrote this er to John Anderson, as his duty to his brother."

OLLOWS the foresaid letter, which was all the ground of his indictment. [This letter has been corrected from the indictment as given in Wodrow.—Ed.]

"DEAR FRIEND,—I received yours, and am very much refreshed to hear of any one in this day that is holding by the truth, and is helped to witness against the wrongs done to our Lord and Master, which is the main thing that we are called to at this time, by which God is glorified, and which shall bring peace to us at the end of the day. As in answer to that, about owning this tyrant in ecclesiastic matters, I hope it is beyond all doubt and debate, with all the zealous exercised Christians in Scotland, that he should not be owned at all in it; whatever the time-servers, that will sail with any wind that blows, do, we are not concerned; who are like Esau, who sold his birthright for a mess of pottage.

"And as for owning him in civil things, to me it is very clear, now as matters are stated, that he should not be owned; in a word, for his breach of the civil law, pardoning and setting free murderers and bougerers, and murdering of poor innocents, and making his will a law, and placing none in public trust, but such as have taken that black Test, utterly to disown the whole work of Reformation; with which way I cannot meddle directly nor indirectly, without saying a confederacy with them.

"I cannot tell how much more might be said upon this head, if time would permit; but this, I think, with what our late worthies did in casting this tyrant off, and out of the Church, might give full satisfaction not to own them in any thing, seeing they have acted for the devil more than ever; and the work has prospered in their hand more than formerly. Indeed, if we consult men at this time, in the matters of godliness, no wonder we be in the dark; but, oh! beware of that, and flee to the holy word of God. Beware of looking out at any back-door, or halting between two opinions; for of a truth there is a halting this day, that will not be approven of God, in meddling with this malignant party directly or indirectly. It is a thousand to one if they see it.

"P.S.—Barscob and Major Learmont got their sentence on to die on the 28th, and Hugh Mucklewraith and Robert to their sentence that day too, and should have died this last. But they got a remission to the 28th; and it is reported be and the rest have offered to take the Test, and they have the tyrant upon that account to save their lives. As for urg and Robert N., there is no word yet what is to be them. I shall give you an account afterwards. My soul to see the treachery that is used in the matters of God prisoners, and their seeking sinful shifts to shun the cross Oh! dear friend, seek to be kept steadfast in the day of

I can say no more; but leave you in His hand, who hath ou to the trial, and can carry you cleanly through it. I fellow prisoner and friend,

"ROBERT GRAY."

HE LAST TESTIMONY of ROBERT GRAY.

"MEN AND BRETHREN,—I having got my sentence of death from men who are unjustly taking away my life, merely for adhering to my principles, and have no matter of fact to prove against me, but only adhering to the truths of Jesus Christ, and testifying against their sinful laws and actions, which my indictment will ey take away my life for declining their authority, and trles Stuart a tyrant, and speaking against their Test, that made to overturn the whole work of Reformation, in call-Black Test.

many may condemn me, and no doubt do, in my writing to John Anderson, whom I own as my brother in Christ, pon the same heads in Dumfries prison. I do not much the time-servers say. But I hope none of the zealous Christians in the land, that are concerned with the wrongs eir Lord and Master, Jesus Christ, will do it; I having a to do what I did, he writing to me, and I giving him an which I have great peace, notwithstanding it has brought he trial, and my God has owned me in it. And let such demn me mind that Scripture: 'It is God that justifieth, who is he that condemneth?' I bless the Lord that ever I was honoured to testify against the wrongs done to my Lord and Master, Jesus Christ, either by word or write.

"Oh! wonder what am I, that ever He should have chosen the like of me, who have been one of the vilest of sinners! If the world had seen me as He saw me, they would not have chosen me, no, not to have kept company with. But, oh! wonder that His condescending love has not only taken me to be servant, but to be one of the children of the family! and has said to me, as John xiv. 19: 'Because I live, ye shall live also.' He has chosen me, and not I 'Behold, I have refined thee, but not with silver: I have Him. chosen thee in the furnace of affliction. For mine own sake, even for mine own sake, will I do it' (Isa. xlviii. 10, 11). His promise before ever I came to a prison, that He should honour me, as Psalm xci. 14, 15: 'Because he hath set his love upon me, therefore will I deliver him: I will set him on high, because he hath known my name. He shall call upon me, and I will answer him: I will be with him in trouble; I will deliver him, and honour him.'

"Now, this is the ground upon which I have walked, and the grip I got, which I have holden till now; I mean, when I covenanted with my God, to take Him upon the terms of His offer. It is a year by-gone, being the first week of May 1681, since I personally subscribed my name to be the Lord's; for before that I played many times fast and loose with God, for which I take shame and confusion of face to myself (which is my due); but since [that time] I have been kept free of what formerly I was guilty of, though the assaults of Satan have not been wanting. I durst not look back, nor yet take my word again; but desired to act and contend for my Lord and Master Jesus Christ's rights, and not to quit them to any, which He helped and owned me in.

"Oh! dear friends, all of you that are contending for Christ's truths, get once a right in Himself, and ye cannot then, nor dare not but contend for Him. But, while ye are in the dark about your interest, ye can never walk upon sure grounds; but [are] like a man walking in the dark, that has hopes of getting to his lodging, but knows not the way. And the thing that steals many of this generation off their feet is; they go to seek the way from others that are also in the dark of it themselves, and they seek the way from men, and follow the example of men, because they think they are godly men, and by their practice, they think they have the image of God; and because of ey follow them, and take their advice, and do what they do, g they cannot do wrong. But I am clear of it; that is not the God in this dark day, to seek it from blind guides, and not e true guide, Jesus Christ, who is given for a leader and a ader to His people, and [ye] ought to be led by none, nor have from none but Himself; for the Spirit of God says: 'Woe to ellious children, saith the Lord, that take counsel, but not and that cover with a covering, but not of my Spirit, that y add sin to sin: that walk, to go down into Egypt, and have ed at my mouth' (Isa. xxx. 1, 2).

1! but this is the very thing that I have seen at this day, ly since I came to prison. Oh! the treachery against God, as been there, which was my only burden and grief, and made ry of the prison, and desire to be gone; they taking counselen, and placing vile and unworthy men to agent and plead for Christ's matters, and dare not trust Him with it themselves. it is no wonder that He leave them, and they go a black gate y].

take the walls of the Canongate Tolbooth (which I was in near ten months) to be witness against the wrongs done ord and Master Jesus Christ, there, both before and since; tke the good maintenance they have had, to witness in their nce at the great day of accounts. They had never reason to n of wants, nor to say, that our Lord was a hard master. t they wrong Him, most treacherously and cunningly hiding eyes of the world their compliance with their agents; and whore, wiping their mouths, and saying, they have done no d saying, they have peace. Oh! but my soul trembles to I that peace; to seek peace with the enemies of God, and have peace in it. I will not say, but ye may have peace nt, when ye go out of prison; because ye are going home idols and Delilahs, whatever they be, either your wives or , or lands or employments. But I will say this, that if you onged the work of God for them, they shall be accursed to I prove a snare to you, and then you shall see what peace you e.

t such as have meddled, or are meddling with these perjured e that Scripture as anent their peace: 'They have made poked paths: whosoever goeth therein shall not know peace' 8). And I am convinced of it, that these that meddle with them directly, or indirectly, when called to witness for truth, or staged thereupon, and yield to them in their desires that are sinful, shall break their peace with God, and shall hinder themselves to get the bargain made with Him; and if they have made it, it will be very much if the bargain stand, without drawing a new engagement, and deep mourning for the wrongs done to Him. For our Lord is now taking a narrow look of Scotland, and seeing who did put the hand to the plough to carry on the work of Reformation, to banish Popery out of Scotland; and now He is seeing who is countenancing Popery, and this Popish Duke, that has gotten in his foot in Scotland, which will be the blackest sight that ever poor Scotland saw.

"But whoever of the nobles or gentry of the land is guilty, yet I will assure you, as sure as the Lord is in heaven, ministers, yea, Presbyterian ministers are not free of Popery coming into the land; because they have not testified against it, who should have set the trumpet to their mouths, and have given faithful warning; and so they would have delivered their souls, and the souls of others, whereas now poor things are ensnared. But their blood will be required at ministers' hands.

"And ye that are old wily professors, that have taken the lee side of the brae, and are advising others to do so; ye are not free of the innocent blood shed in Scotland, and the loss of poor souls because of your practice of seeming piety and holiness; so ye blind their eyes. And what ye do, that is a godly man in the town or country parishes, in going to hear the curates, that have taken that black Test, or any other thing, because ye do it to save your gear, they follow your practice. But assure yourselves, the loss of their souls will be required at your hands, who are ringleaders in an evil course, be who ye will, in prison or out of prison; our Lord is now near His coming, and is begun to tread upon Scotland's sea, and will within a little tread upon the necks of His enemies, and come and deliver His church; which I die in the faith of. But it will be a costly delivery.

"Now I adhere and give my testimony to that glorious work of Reformation, in reforming this land from Popery.

"And I adhere to the National Covenant and Solemn League and Covenant, Confession of Faith, Larger and Shorter Catechisms, Acknowledgment of Sins and Engagement to Duties.

"I adhere to the testimonies of our worthies that have gone before, and these of late, that are so much condemned by the professors of this generation; but this I will adventure to say, that these, who are condemning them whom God hath justified, shall never be honoured to give a testimony to the truths of Christ, and against His enemies.

- "I adhere to all the meetings and assemblies of the people of God that have been in Scotland in defence of the Gospel.
- "I adhere to Pentland, Drumclog, Bothwell, and Airsmoss, where our worthies fell; which blood (I die in the faith of it) shall have a glorious spring; which quarrel the God of heaven, the covenanted God of Scotland, will resent.
- "I also adhere to and heartily join with the Rutherglen Declaration; and I disown the Hamilton Declaration, because it took in the malignant interest.
- "I adhere to the Sanquhar Declaration and Queensferry Papers, and the Excommunication at the Torwood, as lawful and right, in casting off Charles Stuart and the rest of the malignant party. And it shall be seen within few years, that the party which the Lord stirred up for that use, was in their duty, and these that lay by, were not.
- "I also adhere to and heartily join with that noble testimony given at Lanark, against that black Parliament, that sat last to overturn the whole work of Reformation, and made that black Test that has defiled the whole land, and made an open door for Popery to come into the land. I leave my testimony against all these that have taken it, or against those that have or may take favours from men, that have taken that test especially.
- "I leave my testimony against prisoners, who, being in upon the account of religion, do tamper any way with these black testers to wrong the interest of God. Woe, woe, woe will be to them that give the enemy such ground to say, we are but fanatics, and will do anything before we lose our lives; which I myself heard some of them say, which was a grief to my soul, and did sting me to the heart.
- "I leave my testimony against such professors and preachers, as can sit in such company, and hear such talk, and not resent it; it being an acquiescing in the discourse to keep silence.
- "I leave my testimony against all giving bond and caution, or petitioning the stated enemies of our Lord Jesus Christ.
- "I leave my testimony against all the cess-payers, and doing any other thing that strengthens the enemies' hands, and against jailor feepaying; for by so doing it says, we have done wrong to them; which I deny, that we have done them any, but they have done to us.

"I leave my testimony against these ministers that sat in a presbytery against worthy Mr Richard Cameron, that highly honoured martyr of Jesus Christ, and thought to have deposed him from his ministry. I also leave my testimony against that meeting that sat at Sundowal [in the parish of Dunscore], in Nithsdale, which I was a witness to; ye will see it more fully spoken to in that paper of mine which was found at Kelso, which I own, and desire that it may be put in with this: * and they may go together, and my indictment with the letter. I am called to set to my seal to the faithfulness of that worthy man's doctrine, viz., worthy Mr Richard Cameron, who was the mean that the Lord made use of to establish me in the I bless the Lord that ever I saw him, or was honoured to be I bless the Lord that ever I was in the company in his company. of worthy Mr Donald Cargill. I am likewise here to bear witness to the faithful warning these two worthies gave in Northumberland.

"I likewise leave my testimony against the professors in Northumberland, that came not out to help the Lord against the mighty. When I myself gave them warning, some of them mocked at me; for which I will be a witness against them at the great day of accounts.

"I leave my testimony against the giving bond to assizers, or sessions, or answering their courts. My work, while I am here, is only to witness against the sins of the times, wherein I live, and the wrongs done to my Lord and Master.

"I leave my testimony against these four men that were prisoners in the Canongate Tolbooth, John Gib, and the other three that held his principles; I disown, detest, and abominate their principles; though some were pleased to brand me with them since I came to prison. I heartily forgive them whatever they have said of me, as I desire to be forgiven of my Father which is in heaven.

"Now, my time here is but short; and I think it needless to write any more, the testimonies of the worthies being so little valued by this generation, that nothing will do at it but wrath and judgments, that though an angel should come down from heaven it will avail nothing. For nothing I can see but wrath, wrath, wrath; judgments, judgments, sad judgments; coming on this land very suddenly. But my eyes shall be closed, and I shall not see it, and well is me for this. Therefore I am content, and heartily content, seeing I get my soul for a prey.

^{*} This cannot be done, no copy of that paper being found.—Note by the compilers of the "Cloud."

have only a short word to say to the remnant of the Lord's e that is to be left behind, who were only my delight in the My soul trembles to think of what is amongst you this day, ially those of you that were in one mind in contending for the of our Lord Jesus Christ; whatever has fallen out among or any that have fallen back. Seek to reclaim them, that they be brought in again; let self be done away, and partiality, and e way of God be taken in time, for it will be but short that ye And think not that ye will wait for better times and tunities; wait not for that, for ye have time and opportunity that ye shall not have afterwards. And if ye get not together ntly, you shall meet with something shortly, that will make you e [i.e., glad] to be together; and let these that think they are ing take heed lest they fall. Now these that have gone out us, by complying with the malignant party, and pleading for ; interest, (I mean, Charles Stuart's interest,) and taking shelter their wings, I have less hope of them than any. If ye can set ur face to God, and say that ye never durst comply with these ts and usurpers, to wrong the interest of God, for the loss of life or gear, then I will assure you of your soul for a prey. gh ye have lost all that ye have in the world, your children see brave days, and ye shall have all your wants made up when all get Christ Himself.

low I can stay no longer, nor take up my time any more; for ork is finished, and I have fought the good fight, and finished ourse. Strong have been the assaults and trials that I have had the devil; by all sorts, both ministers and professors; but my has helped me to withstand them, for which I bless His holy, and desire to praise Him while I am here. Oh! let all the is godly in Scotland praise Him, on my behalf, that He chose ke of me, who has been a vile sinner.

Now, I am this day free of the blood of all men in the world. It to forgive all men the wrongs done to me, as I desire to be for of my Father which is in heaven. But for these who have sfully taken away my life, simply for adhering to truth, and for no res of fact; for my part, I forgive them; but my God shall resent the rest of my dear brethren's blood that has been shed on and scaffolds.

Now, farewell all creature-comforts in time. Farewell sweet ties of the Lord's people, that were my only delight in the world. Farewell holy and sweet Scriptures, which only were comfort in all my straits. Farewell all friends and Christian acquitances. Farewell mother, brother, and all relations in the warewell sun, moon, and stars. Welcome scaffold, for my start Lord Jesus Christ. Welcome gibbet, and welcome heaven. Welcomediate presence of God, and His Son Jesus Christ, who has redeemed me by His blood. Welcome angels, and the spiritust men made perfect, where we shall never part again. Now, Farinto Thy hands I commit my spirit, that is Thine. Now, come I Jesus Christ; come quickly, and receive me hence to my resplace, where my portion is.

"ROBERT GRAY

CCOUNT of some of the Last Words of Robert G in the Council House and on the Scaffold.

This worthy martyr coming out of the Tolke to the place of execution, was taken (as the custom first into the Town-Council House, where the To Council desired that he would purge the city of blood. And he told them, that judgment would o take the city for the innocent blood shed therein, and bade the assure themselves of it, for it was without doubt. They said to I that he had access to pray if he would. He told them, that he committed himself to God already. Then they said, if he had freedom, they were there who would pray for him; but he look round, said, he saw none whom he would employ, but he had advocate with the Father.

Then, being brought from thence to his execution place, afl little discourse to the pretended magistrates of the city, some of t being present, he sung the bexxiv. Psalm, and read the xv. chapte the Gospel according to John; and after the reading thereof said to the multitude: "Sirs, ye would remember that this is the v of God, and not of man, and that we are to follow no man fur than he follows the word of God:" and said, "If light had not c into Scotland they had been more excusable, but now they have cloak nor excuse for their sin, and their wrongs done to God; use of despised light and the despised Gospel, there is assuredly wrath coming upon them."

and then he prayed, and after prayer went up the ladder, and ing about to the multitude said: "Sirs, you are feeding your eyes me; but what see you upon me? Surely you see not the wrath od upon me. But if you would look up to the heavens ye might he wrath of an angry God against yourselves." And he said, "I prought out of another nation to own that Covenant which ye have en, and to seal it, and the glorious work of Reformation, with my d; which Covenant ye have not only broken, but ye have given der your hands, that ye shall never own God any more, nor have more of Him."

And he blessed the Lord, saying: "Glory, glory, glory be to His e, that ever He gave me a life to lay down for Him, in witnessing nst His enemies and the wrongs done to my Lord and Master is Christ." And said, "The Lord be Judge between me and you, have taken away my life, which of us have been in the wrong to er; and assure yourselves there is wrath, sad wrath hanging over city for the innocent blood shed therein. But as for you, who the remnant of the Lord's people, I would say this to you, keep r ground, and beware of turning aside to one hand or another, I will asure you, the Lord will prepare a Zoar for you; cleave to h, and cleave one to another; and, as sure as God lives, ye shall yet glorious days in Scotland; for I die in the faith of it, that He in His way returning to the land. But woe, woe, woe will be to se who are enemies and strangers to Him."

Then praying a little within himself, when some bade put him r, and others cried out, spare him a little; he cried, "I am ready, m ready." Whereupon the executioner threw him over.

James Robertson.

AMES ROBERTSON belonged to Stonehouse, a parish in Lanarkshire. He was noted as a serious and a religious person. He was what in that age was styled a merchant, and went up and down the country with a pack of goods. In October 1682 he was in Kilmarnock in the exercise of his calling, and visited John Finlay, then a prisoner in jail. While talking with his friend, without giving the least offence or provocation, he was seized and carried to the guard-house. His pack was taken from him and never returned, and he was kept in close confinement for ten or twelve days. "During this time," Wodrow relates, "he was brought before Major White, who would have him give his oath super inquirendis, which the prisoner absolutely refused to do, whereupon he was very barbarously used. My accounts bear that the Major himself pulled him by the nose and wrang it about, till it gushed out in blood. After this treatment he was sent back to prison, and when there, whilst he and his fellow prisoners offered to worship God together, the captain of the guard getting notice, came in with great rage, and, pulling the Bible out of James Robertson's hand, swore bloodily he would burn it if he offered to go about this work again. In a few weeks he was carried into Edinburgh under a guard. At Linlithgow he was pressed to drink the king's health, which he refusing, the soldiers treated him very rudely, and tied his head and feet together with cords, and left him in that posture upon the cold earth all night. To-morrow [i.e., next day], when on horseback, they tied his feet together, very hard, under the horse's belly, and in that posture carried him into Edioburgh."

He was several times examined by the Committee for public affairs. The substance of his answers, as forming part of his indictment, is in Wodrow. In their fullest form, so far as Robertson him self remembered them, they are given here as the introduction to his testimony. No other evidence was brought against him except his eir questions. They were determined, however, to take ney supposed that he was the person who affixed a proaining several pointed reasons against the Test upon the of Stonehouse.

found him guilty of treason, and the court sentenced him at the Grassmarket, on Friday, December 15, 1682.

ow says:—"This harsh and iniquitous sentence was xecuted. When James Robertson offered to speak upon he was interrupted by the ruffling of the drums, and ining of this, Johnston, the town-major, beat him with ne foot of the ladder, in a most barbarous manner. This udeness to a dying man, and the patience and cheerfulgood man in suffering all this, I know, was the occasion viction to some who were present, of the evil of perseculacy. And there are severals yet alive, who can date ous impressions of religion from their seeing some of the arty suffer, as they themselves have informed me."

obertson's testimony is the longest in the volume. He se for writing than many of his fellow-sufferers. He was inday, December 11, and was executed the following eas not a few were tried the one day and hanged the metimes even on the very day they received sentence.

obertson mentions Auchengilloch as a place where a state at which both Donald Cargill and Richard Cameron Auchengilloch is situated in the parish of Lesmahagow, of a wild moorland district. It is a glen at the source of ter, and is formed by a depression in the moor of about lepth, and is of size that will give sitting room on its sides ive hundred people. Although so large, it is not seen g over the moor until the traveller comes immediately t its south end the hill rises about 200 feet above the ommands a view of the country for many miles round. watchmen were posted when a meeting was held in the

Its central position, six to nine miles from Muirkirk, Strathaven and Stonehouse on the north, Lesmahagow and Newmilns on the west, and the three or four miles or that must be gone over ere it be reached rendering it to cavalry, combined to make it a favourite spot, where meetings of the United Societies were most often held persecution. Michael Shields' "Faithful Contendings Displayed," contains the substance of the Minutes of Proceedings of five meetings that were held in the solitude of the glen in January 8, and February 12, 1685; May 5, and June 24, 1686; and October 5, 1687.—ED.]

HE LAST TESTIMONY of JAMES ROBERTSON, who lived in the parish of Stonehouse, and suffered in the Grassmarket of Edinburgh, December 15, 1682.

His Interrogations before the Council.

Quest. 1. "Is the king your lawful prince, yea, or not?

Ans. "Since ye have made your questions matters of life and death, ye ought to give time to deliberate upon them; but seeing I am put to it, I answer, As he is a terror to evil doers, and a praise to them that do well, he is; or he is not.

(). 2. "Were Pentland and Bothwell acts of traitory?

A. "They being in their own defence, and the defence of the Gospel, they are not acts of traitory or rebellion, self-defence being always lawful; which I prove by the Confession of Faith, in that article whereon you ground yourselves, which is, that subjects may texist unjust violence and tyranny.

(1) A. "But wherein lies his tyranny?

d. "If robbing the privileges of the Church be not an act of transity, I refer it to be judged.

€ 4 " Is the king a tyrant?

I "I reter it to his obligation in the Coronation Oath, and his present actings and practices in robbing the privileges of the Gospel, with the usuapation of the Church's liberties, and the prerogatives together lesus Church the anomated of the Father, in making himself supreme, and I reter it to persons at home, and nations abroad.

(1 v "Were you at Bothwell Bridge?

I "Vo count it an act of traitory, and also rebellion, which is commal. Bear witness of it, and so make it evident.

on at liberty

THE GRASSMARKET, EDINBURGH.

(FROM THE COMMATCHEAD.)

- A. "I will say no more of it, for when I told the truth to some you, it was not believed.
 - "One of them said, Now I will try if ye be a man of parts:
- Q. 7. "There was an Act of Parliament when the Confession of aith was made, declaring, that the king was supreme, and it was wned by the Presbyterians of that time?
- A. "How could that be owned, seeing the Confession was owned? nd I called for the Act, but it was not brought.
 - Q. 8. "Was the Bishop's death murder?
- A. "When I am a judge, set upon the bench, I shall pass senence thereupon." Being questioned further anent it, I said, 'I have aswered that already, I will say no more to it.'
 - Q. 9. "Own you Lanark and Sanguhar Declarations?
 - A. "I cannot own anything, till I see and consider it.
 - Q. 10. "Keep you your parish kirk?
 - A. " If the minister have aught to challenge me with, he may do it.
- Q. 11. "Now, as a test of your loyalty, will you say, God save ne king?
- A. "Prayer ought to be gone about with composure and deberation, and I am not in a composure for it.
 - Q. 12. "Would you not seek a blessing, if at meat?
 - A. " If ye were present ye would see.
- "One of them said, these principles will condemn you. I anwered, If I be absolved of God, it is the less matter though men ondemn me."

HE LAST TESTIMONY of JAMES ROBERTSON.

"DEAR FRIENDS, TRUE LOVERS OF ZION'S RIGHTEOUS CAUSE,—If I could speak or write anything to the commendation of the covenanted God of the Church and kingdom of Scotland, I have surely many things to do it for.

" 1. That He trysted [i.e., appointed] my lot to be n a nation where He hath set up His pure worship, whereas He night have letten my lot be among the pagan and heathen nations, hat know nothing of the true God.

"Or 2. He might have ordered it to be among these that are worshipping Antichrist, that whore of Rome, that beast, that sitteth upon many waters, whose sentence ma 'And the third angel followed them, saying with a loud v man worship the beast and his image, and receive his r forehead, or in his hand, the same shall drink of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and t the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of And the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and they have no rest day nor night, who worship the beast and and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name' (Rev. So that it is as sure as God is God, and the holy Scripti word, according to which all men that have heard or seer judged, having the sentence of absolution or condemna according thereto: 'For as many as have sinned without also perish without law: and as many as have sinned in t be judged by the law' (Rom. ii. 12). So that it is clear, t will surely perish, viz., all infidels, atheists, and pagans not the true God nor His law; [and as to the second,] wh hopes Papists may have of being saved, living and dying whatever charity loose Protestants have upon that acco them, they are as far from being saved in that unconverte as devils, which are eternally cast out of His presence.

"3. I have Him to bless for this, that my lot is among the corrupt Protestant Churches abroad; Luthe other corruptions and abounding errors, both in doctrir discipline, and government, Sectarian, Episcopal, or Erast the Reformed Church of Scotland, where all these thing cast over the hedge, as not plants of His planting; and w hath been owned in all His three offices, King, Priest, a Though, alas! He may say of us, in a great measure Church of Israel of old: 'I have planted her a noble vi is she become a degenerate plant of a strange vine unto that day of planting we could have sung that song, ' strong city; salvation will God appoint for walls and (Isa. xxvi. 1), [but] 'The Lord hath accomplished His fur poured out His fierce anger, and hath kindled a fire in it hath devoured the foundations thereof. The kings of and all the inhabitants of the world, would not have b the adversary and the enemy should have entered into salem. For the sins of her prophets, and the iniquities of her, that have shed the blood of the just in the midst of her, ave wandered as blind men in the streets, they have polluted elves with blood, so that men could not touch their garments' iv. 11-14). This may be our regret before God, as it is in the and 8th verses of the same chapter: 'Her Nazarites ourer than snow, they were whiter than milk, they were more in body than rubies, their polishing was of sapphire; their is blacker than a coal; they are not known in the streets: skin cleaveth to their bones; it is withered, it is become like c.' And oh! how unnatural-like were it for the mother to eachild, the son of her womb, perish for lack of the breasts; she free of the child's blood, it perishing for want of its natural And, oh! how many are this day perishing for want of the

And, oh! how many are this day perishing for want of the preached Gospel. 'Even the sea-monsters draw out the breast, ive suck to their young ones: the daughter of my people is ne cruel, like the ostriches in the wilderness' (Lam. iv. 3).

- Let I have Him to bless for this, that I am not this day fighting the Him in open stated war; and so bearing arms against Him, ork, and people; for there is no more in me, as of myself, than that are deepliest imbruing their hands in the blood of His
- 5. I have Him to bless for this, that ever He hath opened my 0 see the mystery of iniquity that abounds, and hath its seat in art, and also, in some measure, hath given me a sight of the y in the blood of Jesus Christ, with His Spirit engaging me to elf, letting me see Himself to be altogether precious, making e that it is better to be a door-keeper in the house of God, than ell in the tabernacles of sin. 'Thou shalt guide me with thy el, and afterwards receive me to glory. Whom have I in a but thee, and there is none upon the earth that I desire s thee' (Psa. lxxiii. 24, 25).
- in I have His holy name to bless, that ever He made me to anything (how small soever) of His controverted truth, viz., ivileges of His crown and kingdom; now, when by their acts two, they have taken His crown and sceptre and royal robe, ettled the whole government of His house upon a man that is worm. But this I believe, that His decree will stand, oppose will. 'Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion'. 6). 'I am the Lord; that is my name, my glory will I not give to another, neither my praise to graven images' (Isa. xlii. 8). Now, is not that His declarative glory, which that usurper hath taken to himself? Yea, but He that leadeth captivity captive, according to His royal word, will reclaim His own glory. He it is alone that hath given Christ to be the sure foundation, whereon all the building is fitly framed; that stone which the builders rejected is made the head of the corner. 'Thus saith the Lord God, behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation; he that believeth shall not make haste. Judgment also will I lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet: and the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall overflow the hiding-place' (Isa. xxviii. 16, 17).

- "7. I bless and magnify the holy name of my God, that hath called me to be a sufferer for His work and interest, counting it not my shame, but a high privilege and dignifying of me, when many famous in their generation have been denied of it; though indeed most of this generation have brought up an ill report upon the cross, endeavouring by their practice to render it of none effect. But I have this Scripture for my encouragement: 'And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?' (1 Pet. iii. 13-17.)
- "8. I have this great and glorious Prince to praise for this. And, oh! let all the true children of Zion laud and praise this only praiseworthy God, that hath not only called me to bear witness to the truth, but hath helped me not to deny His name, titles, and For that is the thing that the enemies and usurpers of my lovely Lord's crown are seeking; to deny allegiance to Him, who is given of the Father to be a leader and commander to the people, even Him on whose shoulders the government is laid, committing the ordering of His house to faithful stewards, to order His affairs according to His own appointment in His holy word, and hath not left it to the prudence of men, how learned soever. Gamaliel, that learned Pharisee and doctor of the law, erred in the exposition of the law, not knowing Christ to be the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth. And seeing these great learned Rabbis erred, every one in that which was the great and main end of the law, viz., Christ, to whom Moses and all the prophets bare witness, how much more shall they err where it is left to their own wisdom, having no platform to walk by, as the maintainers of the prelatic hierarchy would be at? Solomon was as wise as any, yes, sest that ever was, or ever shall be; and he erred, having the the law to walk by. Were not all the laws and forms of the given by God to Moses, as well for manner of worship, as the thereof?

and further, as to that which is so much pleaded for by this tion, his (the king's) authority in civil matters, which, as matters tand, cannot be given, neither will they have it, without the for by their Acts of Parliament they have made them equally ial to the crown. Likewise there cannot be an authority withfoundation. If any shall say, he hath it from that which he ed at his admission to the government, as he entered upon rms of the Coronation Oath; to this I answer, he hath red that, in and by that Act Rescissory in his first parliament; nen he annulled and rescinded that from which he had his and authority, he thereby rescinded his own authority also. It from this he hath no just power, having oftener than once the Covenants, which were his coronation oath, without which ald not enter the government.

If it shall be said, that the foundation of his [the king's] power lt upon the Test, wherein he is made absolute supreme judge ll matters and persons, as well ecclesiastical as civil:

- That is so far from giving him a right, that it maketh him iplete monster, having one head and two bodies. And if that ity shall be owned by me, being a free-born member of the h of Scotland, which is Christ's mystical body, and in my bapoath given away to Him, and having given my oath of allegino Him, as king and head of His own house, shall I own that ity, without being guilty of leese-majesty [i.e., treason] against ing of Zion, and so of the highest degree of sacrilege?
- 2. I shall thereby deny my allegiance to God Creator, under the magistrate should rule in a direct line, he ruling by his own ment, which is contrary to our obligations in covenant, we bound in covenant to defend the civil rights and liberties of own and kingdom, as we are born subjects thereof.
- 3. That which they have done in condemning the true sons of hurch and subjects of the kingdom to death, which is open in under the colour of law. Now that it is such, these whom have proceeded against, being adherers to the word of God, is the only rule of faith and manners, owning God as God, as Redeemer, the Holy Ghost as Sanctifier; and they having nothing to charge them with, but their adherence to the true Christian principles, and they sentenced upon the same heads; this must be the deepest of murder.

"4. These being owners of the true reformed religion, and all the fundamental laws of the Church and kingdom; and they refusing to judge and sentence according to the word of God, according to which all sentences of life and death ought to pass, as also refusing to judge according to the laws, as they received them at their admission to the government; which was, not to rule the law, but it to rule them, and they to rule the people according to that law, and the people remaining in subjection to the law of God, and the ancient and fundamental laws of the land, and the persons of lawful governors; being made treason; this must certainly not only be a murdering of men, yea, true Christian men; but also a murdering of justice. the land is defiled with blood. Read the sentence of such, 'So ye shall not pollute the land wherein ye are: for blood it defileth the land: and the land cannot be cleansed of the blood that is shed therein, but by the blood of him that shed it' (Num. xxxv. 33). Such as are owning and pleading for this present power, let the end of magistracy be considered; 'For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same. for this cause pay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing' (Rom. xiii. 3, 6). unto governors, as unto them that are sent by Him for the punishment of evil-doers, and for the praise of them that do well' (1 Pet ii. 14).

"Now it is undeniably evident from what is aforesaid, that piety is suppressed, and iniquity nourished, and the sword in their hand used against these that do most entirely cleave to the Scripture rule, and the sworn principles of the Church of Scotland, and the ancient fundamental laws thereof, 'A king that sitteth in the throne of judgment, scattereth away all evil with his eyes' (Prov. xx. 8).

"Now I dare herein appeal to the sentence of all single, unbiassed, and judicious persons, whether or not the present exercise of their power be not both injustice and tyranny, for there is no public power in the land but what is founded on perjury, sacrilege, and tyranny, and exercised according thereto. And seeing it is so, ye that are owners of such a power, ye must needs be upon the matter owners of all these; compearing before their courts, and paying them tribute, advocates, and pleading your cause before such unjust judges. ore especially such as are prisoners for the truths of the Gosdon so ought to witness a good confession for His trampled-upon who was not ashamed to witness a good confession before; Pilate, to wit, that He was a king. 'Pilate therefore said im, Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that king. To this end was I born' (John xviii. 37).

ow, ye who are charging me this day, and others of my brethfferers for truth, to be guilty of self-murder, and so a breach of th commandment (which is very false, for self-preservation oop to truth's preservation), did our blessed Lord establish an te to plead for Him? Did that valiant champion Stephen do t was free and positive in asserting his testimony.) it? Or show me any such precept or practice from Scrip-Yea, consider the nature of witnessing; it proveth the contrary; rove such as do this to be actually guilty of the breach of the commandment, which is that, 'Thou shalt not make unto y graven image ' (Exod. xx. 4). For, as I have proved before, et up in Christ's room, and exerciseth authority in and by that able arrogate Supremacy, having intermixed things civil with istic, by their Acts of Parliament, making them both alike it to the crown, and so cannot be owned in either, without jious idolatry, and so a breach of this commandment. As also ifth commandment, which concerneth natural or civil parents, ire to be owned and obeyed only in the Lord, which cannot in st allow of any man's being absolutely supreme, even in civil ; it being the ordinance of God, and a lawful magistrate the r of God, bound to dispense His ordinance, according to His the word, and according to the ancient laws of the kingdom. in the obeying of lawful power, it is obedience to this coment; so, upon the contrary, the owning and obeying an un-power (such as theirs), certainly must be a breach of it.

nd can any deny that to be an owning of them; to establish the members of their court, to plead for no other effect, but to en out of the true principles and practices of the true reformed of Scotland; when the panel is called by his lot to witness m, and give a confession thereof, before such an evil and ous generation; these being Christ's truths questioned, and Himself; 'I am the way, the truth, and the life,' etc. If any object, and say, they are small things; to this I answer, no truth is small. 'He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much; and he that is unjust in the least, is unjust also in much' (Luke xvi. 10). And such as are supplicating the enemies, are guilty here; for a supplication ought not, nor can be given in, but to a lawful power and for a lawful thing.

"Such are guilty, who are coming out of prison upon bond and caution, binding themselves to compear before their judicatories, at such a particular time, or at demand; for we ought not to bind to compear or answer before a judicatory, but a lawful one, such as theirs is not; so that such are actually guilty, but especially such who formerly joined in declining them.

"This generation seems to be a generation, in a great measure given up to work all manner of wickedness with greediness, considering what profanity and robbing of God, mocking Him and religion, instability, and giving away His and the Church's due. 'Even from the days of your fathers ye are gone away from mine ordinances, and have not kept them. Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts. But ye said, Wherein shall we return? Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse; for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation' (Mal. iii. I am not to take upon me to speak anything for future times, but this generation seems to have the marks and evidences of a generation of His wrath, fitted for judgment and destruction. Scriptures as an evidence, 'For the statutes of Omri are kept, and all the works of the house of Ahab, and ye walk in their counsels; that I should make thee a desolation, and the inhabitants thereof an hissing: therefore ye shall bear the reproach of my people' (Micah vi. 16). 'Behold, the Lord maketh the earth empty, and maketh it waste, and turneth it upside down, and scattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof. And it shall be, as with the people, so with the priest; as with the servant, so with his master; as with the maid, so with her mistress; as with the buyer, so with the seller; as with the lender, so with the borrower; as with the taker of usury, so with the giver of The land shall be utterly emptied, and utterly spoiled: for the Lord hath spoken this word. The earth mourneth and fadeth away; the world languisheth and fadeth away; the haughty people of the earth do languish. The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant. Therefore hath the levoured the earth, and they that dwell therein are desolate: re the inhabitants of the earth are burned, and few men left' xiv. 1-6). Now read Israel's sins here, and compare them cotland's sins, and see if they be not parallel.

and seeing it is so, what can be expected, but the punishments agues shall be parallel also. I cannot shake the thoughts of my spirit, but that there is a fourfold vengeance to be poured on this land.

- . The vengeance of God, for the intrusions on, and usurpaf His sword, crown, sceptre, and robe-royal.
- . A Temple vengeance, which is not a small one, for the laying nctuary desolate.
- . A Gospel vengeance, for the slighting of the great and rich f Christ and salvation, offered in such purity and plenty.
- A Covenant vengeance, for the great perjury and apostacy breach of, and falling from the prosecuting the ends of these ants, which the Lord highly honoured this land with, to bring it evenant with Himself, and make it Hephzibah and Beulah unto

'For my sword shall be bathed in heaven: behold, it shall lown upon Idumea, and upon the people of my curse, to judg-

The sword of the Lord is filled with blood, it is made fat with and with the blood of lambs and goats, with the fat of the sof rams: for the Lord hath a sacrifice in Bozrah, and a great ter in the land of Idumea. And the unicorns shall come down nem, and the bullocks with the bulls; and their land shall be I with blood, and their dust made fat with fatness' (Isa. xxxiv.

'For thus saith the Lord unto the king's house of Judah; art Gilead unto me, and the head of Lebanon: yet surely I ake thee a wilderness, and cities which are not inhabited. will prepare destroyers against thee, every one with his ns: and they shall cut down thy choice cedars, and cast them he fire. And many nations shall pass by this city, and they ay every man to his neighbour, Wherefore hath the Lord done nto this great city? Then they shall answer, Because they orsaken the covenant of the Lord their God, and worshipped gods, and served them' (Jer. xxii. 6-9).

This land hath not only departed from God, in and by their ns, in refusing the rich offer of the Gospel, and [in the] breach renant, but have homologated that broken and despised idol's at hath overturned the work of Reformation, by their owning of him now, when he hath taken the whole privileges of Christ's crown and kingdom to himself. And this I am persuaded of, that if there be a family in the Christian world, that comes under Amalek's curse, viz., with whom He will have war for ever; it is that family called the royal family, whom I think God is about to sweep off the throne, so that no root thereof shall be left to exercise in the government. That bringeth the princes to nothing; He maketh the judges of the earth as vanity. Yea, they shall not be planted; yea, they shall not be sown: yea, their stock shall not take root in the earth; and he shall also blow upon them, and they shall wither, and the whirlwind shall take them away as stubble' (Isa. xl. 23, 24).

"Now as to the articles of my indictment, whereon my sentence of death is founded, they are—

"First, The owning and maintaining, that it was lawful to rise in arms at Pentland and Bothwell Bridge; which I did with great cheerfulness and boldness, they being in their own defence, and in the defence of the Gospel; and took that article for proof in the Confession of Faith, that they have given out to be the confession of their own faith, professing to build that abominable and ridiculous Test upon, which shows that they are ill builders, the building being so far off the foundation. But I refer you to the draught of a paper, which I drew as my testimony against that Test, which, with the consent and advice of others, was affixed upon the parish kirk-door of Stonehouse. And I am of the mind that this proof, as it did enrage them, being like a wild bull caught in their own net, so it did give them no small damp.

"A second was, speaking treason (as they call it), and declining their authority, which consisteth in this—

"When asked, if their king, or rather their idol, were a tyrant? I referred it to his obligations in his Coronation Oath, to be considered with his present actings and practices, with his usurpations upon the privileges of the Church, and prerogatives royal of Jesus Christ, who is the anointed of the Father.

"And the refusing to say 'God save the king;' which we find was the order that was used among the children of Israel at the king's anointing to that office; and used in our own nation at the coronation. Now, this being only due to a lawful king, ought not to be given but to a lawful king, and so not to him, being a degenerate tyrant. For if I should, I thereby had said Amen to all that he hath done against the Church and liberties thereof, and to all his oppression

l exactions, and raising of armies; for no other effect but us of the hearing of the Gospel, and troubling and molesting s, both in their consciences and external liberties; and also odshed and murders made upon the people of God and ts of the kingdom; and so bid him God-speed, contrary to ohn i. 10. And seeing it cannot be given unto any that used their power to a wrong end, in such a measure and much less when they have set him up as an idol, in the fod incarnate. And shall I pray to bless that man in his I government, which God hath cursed? For it cannot be out that he shall be cursed, that thus ventureth upon the he buckler of God Almighty.

I shall here give, in short, an account of my principles; nall do, as in the sight of an all-seeing God. I am a tian, truly anti-popish, anti-prelatic, anti-sectarian, anti-anti-erastian, a true Presbyterian, owning the true Progion, now owned and professed by the poor wrestling and mnant in Scotland. And whatever men have said, or may I have lived, and now I die thus. Wherefore:

give testimony to the truth, fulness, and authority of the tures, and to all the truths contained therein, and warranfrom.

bear my testimony to the way of salvation through Jesus that by His satisfaction the moral law was not abrogated, I; and that the moral law is as binding on the Christian sted in Him, this day, as it was that day that it was given dren of Israel; only the condemnatory sentence thereof II such as are believers indeed.

ear my testimony to the work of Reformation, as it was som Popery, Prelacy, Erastianism, and other errors; as it id in the Confession of Faith, Larger and Shorter Catevenants, National and Solemn League, Solemn Acknow-of Sins and Engagement to Duties, the Sum of Saving; Directory for Worship, the Causes of the Lord's Wrath, by the General Assembly of this Church, after the evil in with that rotten-hearted malignant Charles Stuart was seen. bear my testimony to the faithful actings of the Remonainst malignants and malignant interests, which are the this day contended for by the true Presbyterians of the Scotland.

- "5. I bear my testimony (not to go further back, seeing it homologates the rest), to that noble testimony given at Lanark, against that tyrant and the Test enacted by the late Parliament, which I could not but look upon, in the time of the carrying on of it, and yet do, that the remnant was therein owned of the Lord.
- "6. I bear my testimony to all the faithful testimonies of the martyrs that have gone before us on scaffolds, in the fields, or in the seas.
- "7. I bear my testimony to all the appearances in arms for the defence of the Gospel.
- "8. I bear my testimony to the faithful manner of the delivery of the Gospel, that hath been in the open fields, by the faithful and sent servants of Jesus Christ, exercising according to His own commission; preaching days, communion days, and fasts; particularly one holden at Auchengilloch by three ministers, two of them now glorified—viz., Mr Donald Cargill and Mr Richard Cameron—where the land's guilt was freely and faithfully discovered.
- "9. And lastly, I bear my testimony to the fellowship meetings of the Lord's people, particular and general; and my soul hath many a time been refreshed in them.
 - "Likewise, on the other hand,
- "1. I leave my testimony against the Public Resolutions for taking in that malignant interest, for which this poor Church is this day smarting, and feeling the weight of that tyrant's hand, for such eager lusting after a king.
- "2. I leave my testimony against Hamilton declaration, which is one and the same thing with the Resolutions. (1.) For taking the foresaid interest, contrary to the land's engagements in covenant (2.) For corrupting the army. But my mind of this, with several other things, such as the excommunication, tyrant's interest, cess, and locality, is more fully expressed in a paper, entitled 'Some few Grievances set down by way of Query;' which was occasioned by a minister being preaching near to the place of my residence, and some falsely accusing me for casting at [i.e., despising] ministers, and so at ministry. And to show that my not hearing was not from any schismatical design, but of conscience of duty, judging him deficient and faulty in not being faithful; I therefore drew my grievances to be presented, and refer to this and the forementioned paper as a part of my testimony against the wrongs done to a holy God in this backsliding age.

leave my testimony against all unfaithfulness in ministers, dark and ambiguous manner of preaching, in not giving and faithful warning of the duty and dangers of our day; or altogether leaving off preaching, as if seeming and appared loosed them from that command, which is, to preach and out of season, etc.; or turning the edge of their doctonst the most faithful in the land, and taking the faults and if the saints in Scripture to defend them in their sinful, conniving, and complying courses; which is a wresting of ture; for these are set down for our admonition, not to split rocks.

oh, how many professors are guilty also in this matter! not deny it to be a fault, viz., such and such things; yet not state their sufferings on them. Now undeniably this is ptuous sinning, venturing upon it; because God is merciful, laring of Him to His face. Surely David was not of this: 'Who can understand his errors: cleanse Thou me from lts. Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins; not have dominion over me' (Ps. xix. 12, 13). 'But the doeth aught presumptuously, whether he be born in the stranger, the same reproacheth the Lord; and that soul ut off from among his people' (Numb. xv. 30).

give my testimony against that Erastian Indulgence, and such ith them, because they entered not by the right door, but ler of the usurper, whereas Christ is the only door (John x. this I will say, that those who will not, nor dare not take per's portion, lest they be defiled thereby, their counteall outshine the other, and be fatter and fairer in the day are to be proved before the King (Dan. i. 15).

give my testimony against all the hearers of these abomined curates throughout the land; so in particular against that the land, viz., Kilmarnock and the country thereabout, ras apprehended; which I was then persuaded of, and yet t was so ordered that I might in particular witness against their compearing at courts, subscribing bonds, paying fines cludeth in it an acknowledgment of a fault, building that merly they did destroy, and destroying that which formerly ded, and that according to God's Word; and these who were leaders in the way of truth, elders and old professors, as active by example and advice in the present course, and so are a stumbling-block to others. Offences must come, but were to them by whom they come; better it were that a millstone were hanged about their necks, and they were cast into the midst of the sea. Oh! that ye who have formerly known the way of truth, would study more stability, and let not your liberty become a stumbling-block to others.

- "6. I bear my testimony against all profanity and profane persons, against all atheism and atheists, practical and professed, not only such as deny the true God by profession, but even such as do it by practice, belying their profession; against all enthusiasm and enthusiasts, although these black-mouthed Erastian writers are pleased to call the way that is now followed by the poor remnant such; yet my endeavours have always been to be cleared both in matters of truth and practice, according to the Word and Spirit. But this I think, that the Lord is about to let this generation stumble, fall, and break their necks upon their own carnal wisdom, and each of them upon another. But mind this, that the world by wisdom knew not God, for it seems it is the nothings of this age that He will make use of; out of the mouths of babes and sucklings He will perfect His praise.
 - "Now I would speak in short to three sorts:
- "I. You that are strangers and enemies to this lovely Lord, let your estrangement be done away; break off your sins by repentance, consider the hazard you are in, even of eternal wrath and scorching hell-fire for ever. Oh! this condescending love of God, that is laid out in this manner! Oh! ye that are enemies to His interest and people, mind, that justice, even wrathful justice, is ready to be poured out upon you! Oh! therefore come off. Repent and turn in unto this so favourable and merciful a God. Leave off your persecution. Come unto Him; there is mercy with Him that He may be feared; and if ye will not return, then His wrath will be upon you to all eternity.
- "2. Ye that have sometimes known what it was to be in God's favour, and had much love and tenderness for Him, His work and interest, cause and covenant, as it was reformed in this land, and now are fallen from your first love. Oh! endeavour to have in mind the love of your espousals, when ye and Christ were hand-fasted [i.e., be trothed]. Oh! consider aright what a great difference there is between your love, faith, knowledge, zeal, tenderness now, in regard of what it then was. Therefore, take a right look of matters, and weigh them the balance of the sanctuary, both as to your own particular d the case of His church; and turn to Him with speedy and d repentance; for he that turns aside to crooked ways, shall orth with the workers of iniquity. Oh! therefore turn in time, intance be hid from your eyes. Oh! as ye love the glory of e good of your own souls, and the advantage of the Church an one as I may be so bold as to invite you, now going out into eternity); as ye would not be partakers of the plagues to come upon such a generation, come off with speed. You that are in good terms with God, and are helped to keep way, break not your peace by turning aside to crooked ways. n love; keep and hold fast your integrity in this day, when we broken the bargain with Him, now when the language of this, 'These are hard sayings, who can hear them?' and it this is His language to you, 'Will ye also leave me?' this be the language of every ingenuous soul, 'To whom Thou hast the words of eternal life.' Make sure salvayourselves; thereby ye shall be the more fit to follow Him day, when He is casting forth His red flag and marching. ollow Him when the white flag of peace is flourishing; but ill worthy of the sweet who will not take part with Him in erest and sharpest sufferings. For what is the greatest of is that can come from man, coming upon His account, in of what He suffered for us; even the heavy wrath of God, ould have pressed us down to the pit through all eternity. id may not the consideration of this oblige you? I can speak s commendation, that He can make the cross light and easy, will bear it and you both. And seeing everlasting arms are ath, have ye not ground to expect that He will not let His is be crushed? He can strew the cross all with roses. I dare that ever I met with a cross; for when the strait hath been , then He kythed [i.e., manifested] His kindness most. manifestations that He giveth to the soul under the cross! s all paved with love. Who would not go through a sea of sufferings with Him and for Him. He is the rose of Sharon lily of the valley; He is fair and ruddy, the chief among ten Oh! who can describe Him? He is the d of thousands.

cious object, altogether lovely. If He were seen and known, uld not love Him? He is both lovely and loving; the soul ace itself in Him, under the greatest of straits.

"Now ye that have received Him, walk worthy of Him. Oh! who knows what is in love? 'Herein is our love made perfect, that we may have boldness in the day of judgment; because as He is, so are we in this world.' I John iv. 17). How is that; though in the world, yet not of the world? 'There is no fear in love, but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love' (verse 18). Now the reason of our love is 'We love Him because He first loved us' (verse 19). Now, dear friends, ye that are helped to keep by Him, think it not strange, though the world hate you: it hated Himself. He was a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief. If ye were of the world, the world would love its own: should we not be as pilgrims and strangers, travelling, seeking an heavenly country? There is a rest for the people of God, and to whom is this rest appointed but to the weary passengers?

"Now, I am given out by the enemies and professors, as being provingal of my life, and leading of my two brethren [John Finlay and Walliam Cochrane] to the death. But they are both false charges, for I have found more straitness and steadfastness in them than I can find in myself. As for the other, I have so much of humanity that I love my life, but cannot redeem it with the loss of my integrity, and derial of any of His precious truths. I durst not make a shift to have any favour of the enemies, nor to touch, taste, nor handle with them; for their dainnies are deceitful meat. And there is one Scripture which at my first coming to prison confirmed me, 'Be care-till for nothing, but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God' (Phil. iv. 6.)

"Now, dear friends, encourage yourselves in the Lord, and stand that in one spirit, striving together for the faith of Jesus. Let nothing damp your counge, real, tenderness, and faithfulness for this so levely a Lord. And let brotherly love always continue. Beware of mode, both on the right and left hand; we have beacons set up for look, to our sail experience, in this poor Church. Beware of percomptonness passion, and pride, for there may be (and I fear, is) a spurmal pride, as well as a natural. Carry [i.e., act] suitably to these who are without, and to them that are within. Endeavour to have a union in the Lord obtained, and entertained. Mix not the fire of time real with the wild sparks of carnal passion. But let meekness of spart, with a Christian, godly, and faithful conversation, adorn the doction of clost our Seviour.

" I'm lunch ages of the remnant (I may warrantably say) have lain upon my spirit than all that I have met with from the enemy. ye will not get together, wrath will be upon you. Oh! for y, when they shall be made one stick in His hand, when it as in Isa. xi. 13, 14, 'The envy of Ephraim shall depart, and ersaries of Judah shall be cut off; Ephraim shall not envy and Judah shall not vex Ephraim. But they shall fly upon ulders of the Philistines towards the west; they shall spoil the east together;' and that Scripture, 'Suffer not sin upon ther's soul, but in anywise reprove him.' Seek to reclaim at are fallen. 'Ye that are spiritual, restore such an one in it of meekness.' Follow a Gospel method. Beware of self-; and let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he am not here speaking to these that are going on in homothese God-provoking, Christ-dethroning, Church-ruining and solating courses, but to the wrestling remnant.

O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin, and ngth of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth victory through our Lord Jesus Christ' (1 Cor. xv. 55-7). this is His language to me, 'Arise ye, and depart; for this your rest, because it is polluted' (Micah. ii. 10). 'For we hat if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the '(2 Cor. v. 1).

ow, as to His way with His Church, it is mysterious. His in the deep; His paths are in the mighty waters; but the of this I cannot put off my spirit, but that He hath thoughts and not of evil, to give this poor Church an expected end. In persuaded of this, that He hath some other work ado before accomplished, for falling from her first love, and the great ine for the great and high privileges formerly enjoyed. But be couraged, nor sinfully anxious, neither about the Church nor nant, but wait on God in His own way, and commit all to id He shall bring it to pass. It may come in a way least extend the couraged of this power, infiniteness, and onty, may yet more appear.

ow, I declare I am free of the blood of all men, and though d never public scandal to charge me with, yet I am one of ef of saved sinners. And in respect of original, actual, and nal sin, there hath been as much guiltiness in me as might and would have weighted down to the pit the whole world; but my lovely Lord hath showed me warm blinks of His love. Oh! for love to give to this levely Lord Jesus, according to that Scripture, 'Come, and I will tell you what the Lord hath done for my soul.' Upon the day before I received sentence, I met with a great measure and a full gale of the Spirit, wherein my heart was both melted and enlarged, winning [i.e., getting] near to Him, both alone and with the rest. But a little thereafter, in going to Him alone, I found Him hiding; and being sensible of it, my heart in some measure panted after Him yet So going to the Word, I was directed to 1 John v. 14, 15, 'This is the confidence that we have in Him, that if we ask any thing according to His will, He heareth us; and if we know that He hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of Him,' which did, in no small measure, settle and comfort So meditating a little, and considering how these two my spirit. could consist together, I was answered thus, 'Because they have no changes, therefore, they fear not God.' And since, I bless His holy name, I have had great composure of spirit.

"Now, according to my blessed Lord's command, I am not prepossessed with malice or a spirit of revenge, but can bless when cursed. As for these men that are unjustly taking away my life, not only contrary to the law of God and the ancient and fundamental laws of the land, but even contrary to their own law; for what they are doing against me, as I am in myself, I can freely forgive them and all others. But as they do it against the image of God in me, and upon His truth's account, and so against Himself, that is not mine to forgive; but I leave it to Him to whom vengeance belongeth to deal with them as He may best glorify Himself.

"Now, I rejoice in my lot, for it hath fallen to me in pleasant places, and I have a goodly inheritance. I would not exchange it with the greatest monarch upon the earth. Oh! let heaven and earth praise Him; sun and moon, praise Him. Oh! all the creation, praise Him; angels and glorified saints, praise Him through all the ages of eternity.

"Now farewell all things in time. Farewell Holy Scriptures. Farewell prayer, meditation, faith, hope. Farewell all true friends. Welcome heaven. Welcome Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. Welcome angels, and the spirits of just men made perfect. Welcome praises for evermore. "Sic subscribitur,

"JAMES ROBERTSON."

John Finlay.

'HN FINLAY was "a dear comrade of James Robertson."

It was a visit to him, when in Kilmarnock prison, that led to Robertson's apprehension.

testimony does not appear in the first edition. It was added the edition, issued in 1751. In the first edition there is the note at the close of James Robertson's testimony:

the same time and place suffered John Findlay, who lived in h of Kilmarnock, whose testimony is not only the same in e with this of James Robertson, they being sentenced upon heads, and adhering to the same truths, but also, for the t, they agree in expression. And therefore, to avoid all uny repetitions, it is here omitted."

ontents justify the description given of it by the compilers of sud." It is very similar to Robertson's testimony, and where it is by no means an improvement. Indeed, perhaps, no e testimonies in the volume is so defective in expression. It is been taken down from his lips, as he was no scholar. But illiterate, John Finlay was a good man. He says, "I have ace in my lovely Lord." Wodrow gives from the "Justiciary" the interrogations put to him before the Council.

ng interrogated whether it be lawful to rise in arms against the uses to answer, these being kittle questions, and he a poor Refuses to say God save the king, but says he loves the rell as any person. Confesseth he was present at Drumclog, out arms. Being asked, if he conversed with Mr Donald ithin these two years? he refuses to answer otherwise than an is neither by the law of God nor man bound to have a shedding his own blood. Declares he cannot write."

hese answers his life was taken away.—ED.]

HE LAST SPEECH AND TESTIMONY of JOHN FINLAY, who lived in the Muirside, in the parish of Kilmarnock, and suffered in the Grassmarket of Edinburgh, December 15, 1682.

"MEN AND BRETHREN,—Showing you that I am condemned unjustly by a generation of bloody men who are thirsting after the blood of the saints of God, and upon no other account but for my being found in the way of my duty in the sight of God; glory to His boly name for it; though gone about with many failings, and much imperfections, for adhering to Christ in all His offices, as Prophet, Priest, and King, and for my following Him in all His persecuted Gospel truths. The articles of my indictment were for—ministers and others, for which with my whole soul I bless Hun that ever He honoured me with such company, and in token of His countenance He hath kept me in that company.

Cargill (for which with my whole soul I desire to bless and magnify the riches of His grace, that ever He conferred such company upon such a sinful wretch), and Mr [John] King, Mr Richard Cameron, Mr [John] Kid, in particular.

"3. My refusing to call the Bishop's death murder, which I dust not do, it being God's righteous judgment upon him.

"4. My not calling Bothwell Bridge rebellion; it being in defence of themselves and of the Gospel, which is lawful in God's sight; and therefore I durst not call it rebellion.

"5. My giving meat, drink, and comfort, to the persecuted people of God; which I did willingly and with my whole heart; and herein I have sweet peace this day, as in Matthew, x. 42; 'And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward;" which He hath made out to me abundantly to the full.

"6. For my being commanded to say, 'God save the king,' which I durst not do for my very soul; their bidding us do it in test of our save him in his person, and government, and authority; a perfect owning of him in all that he hath done, in his usurpon Christ's prerogatives and privileges, they having made eme head in all matters and causes, civil and ecclesiastic; I had done, it had been a flat denying of Christ, and a join-him and them, (I mean Charles Stuart,) in all that they have verturning of the glorious work of Reformation in these lands, he wrongs done to the Gospel and people of God in this day; all have made me odious in the sight of God and before I, for which I bless Him He hath kept me from, as the Scrip, 'He that is not faithful in the little, will not be faithful in h is much.'

Being asked if I would not pray for the king? I said, Yes. I said, according to the Scripture. They said, He will him as he is a man, but not as he is king, which is high Now my friends, I being conscientious to mynd rebellion. my owning him as my king was a casting off Christ Jesus, ead and King of Zion, and taking on with him, and so would irred the wrath of God, and homologated all the bloodshed ie horrid bloody abominations they have committed in the avowed defying of the great God. Oh! who dare join with wed enemies of our God, and so cast off the society of the id give the hand of fellowship to such bloody and manetches, that are making it their whole work to root out out of this covenanted land, that the name of Israel shall be made mention of. But they will be all beguiled, for ll reign till all His enemies be made His footstool.

give my testimony to the sure word of God, which is the sof truth.

give my testimony to the way of salvation through Jesus and that by His satisfaction.

bear my testimony to the work of Reformation as it was reom Popery, Prelacy, Erastianism, and other errors, as it is l in the Confession of Faith, Larger and Shorter Catechisms. give my testimony to the Covenants, National and Solemn and Solemn Acknowledgment of Sins and Engagement to um of Saving Knowledge, Directory for Worship, and to the f God's Wrath, drawn up by the General Assembly of the after their meeting with the rotten-hearted malignant, Charles

- "5. I bear my testimony to the faithful actings of the Remonstrators against malignants and the malignant interest, which is the very thing contended for by the true Presbyterians of the Church of Scotland.
- "6. I give my testimony, not to go further back, seeing it homologates the rest of that notable testimony given at Lanark against that tyrant, and the Test, enacted by that late Parliament, which I could not but look upon in the time of carrying it on, and yet do, that the remnant was owned of the Lord.
- "7. I bear my testimony to all the faithful testimonies of the martyrs that have gone before us, whether on scaffolds, or on the fields, or in the seas.
- "8. I bear my testimony to all appearances in arms, for defence of the Gospel.
- "9. I bear my testimony to the faithful preaching of the Gospel that hath been in the fields by the faithful and sent messengers of Jesus Christ, according to His own mission, preaching days, communion days, and fast days, by Messrs Cargill, King, Kid, Cameron, and Douglas.
- "10. and lastly. I bear my testimony to the fellowship meetings of the Lord's people, particular and general. My soul hath been many a time refreshed with His presence, in company with them.
 - "Likewise":
- "1. I bear my testimony against the public Resolutioners for taking in the malignant interest, for which this poor Church is smarting this day, and feeling the weight of the tyrant's hand for such eager lusting after a king.
- "2. I bear my testimony against the Hamilton Declaration, which is one and the same with the Resolutioners, for taking in the foresaid interest, contrary to the land's engagements in Covenant.
- "3. For corrupting the army and other things, such as the excommunicated tyrant's interest, cess, and all other impositions of that nature, for the down-bearing of Christ's interest, doing it against a holy God.
- "4. I bear my testimony against Indulged ministers, for their not coming in by the door, but by the mission of men: 'He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber' (John x. 1); they being entered by the tyrant and not by the door, are become men-servants, and not servants to Jesus Christ, and so are become an Erastian party, which hath our Lord and King more than the bloody Prelatic party e these twenty years by-gone, by their rending the Church's and for dividing many a bosom friend, to the great hurt of sel.

[leave my testimony against all corrupt ministers, sheltering es under their wings, strengthening the stakes of that plantafor their dark and ambiguous preaching, in not declaring e counsel of God.

I leave my testimony against all the enemies and wrongers of 's glorious privileges and prerogatives, all in general. I leave mony against that bloody murderer, John Reid, which I a woman in the town of Newmilns, and now is carrying inst Christ and His followers, who took me, and confessed at he had not an order for it. And against that party that ne to Edinburgh; and especially Alexander Gemmil, my ir, for he vexed me more than all that party, for he said I folk, and baptized children, and mocked me most dreadine of advice to two or three sorts of folk:

you that are old professors and Covenanters in the West of , and especially in Kilmarnock parish. What are ye doing? re ye now, by when [i.e., since] ye swore the Covenant, and gainst Popery and Prelacy, and all that faction, side, and How are ye prosecuting the ends of that Covenant, now ght of God, and the oath of God, that ye swore with hands to the most high God, and before heaven and earth, sun on? Oh! my soul trembles to think what bad example ye he young generation, ye who should have been as the hefore the flock, to train them up in the way of God, and the coliness and righteousness, and now ye are leading them just rary. Should ye not have been more tender of the blood ouls of the young generation, than to turn your back upon ofession, and turn in with the men of these abominations in s? Oh! fear the wrath of that God, who has said, 'Shall k the Covenant, and be delivered?' Now, therefore, I deve tender [i.e., regard] your own souls, that ye would turn your first husband, for then was it better with you, than xt, you that are the young generation, men and women.

e ye doing? Are ye following the footsteps of your fathers, in their courses of defection, joining in hearing these perjured curates, answering at their courts, joining in their worship with them, in their abominable and soul-destroying courses, contrary to the Word of God, our Solemn Covenants, and Confession of Faith, Larger and Shorter Catechisms, the order of the Church of Scotland, in discipline, worship, and government, as they, ye, and I, are swom with hands lifted up to the most high God, which no power on earth is able to loose, nor undo, nor frees from, no man nor woman baptized in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost? Oh! therefore take heed how ye think to answer before the great sin-revenging God, before whom I am to appear within a little space, and before whom I and all the world will stand and be judged with rightcous judgment.

"And likewise, seeing that I dare not but show you my mind anent some persons and their carriage in this day of Jacob's trouble, when Zion is lying waste, and ploughing like a field:

"First, I give my testimony against these men called elders, in my own parish, because of their complying with every course of defection and abomination that comes alongst through the country: they being first thought to be faithful elders in the time of the Presbyterian government, and then turned elders to the Curate Carnegie, and then turned elders to Mr Wedderburn, that indulged minister; and now are sessioners to this curate. And seeing this is true, that they have showed themselves to be men of no principles, and the Spirit of God saying expressly, 'Meddle not with them that are given to change;' who can blame me to disown them?

"I give my testimony against John Boyd, called Bailie of Kilmarnock, for his bloody courses in many things, and especially in his uplifting of the cess and bloody fines, and in oppressing the poor in their consciences, and laying on of dragoons upon them most cruelly, which he did upon me four times. I wish God may forgive him for what he has done in that matter.

"Now, according to my blessed Lord's command, I am not possessed with malice or a spirit of revenge, but I bless when cursed. As for these men that are unjustly taking away my life, not only contrary to the law of God, and the ancient laws of the land, but even contrary to their own law; now, for what they are doing to me, as I am in myself, I can freely forgive them, and all others; but as they do it against the image of God in me, and upon His truth's account, and so against Himself, that is not mine for to forgive, but I leave it to whom vengeance belongs, that He may deal with them as He ost glorify Himself.

h! if I could speak or write anything to the commendation of renanted God of the Church of Scotland!

- . I have surely many things to say, for that He trysted [i.e., ted] my lot to be in a nation where He hath set up His pure p; whereas He might justly have letten my lot be amongst and heathen nations, that know nothing of the true God.
- one, in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence Lamb: and they have no rest day nor night, who worship the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for nd ever; and they have no rest day nor night, who worship ast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his 'And so, as sure as God is God, and the holy Scriptures are ord, according to which all men that have heard or seen it be judged, having the sentence of absolution or condemnation according thereto: 'For as many as have sinned without hall also perish without law' (Rom. ii. 12); so it is clear, that st will surely perish, viz., all infidels, and atheists, and heathens, 'agans, that know not the true God nor of His law. 'And as as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law.' And atever vain hopes the Papists may have of being saved, living ying Papists, or whatever charity loose professors have on that to give them, they are as far from being saved as devils, which smally cast out of His presence.

I have Him to bless for this, that my lot is not among correctestant churches abroad, Lutherans and other corruptions bounding errors, both in doctrine, discipline, worship, and ment, sectarian, Episcopal, or Erastian; but in the Reformed h of Scotland, where all these things have been cast over the as not plants of His planting, where He hath been owned in s offices, Prophet, Priest, and King; though He may say of us reat measure, as to the Church of Israel of old, 'I have planted thee a noble vine, but thou art become a degenerate pla vine unto me.' In that day of planting we could h song, 'We have a strong city; salvation will God app and bulwarks (Isa. xxvi. 1). 'The Lord hath accompli He hath poured out His fierce anger, and hath kindled and it hath devoured the foundations thereof. earth, and all the inhabitants of the world, would not that the adversary and the enemy should have entered For the sins of her prophets, and th of Jerusalem. her priests, that have shed the blood of the just in the they have wandered as blind men in the streets, they themselves with blood, so that men could not touch the (Lam. iv. 11-14). This may be our regret before God, 7th and 8th verses: 'Her Nazarites were purer than sr whiter than milk, they were more ruddy in body that polishing was of sapphire: their visage is blacker than are not known in the streets: their skin cleaveth to the is withered, it is become like a stick.' Oh! how 1 were it for the mother to let the child, the son of her wo lack of the breast? Were she free of the child's blood, i want of its natural food? And oh! how many are this for want of the lively preached Gospel? Ver. 3, 'Even sters draw out the breast, they give suck to their you daughter of my people is become cruel, like the os wilderness.'

- "4. I have Him to bless for this, that I am not the against Him in an open stated war, and so bearing arm and His people, for there is no more in me as to myse that are embruing their hands deeply in the blood of the
- "5. I have Him to bless for this, that ever He oper to see the mystery of iniquity that abounds and hath heart: as also in some measure, a sight of the remedy of Jesus, with His spirit engaging me to Himself, letting self altogether precious, making me to see that it is doorkeeper in the house of God than to dwell in all th sin for a season. 'Thou shalt guide me with Thy coun ward receive me to glory. Whom have I in heaven b there is none upon earth that I desire beside thee' (Ps.
- "6. I have His holy name to bless that ever He to know any thing, how small soever, of His persecute own, kingdom, and privileges, now when many by their acts ws have taken His crown and sceptre and royal robe from and settled the whole government of His house upon a man that a worm. But I believe His decree will stand, oppose it who 'Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion (Ps. ii. 6). the Lord, that is my name, and my glory will I not give to er, neither my praise to graven images (Isa. xlii. 8). Now it declarative glory which that usurper hath taken to himself. it He that leadeth captivity captive, according to His royal will rord, will reclaim His own glory. He it is alone that hath given to be the sure foundation, whereon all the building is fitly d: that stone which the builders have rejected is made the head 'Therefore, thus saith the Lord God, behold, I lay in corner. for a foundation, a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, e foundation: he that believeth shall not make haste. also will I lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet, he hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall ow the hiding place' (Isa. xxviii. 16, 17).

7. I bless and magnify the holy name of my God, that hath I me to be a sufferer for His work and interest, counting it not same, but a high privilege and dignifying of me, when many is in their generation have been denied of it, when so many are ng, and by their practice rendering the cross of Christ of no Oh, my friends, bless and magnify your God for this, that ye ivileged with these things, and strive to walk worthy of Him in places, calling, and stations, and relations, as a husband, as a as a master, as a servant, as a Christian. Study to have a less conversation, as becomes the Gospel; as far as ye can, walk of offence towards God and man.

My dear friends, I have sweet peace in my lovely Lord. He ade my prison become a palace unto me, and He has made me a time to bless Him for my lot, for which my soul shall praise through all eternity. Therefore, my dear friends, let none of ink it strange, concerning the fiery trial, as though some strange had happened unto me, for it is in His holy wisdom. He has my lot sweet; for He has made out His sweet promises unto ne of which is of more worth than all the world, giving me the is of His Spirit, bearing witness with my spirit that I have a to them all.

Now, farewell all things in time. Farewell Holy Scriptures.

Farewell all Christian friends. Farewell prayer and medi Farewell faith. Farewell hope. Welcome heaven, welcome I Son, and Holy Spirit. Welcome angels and the souls of jurnade perfect. Welcome praises for evermore.

" Sic subscribitur,

"JOHN FINLA

William Cochran,

three miles to the west of Strathaven. The first e calls him Mungo Cochrane, but the fourth, togethe Wodrow and Crookshanks, gives his name as above. His as on examination before the Council are in Wodrow, and are stantially the same as those of John Finlay: "William Cobeing interrogate if it be lawful for subjects to rise in arms a the king, refuses to answer. Being interrogate, whether the be lawful king, answers these are kittle questions, and winothing of them, being a prisoner. Being desired to say 'Got the king,' refuses to say anything. Can write, but refuses to si answers."

His testimony, like John Finlay's, is very similar to that fellow-sufferer, James Robertson. Its chief feature is the cle with which it brings out the reason why he and many other suffered to the death refused to say "God save the king." not because they were unwilling to pray for the king, but b to say "God save the king" was regarded as an approval that he had done against the Church and people of God, at true subjects of the kingdom, and the ancient and fundaments thereof.—Ed.]

HE LAST TESTIMONY of WILLIAM COCHRAN, who lived in the parish of Evandale, and suffered in the Grassmarket of Edinburgh, December 15, 1682.

"LOVING FRIENDS,—Seeing I am going off time to eternity, I think it fit now to leave my testimony to the truths of God. And,

"1. I own the Scriptures, and acknowledge them he only rule to the Church and people of God at all times, and ill dispensations.

[I own] Jesus Christ to be the only Saviour of His people, ad of His Church, and sole governor of His house.

I adhere to the covenanted work of Reformation, Confession h, and the Covenants and Catechisms. And I think it my onour and glory, that I was born a member of that Church, lesire to bear my testimony to all the privileges of that Church, o I desire to bear witness against all her enemies, especially Supremacy and Prelacy, and all Prelatic and Erastian courses, unst all joiners and complyers whomsoever, with such like. ow I desire every believer in the Church of Scotland, to take how matters stand between God and their souls, in such a For it seems to me, that the religion which would have our turn at other times, will not do it now; for His way is the deeps, and ye would needs look where ye stand, when so re falling; and see whether ye have made religion your only For except Christ be the only pearl of price to you, s law your delight, ye cannot hold out. For it seems to be a ork to be self-denied, and part with all things, when they come petition with the truths of Christ. Your going to kirks, and ng courts now, when they are founded upon perjury, and spon the ruins of the Church; I cannot see but it is a direct icting of the work of Reformation, which we are sworn to n in its purity in doctrine, worship, discipline, and governfor we should not be divided directly nor indirectly; and ould not have] a joining with the enemies of the truth, when uld neither touch nor taste with the men of these abomina"O look where ye are and what will be the end, if mercy prevent it not; when once ye are fanged [i.e., caught] in their snares, ye stand stoutly to the defence of it, and of these that join with them in these ensnaring courses. I desire ye would look through the causes why the Lord contends with this poor land, and leaves them thus to consume away unto dross; for the whole land is involved in perjury, for they are all joining together to destroy that which we were bound and sworn to maintain both in Kirk and State.

"Ye know that the land was given away to the Lord by Covenant, and we, with all our substance, lives, and fortunes, sworn to defend it, to the utmost of our power. Oh! therefore consider where ye are now. Ye may date your perjury from the changing of the government, and the couping up [i.e., overturning] of the work of Reformation, and your being witnesses to it, and to the taking and beheading of Argyle and Mr Guthrie, without either resisting or resenting of it, which is astonishing to me to think upon, for ye were bound to defend the lives of these two men, though all your lives should have gone for it. I am put to wonder at Scotland's blindness.

"Ye may see that your crowning, and entering into covenant with Charles Stuart, hath been a thing contrary to the will of the Lord, for he and all his predecessors have still been known to be in opposition to the ways of the Lord. It seems that the Lord is still contending with the land, and will contend until He consume him and the land, because the king's sins become the people's sins, when not Now ye know how he hath witnessed against and withstood. ensnared the whole land by his acts, but especially his Supremacy over the church, and intrusion on Christ's prerogatives; and so many ministers being in the land, and yet have not witnessed against it, but have either kept silence, and thereby declared their unfaithfulness to the Lord, and the souls of them they were set over. ministers ought to preach in season and out of season, and set the trumpet to their mouths, and give the people warning of every single or else the Lord will require their blood at the ministers' hands. fear the ministers of Scotland will be found very guilty of this. have not given the people faithful warning against the hearing of curates and Indulged, for the people's testimony lay partly in bearing to hear; for they were thrust in by the king's Supremacy, And the Indulged have done more have entered not in at the door. to the Church, than all the curates have done; for they were look upon to be godly men, and poor things not considering, but following lindly, not looking to the Scripture and the government of the ; and so have broken and divided the people.

.nd our noblemen and gentlemen, from whom other things oked for, have deserted the cause, to the stain of their memory r generations. The ministers ought to have given the people g, and not have been so tender of men, when truth was so For the people, many of them were like to have taken g; but we see that juggling with the Lord, first and last, hath our ruin and wrack [i.e., wreck], and now we are brought to g, and our worldly wisdom is seen to be foolishness with the But I perceive within these two or three years that the Lord inning to let us see our former ground again. And I desire lis poor people, to labour to win [i.e., get], at it, and to hold and to be as tender of one another as ye can, without sinning t the Lord; for we will be all found guilty of the defection in Therefore I desire you to humble yourselves before ord, and to make conscience of mourning, and heart-brokenind weeping. For if ye had the sense of it deeply impressed your hearts, as I have had since I was a prisoner, and the heartthat I have had both from one and another, but especially nistaken friends, ye could not but have wept with all your heart. But, dear friends, be not discouraged, but hold on. at I am now to suffer and lay down my life in, is, and will be at length to be, the way of God. There is much need of tens of, and zeal to God's glory, and of watchfulness; for I find are snares on all hands, and I fear some of the Lord's choice

Ind likewise I desire, dear friends, that ye would keep a spirit ipathy with one another. I fear your straits be but coming. Iso I desire, when ye fall upon debates about the matters of ord, that ye would follow the method of the Scriptures, and pirit there, and cease from your bitterness, one of you against ir; for the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of ord. But be humbled under the sense of the public sins that aused us to be smitten with such sharp dispensations from the will be permitted to fall,

But I think Scotland's case is like the case of Jonah, who fled he presence of the Lord, till he could win [i.e., get] no further, e Lord pursued him unto the whale's belly, till he was forced out unto the Lord. Oh! that ye would cry, and cry aright roken hearts, and confess to the Lord, and forsake. Lay it home to each one of yourselves in particular, as David did, when he transgressed against the Lord, and numbered the people. Oh! that ye would plead with the Lord; and come in His mercy, and plead for the young generation, that have not sinned away the Gospel, as we have done, and say to the Lord, what have these silly sheep done? Oh! plead hard with Him, for I am persuaded He hath a kindness for Scotland. He is dealing with the hearts of some of the young generation, and as yet He has kept up a party contending for His work, and will keep up some witnessing still. Yea, I think He will still keep a contending party for His work and truths until He return again. And I think the hopes of this should encourage your hearts.

"Now the main article of my indictment, upon which I have received my sentence of death from men, was, that I would not say 'God save the king,' which (as they have now stated [i.e., established] him an idol in the Mediator's room) I could not do, without being guilty of saying, Amen, to all that he hath done against the Church and people of God, and true subjects of the kingdom, and the ancient and fundamental laws thereof; and [so would] have done contrary to that in the second Epistle of John, 10th and 11th verses: 'If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed: for he that biddeth him God speed, is partaker of his evil deeds.' ye know, that the taking of the name of God in our mouths, is a part of worship, and so a worshipping of their idol. For before our faces they said, that he was king over all persons, and over all But they sentenced causes; which is putting him in God's room. me because they said that I disowned authority, which was a diving into the thoughts of my heart. Now, in obedience to what my Lord hath commanded, I can freely forgive (as I desire to be forgiven) any thing that is done to me, as I am in myself; but what hath been done against me upon the account of truth, and so striking against God, I am not to set myself above Him, but I leave that to Himself.

"Now I have great satisfaction in my lot, and I rejoice that He hath called me to it, and I bless Him that I have been all along helped to join with His despised work and people. And now many are pleased to say, that I had not been apprehended as a prisoner, if there had not been some of the suffering people of God frequently about my mother's house; which is a commanded duty, much commended by Christ, for if any man give a cup of cold water to a disciple in the name of a disciple, he shall not want a disciple's reward-fore, seeing it is such, let none offend at such a work, who pon themselves as members of that body. What may follow, that in the Lord's hand, who doth all things well, and nothing urn His people, being found rightly in the way of their duty, is to these, who account the pure way of truth a wild principle, unt it a greater mercy to be wild from the way of sinning, than tamed thereunto; as, alas! most of the generation are.

Now, farewell all true friends in Christ. Farewell holy and Scriptures, farewell sinning and suffering. Welcome heaven the full enjoyment of God through all eternity.

" Sic subscribitur,

"WILLIAM COCHRAN."

Andrew Guilline.

NDREW GUILLINE, or GUILLAN, was a weaver near Magus Muir, two miles from St Andrews, the scene of the death of Archbishop Sharp, May 3, 1679. He was called his house to hold the horses of the carriage, while Balfour and sociates were engaged in bringing the prelate's career to an unted end. In his testimony, Guilline justifies what was done to , yet he seems to have had no share in the deed further than f a deeply-interested spectator. Wodrow says he endeavoured cure the archbishop's daughter from hurt and danger when rould interpose betwixt the actors and him. He had told ow's informer that, when the commander ordered them to draw swords, Sharp's courage failed him at the sight of the cold iron, e made as hideous and terrible shrieks as ever were heard. fter the archbishop's death, Andrew Guilline found it prudent to Magus Muir, and seek employment elsewhere. In the "Pasin the Lives of Helen Alexander and James Currie of Pent-'Helen Alexander says: "And about the year 1682, Andrew 3, who was execute, did sometimes come to my house; for I 's thought it my duty to harbour any of the godly; and if I thought they were godly, though they differed in judgment, yet I willingly entertained them, but especially those who were straightest in their judgment, and those who were most persecute for righteousness' sake. And so he being taken, it was thought that Mr M'Naught, the curate, had informed against me to the Council, and the Council put it to the laird to apprehend me. . . . When I had been some days in prison, I was brought down from the prison to the Abbey by a guard of soldiers to the Chancellor and Bishop Paterson. . . . And when I was brought before the Chancellor (who was president) and Bishop Paterson, I was interrogated by Sir William Paterson if I went to the kirk. I said I would not go to the kirk They questioned me if though they should take my life from me. Andrew Gulon came to my house, and I said, He did. He asked me why I gave him cloth to work; I answered, He was honest. asked if any vagabonds came to my house, and I said, No (for so they termed these sufferers)."

On the 11th of June 1683, four years after the death of Sharp, he was at work in Cockpen, a parish a few miles to the south-east of Edinburgh, when the curate came by, and asked him where he was last Lord's day, and if he attended the parish church? clined to own him as his minister, or to answer his questions. curate now called for some of his adherents in the parish, who seized Guilline and carried him to the village of Cockpen. Here he was pressed to drink the king's health, which he refused to do, on the plea that he drank no healths. His refusal awakened further suspicion, and he was taken to Dalkeith prison, and from thence to Edinburgh, where, after examination, he was put into the iron house, a room on the second floor of the Tolbooth, specially appropriated The iron bar or goad, to which they were chained, a bar for felons. of wrought iron, twelve feet long by two and a half inches in diameter, is still preserved in the museum of the Society of Antiquaries in Edinburgh.

As yet nothing was known of his presence at the death of the Archbishop. By and by a rumour came to Edinburgh that he had been present, but there was no evidence to make the rumour a fact. Andrew Guilline himself was made to give the evidence desired. He was again examined, and the Advocate, while examining him, spoke of the death as a horrid murder, and affirmed, that when the Archbishop was upon his knees in prayer, they should have killed him. This misrepresentation was too much for Andrew, who had been unable to forget Sharp's prayerlessness in his last moments, and the unsuspecting man lifted up his hands in surprise, and exclaimed, "Oh! dreadful, he would not pray one word for all that could be said to him." This was enough for his enemies. An indictment was drawn up, and he was tried July 18. The jury brought him in guilty of the Archbishop's death. And he was sentenced to be taken to the Cross of Edinburgh upon Friday, July 20, and to have both his hands cut off at the foot of the gallows, and then hanged, his head to be cut off, and fixed at Cupar, and his body to be carried to Magus Muir, and hung up in chains.

At the close of his testimony an account is given of the cruel manner in which this sentence was carried out to the letter.

His body was not allowed to hang in chains many months. Some of his friends took it down. They seem to have been discovered, as the Records of the Council, May 27, 1684, contain a sentence of banishment on them as owning the Archbishop's "horrid murder."

Guilline was the only one concerned in the death of Sharp who suffered on its account, for Hackstoun was taken at Airsmoss. All the others escaped.

Fountainhall's notice of him is: "Andrew Gullan, weaver in Balmerino, who was at Archbishop Sharpe's murder, being taken at Cockpen, was execute the 13th July 1683; died hardened and insensible."

The first edition gives only the month, but not the day of his execution. It is left blank. We have supplied it from the record of his sentence given by Wodrow. Fountainhall, as he sometimes is in minor details, is clearly wrong in the date.—Ed.]

HE LAST SPEECH AND TESTIMONY of ANDREW Guilling, Weaver, who lived in the Shire of Fife, and suffered at the Gallowlee, Edinburgh, July [20] 1683.

"My DEAR FRIENDS,—Being here to die for my dearest Lord's precious truths, I thought fit to leave this with you as my last advice. Seek to do good to all in your day. Let your moderation be known unto all men. Study to be employing [yourselves for] your God, for there is sudden wrath pronounced from heaven against all that have been doing, or continue in doing evil; for He has said, 'Pour out Thy fury upon the heathen that know Thee not, and upon the families that call not on Thy name' (Jer. x. 25). We had need to know what we shall answer, when we shall come before Him, with whom we have to do; for He is a holy God, and a consuming fire to the workers of iniquity. Wherefore, dear friends, study holiness in all manner of conversation. Make it your earnest care to have your conversation as becomes the Gospel; and then He will be forthcoming unto you.

"My friends, I leave you with the Lord, who hath promised to be the God of His people. He is given of the Father to be a leader and commander to His people, and He will lead them. And I entreat every particular person never to be at rest till they give away themselves personally in covenant to God, and promise through His grace to be for Him, and not for another. I leave you to Him who leads Joseph like a flock. If ye would have Him speaking peace to you in your life, and in your end, cleave to the Son of God, and His truths. And remember, if speedy repentance do not prevent, you will utterly ruin your immortal souls. Now, my dear friends, ye that are desiring singly to stand for God, hold on your way, and wait for the Lord, and quit not a hoof of the truth. He will be an up-making God to you, and He has promised to be a present help to you in the time of your need.

"There is a great confluence come here at this time; I wish with all my heart they would get good by their coming. here to lay down my life. I declare I die not as a murderer, or as an evil doer; although this covenant-breaking, perjured, murdering generation lay it to my charge as though I were a murderer, on account of the justice that was executed on that Judas [i.e., Archbishop Sharp] that sold the Kirk of Scotland for 50,000 merks a-year. we being bound to extirpate Popery and Prelacy, and that to the utmost of our power, and we having no other that were appearing for God at that day, but such as took away his life; therefore, I was bound to join with them in defending the true religion. And all the land, every man, was bound in covenant, when he had sold the Church—they were bound, I say, to meet him by the way, when he came down from London, and have put him presently to the edge of the sword for that heinous indignity done to the holy Son of God.

"But it is (alas!) too apparent that men have never known God rightly, nor considered that He is a holy God. Oh! terrible back-sliding, they will not believe that God will call them to an account for what they owed to God. But assure yourselves; as He is in heaven, He will call every one to an account, how they have stood to that Covenant and work of Reformation. I need say no more; but I would have you consider, that in breaking the Covenant, we have trampled under foot the precious truths of Jesus Christ.

"Now, being straitened of time, I must leave off writing. Wherefore, farewell holy Scriptures, wherewith my soul hath been many a day refreshed. Farewell sweet societies with whom I have been, whose company was only refreshful to me. Farewell my mother, brethren, sisters, and all other relations. Farewell all earthly pleasures. Farewell sun, moon, and stars. Welcome spirits of just men made perfect. Welcome angels. Welcome Father, Son, and Holy Ghost—into whose hands I commit my spirit!

" Sic subscribitur,

"ANDREW GUILLINE."

HE inhuman treatment this martyr met with ought not to be forgot, as a pregnant instance of the hellish rage and fury of these persecutors, and of the Lord's rich grace, who wonderfully countenanced and strengthened him to endure the tortures inflicted upon him with an undaunted braveness of spirit. For, besides the tortures he suffered in prison, they ordered both his hands to be cut off, while he was alive. And it was observed by on-lookers, that though by reason the executioner was drunk, he received nine strokes in cutting them off, yet he bore it with invincible patience. And after the right hand was cut off, he held out the stump in view of the multitude, saying—

"As my blessed Lord sealed my salvation with His blood, so I am honoured this day to seal His truths with my blood."

Afterwards, being strangled a little, his head was cut off, and it, with the hands, placed upon the Netherbow Port of Edinburgh; and his entrails being taken out, his body was conveyed to Magus Muir, and there hung up in chains on a high pole.

John Cochran.

OHN COCHRAN was a shoemaker in Lesmahagow. He was brought before the Council, November 26, 1683, and examined. On the 28th he was tried before the Justiciary Court on the charge of treason and being at Bothwell. No proof was brought against him, except his own answers, when under examination, which the Records of the Justiciary Court give very much as he states them himself in his testimony. He was found guilty, and sentenced to be executed at the Cross, on Friday, November 30, 1683.

As stated in the note of the compilers, John Cochran was tried and suffered at the same time with John Whitelaw and Arthur Bruce.

John Whitelaw belonged to New Monkland in Lanarkshire. At his trial his confession was read to him, a confession doubtless framed in the same way as that of John Cochran from his answers when examined before the Council. It is—

"John Whitelaw declares he thinks Bothwell Bridge lawful, that rising being in defence of the Gospel. He thinks himself and these three nations bound by the Covenants. That it is above his reach to tell whether the king be lawful king or not. Confesseth he was sometime with the rebels at Bothwell, but not at the battle, and that he had a sword. Refuses to say, 'God save the king,' this not being the proper place for prayer, and if it mean his owning his authority, he has spoken as to that already. Declares he can write, but will not sign what is above. Being interrogate if his judges were lawful judges, and if the Archbishop's death was murder, he answers, these questions are above his reach."

Arthur Bruce belonged to Dalserf, Lanarkshire. His confession was also the only evidence against him:

"Arthur Bruce confesseth he was at Bothwell, and had a sword; that he was with the party that took away one of Dalziel's horses; refuses to say, 'God save the king,' but said, 'God save all the election of grace;' declares he cannot say whether the Archbishop's death was murder or not."

Wodrow testifies of all three that they died in much peace and comfort.—ED.]

HE LAST TESTIMONY of John Cochran, who lived in the parish of Lesmahagow, and suffered at the Cross of Edinburgh, upon the 30th of November 1683.

"Being brought before the Lords of Justiciary, they asked, 'Where I went in to the rebels?' I answered, 'I went in to the people of God, whom ye call so, at Drumclog.'

"They asked, 'If I had arms?' I told, 'I had a fork.'

"They asked, 'If I thought it rebellion?' I said, 'No.'

"And they said, 'What was it then?' I told them, 'It was in defence of the Gospel.'

"They asked, 'If I did own the authority?' I told them, 'As far as it did agree with the word of God.'

"Then they asked, 'If I would pray for the king?' I told them 'That prayer should be gone about in decency and order.'

"Then they asked, 'If I would say, "God save the king?"'
And I refused.

"Then they said, 'Was I not bound to pray for him?' I told them, 'That I was bound to pray for all that were within the bounds of election'

"Then they said, 'Was the Bishop's death murder?' I told, 'I was no judge.'

"Then they asked, 'If I was at Bothwell?' I told, 'I was.'

"They said, 'Was it rebellion?' I said, 'No.'

"Then I was taken back to prison again, and the irons laid on me. But, blessed be the Lord, that was no discouragement to me; for, when the storm blew hardest, the smiles of my Lord were at the sweetest. It is matter of rejoicing unto me, to think how my Lord hath passed by many a tall cedar, and hath laid His love upon a poor bramble-bush, the like of me. And oh! that I could bless the Lord for it, and say, 'Come all ye that fear the Lord, and I will tell you what He hath done for my soul.' And now I am made to say, that the Lord doth all things well, and holy is His name. And as for my part, I have good cause to bless the Lord that ever I was a hearer of the persecuted Gospel, and however the world think of us, that our lot is hard in a world, yet remember, that He saith in His holy word, that whosoever will live godly, must suffer persecution; and whosoever will not take up his cross and follow Me, is not worthy of Me: and fear not him that can kill the body; but He hath said, I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear; fear Him that can kill both soul and body, and cast both into hell. And if judgment begin at the house of God, where shall the wicked and ungodly appear in that day, when He shall take vengeance on them that fear Him not, and obey not the Gospel?

"And now, alas! I am afraid, that even much of the Gospel amongst us will be a witness against us; for it was the judgment of Capernaum that so many mighty works were done in it, and yet they believed not: and yet, for all that came upon it, it was said to be exalted up to heaven, and then we hear of its being thrust down to hell. Even so I fear, the having of so much light is the plague of our land; for it was once a praise to all the earth, but now a mocking, even among the heathens.

"And now, as a dying man, I do heartily declare my adherence unto all the holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament; and preaching of the blessed Gospel by a faithful sent Presbyterian Gospel ministry. As also, I do with all my soul and heart agree with, and assent unto the Confession of Faith, Larger and Shorter Catechisms, the Sum of Saving Knowledge, the National and Solemn League and Covenants, Directory for Worship, the Solemn Acknowledgment of public Sins and Breaches of the Covenant, and Engagement to all Duties, together with all and whatsoever is contained within the foresaid book.

"And likewise, I do hereby heartily witness and testify against Popery, Prelacy, Erastianism, Heresy, and other errors, especially Quakerism, and whatsoever is disconform, and disagreeable to the holy Scriptures, and these other sound writings above-mentioned. And siclike [i.e., in the same manner] I witness and testify my abhorrence and detestation of that abominable and blasphemous Test, which is now so violently pressed upon the people, tending to the destruction of their souls.

"Moreover, I leave my wife and six small children to the care and protection of the almighty God, who hath promised to be a father to the fatherless, and an husband to the widow: and my soul to God who gave it, for whose cause I now willingly lay down my life. And I bid farewell to all earthly and carnal comforts.

"Farewell all Christian acquaintance; and welcome Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, into whose hands I do commit my spirit.

"Sic subscribitur,

"JOHN COCHRAN."

The same time also suffered upon the same heads of truth, and adhering to the same testimony, these two pious martyrs, John Whitelaw and Arthur Bruce, who were interrogate upon the same things before the council of Lords of Justiciary, and do agree with the foregoing martyr in every respect, and express in their testimonies the like satisfaction with their lot and cheerfulness under the cross, and their adherence to the same principles, and abhorrence of the same errors.

John Wharry.

OHN MWHARRIE, or John Wharry as he is called by the compilers of the "Cloud," was the younger brother of the laird of Scorryholm, a small property on the Logan water, about three miles to the south-west of Lesmahagow. He was at the battle of Bothwell Bridge. In Mr J. B. Greenshield's valuable Annals of Lesmahagow, his sword, an Andrea Ferrara, is said to be in possession of J. G. M'Kirdy, Esq. of Birkwood. His presence at Bothwell Bridge seems to have been unknown to his captors, for he was apprehended on an entirely different charge.

Alexander Smith, of the parish of Cambusnethan, was seized in May 1681, and taken to Edinburgh on the charge of being at Bothwell. He escaped out of prison, disguised in women's clothing.

but was afterwards captured. A party of soldiers wagain to prison, and when at Inchbelly Bridge, about east of Kirkintilloch, a few country people suddenly and rescued the prisoner. In the affray some were we sides, and a soldier killed. The country people retired and Alexander Smith got off in safety. He lived to ner in 1685, and was sent to Dunottar Castle, a lon in ruins on a rock on the sea-shore, not far from Stasoon afterwards again escaped, and was again capture was kept in prison till the Revolution of 1688 set him

After Alexander Smith and his friends were out of diers rallied and went in search of them. In a woo quarters of a mile east from Inchbelly Bridge, at a sp out, they came upon John M'Wharrie and James Smith arms, and merely with walking sticks in their hands. leged they belonged to the company that rescued Alexai brought them to Glasgow prison. At their preliminal the soldiers suborned of their number to depone they the man at Inchbelly Bridge; but at their trial no produced, and they made no confession. judged the fact, that they were found near the place wl was killed, a proof of their having been present. have been more unreasonable, for had they known of, rescue, they would have, like the others, speedily got and certainly would never have thrown aside their arms. ings, however, were of no avail. They were sentence 11th—according to the compilers of the "Cloud;" bi Wodrow, other papers make it more justly the 13thright hands cut off, and then to be hanged, and their carried to Inchbelly Bridge, and there hung in chains.

"Their carriage," says Wodrow, "at their executio and gallant. John M'Wharrie was ordered to lay hi block; he thinking they required him to lay his head with much courage. Major Balfour said in a great r your head but your hand we are seeking.' John and then heard wrong, but was most willing to lay downhand, but his neck, and all the members of his body, the Christ. When his hand was cut off, he was not obser but holding up the stump with great courage, said, 'I blood now shed, will yet raise the burned Covenants.'

mes Smith died in much peace and comfort, not in the least posed.

have some of their letters to their friends, from the prison at ow, dated June 11th and 12th, full of pious matter, and dising a very great measure of Divine joy they were under. They ar to have been sensible, serious Christians."

Their testimonies amply justify Wodrow's opinion. They have our and earnestness, and strength of faith, that show them to have no ordinary men.

Jountainhall's notice of them is characteristic. Although made a government point of view, it justifies the statement that they condemned without evidence. "Five of the king's guards g conveying one Smith, a fanatic, prisoner to Glasgow, seven s fell on them at Inchbelly Bridge, rescued the prisoner, and I David Murray, and wounded another; and two Lesmahagow called M'Wharrie and Smith, were seized in Stevenson Wood, ispicion, and hanged at Glasgow, 13th June 1683."

low long their bodies hung in chains is not known; but they ultimately buried at the spot where they were taken, and a ment erected over them. The inscription is in the Appendix. years ago, the farmer disliking people walking over the field to he monument, moved it fifty yards to the south, close to the side, where it now lies under an iron railing.—ED.]

LETTER from John Wharry, who suffered at the Market-cross of Glasgow, June 11th, 1683. Written during his imprisonment, to his mother and other relations.

"Dear Mother, Brother and Sisters,—I beseech you, in the name of my sweet, and altogether lovely, incomprehensible, matchless, precious, beautiful orious Redeemer, Captain and Conqueror over all his enemies, discouraged; for through His free love, cast on me in black, who was born an heir of sin and wrath, I am now by His d purchase made free by the laying down of His sweet life for sinners, of which I was one of the chiefest in the world, that I might get life eternal, which is His own gift bestowed on m now, through His blessed hand of providence, He has made of poor unworthy me, to be His prisoner, who ordereth a well to these whom He sets His love on; and these whom I He loves to the end. I do not question His all-sufficiency mother, do not ye question it, but that He is sufficient to n conqueror over my inward and outward enemies.

"Oh! mother, bless the Lord, that ever He gave you as flesh and bones, to be honoured to be a sufferer for His name, truths and interest, cause and Covenant, and concernsing to His own rule in His blessed word, which is contained Old and New Testaments, agreeable to all truths contained Oh! mother, will ye be entreated for His love's sake, to give again to Him in a free-will offering? Oh! I am persuaded would please my matchless Lord, and then it would far with me and you both.

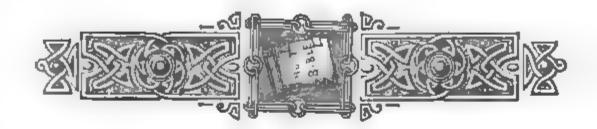

"Oh! if ye knew what of the kisses of love and kindnes since I was brought to carts, stocks, and irons. Oh! unw that should be honoured with this. Oh! mother, I beseech His love's sake, that ye do not repine, and thereby provoke t to anger. Oh! bless Him, for making all things pleasant and some, refreshful and comfortable, to my soul and my broth cannot express what of love I have met with, since they appro me and my brother. Oh! bless Him, for dealing so with beseech you, mother, be serious with the Lord, that what I begun, He may also perfect in us to His own glory, and for I work, in the souls of all that are within the compass of the d election of free grace. I cannot describe Him; He is incom sible, and He is without compare. Oh! He is beautiful and a strong and almighty, powerful to break through difficulties, bring through His own elect; all which is necessary, and less, that His own, being cast in the furnace for the trial of the and patience, may be helped to endure; for He knows well to purge away the dross and the scum of His own elect. some souls He plunges over and over; to others He limits a mits their winnowing by Satan. Oh! but true faith, believ casting all the weight upon the promises, will bring you to the plishment, if ye endure with patience. He is the same always sinners, to make them to conquer over all their inward and enemies, to these that have received Him in the precious c ospel, holden out to poor sinners freely, and to poor me; e hath engaged my heart to fall in love with Him, and to follow essed persecuted Gospel, through good report, and ill report, all hazards whatsoever, through His strength.

Oh! bless Him, all that is within me, that ever He made me to ith on His great and precious promises, and also to trust the loutmaking of them to His own in particular straits; and also Church in general, in His due season, against all oppositions in come from a tempting devil, and wicked, conspiring, and desheart, and the wicked, flattering, deceiving and bewitching

Oh! but these be three strong, arch, cunning, and subtile es. I fear, if this question were asked at professors in the if they knew these? they would answer, they knew them rell; though I fear the contrary; and it appears much in our ad generation. Woe is us! where is this married land gone to, ye?

I bless Him that He has made me His prisoner, though I be thy; He has stooped low, and with His delicates has come to my irons and cords, in that chamber in Glasgow, with His vine, apples, and flagons. Oh! if ye knew what a life we have if ye knew the want of Him, ye would have longed for Him, ould not have thought a prison, cords, stocks, irons, hard to for His comely presence, and refreshing of our souls. Oh! to His blessed and everlasting name, whose loving kindness or aye. Oh! friends, give all the praise to precious and lovely. Oh! friends, wrestle and hold on, use importunity with for your bleeding mother-church, for it is not time to be slack. Dray for us, that we may get more and more of His support, we may be strong in our almighty God, who has done great for His Church, and is beginning to do great things for us in ison.

Oh! praise Him, all ye people; but it may be nearer to the ng of the day of our King Royal, than ye are aware. God has been silent, and conscience [has been] dumb amongst people. be ye aware that ye have not these two, when He arises to make or all the wrongs He has sustained. We beseech you in His name, try whose ye are, what ye are, and in whose list ye are. ye not, that true faith is the substance of things not seen, sped for, in Him, and will be made forthcoming to the sensible of His own elect. "JOHN WHARRY."

James Smith.

LETTER written by James Smith, who suffered for the truth at the Market-cross of Glasgow, June 11, 1683, to his Father and Mother.

"DEAR FATHER AND MOTHER,—I beseech you to forgive me all the offences I have done to you, for ye know it is natural to children to offend and grieve their parents. Now, this I seek in His name, and for His sake, and I heartily forgive any provocations that my father has given me, as I am of myself, and desire the Lord may take a dealing with your heart, oh my father! Now, my dear father, seek the Lord that your soul may live; and make religion your main work, and let it not be a bye-business to you, but strive and wrestle to get time spent rightly in the fear of the Lord, minding always, and at all times, that the eye of a holy and just God is upon you; and be serious with God, and deal in earnest with Him, that He would help you to self-denial, to be denied to all things beneath the clouds; and study to win [i.e., get] at mortification; and let your affections follow nothing further than ye can be mortified to it; and be submissive to His holy will. Now, the Lord Himself persuade you to fall in love with lovely Christ. And I desire the Lord may give you unfeigned repentance and faith in Jesus Christ, and strength to stand out and resist these ensnaring courses; viz., locality paying, and the compearing at courts, and hearing of curates, and the like.

"Dear father, mother, brethren, and sisters, quit with me, and give me up to the Lord, who gave me to you. Give me up freely without hankering and repining, for He loveth a cheerful giver. I dare not say but He has been kind to me. Oh! matchless love! Oh praise, praise Him, that ever He honoured the like of me with cords on my arms and stocks on my legs; irons have been sweet and easy to me, and no trouble. Now, hold up my case to the Lord, and doubt not of His faithfulness and all-sufficiency, for He is both able and willing, and He has said, 'In all your afflictions I am afflicted;' and He carries His and their cross both, and He sends none a warfare on their own charges. 'Verily, verily, I say unto you, except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal' (John xii. 24, 25). And I can say, from good grounds, I am well helped of my lovely Master in all that I have been trysted [i.e., visited] I desire with all my heart and soul to bless and praise the holy name of my God for His love, and that ever He looked on the like of me, a poor sinful thing. Oh! praise Him, and rejoice with me, that it is so well with me. Now the manner of my taking was not surprising to me; I was not feared [i.e., afraid], for I dare not question, but it was both the place, and also the time was come; glory to His name in so ordering of it.

"No more at present, but have my love remembered to you, and I desire you all to take up yourselves with your duty. Now I quit you all to Him who is able to save to the utmost. Be much taken up in the Church's condition, and be not at ease in the time of Zion's trouble. My brethren, my advice to you is, to join yourselves in a society or fellowship meeting in the strength of the Lord. Now, my lovely Lord, give Thy blessing to all Thine, and pardon the sins of all the elect. "Sic subscribitur, hese two zealous martyrs were precluded from having any formal testimony by the rage and cruelty of the persecutors, who, having suborned witnesses against them to depone that they saw them kill a soldier at Inchbelly Bridge in relieving a prisoner there, did presently take them forth to the Cross of Glasgow, and with the greatest of inhuman rage, hanging them on a gibbet till they were half dead, caused cut them down, and laying them in that condition upon a cart, carried them to the said Inchbelly Bridge, to be there hung up in chains. And it is worth the recording to the praise of His grace for whose royal dignities they witnessed, that they endured all these hardships inflicted upon them with a great deal of Christian magnanimity and alacrity, even to the conviction of enemies.

"JAMES SMITH."

John Nisbet, the Younger.

John Nisbet of Hardhill, belonged to the parish of Loudon. On March 22, 1683, the Council granted a Justiciary power to Major White, stationed at Kilmarnock, upon his apprehending John Nisbet, to prosecute him criminally on the spot, on the charge of being at the battle of Bothwell Bridge. He was accordingly tried at Kilmarnock. The only account extant of his trial is contained in his own statement of the interrogations proposed to him. He was sentenced to be hanged at Kilmarnock, on April 4, according to Wodrow; but according to the compilers of the "Cloud," April 14, 1683.

His testimony is not given in the original edition of the "Cloud." At the close of the Interrogations, the compilers state: "This martyr's testimony, though otherwise very sensible and solid, is omitted, in regard that not only the matter, but even the very words of it are generally the same with the testimony of James Robertson." It occurs, however, in the fourth edition, 1741, from which we have taken it.

Wodrow gives an account of his last moments. He says, "I have before me a large account of his carriage at his execution that day, and his last words on the ladder, taken from his mouth in short hand. He had a grave courage and staidness when he came to the place of execution. After he had prayed, he sang the 16th Psalm, from the 5th verse to the close, with a great deal of affection and joy; and then read the 8th chapter to the Romans, and prayed again.

"When he had delivered his Bible to his uncle, he made himself ready for the executioner, not expecting to get leave to say anything to the spectators; but essaying to speak, he continued a good while without interruption, in an extemporary discourse, pressing them to godliness, and recommending religion to them from his own feeling and experience. He notices, that this is the first execution of this kind at that place, and is of opinion, it is not like to be the last. He tells them death is before them all, and if it were staring them in the face as nearly as it was him at present, he doubts not there would be many awakened consciences among them; but as for himself, though death be naturally terrible, and a violent death yet more terrible, the sting of it is taken away, and he can say, he reckons every step of the ladder a step nearer heaven.

"When going on to give some account of the cause of his sufferings, and his indictment, a confusion was raised by the soldiers, and he broke off, and drew the napkin over his face, and was turned off when commending his soul into His Father's hands."

The spot where the gallows stood, on which he was hanged, is still marked by J. N., formed with small white stones, at the south corner of the cross of Kilmarnock. His remains lie in the Low Church burying-ground. Over them is a stone to his memory. The inscription is in the Appendix.

Anthony Shaw, referred to by John Nisbet in his Testimony, was minister of Belfast in 1646. He came to Colmonell in 1650, and along with so many other ministers was deprived of his charge in 1662. 1683 he was in prison, but how long he had been, is not recorded. He was liberated, August 9, on finding caution to appear when called. He seems to have been the indulged minister at Newmilns, where it is likely John Nisbet met him. He was soon again in trouble. While assisting at a communion with the indulged minister of his old parish of Colmonell, he was led, owing to the great crowd in attendance, to preach in the open air instead of the inside of the church. so-called grave offence, he was summoned before the Council, January 10, 1684, and ordained to find caution not to preach, or remove from the kingdom. He refused to find caution, and was ordered again to prison. On January 22, the Council liberated him, "being old and infirm," on the condition that he keep no conventicle, under the penalty of 5000 merks.—ED.]

HE INTERROGATIONS proposed to JOHN NISHER, younger, who lived in the parish of Loudon, and suffered at Kilmarnock [April 14, 1863]. Sent by him in a letter to some friends.

"DEAR FRIENDS,—The manner of my examination (as I remember) was this:

Q. "When saw ye John Nisbet? [i.e., of Hardhill]

A. "I did not see him this good while.

Q. "But when did you see him, and where did you see him?

A. "Although I could, I would not answer, to discover my neighbours.

"The Major said he would make me to tell, or he would gar me [i.e., make me] sit three hours in hell. I answered, That was not in his power.

Q. "Are ye under an oath, that ye will not tell of the rest of you?

A. "I am under no oath but what the Covenant binds us to.

Q. "Took ye ever the communion?

A. " No.

Q. "Did you ever preach or expone [i.e., explain] the Scriptures?

A. "I could never read the first of the Rudiments [i.e., of Latin].

"Yet (said they) there were men who did preach that were not learned.

"I told them, I knew none, but the Quakers, whose principles I disown.

"Then they said, 'Say, God save the king?'

"I answered, It was not in my power to save or condemn him.

Q. "Would you not say, God save your beast if it were fallen into a hole?

A. "No: because it is taking of His name in vain.

Q "Were you at Bothwell at the rebellion?

A. "Seeing you count it rebellion, it is criminal; witness of it

Q. "Is the Bishop's death murder?

A. "I am not a judge to cognosce [i.e., pronounce] upon it. And being asked again my opinion of it; I answered, I had said all that I could say of it already.

- O. "Was Bothwell rebellion?
- A. "It was self-defence, which was lawful.
- Q. " How prove ye that?
- A. " By that Confession which ye build your Test upon.
- "Then they said jeeringly, I was a grammarian.
- Q. "Own ye a law?
- A. " Yes.
- Q. "Own ye the law as it is now established?
- A. "Since ye make your questions matters of life and death, ye night to give time to consider upon them.
- Q. "Own ye the king in all matters civil and ecclesiastic, and to be the head of the Church?
 - A. "I will acknowledge none to be head of the Church but Christ.
 - Q. "Who is lawgiver?
 - A. " Christ,
 - Q. " Is the king the king or not?
 - A "He was once a covenanted king.
 - Q. "Is he the king now?
- A. "I refer it to his obligations in his coronation-oath, to be onsidered.
 - Q. "Is he your king or not?
- "I told them I would not answer any more such questions at his time. This is all that passed for the most part, except a numer of senseless questions.
- "No more at present, but have my love remembered to all riends in Christ. I am very well borne through, blessed be the ord for it.

 "Sic subscribitur,

" JOHN NISBET."

HE LAST TESTIMONY of JOHN NISBET [the Younger].

"DEAR FRIENDS, and true lovers of Zion's righteous cause,—If I could speak or write anything to the commendation of the covenanted God of the Church and kingdom of Scotland, surely I have many things to do it for.

"1. That He hath trysted [i.e., appointed] my lot to be in a nation where He hath set up His pure worship, discipline, been among those that are worshipping Antichrist, that Rome, that monstrous beast that sitteth upon many water sentence may be read—'And the third angel followed them with a loud voice, If any man worship the beast and his and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand, the sam drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tor with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, the presence of the Lamb: and the smoke of their torment as up for ever and ever: and they have no rest day nor nig worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the of his name' (Rev. xiv. 9-12).

- "2. He might have ordered it [my lot] to have been am corrupt Protestant Churches abroad, Lutherans, and other tions, and abounding errors; but [He has ordered it] in the R Church of Scotland, which was fair as the moon, clear as and terrible as an army with banners; the day was, when we have sung that song, 'We have a strong city; salvation will point for walls and bulwarks' (Isa. xxvi. 1).
- "3. I bless the holy name of my God that I am not carrying arms against Him, His work and interest; for the more in me as of myself, than in these that are deeply imbruihands in the blood of the saints.
- "4. I bless and magnify His holy name that ever He bro out of the estate of nature, and brought me into an estate of and salvation, through the virtue of the blood of Christ; and be His holy name, that He hath given me a sight of my own ness, and also a sight of the deceitfulness of my own evil he the mystery of iniquity abounding there, and also a sight of the of the blood of Christ, with His Spirit engaging me to Hims letting me see Himself altogether lovely and precious, so that safely say, that there is none in heaven or in earth, that besides Him (Ps. lxxiii. 25).
- "5. I bless and magnify the holy name of my God wl given me a sight of His controverted truths, now, when it in question, whether Christ be head of His own house or not, there is no truth clearer in all the Scripture; yet it must not be of, if ye resolve not to suffer for it.
 - "6. I bless His name that ever He counted me worthy Inting it not my shame, but an high privilege, and digniwhen many famous in their generation have been denied endeavouring by their practice to render the cross of One effect.

oless and magnify His holy name that He hath kept me ng of His name, in His titles and attributes; for that is the In the enemy and usurpers of my lovely Lord's crown are have me to deny allegiance to Him, who is given of the 'Thus saith be a leader and commander of His people. God, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried recious corner stone, a sure foundation: he that believeth make haste. Judgment also will I lay to the line, and ess to the plummet: and the hail shall sweep away the lies, and the waters shall overflow the hiding-place' (Isa. But this may be our complaint, 'The tongue of the ild cleaveth to the roof of his mouth for thirst: the young ik bread, and no man breaketh it unto them' (Lam. iv. 4). e third verse of the same chapter, 'The daughter of my become cruel as the ostriches in the wilderness.' 'But ye ed out of the way; ye have caused many to stumble at the we corrupted the covenant of Levi, saith the Lord of hosts. have I also made you contemptible and base before all the cording as ye have not kept my ways, but have been partial '(Mal. ii. 8, 9). For now it is not with the land, as it is xiv. 7, 9, 'For her blood is in the midst of her; she set it op of a rock; she poured it not upon the ground, to cover t; that it might cause fury to come up to take vengeance; her blood upon the top of a rock, that it should not be Therefore, thus saith the Lord God; Woe to the bloody l even make the pile for fire great.' For the iniquities of my are the judgments thereof; therefore we had need to we will all be found guilty of the sins of the land in less It makes me to tremble to think of Scotland's unfaithfulranks, for as it is with the people, so with the priest, for indered out of the way, and followed their idols, especially the corrupt rulers. 'For the statutes of Omri are kept, works of the house of Ahab, and ye walk in their counsels; ıld make thee a desolation, and the inhabitants thereof an ierefore, ye shall bear the reproach of my people' (Micah The Lord hath accomplished His fury; He hath poured out His fierce anger, and hath kindled a fire in Zion, and it hath devoured the foundations thereof. They have polluted themselves with blood, so that men could not touch their garments' (Lam. iv. 11, 14). Now His glory is trampled under foot; but He hath said, 'I am the Lord: that is my name: and My glory will I not give to another, neither My praise to graven images' (Isa. xlii. 8).

"Now, is it not His declarative glory which that usurper hath taken to himself? Yea, but He that leadeth captivity captive, and giveth gifts unto men, will reclaim His own glory, for the government is laid upon His shoulder (Isa. ix. 6). 'And hath put all things under His feet, and gave Him to be the head over all things to the Church' (Eph. i. 22). Now, I being a free-born member of the Church and kingdom of Scotland, and joining with all the fundamental laws thereof; and they refuse to judge and sentence me, according to that law; that must, without doubt, be murder; and further, they refuse to judge according to the Scriptures, which is an higher wickedness.

"Oh! what will come upon Scotland for the high abominations committed therein? Surely it cannot but meet with odious judgments. 'For my sword shall be bathed in heaven: behold, it shall come down upon Idumea, and upon the people of my curse, to judgment' (Isa. xxxiv. 5). For I see nothing appearing in this land but defection from the way of truth; for there is no public power now in the land but what is founded upon perjury, sacrilege, and tyranny. 'Behold, the princes of Israel, every one were in thee to their power to shed blood' (Ezek. xxii. 6). And compare Scotland's sins with Israel's sins, in that of Ezekiel, and see if they be not parallel. And seeing they are so, what can be expected, but that their punishments and plagues shall be parallel also? For there are few mourning for all the abominations done in the land.

"Now, these that are charging me with self-murder, which is a breach of the sixth commandment, are very false; for self-preservation must stoop to truth's preservation. And further, I have that much of humanity, that I love my life, but cannot redeem it with the loss of my integrity; but I prove such as do these things which they would have me to do, are actually guilty of the breach of the second commandment, which is, 'Thou shalt not make unto thyself any graven image;' for I cannot say, but it is a worshipping of images to yield to them in these things, now when they have seated themselves in Christ's room. Therefore I exhort you all, to beware of joining with them in their sins, lest ye partake with them in their plagues, now when they have made it manifest, that they will have no king but Charles Stuart. Wherefore I think it is our duty to cleave to Christ; we must either quit Christ or Charles.

"Indeed, there are some folk who pretend to keep both; but I defy any, if they be called to a public testimony, but they must either quit Christ or Charles; for they will not have the civil law, without the ecclesiastic; so I cannot see how they can be owned in either. For by their Acts of Parliament, they have made them alike inherent to the crown: and shall that authority be so owned by me, being a free born member of the Church of Scotland, which is Christ's mystical body, without being guilty of high rebellion against God. And further, he having broken all obligations, which was the tenor by which he entered into the government, and without which he could not have entered into the government; the Covenant being the coronation oath, which he hath not only broken, but made it death to all that speak of them. And further, having seated himself in the Mediator's chair of state, which is enough to denude him of authority, even in civil matters. If it shall be said, the land has given him that Supremacy, and so cannot take it from him again; to this I answer, every individual person in the land hath not given him that, and therefore is free to reject him upon that head, when they are called to it.

"But, oh! the sins of Scotland are great in departing away from God, for Scotland hath slidden back like a backsliding heifer, for they declare their sin like Sodom, they hide it not; the show of their countenance doth witness against them. But, however, it will be well with those that keep their garments clean; for ye will find enough ado when it cometh, although ye should live Christians twenty years; therefore, slight not time, when ye have it: for if death come upon you, it will not be easy; but well is that soul that can say upon good grounds, that Christ is all in all to them; but the worldly-mindedness and slavish fear of this generation make their practice declare to the world, that Christ is not worthy the suffering for, otherwise they durst not adventure to forsake Him, who is altogether lovely; for He will bid none go His errands upon their own charges.

"Now, as to the articles of my indictment, upon which my sentence of death is passed, they are chiefly these:

"1. My owning it as lawful, my rising in arms at Bothwell Bridge; which I did with great cheerfulness and boldness, it being self-defence, and in the defence of the Gospel. For my own part, the only end I had before me there was, the glory of God, if I was not deceived; therefore I could not think it rebellion, or unlawful against God, although the laws of men be against it, who have set themselves in opposition to all the commands of God.

- "2. My disowning the curates to be faithful ministers, which I did very boldly; and they said if I disowned the curates, I disowned all authority, which may testify that they have set themselves in Christ's stead.
- "3. My owning Mr Donald Cargill, Mr John King, Mr John Kid, and Mr Richard Cameron, to be faithful ministers of Jesus Christ, which I did; and I bless the Lord that ever I heard them, and I set to my seal to the faithfulness of these men's doctrine.
- "4. My not praying for the king, in his person and authority; which I durst not do, it being a perfect owning of him in all that he hath done. Some may object and say, that I am against the Scriptures in this, because, in several places in the Old Testament, we find that the kings of Israel were anointed to that office by the Lord, and obedience to them thereupon enjoined. But this was only done to lawful kings, and so could not be to ours, he having set up himself in the room of God incarnate. And we may justly say, as the children of Israel said, in 1 Sam. xii. 19, 'For we have added unto all our sins this evil, to ask us a king,' because we follow him in things contrary to the command of God. And should I pray for that man, to preserve him in his person and government, who hath thus ventured upon the thick bosses of the buckler of God Almighty? If one should object and say, these are small things; to this I answer, no truth is small; 'He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much, and he which is unjust in the least, is unjust also in much' (Luke xvi. 10).

"Now, I shall give an account of my principles, and I shall do it as in the sight of God. I am a true Christian, truly anti-Popish, anti-prelatic, anti-schismatic, anti-sectarian, anti-Erastian, a true Presbyterian; and whatever many have said of me, or may say, thus I have lived, and so now I die.

"1. I close with Christ in that way of redemption which He hath purchased, for the redemption of sinners. 'This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief. 'Howbeit for this cause I obtained mercy' (1 Tim. i. 15, 16).

- "2. I give my testimony to the followers of the holy Scriptures, for they are the rule that men are to walk by, and they declare the revealed will of God to man, anent man's salvation.
- "3. I give my testimony to the work of Reformation in the Church of Scotland; and I bless the Lord that I was born a member of that Church; and I leave my testimony against the errors of that Church, but chiefly against Popery, and Prelacy, and Quakerism, and Independency, and finally, from under all the errors of the Church.
- "4. I give my testimony to the Confession of Faith, Larger and Shorter Catechisms, Sum of Saving Knowledge, Directory for Worship; the order of the Church of Scotland.
- "5. I give my testimony to the Divine worship, discipline and government of the Church of Scotland, both by Kirk-sessions, Presbyteries, Synods, and General Assemblies.
- "6. I give my testimony to the Covenants, National, and Solemn League and Covenant.
- "7. I give my testimony to the faithful actings of the Protesters, called Remonstrances, against malignants and malignant interests, which is the very thing this poor Church is contending for this day.
- "8. I give my testimony to all the faithful testimonies of the people of God, that have been given for that noble work, whether on scaffolds, or in fields, or on the seas.
- "9. I give my testimony to the faithful actings of the last martyr, although this generation is calling sin a duty, and duty a sin, because of hazard; for if this generation get leave to go on in their pernicious ways, they will not believe that there is a God in heaven, to punish such sinners, and sins as are committed in the land. 'Ye are cursed with a curse, for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation' (Mal. iii. 9).

"Now:

- "I. I witness my testimony against the Public Resolutioners for bringing in the malignant party to places of power and trust, for which this poor land is smarting, and bearing the weight of their hands to this day.
- "2. I leave my testimony against that Act of Supremacy, and the Act Rescissory, by which two they have overturned the whole work of Reformation, both in Kirk and State."
- "3. I leave my testimony against the unfaithfulness of ministers, both indulged and others, who are sheltering themselves under the wings of those who have declared themselves enemies to all godliness; and I wonder how they can say they are evendown [i.e., sincere] for God; yet never one of them is troubled, be troubled who will; for, before my face, one of these ministers said (to wit, Mr Anthony Shaw by name), he prayed, God save him from the man that would not pray for the king in his person and government; to whom I said, magistrates ought to punish evil doers. 'Indeed, so he doth,' said he.

- "4. I leave my testimony against all the wrongers of my lovely Lord's crown, all in general.
- "5. I leave my testimony against the hearers of these perjured curates throughout the land; but especially in that corner of the land, to wit, Kilmarnock; for their going to kirks, subscribing of bonds, paying of fines; which includeth in it the acknowledgment of a fault, which I deny we have done, but they have done it to us, and that never a watchman to testify against it.
- "6. I leave my testimony against the Cess, or any other thing that may strengthen the hands of evil doers. 'For ye are they that prepare a table to that troop, and furnish a drink-offering to that number' (Isa. lxv. 11).

"Now, I will speak a word to three sorts of folk:

"1. To you that are strangers, enemies to my lovely Lord; let your estrangedness be done away; fly to Him, ere He break out in fury against you. Oh! consider how near you are to the destroyer, if ye fly not unto Him, and if you fly in unto Him He will abundantly pardon; therefore, I entreat you, that ye would turn from your evil ways, and leave off your persecution, and fly to Him, for there is mercy with Him, that He may be feared; and if ye will not turn, wrath will be upon you to all eternity.

"A second sort are these that formerly have known God, and now are fallen from their first love. Oh! consider your former ways, and turn again to your first husband, lest there be no space to repent; for all the ways that ye have taken to win by trouble [i.e., escape] will not hide you from Him, who is the great sin-revenging God, and He will bring all your sins and all your compliance to stand and witness against you; therefore delay not repentance, for ye will find death [to] have enough ado with itself.

"A third sort are these who desire to walk in His way, and to keep themselves from the crying wickedness of these times. Oh! stand fast in the faith, for there is no other burden laid upon you, but to hold fast till He come. Oh! for that day, when ye shall be made one of conversation, as becometh the Gospel. Let your light so fore the world, that they may be ashamed that shall accuse od conversation in Christ; for now ye need not think, if ye way of God, but ye will have many enemies, both within and therefore seek strength from Him who is able to give it. Ye think that all the stock of grace that a man hath will be twhen the trial comes, if there be not fresh supply given me of need. Oh! wrestle with Him, that ye may be hid in of His wrath, that seems to be poured out on this generation, great treachery and departure from God, the breach of His is subjecting to the laws of men; but my eyes shall be closed, hall not see it; and I am well content; seeing I get my soul ey, then I shall have no loss.

His hand; and have fervent charity among yourselves, and hat standeth take heed lest he fall, for ye will find enough 1 it when death comes. Therefore, let the main thing be ly, and get once that made sure, that cannot be taken from ye have many enemies to fight with if ye win [i.e., get] for the way to heaven is very straight. For it is no wonder eks to tempt poor Christians, when he assayed to tempt our Let none of you think it strange concern-Lord and Master. t hath befallen me; for it is in His holy wisdom; He hath out my lot such, and I have been made to bless Him for Oh! study to wrestle against your own corruptions, which heavy to me sometimes, but His love hath been great in me out of the estate of nature, and hath brought me to own weakness, and also hath given me a sight of the reor which my soul shall be made to praise Him throughout ity.

w, as for His way with His church, it is mysterious to me.

I think, is a token for good, that He is taking some to for His despised and trampled upon truths, and He will keep tnessing still, until He return again; but, indeed, I think it is but very few that will see Him return again in this generation, death is called the king of terrors, but I think it is not me. 'O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy '(r Cor. xv. 55). 'For we know that if our earthly house tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, see not made with hands, eternal in the heavens' (2 Cor. v.

1). For which we long earnestly to be absent from the body be present with the Lord, which is far better.

"Now, I declare I am free of the blood of all men; and althomen have no public scandal to charge me with, yet by original actual transgressions I am the chief of sinners; but His love l been great; the manifestations of His presence have been great; for Satan hath not been wanting to assault; but yet glory to name who hath resisted him, and hath not permitted him to get will.

"Now, as my last words, I recommend it to all, to be tender of another, without sinning, and be in earnest with God, for ye will death will have enough ado with itself, therefore delay not repenta lest He come when ye are not aware. Now as for these men that unjustly taking away my life, only for adhering to the truth, and no other end; now, for what they do to me, as I am of myself, I fre forgive them and all others, and especially these blinded soldiers, to what they do ignorantly some of them; but as they do it to image of God in me, that is not mine to forgive, but I leave it to I to whom vengeance doth belong, that He may do with them w may most glorify Himself.

"Now my work is finished. I have fought the good fight, I h finished my course; henceforth is laid up for me a crown of rig ousness. But let such as will condemn me read that Scripture: 'V shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? it is God that justifi who is He that condemneth?' (Rom. viii. 33, 34). For my lot is fa to me in pleasant places, I have a goodly heritage; for I would change my lot with the greatest man upon earth. Men and ang praise Him for this; all the Creation, praise Him. Oh! my shall praise Him, through all the ages of eternity.

"Now, farewell all true friends in Christ; farewell Chris relations; farewell sweet and holy Scriptures; farewell prayer meditation; farewell sinning and suffering. Welcome heaven; come innumerable company of angels, and the Church of the faborn, and the spirits of just men made perfect; welcome Father, and Holy Ghost; welcome praises for evermore. Now, dear Fathereeive my spirit, for it is Thine. Even so come, Lord Jesus.

" Sic subscribitur,

"JOHN NISBET

John Wilson.

WILSON was a captain at the battle of Bothwell c. His name is given in the "Proclamation against ls, June 26, 1679," as "John Wilson, son to Alexander lerk of Lanark." In a proclamation, October 8, 1681, its along with eighty-eight others, as forfeited in life, ods, for being concerned in the rising at Bothwell. refers to a previous condemnation in March that same son, writer in Lanark, having been formerly condemned be demeaned as a traitor when apprehended, and himself that same person who was formerly con 1, 1681, for rebellion, the Lords adjudge him to be Grassmarket, May 9, betwixt two and four in the ecorded when he was apprehended, but on April 17th before the Council, once before a committee of their plyrood Abbey, and again before a full meeting. He en the substance of his answers.

speech he gives a single glimpse of his early history. Still prized in Scotland were the means of awakening of sin, and leading him to give himself to God. The ere: "The Fulfilling of the Scriptures," by the eldering, the father of the writer of the "Rise and Fall of the that twice over in its history—in 1793 and 1848—fame such as its author could scarcely have dreamed all Andrew Gray's four discourses, entitled, "Directions is to the Duty of Prayer," discourses that by their serious their directness of appeal, were well-fitted to carry regun by the "Fulfilling of Scripture;" and the vade of Owen, William Guthrie's "Trial of a Saving Interest

Wilson's trial took place May 4th. On the 7th he was induced by his relations to supplicate for a reprieve, and it was granted till the 16th. Wodrow gives the conference he had with Sir William Paterson. Wilson's answers are able and catholic in their spirit, but neither changed in their opinions, and the sentence was carried into effect. No account has been preserved of his last moments. There was executed along with him David Macmillan, a man of a kindred spirit. Macmillan had been at Bothwell. Wodrow gives the substance of his testimony. He blesses God, that made him see the odiousness of his sin, his nakedness, and gave him white raiment from Himself, and made him close with Himself on His own terms. He closes by saying, "My soul shall bless Him through all the ages of eternity.—Amen."

The sentences in Wilson's testimony are occasionally somewhat involved, and are like those of a man not much accustomed to express his thoughts in writing, yet no one of the sufferers quotes or refers to Besides Fleming, Guthrie, and Gray, so many books as he does. already noticed, he refers to Honeyman, Gouldman, Calderwood, Knox, and Philpots. Calderwood's and Knox's Histories are well Andrew Honeyman was minister of Ferryport-on-Craig in 1642, and was successively transported to the second, and then to the first charge of St Andrews. In 1664 he was made Bishop of Orkney. When (July 11, 1668), Archbishop Sharp was fired at, as he sat in his carriage at the head of Blackfriars' Wynd, Edinburgh, by James Mitchell, the shot missed him but struck Honeyman, as he was on the step, in the wrist, and so shattered the bone that ultimately it was the cause of his death. In his early years he was strongly Presbyterian, but shortly after the Restoration he adopted the principles He died February 21, 1676. He was a man of some of the Court. learning, although in his answer to "Naphtali," published in two parts in 1668 and 1669, he really weakened the cause he sought to The fallacy of his reasoning was effectually shown by one of the authors of "Naphtali," Sir James Stewart, in his Jus Populi Vindicatum.

Gouldman's Dictionary has long been supplanted by other works, but it was of some repute in the seventeenth century. Its title is "Latin and English Dictionary," by Francis Gouldman, London

Philpots is the English martyr, John Philpots, Archdeacon of Winchester. He suffered at Smithfield, December 18, 1555. The passage quoted is from "Coverdale's Letters of the Martyrs." It is om memory, and gives the sense rather than the exact words. found at length in the "Parker Society's Edition of Philpots' page 221.

He was at Bothwell, and was sentenced to be hanged, 1683. The Council registers record the granting a reprieve ber, and in April 1684 a recommendation for a remission tence, which seems to have been granted.

Test repeatedly alluded to by John Wilson and several of sufferers was a strangely contradictory oath enacted by it, August 31, 1681, to be taken by all persons in places trust. As the Westminster Confession had been distince the Act Rescissory, it went back to the confession of me, 1567. It took the swearer bound to own the true t religion professed in this early confession, in whose article Christ is said to be "the only Head of His Kirk," nan or angel presume to intrude" into this office, they are to be blasphemous to our sovereign and supreme governor sus; and at the same time required him to acknowledge I. to be supreme in all causes, ecclesiastical as well as civil.

HE TESTIMONY of JOHN WILSON, Writer in Lanark, who suffered at the Grassmarket of Edinburgh, May 16, 1683.

His Answers before seven or eight of the Council, April 17.

The Chancellor said: "We having called James roduced to him a letter writ by you to him, wherein you ren for calling Bothwell rebellion. He owned that it had I his conscience, and said that he was sorry for what he and we produced to him a letter supposed to be writ r to yours, which he denied. Tell us who writ that

Wilson answered, "I will not tell by whom, only it was y James Laurie."

- Q. "Who is the lady mentioned in the end of the letter?"
- A. "I dare not burden my conscience to tell."
- Q. "Do you own authority?"
- A. "What authority?"
- Q. "What think you of Bothwell? Was it not unlawful to rise in arms?"
- A. "I dare not say that it is unlawful, for the Confession contained in your Test says, article 15, 'That it is a good work to defend the life of the harmless;' and however God hath disposed of those people, yet I suppose the Lord will own these, that, hearing their neighbours had been worshipping God (for defending themselves against those that sought their life) [and] were in jeopardy of their lives, thought it their duty to rise for their relief."
 - Q. "Was Pentland rebellion?"
- A. "The oppression of these poor people was such that the then rulers condemned Sir James Turner for his cruelty."

Upon this, one answered, that he knew Sir James went not the length of his commission.

- Q. "Was the Bishop's death murder?"
- A. "Have me excused, gentlemen; I will not answer to that." Being urged further, he said, "It being nothing concerning my salvation, I do not pry into it."

Upon this, they said, "Did Bothwell concern your salvation?"

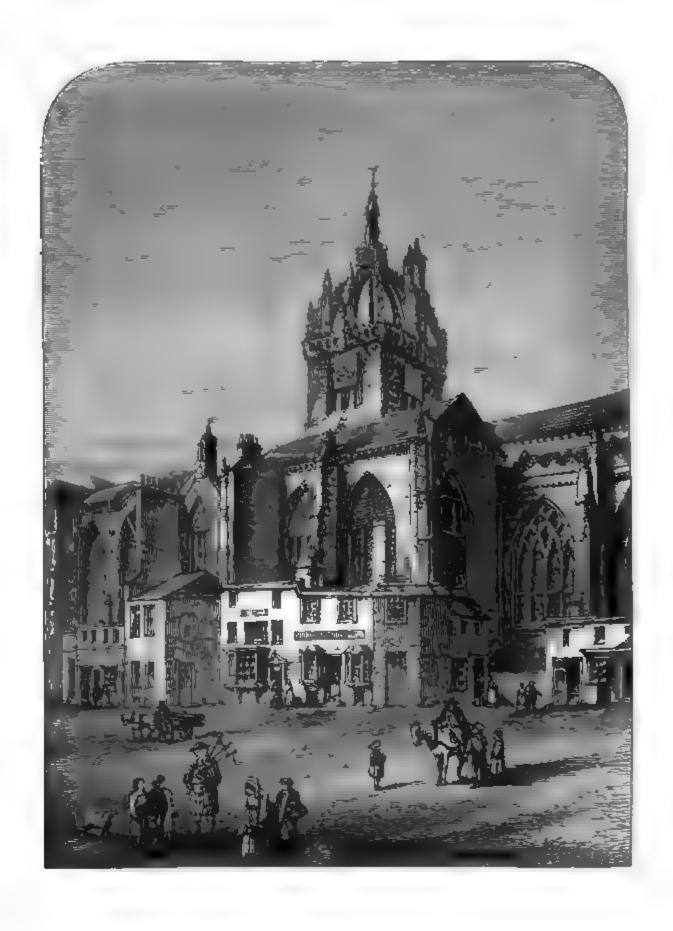

To which he replied, "There are none that engage themselves in service to God, but it behoves them to be at His call; and it being for saving the life of the harmless, I durst not sit [i.e., disobey] God's bidding."

- Q. "Are you a minister?"
- A. "No."

They here alleged that some of his letters imported so much, and, being desired to read the place, they read somewhat about a call to some ministry, nothing relating thereto.

- Q. "Will ye not condemn the Bishop's death as murder?"
- A. "I dare not, for fear, God having justified some of these actors, they should rise in judgment and condemn me."
 - Q. "Is there no other way but to rise in arms against the king?"
- A. "I suppose you have read Bishop Honeyman's answer to 'Naphtali,' wherein he says, 'A king may be resisted, in case he should alienate the kingdom to strangers.' And that being granted, religion being taken away, was as dear to us as any outward interest."

THE HIGH CHURCH, EDINBURGH.

(FROM THE SOUTH)

One replied, "The Bishop got little thanks for that."

Q. "Think you it lawful to rise against a State that is not of your opinion? Will you go to Bothwell again?"

These questions they gave him not leave to answer, but ordered him to be taken away, asking, "If he was a captain at Bothwell?" which he assented to.

S ANSWERS before the Council, April 17.

[These answers have been compared with Wodrow, and one or two clauses added from his version.—Ed.]

Omitting what he answered at his former appearance, which needs not be repeated (these questions being always the same), they asked, "Is Bothwell rebellion or not?"

- A. "No; it being for the defence of the harmless, who [were set upon for their lives] for hearing a preaching and defending themselves; and the Confession of Faith [The Scots Confession of 1560, chap. xiv., 'What works are reputed good before God.'—Ed.] contained in your Test says, 'It is good work to defend the life of the harmless.'"
 - Q. "Then you approve of the Test? Will you take it?"
- A. "I am not speaking of the Test, but of the Confession of Faith therein contained."
 - Q. "Think you it lawful to rise against magistracy?"
- A. "Will you condemn the Reformation from Popery carried on by John Knox?"
- "We are not come here," said they, "to answer questions, but to ask."
- "But," replied he, "the answering of that to me would be a full answer by me to your question."

Then said the Bishop [Paterson], "The Reformation was good, but the way of carrying it on was ill."

A. "That is a marvellous thing, to think God would approve the actors in such actions, and yet the method be ill, and they to have a most solid peace [before God] in these actions, and to have such a mouth to defend it, as all the wits in their days could not be able to withstand, as will be clear to any that read the history of Reformation."

- "O," said they, "he has read the history of the Reformation. but you will not find it in the Scripture," said they, "that the pe may resist the prince; for then they take the magistrate's parthem, and therein declare themselves to be above their prince."
- A. "The people resisted Saul, and would not let him Jonathan (1 Sam. xiv. 45)."

The Bishop [Paterson] said, "The people were in the wrong

- A. "The Scripture never condemns the deed."
- Q. "Do you own authority?"
- A. "Authority may be taken several ways: 1. For the si command of the prince; 2. For the more public command of prince and people; 3. For a power a prince may be clothed wit a people; 4. For a prince's right to govern. In all which Gouldman's Dictionary, the ordinary expositor of words, take And in the first two senses, since many both of the prince's e and public Acts of Parliament are directly against Presbyterian Presbyterian government, to own it in these senses, I should myself to be a Presbyterian. In the third sense, since the p have clothed the king with the headship of the Church, I a own that; because the eleventh article [chapter] of the Confe of Faith, contained in the Test, says, 'That office pertains pro to Christ alone, and that it is not lawful for man or angel to in therein.' As for the last sense of authority, his right to gove have not seen through it [or, I have not seen through the d of it.]"
 - Q. "Will you venture your life on these things?"
 - A. "My life is in God's hand."

After these questions, they set down that he was a captain Bothwell, and an imperfect recital of his words, which they de him to subscribe; but he refused.

At his last appearance before the Criminal Court, the Adversarious accosted him thus, "Though, sir, you have been a rebel, and the you studied to draw that poor man Laurie to the gallows, yet see how merciful the king is to these men (which were four swore the Test), and there is place left to you for mercy, if you not obstinately persist in your opinion."

He answered, "I have neither done any deed, nor given yo account of any opinion, but what I have justified from the Confe rhich you have lately sworn from the ancient Reformation, cannot condemn), and from the concessions of your own

:!" says Perth, "will you justify your taking arms at our own Test justifies the defence of the life of the harmless." dvocate says, "All the Indulged, yea, almost all Presbyndemn it; then," says he, "will ye bond before sentence? no place left for the king's mercy after sentence."

will not; but remember, that one day all sentences will be before the great Judge of heaven and earth."

OLLOW some REASONS of his Answers, and Reflections made thereupon by himself.

"When I was on my journey betwixt Edinburgh and Lanark, and several times before having considered the bold testimony of Stephen, 'Ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart' (Acts vii. 51, 52); and Peter's testimony, 'Whom ye slew, and hanged' (Acts v. 30); and his desire that with all boldness they te mention of the name of Jesus; and lastly, that promise, ng terrified by your adversaries' (Phil. i. 28); I say, g these, I resolved to use the utmost of freedom with the but being come to this town, and aving considered that the Council desired to pick such ith any in our condition as might give the least umbrage ld of the justice of their dealings; insidering that by many professed friends we were judged; yea, so far condemned, that they stick not to say, that hand in our own death;

eir own public proclamations still bearing that our design was n, but covetousness to possess ourselves of the government: viting [i.e., avoiding] of these, I resolved to be as cautious without prejudice to truth. So that, taking my answers ive arms out of the Test which they had sworn, from the s of their greatest doctors, and from the deed of their r Council, whereof some present were members, I thought it had been a ridiculous thing to make me condemn that w had ratified by an oath, [which] their great doctor had yie their predecessor Council had approven. But that I might h approbation in demeaning myself so, and do what I did faith, I took that rule, 'Be ready always to give an answe man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you v ness and fear' (1 Pet. iii. 15). And as I thought I had reas God that had guided my tongue so, that I was not a whit either with shame or fear; so I came back to prison wi sorry that I should have left these two questions of the C unanswered, viz., 'Thought I it duty to rise in arms agai not of my opinion?' In answer to which question, I though I had occasion, I would have been punctual in telling then question was wrong stated; for the right state of the que 'When a state destroys the true profession of godliness sv the land, and persecutes the owners thereof.' The second 'If I would have gone to Bothwell again?' I thought, if sa tion came in my way, I would have told them, that I beha at God's call; and likewise, I was sorry that I had not be enough to have taken opportunity, when the question anen was moved, to have testified against the ecclesiastical He sinful acts against God's Church; I say, my omission, through their confused asking, bred me humiliation after to prison.

- "As to my second examination, as I had desired opp testify against the Headship of the Church, and other destroying God's work, so I got opportunity, and so I disc conscience. But yet there was something left to exercise and that was—
- "1. When the Bishop [Paterson] said, 'that were a disfor the king to alienate the kingdom to strangers,' that I is was an act of more distraction to destroy religion.
- "2. That, in citing the words of the 11th article of the 1 against the Headship, I should have said simply, it was u presume to intrude on that office; whereas the Confession them blasphemers; and thereby mincing the word.
- "3. When the Bishop said, it were a Turkish way t reformation by the sword, I had not opposed [i.e., opposed sent practice and violence in pressing men's consciences; said, since they looked upon conscience as so tender a thing

It so by oppression. I know I have an infirmity in off-hand, anent which I hope all God's people will observe bearing one another's infirmities.

Xt, I am sure that the Lord hath not supplied me as to these for my further exercise.

i to the reason why I said, I could not see through the denial Ority in the last sense (for, though I could not see through it, eing such an abominable stating of themselves in a continual on to God and godliness, I scunnered [i.e., loathed] to own eason that moved me to say that I could not see through it esire to tread the paths of our old Reformers, who delayed ng off authority, till they had a probable power to back it; wards considering his breach of covenant to us, and these one by that authority, that, in any well guided commonwealth, inul his right, I thought I had worded authority ill in the e, and that it had been more proper [if] I had said, 'I could hrough the denying of obedience to such commands as were it, or according to God's word.' And, indeed, till God had l us with a probable power, I could never see through this; 1 verily of that opinion, that we, having lusted for a king, got od's wrath; and that since we have entered in Covenant with I will take His own way to take him away in His displeasure, not let it be by our hand: though I grant that his breach of o us looseth us, our paction being still conditional, to own him e of religion; and my earnest desire is, there may be no difmong Presbyterians anent this; for I have a strong opinion, will take that question out of the way shortly.

for the Bishop's death, I could not call it murder; because Ehud, and Phineas, their facts; Jael using that expression, a hither;' and that 'there was peace betwixt Heber the nd Jabin;' Jael being of that family, and, whatever might be against these as extraordinary acts, and that to do such to take the magistrate's power. I am sure Phineas was a ad it was none of his office to kill any man and yet his commended. Next, Knox his preaching to and biding aining] with the killers of Cardinal Beaton; and Calder-Iistory, which was approven by the Assembly, calling them courage and resolution, whom God stirred up. Next, the three and others killing a companion that abused Queen Mary counsel [Rizzio], and yet approven in Knox's history. Therefore, if the killers of the Bishop (having a zeal against the blood-thirstiness of that wretch, and being deeply affected therewith, and with love to the brethren, whom he like a wolf was seeking to have devouted and had devouted) slew him, I durst not call it murder. But if the actors were touched with anything of particular prejudice or other by-ends, I am very confident, that Scripture, of avenging the blood of Jezebel upon the house of Jehu, would not suffer me to justify it. So, not knowing the actors' hearts therein, I could neither say year nor may; but Christians should judge charitably.

"I forgot likewise to tell them, that the Bishop of Glasgow's laying down his gown, upon the making of the Act Explanatory, might be an aggravation of my sin, if I should own the King's headship own the Church; which I had really resolved to say, but forgot.

OI.LOW the REASONS why he refused at first to supplicate the Council for a reprieve, being importanted by his relations to do it.

"Upon the 7th of May 1683, being desired to petition, I answered, I could think upon no petition nor arguments that could be acceptable with them, but such as were either directly or indirectly a receding from what I professed. The reason of my petition was moved thus:

"I. To seek a longer time, till I were better advised anent my answers given to the Council. To which I answered, that [this] would say to all the world, that, for as tenacious as we were of our principles, yet we might seem to call them in question; and it might say, that I was pressing with others to die on these principles, which death put me to a stand anent myself; and so I should give ground of hardening to enemies.

"2. It was moved, that, through my confusions since I came to prison, I should seek a reprieval. To this I answered, I durat not slander Christ's cross, wherein every step to me had been mercy and truth; and my rebellious flesh needed no less (conform to my own acknowledgment to God) nor [i.e., than] what was come to subdue it; and that I could not well see through that, fearing it would be bad company so near my death; that I firmly trusted all should work for my well [i.e., weal]; and to say that, were to contradict my conscience d's goodness, and to make me contradict my own prayer, viz., ither flesh nor spirit be moved and failed, lest enemies rejoice.'

That I should petition that I might have a longer time to prepare for eternity. To which I said, I could not do it ; for, ever since I came to prison, God has made me believe , who has begun a good work in me, would also finish it; and e would perfect that which concerned me, according to His ord, and, however little a business this may seem in the eyes world, yet to me it imports my going to another airt [i.e.,] for perfecting and finishing of this work begun by God. if they refused it, they might taunt and say, Whatever confihe had at his death, yet it is gotten of [i.e., in] a very short and if a reprieval should be given, they might at my sentence ras their debtor for it. And besides all this, I fear, when I back to God for preservation, He should send me to the cistern I had been hewing out (Jer. ii. 13). And I know, cience would permit me to do it, enemies would think, either ying, in pretending want of preparation, and so it is the best) hold to him when he has committed sin; or otherwise, they think I were speaking truth, and so say, the only best way is to him when he is tottering."

his relations induced him to supplicate twice; first, on account wife's case, who was then great with child, and in danger of through grief; next, on his own account, whereupon he oba reprieval; during which time he had a conference with Sir Paterson, which, being on the same heads with his answers the Council, for brevity's sake, is omitted.)

HE LAST SPEECH and TESTIMONY of the said John Wilson.

"Now, being called to lay down my life, which I declare I do cheerfully; I do declare, I adhere to the Confession of Faith, anent which, for exoneration of my own conscience, I am under a necessity to leave this caution in reference to that clause contained in the 23d chap.

viz., 'That infidelity or difference in religion does not make void the magistrate's just and legal power and authori the composers, having an eye to the Pope's scurvy u dethrone Protestant kings, and dispose of their kingdo notion of heretics, did put it in; yet, I could find no fur that in the Scripture, but what only respects Christians and down in a heathenish empire; and that it can be against deposing a Protestant king, turning Papist or among people professing God, the idolater should die then it would seem to jostle with Queen Mary's depancient Reformation; designing offence to none he satisfying of my own conscience.

"Also, I adhere to the Work of Reformation form And I think our Catechisms well worded, for evading a also the Solemn Acknowledgment of Sins and Engagem anno 1648, Covenants, National and Solemn Leagu cularly to the government of the Church by a parity and subordination of Presbyteries, Synods, and Genera according to the Presbyterian way, as being most exa to the word of God, and as tending most to the further and godliness; and I profess myself a member their reformed from Prelacy and Erastianism, etc.

"I leave my testimony against the Indulgence, as may of the sweet unity that should have been among Pres as depending on the magistrate, as to the exercise of and for their over-weening love of ease; and for being to the showing of public duties, and reproving of public refusing the exercise of their office (to these without the marrying and baptising; denying themselves thereby to of the Church Catholic, and declaring plainly there follow the injunctions laid on them by men. Yet I a godly to leave off hatred towards them, and to cherish may look like good in them.

"I leave my testimony against the paying Cess, whereof is a perfect test of the payer's adhering to the conventicles as 'the rendezvouses of rebellion,' and a the king's grandeur over Church and State, as it is prolished by the laws of this realm; this being the very foundation of that Act. And I have found the Indulation condemn it; the narrative of their license being somewakin] thereto; but as to the other public burdens, suc renue of the crown or locality (though I speak not this to syself, these not being my tentations), I desire a tenderness sed to all such as have not clearness therein, in respect the seems to difference them: 'But if any man say unto you, fered in sacrifice unto idols, eat not' (I Cor. x. 28).

Presbyterians; as being contradictory to the Covenants, us to the uttermost of our power for the extirpating [of] Predur active power being stopped, our next should be, to leave ony by suffering, and as being contrary to the rule of faith; Presbyterian can pray for a blessing to that ordinance, where f dispenser is a blasphemer, by swearing the Test, wherein dship of the Church (Christ's prerogative) is sworn by them in to a man; as being expressly contrary to that Scripture; ep hear my voice, but a stranger they will not follow, but a him (John x. 5). And here I think it not amiss to add is of Philpot, that learned and godly martyr of the joiners Papistical Church, seeing the reason he gives holds good ecan do no greater injury to the true Church of Christ (whereof he only head); nor [i.e., than] to seem to have forsaken her ing to her adversary, and that God's jealousy, in the day of ce, will cry for vengeance against such, unless they cleave bly to the Gospel of Christ. And that there must be no eit illusion with them in this, and that there must be no prefethe body there, we being commanded to glorify God as well as spirit. Thus are his words imperfectly, yet truly as I er; and since the Prelatical Church has not Christ for her ad, the reason holds still good.

could heartily wish that all the serious godly would leave off ning with the Indulgence, for in respect (to my own view) it m attended with coldrifeness [i.e., indifference] as to public gluedness to the world, and an infatuateness as to approachgments, and lastly, being a countenancing of them in that nce with enemies. But since I have little hopes thereof, all the seriously godly to be tender towards such, whose eyes enlightened to behold the evil of it, and to restrict their withness to persons of their own number, who recede from what presents in the seriously godly to be tender towards such, whose eyes enlightened to behold the evil of it, and to restrict their withness is since the end proposed by that rule, 'withdraw from rother that walketh disorderly,' is to make ashamed; it cannot be supposed to attain its end anywhere else; and to study to do that which may be most edifying to all men, 'Let all things be done to edifying.'

"I leave my testimony against that abominable Test, Declaration, Act of Supremacy, and all other Acts overturning the work of God, and against all the blood shed upon that account.

"And next, I think no man coming before the Council can acknowledge the king's authority simply (considering that he is clothed with one of the royal prerogatives of Jesus Christ, to wit, the headship of the Church, wherein to intrude is blasphemy for man or angel) unless they be guilty of giving him that usurped title. And this is the ground of my suffering, mainly for affirming Christ's headship over the Church to be His prerogative alone, which is the occasion of the brunt of the ruler's anger. And herein I have a most solid peace; for Christ says, He came to bear witness to that truth, that He was a king; and so I think that my sufferings are merely a part of Christ's sufferings. And though some say, I might have been sparing as to this confession, I say, I durst not keep up my lips; they themselves having sworn that in the Confession of Faith, in their Test, which I affirmed, namely, that it is blasphemy for man or angel to usurp this title; yet is the great heat of malice stated hereon; but there is no piece of my suffering [which] yields me more content. Nor can any Christian come before them acknowledging authority simply, without being guilty of yielding this, it being declared essential to the crown, as Mr Donald Cargill well notes in his testimony. I think that question of authority being propounded, a man has a fair open door to witness against the encroachments on Christ's rights. I understand somewhat more of the mystery of this state nor [i.e., than I did, and, conform to my weak conceptions, you may take it up thus:

"The king, having through straits abroad, been complimented, and probably supplied, by Papists, lies under engagements to introduce Popery; and, for that effect, takes this method to overturn the hedge of church-government and discipline, and turn out all honest-hearted ministers, and force people to a compliance with hirelings, to debauch men's consciences, and, from one degree to another, to bring in Popery; but he being a man so addicted to pleasures (and whiles counteracted by Parliaments) loving ease: wherefore Papists practise to put him in mind of his engagements by aiming at his life; he, finding himself in this strait, and being in straits through his lavish-court ladies, these straits must be supplied by the king of and the Pope, and for requital thereof, the management of ernment must be turned over to his brother, who must have a and some Jesuits to contrive the mystery of iniquity, and is land to Babylon; in order thereunto, statesmen must be vho are emulators of others, and men that studied to pick with others; and then comes a general mittimus from court, ter such a method of cruelty. For the Jesuits know, where trary parties act this game, they will be sure, for fear of their to consent to go alongst to the utmost of cruelty. The next is to convene the whole country by circuit courts, as guilty treason, some for one transgression, and some for another, ole country being generally guilty by their laws), and force rise in arms; and then gather Papists and take occasion to d slay all the country over (the Lord in His mercy take them But I fear Popery shall once overspread; and I y of that opinion, that God shall root this race of kings (root nch) away, and make them Zeba and Zalmunna-like, not only ig God's house in possession, but also, emitting in their last proclamation or indemnity, that they resolve to root out the the godly, under the name of fanatics.

r advice and humble request to ministers is, to be tender my this day that has zeal, though knowledge be not so great, e less fearful of outward danger, and more active where perhath been hottest, where they may have any freedom. My o all professors is, to lay no imposition on ministers' con-; and that for the Lord's sake they would study to take some g them, that have light and judgment, to withstand the flood ion and Popery that is like to overspread the land. And leave another advice to ministers and professors, that where e suffered for their consciences, they would be sparing to a them.

me now to declare my first engagement with God, which was a years hence; which was through reading of the 'Fulfilling of ptures,' and Scriptural truths therein contained, and the of out-making thereof, which gave a check to my atheism, naturally seated in all men's hearts; the next was Gray's s on Prayer;' and the last, Guthrie's 'Trial of an Interest.' All which God so powerfully laid home to my conscience, en covenanted with God; and though at that time I could not get the faith of perseverance, yet I had a respect to all His statutes, so that the Bible was a most sweet book to me. up my whole time, for near a year thereaster, in studying religion (the most pleasant time that ever I had in my lifetime), yea, it was a burden to me to turn me to my necessary affairs in the world. I found religion sharpen me in all my natural parts; yea, bring me, who was naturally a most anxious, fretting, grudging creature, to such a calmness and serenity in cross providences, that I thought, though there were neither hell nor heaven, religion was a reward to itself. And I was so taken up with Christ's gracious condescendency, that His name was most pleasing, yet durst I not draw a conclusion of an assurance and perseverance; yea, was put to question the work itself upon account of the quality of my repentance; but meeting with Guthrie's 'Trial of a Saving Interest in Christ,' I found sensibly that it swallowed up a law work in love; but I found this, that there is not a more excellent piece of the armour of God nor [i.e., than] the helmet of salvation, and which Satan is most busy with a Christian to I found, likewise, as knowledge and grace grew, that prekeep off. sumption grew; that is, that with what I had gotten, I could walk alone; but that truth, 'without me ye can do nothing,' was known to my sad cost.

"But after all this sweet time, yea, I may say most sweet time, falling more and more engaged in worldly affairs, I found an impossibility to me to be instant in business and fervent in spirit; so that some throngs in these, abated that life which I had, and accordingly, as love grew to outward things, so decreased that power and life [to which] I had attained; yet so, as all alongst, I find that God has still been holding me by the hand, and I desire, with submission to other men's judgments, to say, I think a person falling in love with godliness, covenanting with God, to have a respect to all His statutes without exception, counting the cost, and seeing the cost of themselves imprestable [i.e., a work that cannot be performed by themselves], and believing that Christ, who was the author, will be the finisher of such a work; I say, I cannot think that ever God will part with such who do so covenant with Him; yea, it has been a comfort to me, when I could see no more of my interest in Him, but that I said, Thou art my God; and as I cannot conceal the lovingkindness of God, so, upon the other hand, without compliments, as the words of a dying man, I look upon myself as the most worthless object that ever free love has paged and waited upon through the npassed about with so many sins, and clothed with such a ature; but it is He with whom I made the bargain [who], oked things straight, and rugged places plain.

I advise all sufferers to beware of proposing to themselves and the other thing for safety of life; which is sinful; for false mind be in folk, God will lead them forth with the f iniquity, and they will not miss stumbling-blocks to be them. I say this to them who have sinned, and yet cone furnace; I fear that be their doom, 'They shall go from e land, and return no more' (Jer xxii. 10). As for you that ed, that which has been a terror to me may be now a terror It is impossible for these who were once enlightened, and heavenly gift, if they fall away, by putting Christ to open renew them to repentance.'

or unconcerned folk, I shall only say this; think you men's choosing death before life? I know I have gotten illantry cast up to me since I came to prison; but, for my I could never hear tell that it set up the head of it in the ace a gallows, since the word of hell became so rife in the ut let me tell you this one thing; that, though I have read ngle ones dying for opinion (not truth), yet could I never ract of men, such as has been in Scotland these twenty-two ng down their lives for a naked opinion so calmly, so 1 composedly, [and] with so much peace and serenity. own part, I am a man naturally most timorous, yet the made sufferings easy. It might do you good to inquire use of our sufferings so owned by God. It is a bad cause fended with swords and beating of drums on sufferers; es, the Lord has forced a testimony from the mouths of our dying adversaries, and from the mouths of executioners nenders; yea, in this place, some Psalms they (being clear ication thereof to themselves) would not suffer to be sung. professed Presbyterians; too many of you, for your uncon-I am sure the Lord says, ye shall drink of another sort of is brewing for you; shun it as you will by your compliance. really concerned friends; I pray the Lord to protect you I am confident, when you are ly His grace towards you. ie rod, ye shall find it an ease to your own smart, however you have taken of others' sufferings.

, I say to all that come under the rod; let no terrors of men, nor temptations of Satan anent eternity, come into your mind, but go to God with them, acknowledging your unworthiness of His protection and counsel, and you will find Him faithful not to suffer you to be tempted above what you are able. It is no new thing to be assaulted with terrors without, and within with fears. The apostle, a most experienced Christian, wanted not this. I see a Christian to be a most passive creature in his own salvation, yet there must be an all of diligence, otherwise the roaring lion will soon get advantages; and you must know this, that the sufferers have a large allowance, and although His own want not in their sufferings the faith of adherence to Him, yet ye must not think to sail that way in a bed of roses to heaven, but that you must have fire in your trial; I mean, a deserting God as to apprehension; yet wait patiently, and at length He will incline His ear, and you shall not want experience to say, "For but a moment lasts His wrath."

"And now I leave my dear wife, children, and sisters upon the Lord, who gave me such sweet, refreshing relations, and desire all the people of God to be kind to them; and I bless the Lord He has enabled me to quit them to Him; and, though the Lord has made every one of them so sweet and so pleasing to me, that I have been forced to curb my affection with the bridle of religion, yet herein, I bless the Lord, He has given me a heart to go through my cross with forgetfulness of all, yea, to be most unconcerned in the tears and weeping of my relations.

"And now I leave all God's people, and others, with this, that His cross is beautiful; yea, though I had got occasion of escaping prison since sentence, yet I durst not without a check of conscience And though I did petition, yet there was (to me) two have done it. necessary ends therein; first, they designing to make me odious, that I would not seek my life, and I desiring to make my suffering clear to their own consciences to be unjust; and next, if anything ailed my wife, [that] I might lay her blood at their door. But I would advise all to beware of them, for there must be frequent consulting with God, and a reasonable judgment to discern their snares, it being their main design to ensnare. I advise any, called to suffering, never to quit with the faith of adherence, and they shall not want the faith of assurance; for since ever I came to prison, I saw and believed God's design to me was love, and, having emptied me of all promises to sufferers, and of all my own righteousness, made me close with Him, and take Him for all, and believingly to rest on Him, and have to Him for grace to supply necessity, and give me a believigh to me incomprehensible) of seeing Him as He is, and Him, even as I am known of Him.

w I die, commending to all the people of God that duty of nform to Timothy ii. 22, 'Follow righteousness, faith, charity, ith them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart.' And we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowwith another, and the blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth all sin' (1 John i. 7). I do not say this to make up an joining with these I testify against.

" Sic subscribitur,

"JOHN WILSON."

IIS worthy, judicious martyr, being obliged to write his testimony in several papers, and convey them out secretly by parts (by reason of the strictness of the persecutors, who I the martyrs about this time with much severity), could not fuced to order. Wherefore, it is hoped, the candid reader will affended if he finds the method altered a little from what it he manuscript, seeing there is nothing in the sense, or phrase author, changed, but only his additions put in their proper the testimony; some very few things, less material, being left previty's sake."

George Martin.

ORGE MARTIN was a 'Notar,' i.e., a notary-public and reader at Dailly, in Ayrshire. Fountainhall adds, that he was a schoolmaster. The account of him in Wodrow is very but from what Martin states in his testimony, his sufferings to been very great. He was apprehended, on what charge does ar, in the close of 1679, and he actually remained in prison untried for four years and four months. During this long period, he was occasionally in irons, night and day; and, during winter, without fire. His privations were borne with much patience. The marvel is that he lived through them to be at last tried.

The record of his trial, as it stands on the Justiciary books, is dated February 11, 1683: "Being interrogated if he owns the king to be lawful king, and will pray for him; declares, he will not say be disowns him, but owns all lawful authority according to the word of He will not answer whether Bothwell Bridge be rebellion; be God. will not judge of other folk's actings; he owns the obligation of the Covenant, and will adhere to it while he lives. He will not call Bothwell Bridge rebellion, but says, if it was a rebellion against God it was rebellion; if not, it was not rebellion. He will not Being interrogated if the late king's death was murder, subscribe. declares, they that did it had more skill than he; refuses to call it murder, and says, he does not think it pertinent to give a declaration anent it."

Free of ground of condemnation as these answers are, yet, from them alone (for no witnesses were summoned), he was sentenced to be hanged at the Grassmarket. His testimony gives evidence of his piety, and of the judicial murder which his judges committed in his execution.

As stated at the close of his testimony, he was tried along with John Gilry, wright, in the parish of Hownam, in Roxburghshire. Gilry's examination and answers were much the same with those of his fellow prisoner, and they likewise formed the only matter brought against him. Still less is known of him than George Martin. All that Wodrow says of him is—

"I have before me two original letters, signed John Gilry, from the Iron House, December 27, 1683, which savour much of humility, self-diffidence, and meekness; wherein he offers many solid grounds of support to sufferers, and presses them to observe providences, and believe well of God. He died in much serenity and peace, adoring free grace, and adhering to the truths of Christ, and firmly trusting in Him for salvation." In the Justiciary records John Gilry's name does not occur, but that of John Ker, wright, in the parish of Homnam, does. Wodrow regards Ker as a mistake for Gilry. There is no doubt that a third person, James Muir, at Cessfordboat, in Roxburghshire, who was tried with them, but of him little else is known than his name and sentence.

s notice of the three martyrs is a curiosity: "Martin, olmaster, and other two, condemned at the circuit, February 1684. They were offered their lives, but, being ingrained whigs."—ED.]

LAST TESTIMONY of George Martin, who ffered at the Grassmarket of Edinburgh, upon the d of February 1684.

"My Dear Friends,—After four years and near ir months' captivity and bondage, for this glorious d honourable cause of Jesus Christ, for which I we been kept sometimes in bolts and fetters night t fire, and other necessaries; and now at the end of e, being sentenced to die; I thought it fit to signify as so sentenced, as the adversaries gave it forth. could not own, nor allow of the king's authority, as shed, nor pray for him in a superstitious, idolatrous Il the late Prelate of St Andrews' and the late king's for Bothwell Bridge rebellion, and abjure the Coveni I refused, and could do upon no terms.

rst, I could not own, nor allow of the present governw established, because it is derogatory to the crown our Lord Jesus Christ, in robbing Him of His royal their setting of their threshold by My thresholds, and posts, and the wall between Me and them, they have holy name by their abominations that they have refore I have consumed them in mine anger' (Ezek. thou shalt say to the rebellious, even to the house of h the Lord God, O ye house of Israel, let it suffice abominations, in that ye have brought into my ers, uncircumcised in heart, and uncircumcised in ny sanctuary, to pollute it, even my house, when ye the fat and the blood, and they have broken my se of all your abominations. And ye have not kept ne holy things; but ye have set keepers of my charge for yourselves' (Ezek. xliv. 6-8). 'Shall even he that hateth right govern? and wilt thou condemn him that is most just?' (Job xxxiv. 17). Who durst do it, and be guiltless? And moreover, 'Which say to the seers, See not; and to the prophets, Prophesy not unto us right things, speak unto us smooth things, prophesy deceits: get you out of the way, turn aside out of the path, cause the holy One of Israel to cease from before us' (Isa. xxx. 10, 11).

And I cannot, nor dare not pray for him so superstitiously:

- "1. Because it imports a set form of prayer, which is most superstitious, and that which is their dreadful design.
- "2. It imports idolatry, like unto the cry of the people made mention of in Acts xix. 34, who had a cry for the space of two hours, of that idol, 'Great is Diana of the Ephesians,' which was rejected, with some kind of reason, by some of their own sort, though heathers, and much more ought it here.
- "3. Another reason why I cannot pray after such a manner is; I find when prayer is rightly discharged, and seriously gone about, in the manner, time, and place, as is warranted by the Word of God, that God is thereby worshipped and honoured; and if irreverently gone about, He is dishonoured, and His name profaned, and taken in vain, which is abomination to Him, and which He saith His enemies do, and for which He will not hold them guiltless.
- "4. I dare not pray so superstitiously for him, because I find Jeremiah three times expressly forbidden to pray for a people, not guilty of all the things that he is guilty of, though he be guilty of all their sins, and many others also. See for this, Jer. vii. 16, where it is said, 'Therefore pray not thou for this people, neither lift up cry nor prayer for them, neither make intercession to me: for I will not hear thee.' 'Therefore pray not thou for this people, neither lift up a cry or prayer for them: for I will not hear them in the time that they cry unto me for their trouble' (Jer. xi. 14). 'Then said the Lord unto me, Pray not for this people for their good. When they fast, I will not hear their cry' (Jer. xiv. 11, 12). 'If we have forgotten the name of our God, or stretched out our hands to a strange god; shall not God search this out? for He knoweth the secrets of the heart' (Ps. xliv. 20, 21). 'If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it' (1 John v. 16). I fear some sins in this land have too near bordering with that sin. Innumerable Scriptures are to this purpose, but these may suffice at present.

ther thing makes me scruple, because they command no ers to be prayed, save unto thee, O king (Dan. vi. 7).

lastly, I dare not pray it, because all the profane profligate ave it always in their mouth, especially when they are ad if I do what they do, I fear I go where they go. But a the Lord, who has yet prevented me from the paths of royers. Much of this was spoken when I was before them, shall forbear to speak any more as to this question.

next question is, in order to the Prelate's death, whether it er or not? Murder, I dare not call it, more than Eglon's, nd Balaam's deaths, but the just judgment of God for his ostacy and backsliding, together with the horrid murders I by him upon the saints and servants of God.

third is, that of the death of the late king: Whether it was not? I am not much to meddle with it. But the many that were slain in England, the horrid murder committed sh in Ireland, and the dreadful slaughter of the Protestants d, cause great thoughts of heart, that it was a fatal stroke. urth thing, whether Bothwell Bridge was rebellion? which, t was so or not, may appear, if ye consider our former nts to that effect.

fifthly, anent owning and adhering to the Covenants? We publicly before the Court, That in all the Scripture it was le, both to make covenants, and also to keep them, and was never a covenant so broken, but that which was punished judgments and plagues by the Lord.

se were the answers to the indictment, and whereupon the of death passed, or for not answering to some of these; for which I must lay down my life, and if this be not it the Christian nations bear witness, if ever the like was ny Christian kingdom heretofore.

now, being straitened for want of time, and other incon-I cannot say much more to you. Only I leave it with you advice, that ye would endeavour to keep the way of the Lord and not to meddle with them that are given to such changes, ! too many plead for, and are given to this day; and that not be so formal in many things, concerning godliness, and and worship of God. Formality, [it] may be feared, will a beguile, when it cannot be mended.

rst, I beseech you, be more observant in keeping the Lord's

Day, in rising betimes in the morning, and in spending the whok time in worshipping of God sincerely. Take heed to your thoughts words, and actions. And when ye set a day apart—I mean of humi liation—give God the whole day, and notice what success ye have had, and how you have found the work thrive and prosper among you. And use less disputings, even in things seemingly necessary and be more in examination and edification, both of yourselves and others. And believe it, a well-spent Sabbath will be helpful to spend the week well. And also labouring to have your conversation aright through the week will be a noble presage to begin the Sabbath.

"And what ye spare of your ordinary diet, bestow it upon the pool and needy. There is this among many who profess to be religious which is odious, that they take well with it to be called religious, and yet they have little or no scruple to do wrong, and speak wrong of others, and towards them. I beseech you, sin not, though there were no eye to see you but God, either by doing or suffering. Ye will never perform religious duties aright, till ye be at this, that ye dark do wrong in no kind to any. Do justly, and love mercy, and walk humbly with your God. Alas! it is sad to see and hear judgments and plagues multiplied, and sin so much increasing.

"O for more tenderness one towards another, and of a spirit of meekness and zeal for God; give yourselves to be ever in prayer one with another, and one for another. Wrestle with Him in behalf of His Church and ruined work now borne down, and that He may return to the land and pity His people; and be importunate with Him in this, lest the ruin thereof be found to be under your hand. I fear ye may expect judgments to come suddenly upon this sinful land; so that ye will think, happy were they that wan [i.e., got] away before they came. Therefore, so many of you as would in any measure escape the deluge of wrath, that is coming on this sinful generation, keep clean hands, and be free of the sinful abominations committed therein; and for witnessing against them, we are to lay down our lives this day.

"And now, as a dying man, and a dying Christian, I join with, and approve of all the Holy Scriptures both of the Old and New Testaments, both of threatenings and promises therein. As also, I agree with, and allow of that excellent book, called the Confession of Faith, with the Larger and Shorter Catechisms, Sum of Saving Knowledge, Directory for Worship; and particularly I adhere to, and allow of the two Covenants, both National and Solemn League and ant, Acknowledgment of Sins and Engagement to Duties, with er contained in the forenamed book. As also, I do witness stify my dislike of the breaches and burnings of these Covenants all other horrid abominations of that nature. And, likewise, or and detest all compliance or joining with the enemies of our Jesus Christ; and more particularly of bonding, bargaining, iforming, or putting them to do hurt, any manner of way, to the Lord's poor afflicted, borne-down, wandering, and distressed And in like manner, I hate and detest all communing with, ng favourably of, or eating or drinking with any such, except in And, in like manner, I testify my dislike of that f necessity. ul, blasphemous, and abominable unparallelled Test, and all ded magistrates or ministers, which have taken the same, and that meddle and join with them, or of payers of fines, for hearing ospel, or transacting or colleaguing with any such, any manner , upon the foresaid account.

and lastly, I hate too much covetousness in prisoners who are capacity to maintain themselves, and are yet burdensome to poor, mean (though charitable) people. And I join heartily with stimonies of our dear suffering brethren, who suffered either ly or of late. And, likewise, I join my testimony to a faithful led Gospel by faithful Presbyterian, lawfully called, and authoninisters, and lawful magistrates placed and empowered, as is ble and warranted by the Word of God, and none other. And hstanding I be branded with not admitting of magistracy and authority, I do hereby declare and make it known to the world, do allow of lawful authority, agreeable and conformable to ll and command of God, the only lawgiver, as much as any my station in Scotland, and account a land happy and blessed ing and enjoying of such.

And now, being honoured to die for adhering to the truth, and this same day, being the 22d of February 1684, I do hereby forll persons all wrongs done to me, and wish them forgiveness, as e to be forgiven of God.

And now I leave all friends and Christian relations to the good g of Almighty God, and bid all of you farewell in the Lord. ell all worldly enjoyments and created comforts; and welcome, Son, and Holy Ghost, into whose hands I commit my spirit.

"GEORGE MARTIN."

OGETHER with this martyr suffered John Gilry, wright in the parish of Hownam, in Teviotdale, whose indictment was founded upon the same heads, and his testimony is much of a piece with his. He dies admiring and praising free grace, adhering to the truths of Jesus, and firmly trusting in Him for salvation.

John Main.

James Johnston, John Richmond, Archibald Stewart, and James Winning. Of all the five, little else is now known beyond the fact of their trial and martyrdom.

John Main lived in the parish of West Monkland. He was apprehended with arms about him, November 1683, in the Gorbals of Classow, at a time when a vigorous search was made after all apprehend of hostility to the Government. Sometime during his improvement he made an attempt to escape, but he seems to have been surpresed and taken, when just about to succeed.

Of James Johnston, it is simply said, that he belonged to the parish of Cadden.

John Richmond was younger of Knowe, a farm in Galston parish, about a mile to the south of the village of Darvel, in Ayrshire. He was selzed in Glasgow, November 1683, the day previous to the apprehension of John Main. He was walking on the street when Major John Ralfour tried to lay hold of him. Balfour knew nothing of him, but declared that, from his garb, he was one of the persecuted. A scuffle ensued, in which Richmond endeavoured to escape, but was unsuccessful. He was overpowered, and, although there was no charge against him except that he tried to get away when Balfour sought to make him a prisoner, he was carried to the guardhouse. Here he was tied neck and heels together, and, notwithstanding be was bleeding from the wounds received in this effort to maintain his he was left lying on the ground till next day, when he was prison, where he lay for about five months till his trial. chibald Stewart little more is known than his name and He was a countryman, belonging to the parish of Lesmahain the twentieth year of his age.

Winning was a tailor in Glasgow. He had long been a curates; but, from some private information, he was sumebruary 1684, to appear before one of the bailies. He ined about Bothwell and Archbishop Sharp's death. His rere deemed unsatisfactory, and he was sent to prison.

ve were tried in Glasgow on the same day, March 17, 1684, Their indictment was of the usual special commission. It charged them with being at Bothwell, and concealing or conversing with them. A great many witnesses were and their evidence, however improbable, was sustained, manner of the times. One witness was asked, if he saw n among the rebels with arms? and answered, he saw him rom the eastward, while they were going westward. ieutenant-Colonel Windram, declared this statement was and ordered the clerk to write, "depones, he saw John ning to the rebels, and going from them in arms," a staterly the opposite of what the witness said. Another affirmed w John Richmond at Airsmoss in arms. The preses asked e was from the prisoner? About half-a-mile, was the reply. le as was this assertion, it was sustained, and was, indeed, evidence they had of his being at Airsmoss. Richmond, in ony, mournfully complains, that four who witnessed against persons who, by their previous profession, were bound to m, rather than seek to take away his life. James Winning l if he had anything against the witnesses? and replied he ing, but solemnly professed, as he was to answer to God at ay, that he never carried arms in his life, for or against any ne preses scoffingly replied, it was enough if he was in comthe rebels, though he had but his needle with him rial seems to have lasted the whole day. John Richmond is eight o'clock at night when sentence was passed. They enced to die in less than two days—on the 19th of March in the afternoon, and, in Richmond's case at least, his head struck off and fixed upon the Tolbooth of Glasgow.

: first edition of the "Cloud," the testimony of Main is the only one given in full, and the date, evidently by the printer's error, given as May 19, instead of March 9. Of the others, there are merely the extracts that immediately follow. Richmond's testimony first occurs in the third edition, and Stewart's in the fourth. All of them justify Wodrow's encomium, that they were "five worthy and good men."

Their bodies were buried in the churchyard of the Cathedral of Glasgow. A monument to their memory, and that of Robert Bunton, John Hart, Robert Scott, and Matthew Patoun, who suffered martyrdom December 19th, 1666, for their share in the Pentland rising, has been put upon the outer wall of one of the crypts of the Cathedral, at the north side. Its inscription is in the Appendix. There is also a monument to John Richmond in Galston Churchyard.

Gavin Wotherspoon, mentioned in a note of the Compilers, was an intimate friend of James Renwick. He was a man of large stature, and once when in company with Renwick, both were surprised and pursued by the soldiers. In his flight he lost his shoe, which his pursuers picked up, and seeing it to be very large, they concluded he must be a very strong man whose foot filled it, and that it would be dangerous for their small number to attack him, and thus both he and Renwick escaped. One of the best of Renwick's letters is that called forth by a letter which Gavin Wotherspoon had received from Robert Langlands, who had separated from and maligned the societies. Renwick answered the letter. In it occurs the often-quoted passage, "I beg ye would not give ear to busy bodies and tale bearers, their whispering in your ears. Such have had no small hand in widening of our breaches. I wish they may have pardon of God for what they have done. O that the Lord's elect were agreeing together in truth! O that all these that shall agree in heaven, were agreeing upon earth! I think if my blood could be a means to procure it, I could willingly offer it up upon that account. But I speak as a fool." Gavin Wotherspoon took a prominent part in the business of the societies after the Revolution. His name occurs several times in their minutes in MS. in possession of the Reformed Presbyterian Synod.

As is the case with several of the preceding testimonies in this volume, John Main testifies against John Gib. The reason for this was not anything worthy of notice in Gib or his followers, but the assertions of the enemies of the persecuted Presbyterians that they were identical in sentiment. Indeed, the publisher or editor of Sir George Mackenzie's "Vindication" goes so far as to put Gib's statement of his views alongside of the Solemn League and Covenant, in order, he says, to inform strangers of the seditious principles of the Scots Presbyterians. Hence the sufferers felt themselves called upon to repudiate the idea of their similarity, and the compilers of the "Cloud" to give prominence to their repudiation.—ED.]

"It cannot be expected, everything considered, that ye shall have such a testimony under my hand, as ye have had from the hands of many that have gone before me; but seeing God in His infinite wisdom hath seen it fit to bring me upon the stage for truth, I thought myself bound and obliged in His sight, to testify before the world my close adherence to His written Word, and what is conform thereto.

"And first, I testify my adherence to the Bible, the Old and New Testaments, as the only and alone rule of faith and obedience. I know it stands not in need of my approbation, but to let the world know I die not as a fool, I think it my duty to assert my adherence unto it, declaring, that I take it for my only rule, rejecting the traditions of men as not canonical.

- "2. I testify my adherence to the Confession of Faith (saying nothing to that fourth article of the twenty third chapter, but only that it is misconstructed, and made use of for another end than ever the honest and faithful ministers of Christ had before them, when they gave their approbation of the same), and Catechisms Larger and Shorter, our Covenants National and Solemn League, Acknowledgment of Sins and Engagement to Duties, the Sum and Practical Use of Saving Knowledge.
- "3. To the work of Reformation as it was reformed from Popery, Prelacy, and Malignancy; even to that work, as it is a direct opposition to every sin, and motive to every duty; and particularly to the remonstrances, protestations, and testimonies against the malignant party and malignant actions, they being found out to be inconsistent with and contrary to the written Word of God, and the sworn princibles of the Church of Scotland, and being found to be hurtful to Christian society, not only by the effects of them, but as to the nature and quality of them, even simply considered in themselves, besides the ball effects aggravating them in the sight of the truly godly, and making ministers and professors of this Church.

To the fitting preaching of the Gospel, upon moors and The fields, and particularly the preach-the drawn the sins of the time, and up duty.

- a likely my testimismy to the lifting arms for personal defence, and the leavener of the Gaspel. For, seeing that other means were the law both of God and the same. I need not go to quote the orbitation of a since the whole scope of it runs upon and that we may read several places of Scripture, parmanufactive and expressly allowing, yea, commanding the same, and many imitable Scripture examples, where the people of God lifted arms against kings; as the people's resisting of Saul. I testify to the lawfulness of that hostile defence at Pentland and Bothwell Bridge, and several field-meetings, where they were put to it by the violent and bloody assaults of their enemies.
- "6. In a word (for I study brevity, being necessitate), to all the faithful testimonies of the godly, given on scaffolds, and some other testimenies given in hostile manner, viz., the testimony given at Rutherglen, May 29, 1679, and the declarations published at Lanark, in the year 1080 and 1682. I disown and testify against the declaration published at Hamilton, in the year 1679, particularly because it takes in the interest of Charles Stuart; for though he was once king, he is now a tyrant, by his cutting the neck of the noble government established in this land, and overturning the main and fundamental conditions whereupon he was constituted; and it is notour to all in this kingdom, and I believe to part of our neighbour nations also, that he carries on a course contrary to the word of God and light of nature, and destructive to all Christian and human society; yea, 2 course that very heathens would abhor, even the thing itself, abstract from its aggravations.

"I come now, in short (desiring ye may pardon escapes) to let you know what I testify against.

"1. (And not to go further back) I leave my testimony against many Ministers, for their leaving their master's work at the simple command of usurpers, as if they had been only the servants of men; and I my disapprobation, yea, my testimony against the sinful f ministers, after they had left their vineyard, where their ad placed them to labour, and their not acknowledging their unfaithfulness; for which (together with their other failings) the Lord is this day contending with them. I know plagues are so sad as to be plagued by the hand of God, laid aside from His work; I say, their unfaithfulness in not in the way of the people, when they were so generally drawn hear curates. Mistake me not, thinking that I look upon le as innocent when I speak of the sins of the ministers; for my duty to testify against both, and there will not one of cuse another. But remember, that the ministers must count eople who perish through their default.

Against the ministers, their tampering with that woeful and hed Indulgence, and more particularly their accepting thereof. Igainst the actual accepters of it, and against a woeful connivthe non-accepters of the same; whereas there ought to n an open testifying and protesting against it. I shall study it little; but I die in the faith of it, that God shall send a covery of matters, and these that have betrayed their trust, not been as they should and ought to have been, shall see shamed; but Lord grant that many may see the evil of their time, and may mourn for the same, or otherwise it will be them; but every one shall see first or last. But remember to found no place for repentance, though he sought it carenteers.

Against the ministers, their woeful yielding unto and joining malignant party and interest at Bothwell Bridge, and their elding unto the usurpation made upon the prerogatives royal ronged Lord and prince Jesus Christ, by their acceptance of anted after Bothwell Bridge, and taking occasion to preach according to the liberty granted, refusing to preach doors, notwithstanding of the great necessity sometimes; the same, and many of them refusing to preach when any eople stood without doors; this was notourly known in the 1 I think it be not yet forgot, and however it may be forgot et I assure you, it is not forgot by a holy God. I testify their sinful silence, and not jeoparding their lives for their Lord and provoked Master, especially at the time when Mr Cameron and Mr Donald Cargill went to the fields. I testily against their condemning of these two worthies in discourse and preaching, and also in their practice. In short, against everything in ministers and professors contrary unto, or inconsistent with the Presbyterian principles of the Church of Scotland.

- 14. I leave my testimony against Popery, Prelacy, and Erastianism, and everything contrary to the word of God, and particularly against Quakerism. Anabaptism, Independency, and all Sectarians and whatsoever is not warranted by the holy Scriptures.
- "5. Against the imposing of that cursed Cess; not that I call cossiliting in itself unlawful; but that cess I call unlawful, which was imposed by a corrupt convention of estates who met at Edinburgh, in the year 1973. For some things that are in themselves lawful, are sometimes so circumstantiated, as that they become unlawful; 25 sometimes the end of an action makes the action unlawful. give the cess for an instance of this, for the end of imposing it (25 themselves declare) was mainly to bear down field-meetings, and other innexent associations of the people of God, disdainfully and wickedly called by them rendezvous of rebellion' [in the Act against Conventicles, 5th Act of Second Session of Second Parliament of Charles II., passed, Felinburgh, August 13, 1670.—ED.], which meetings all Scotland was bound to maintain; but they ought to have been in the places constitute for worship, and would have been there had bonds and engagements been conscientiously minded by all that were under Oh! let not this perfidious generation think that they are loosed from the ties of these Covenants; for as sure as God is in the heavens He will make them know another thing, even that it was not in their power to rescind these Covenants, and that by going about so to do, they have brought much wrath upon themselves and their posterity after them, if they repent not. But oh! do they not look like a generation of His wrath? And not to pass the bounds of charity, I fear they will be the objects of His wrath; and it will be a dreadful day, see it who will, when the wicked shall be as stubble and tow, and the wrath and vengeance of God shall seize upon them as fire, and burn them up; for they will not escape.
- "6. Against the payers of the Cess; for it was a sad thing in a people (that should have opposed all courses of that kind), instead of opposing, to contribute to the carrying on of that very course that they ought to have opposed. Oh! that they would consider, and lay it to heart, and set themselves to redeem time—misspent and abused time!

And against locality and fines' paying, seeing that it contrithe strengthening of the adversaries' hands. As for the we may easily see it to be sinful, since they (the enemies) osed it for the maintenance of a party raised and kept up for use (as their daily practice declares) but to harass, rob, and poor people of God, for their close (Oh! that it were closer) to their sworn principles, and to kill them for not denying of nciples. And as for the paying of fines, it would be considered e fines are imposed upon people for their duty; and fines by right and justice ought always to be for transgression; an a fine be imposed by right, but for a transgression; so aying of these fines so imposed, we must be said either to ve obedience to an unjust course, which we ought always to or we may be said to make ourselves transgressors, and these 1 which we ought to venture life and fortune) to be transgressay, one of these will consequently follow, if not both. se things that are grievously sinful many ways, are become al, that they are never noticed nor thought anything of, nor ill God come in His power and great glory to disclose the f all hearts.

I leave my testimony against the people, their hearing of basely leaving the way of truth, and following a course disg to God, and destructive to themselves. Also against the ith the indulged and unfaithful ministers, vindicating themus, 'That it is good to hear the word,' not considering that nisters have so far gone out of the way of God, in their g of that Indulgence, as that they ought to be testified ind when they go on obstinately in that crooked way, ought hdrawn from. It may be, some will say, that this is ignorantly ; but I fear, if they would search things narrowly by the God, they would find that God is not countenancing them nd also, that they ought to have given far other sort of testiunst that course, than to have joined and gone along with as their station would have required; but now the obstinacy eneration is so great (and we have many sad evidences of I fear there will nothing convince them but the judgments thich has made me the less careful to write anything (although that might, being from the hand of a dying man, be any incing to them, but as it becomes one laying down his life for and princely Master Jesus Christ. I leave my testimony against joining with them; yea, against that which they call s hearing, and this I have done to exoner [i.e., free] my conscier the sight of a holy and jealous God, and do declare, that if me Christ prevent not (which will not be found but in mercy's gate, is believing and repentance) they shall smart under the heavy of God for their complying with such crooked and God-prov courses. And I, as a man laying down my life for the interest sweet Lord, do warn all and every one of them, who have joined these evil courses, to flee from the wrath to come, which will I this generation inevitably; yea, I obtest you to flee from it, tender the glory of God and the good of your own souls. flee from it by speedy repentance, and lay hold upon the and righteousness of Jesus Christ for that effect, and study to your names scraped out of the black catalogue of these soul-de ing despisers of that precious blood and righteousness, purc for that end to take away the sins of all that will come, as faith lay hold upon it, and to reconcile them to a provoked God's wrath is burning against the children of disobedience He has said, 'That such as turn aside to crooked ways, He lead them forth with the workers of iniquity.' And in ar place he says, 'If any man draw back, my soul shall have no sure in him.'

- "9. I leave my testimony against the taking of that cursed and the takers thereof, and I declare it to be a horrid wickedn God-disowning and a God-daring course.
- "10. Against compearing before their courts; and I declare be a thing inconsistent with a faithful testimony for truth at this it being: First, An owning of that authority, founded upon usurped Supremacy over the prerogative royal of our Lord, thing ought to be so far testified against, as not to own or answany court fenced [i.e., opened] in the name of Charles Stuar cause he hath quite forefaulted [i.e., forfeited] his right to n king. Second, It is a clear condemning of such as have suffere loss of means upon that account, and those who have laid down lives against the owning of that authority; and let none thin foolish in adjoining my testimony to the testimonies of these, I my disowning of that authority.
- "11. Against the lifting of militia, and the paying of m money.
 - "12. I testify against the proceedings of that abominable w.

and these testimonies writ by him in the name of others, thing prejudicial to the interests of our Lord.

now, as to the articles of my indictment, they are all of things as cannot be made criminal.

the first, viz., making my escape out of the Tolbooth, I it most innocently, doing hurt to no person, neither did I hat it was criminal.

the second, viz., that I had confessed that I was at Bothe, I see not how that can be made criminal, if I got but their own law (if it be not abuse of language to call it o further; for all that were on-lookers that day, could not be in the action.

the third, viz., My conversing with Gavin Witherspoonwell; whom they call a notorious rebel, but cannot prove ither can they show me that law founded on the Word of makes conversing with him criminal. And since they n sufficient grounds call him a rebel, what they say and do and, I do not see myself obliged to answer it; for that hich the law strikes against, is that which can be proven ainst powers acting for God, and so, consequently, rebellion 1; and sure I am, while a man followeth his duty (for it is following his duty that they call him a rebel), he can id to be in rebellion against God.

the fourth article, that I refused to call Bothwell Bridge I would see the law that makes a man's silence, when I, criminal. And also, as to the thing itself, who knows was mere defence? and who can make it out to be rebelt powers acting for God? For as is before said, this and the rebellion that the law of God and the law of our te against.

he fifth, viz., that I said the owning of the Covenants was ho knows not that these Covenants were once approven I, and solemnly sworn by the whole nation, and the Con-Faith taken, and sworn unto as fundamentals of our And I deny (although by an Act of a pretended Parliament is a very eminent and zealous sufferer, who being forfaulted of his session for adherence to the truth, suffered many hardships of perseas brought through without compliance, being steadfast in the way ill his death, which was about two years since.—Note by compilers of 1714.

they may pretend to rescind the same) that it was in their power to rescind or overturn such a constitution, until they had made the unsoundness of it appear, and made it appear wherein another was better, and till they had been in case to set up a better in the room thereof. So that their so doing was not a walking according to the will of God, but a walking according to the counsel of their own wills, contrary to the will of God, for the satisfaction of their own base lusts, and no ways showing themselves to be studying either the glory of God or the good of His people, so that these Covenants remain binding to this day, and I hope shall be when they are gone, who so wickedly set themselves against them.

"As to the sixth article, that I would not answer if it was lawful, yea or not, to obey Charles Stuart? It is only silence, which no And as to my disowning his reason nor law can make criminal. authority (as they say) they had only my silence also, which can never in law take away a man's life. As to my not asserting that the death of the late king was murder, I find that they would have every one saying and attesting what they say, and assert whether they know I leave my testimony, as a dying man, against all it to be so or not. such implicit walking, and especially I testify against any laying hold implicitly upon the bare assertions or dictates of the enemies of God. And as to the Prelate's death, I declare as a dying man, that I think none can certainly judge that action, if it was a murder or not mur-And who sees not what these enemies to God and His Son Jesus Christ are driving at, when they would compel men to assert things only for their pleasures, that no human understanding can judge of, themselves who were the actors only excepted? And now it is notour to all persons of any capacity, and who will but use the light of nature, that there is no manner of just sentence passed against, or put in execution upon us; but that we are murdered only for the satisfaction of men, who are worse than heathens.

"And now this my testimony I seal with my blood, dying in the faith of the Protestant religion, adhering to the Presbyterian government of the Church of Scotland, and witnessing against everything that tends to the hurt thereof; exhorting every one who desires to be found of God in love, to settle and fix here. And let none fear to venture upon the cross of Christ, for I can say from experience (glory be to Him for it) that he has borne the cross and me both, or otherwise I could never have undergone it with so small difficulty. And the great reason of many, their fainting under the cross, is their laying le weight on Jesus Christ, and so much upon themselves, and any bit of attainment they think themselves to have. Oh let one study that holy art of independency upon all things besides and depend only upon Himself.

and now I bid farewell to the poor remnant of the Church of nd, and I leave them to God, and in His good hand. I bid ll to friends and acquaintances. I bid farewell to my mother, ommit her to God, who only can provide for her things necesoth for soul and body. I bid farewell to my two sisters, and it them to God, who can be instead of all things to them, and on make up the want of a brother to them, which want I think e easily borne as the time now goes. Farewell praying and ng, reading and meditating. I bid farewell to all temporal mercies and crosses. Welcome gallows for the interest of my Lord. Welcome heaven and everlasting glory. Welcome of just men made perfect. Welcome angels. Welcome Father, nd Holy Ghost, into whose hands I commit my spirit.

"JOHN MAIN."

ITH this martyr suffered other four, viz., John Richmond, Archibald Stewart, who lived in the parish of Lesmahagow, James Winning, tailor, in Glasgow, James Johnston, in Cadder, all very zealous and judicious Christians. The heads r indictments are all the same with these of this martyr, and nswers before their examinators have been very much to the effect, all of them freely and fully owning the Covenant, and ing it before their persecutors, and likewise the lawfulness of ve arms, for maintaining the faithfully preached Gospel, and lely denying the king's ecclesiastic supremacy. Declining all m to answer to the impertinent questions concerning the 's death, and that of King Charles I., in regard they knew e circumstances of these facts, nor could make a judgment them, and found themselves obliged in no law, divine or , to give their opinion about them; and yet, upon this their it silence, was their sentence founded and executed with great aving scarce forty-eight hours allowed them before their exefor the heads of truth, to which they leave their testimony, defection and corruption, against which they leave it, they are r the same with these contained in the foregoing speech, that it would be but superfluous to repeat them word for word as they stand. Only some few expressions shall be here inserted out of them, to show how cheerfully they underwent their sufferings.

To which purpose these words of John Richmond's are very remarkable. 'Scar not at [i.e., be not afraid of] the cross of Christ; for, oh, if ye knew what I have met with since I came to prison! what love! what matchless love from my sweet and lovely Lord! ye would long to be with Him, and would count it naught to go through a sea of blood for Him.'

To the same effect see with what heavenly delight and complacency that stripling. Archibald Stewart, a youth of nineteen years, accests a violent death, while he saith, 'Now this is the sweetest and joytulest day that ever I had since I was born. My soul blesseth the I and that ever He made choice of me to suffer for His noble cause and interest: that ever He set His love upon the like of me, to give a faithful testimony for His controverted truths, who was born an heir of hell and wrath; but now He hath redeemed my soul through His previous blood and suffering from the power of sin and Sitan, and bath made me overcome by the blood of the immaculate Lamb of God.' And thereafter, 'I die not by constraint: I am more willing to die for my levely Lord Christ and His truths, than ever I was to live. And my soul blesseth the Lord, that ever He did accept of a testimony from the like of me. Scar not at [i.e., be not airaid of the way of Christ because of sufferings. If ye knew what of His love I have got since I was honoured with imprisonment for Him, and what sweet ingredients He hath put into my cup, ye would not be afraid of suffering. He hath paved the cross all over with love, and hath made all sweet and comfortable to me, and hath made all my troubles flee away like the morning shadows. Oh! I cannot express His matchless love to me, neither can I make mention of His goodness! Oh! it is but little I can speak to the commendation of my lovely Lord and His cross."

At the same rate James Winning, having bewailed his being so long a hearer of curates, subjoins with a sweet and ravishing turn: "I bless the Lord, because of His goodness to me, who, notwith standing of all my compliance with enemies, hath not left me in that woeful case, but hath brought me hither to witness for His opposed, burdened, and ruined cause and glory. Oh! I desire to bless Him for it, and call in all the creation to help me. Oh! the wonderful power, riches, and goodness of the Lord! Glory to His rich and excellent name, who hath discovered to me the need of a Redeemer, who will wash me from my sins, and make me pure and spotless before His throne in heaven."

James Johnston, among other heavenly expressions, hath these concerning his lot of suffering, "For this I bless the Lord, for I could never have ventured upon the cross, especially upon death itself, unless that He had helped me to it."

They died all with a forgiving spirit, imitating their Lord and Master, and His holy apostles, in praying for forgiveness to their persecutors, though withal assuring them that their blood would be required at their hands, if they did not repent for what they had done against the image of God in them.

John Richmond.

HE LAST TESTIMONY of JOHN RICHMOND, who lived in the parish of Galston, and suffered at the Cross of Glasgow, upon the 19th of March, 1684.

"Now I am brought here this day, to lay down my life for the testimony of Jesus Christ, and the hope of Israel, which hope I am not ashamed of, and for owning that Christ is King, and Head of His own Church, for which I do this day willingly lay down my life, and not by constraint; for if I would have acknowledged a mortal man to be supreme, I might have redeemed my life—viz., Charles Stuart, to be supreme over all causes, civil and ecclesiastical, which belongs to no mortal man upon earth, but to our blessed Lord and Saviour, who is given of the Father to be Head and King of His own Church, which I prove by His own word: "And He is the Head of the body, the Church" (Col. i. 18). "And hath put all things under His feet, and gave Him to be the head over all things to the Church" (Eph. i. 22).

And also the second Psalm. Now, I say, it is for the hope of Israel and as a witness of Jesus Christ; of whom I am not ashamed, but desir with heart and soul to praise Him, and my soul shall praise Him through out the ages of eternity, and I desire to invite all the creation to prais Him: for He has taken me as a brand plucked out of the fire, wh was an heir of hell and wrath, and I also confirmed that heirship t myself, by my actual transgressions; but now my sweet and lovel Lord and Redeemer, through His blood and sufferings, has redeeme me from the devil, the world, and the flesh, and has sealed to me this Spirit, bearing witness with my spirit, and confirming me by H precious Word, which Word is truth, and the true Word of God, the He has redeemed me, and I shall be clothed with His righteousnes which is spotless and clean, and will make my soul as clean as if had never sinned.

- "Now I shall give you a short hint, as the Lord shall assist me, my principles, what I am to adhere to; and also, what I am clear to disown and testify against, as a dying witness of Christ:
- "I. I sweetly set to my seal to the Covenant of Free Grace, may betwixt the Father and the Son before the foundation of the work for the redemption of poor, lost mankind; I say, of those who at elected, called and chosen, sanctified and justified, for which me soul blesses the Lord, that ever I heard tell of the same, and of Redeemer.
- "2. I leave my testimony to the Sacred Word of God—viz, To Old and New Testaments, that they are the true Word of God, and that there is life everlasting to be had in perusing thereof, with the whole desire of the soul, through a Redeemer; and without perusing and sincerely endeavouring to make it your rule of life and manner there is no life; for our blessed Lord says, He came not to destrot the law, but to fulfil it.
- "3. I leave my testimony to the work of Reformation, in all the several steps thereof, as it was reformed from Popery, Prelacy, Entitianism, and all other errors, not agreeable to the Word of God.
- "4. I leave my testimony to the Confession of Faith, the Sum (Saving Knowledge, Directory for Worship, the Catechisms Large and Shorter.
- "5. I leave my testimony to the Covenants, National an Solemn League and Covenant, that these lands were engaged in the Lord; which Scotland may bless the Lord for, that He brough them in Covenant with Himself. I say to you that desire to own the

- (I mean the poor wrestling remnant,) make it your ground to with the Lord, that He may come back to these lands again. I leave my testimony to the Acknowledgment of Sins and gement to Duties, and the Causes of God's Wrath.
- 6. I leave my testimony to the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, illy preached by the faithful ambassadors called and commistion. Himself, in all faithfulness and boldness, in showing his transgressions, and Israel his sin, both before Bothwell and; but few found faithful since. It may be said of the most part that time forth, many went backward and walked no more with their names may be written in very little bounds, that were faithful; only these two I desire to record, Mr Donald Cargill Ir Richard Cameron, which I desire to set to my seal, to the ilness of these two men's doctrine, and all their procedure in the they were called in, and my soul blesses the Lord that ever I them preach.
- 7. I leave my testimony to all appearances in arms for the ce of the Gospel, both before Bothwell and since; and also my ony to the carrying of arms for self-defence, and the defence of ethren.
- 3. I leave my testimony to the Excommunication at the Tordrawn out by Mr Donald Cargill.
- 3. I leave my testimony to the testimony given at Rutherglen, the 29th day of May, the year 1679.
- 10. I leave my testimony to the declaration given at Sanquhar, June 22, 1680.
- of January 1682, by a party who was stirred up by the Lord to so faithfully for Him against the bloody acts and laws of men, specially the dreadful snare, the land-destroying, the soul-ruining called the Test.
- 12. I leave my testimony against that declaration drawn at lton, by a party of men, who loved the praise of men, and the st of men, more than the interest of our Lord and King, will not give His glory and honour to any mortal man upon because it took in the tyrant's interest, and was carried on by over the belly of a poor faithful remnant that was amongst but if God be God, serve Him; and if Baal be God, serve
- 13. I leave my testimony to the eight articles called the New Covenant, drawn by Mr Donald Cargill, and which was taken off worthy Henry Hall at the Queensferry.

- "14. I leave my testimony to the fellowship and meetings of the Lord's people, for reading and singing of Psalms, and praying to the Lord, and wrestling for the poor Church, and other duties incumbent to them in their place and station, and to all their proceedings for the keeping up the remembrance of Israel. Go on, and slack not your hands, seeing it is so warrantably by your Master's royal word, viz., Mal. iii., and many more. For my soul blesses the Lord that ever He counted me worthy to be in among the fellowship meeting of His people. I say, slack not your hands, for the Lord has accepted of your endeavours in keeping up the remembrance of Israel, making way to get poor young infants brought within His visible Church, which the Lord made me a sharer of, and an offering of Himself to poor treacherous Scotland, if they will embrace Him.
- "15. I heartily, with all my heart and soul, leave my testimony to all the faithful testimonies of the Cloud of Witnesses, that has been martyred for Christ and His truths.
- "Now, I desire, before I quit the list of these that I have owned, here through grace to lay down my life, and the list of them is of more value than many lives.
- "Now, I shall give a short hint, as the Lord shall assist, what I disown, that is done of men, against the Majesty of heaven.
- "1. I leave my testimony against Popery and Prelacy, and Erastian Supremacy, and all that hierarchy.
- "2. I leave my testimony against Quakerism, Independency, Anabaptism, and all other erroneous sects, that are contrary to the Word of God.
- "3. I leave my testimony against that tyrant upon the throne of Britain, and his present authority, for his breach of the Covenants; the Covenants being the coronation oath, that he got the crown upon; and for his overturning the whole work of God in the land, by taking upon him to be supreme over Christ's Church, and to rule the law, and not the law to rule him, and for burning these Covenants, and for putting the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ out of the land, and for killing, plundering, of the Lord's people in the fields, on scaffolds, drowning in the sea, banishing, plundering, oppressing, both in body and conscience.
 - "4. I leave my testimony against all the upholders of that tyrant, ctly by aiding, assisting, or pleading for him, or for his interest; ne has openly and avowedly seated himself against King Christ; these that plead for him, who have taken the crown off our sed Lord's head; I say, they will be found pleading against st: 'When thou sawest a thief, then thou consentedst with him, hast been partaker with the adulterers' (Ps. 1. 18).

- '5. I leave my testimony against the Oath of Supremacy.
- '6. I leave my testimony against that Bond that was taken in the friars' Churchyard.
- '7. I leave my testimony against that bond called the Bond of ulation, and against that bond and engagement to keep the kirk, ney call it; which is a binding to keep a place, put in it what they and it were even Popery the next day; and I warn you of it, you shall have it ere long, except the Lord wonderfully prevent say, it is a binding to the kirk, and not a following of our I Jesus Christ: 'For where is the house ye build to me? saith Lord.'
- '8. I leave my testimony against that Bond, pressed by the Highhost on the west country.
- '9. I leave my testimony against that dreadful, abominable thing ded the Test.
- '10. I leave my testimony against all coming out of prison upon l and caution, being a shifting of the cross of Christ, and making iselves the prisoners of men, and not the prisoners of Christ, and ling unto men, while we are called to another thing, as it is said is sixth of Romans, verse 16th, 'To whom ye yield yourselves ints to obey, his servants ye are.'
- '11. I leave my testimony against all compearances at their ts, because they are unjust judges, and have forfeited their right; their judgment and sentence is contrary to the Word of God, and ted for the ruin of the Church of God, and for oppressing the ciences of men, to sin against God.
- '12. I leave my testimony against all cess and locality, for the staining of the enemies of God, to kill and murder God's people, bear down the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: 'But ye are that forsake the Lord, that forget my holy mountain, that preatable for that troop, and that furnish the drink-offering unto number' (Isa. lxv. 11).
- 13. I leave my testimony against hearing of curates, because are the ministers of men; yea, I may say, rather of Satan, for the flourishing of his kingdom; for they are thieves and robbers, an not the true ministers of Christ, for they are not entered by Him, an are set there for the maintaining of damnable heresy—viz., the preach another head of the Church than our blessed Lord Jest Christ.

- "14. I leave my testimony against all Indulgences, first and las because they have rent the bowels of Christ's Church, by exercisin their power and liberty under that Supremacy, yea, and exercisin the very function of their ministry by the directions of men, by receining their instructions from men; and so are no more the minister of God, but the ministers of men; and there is this black effect that has followed, and been the fruit of their ministry and preaching that never one according to my knowledge, that was indulged in their judgment, that wan [i.e., got], the length of a scaffold for the cause of Christ, but did yield and go on with the abominations of the times.
- "15. I leave my testimony against these ministers, who one appeared fair, and went a good length in bearing up the standar and banner of our blessed Lord; but when the persecution rose somewhat hot, then biding [i.e, remaining] by Christ and declaring of His message became out of season to them; they quitted the Lord's commission and precept by Paul to preach the Word in season and out of season, and so soon as ever they saw the wolf coming, they ran and hid themselves, and suffered the poor sheep of Christ to be scattered, torn, and destroyed, both in body and conscience. This I dare assert, they cannot say with Paul, that they are free from the blood of all men, and have declared the whole counsel of God.
- "Now, as I said before, I am to lay down my life this day, for the defence of the Gospel at Drumclog, and for the defence of the Gospel at Hamilton, and for hearing of Mr John King preach upon the Greenhill End, being the east end of Galston Moor, and for being in company with John Nisbet; and of all the four articles, I am not ashamed this day; these counted criminal by the enemies of my Lord, whose Gospel-standard I desire to defend with life and fortune. I say, these being counted criminal, witness being led, proved the same, and witnessed me to death. If these had been enemies, I could have borne it; but it was they, mine acquaintance, mine equal, my guide, and we took sweet counsel together, and went into the House of God together (Psalm lv. 12-14). So it was these that good length, and were also as deeply engaged as I was, yea, and my life, and not to have witnessed me to death; for what we witnessed, I am not ashamed of; but this I leave behind r testimony against them; and my blood will be charged home hem, and, without repentance prevent it, both upon them and osterity; and I set down their names, that they may stand on and their names be known to aftercoming generations, their being these-John Loudon in Mill of New Milns, John Pater-Slacks, John Fram in Tonslen, James Connel in Bankherd.* them down here, that their names may be a stink and illto aftercoming generations, as apostate from the way of God, -like, have forsaken the way of God, and chosen a present and now have not holden them there, but have become folof the people of God to the death, by their engagement and o the enemies, taking that hell-hatched thing called the Test. low, as I leave my testimony to the truth of God in part, so I eft my testimony against some of the prevailing sins of the and as I this day desire, with heart and soul, to adhere to all ths of God, named and not named, so I also desire with my soul to disown, detest, and abhor, and loathe all manner of I defection, public and private; and I also leave my testimony and disown all profanation and loose living, and vain speeches e not for the use of edifying; and also against lukewarmness, ing by as at ease in Zion, when she is in trouble now, when cossed upon the turbulent sea of affliction. ut to you that desire to have your portion and stock in up, I desire to leave this word of comfort, that the Master ip, I desire to leave this word of comfort, that the Master wake and rebuke the storm, and make it calm, that such a ss has not been yet. Look Isa. xliv. from the beginning oth verse, and assure yourselves, that His faithfulness will not r His promise come to nought; for this day I set to my seal aithfulness of His promises to poor me, and what concerned

In That the above-mentioned John Loudon became poor, and his posenow reduced to beggary, notwithstanding they had of heritage six of our our our our output. John Paterson died at Edinburgh of the Frenchshn Fram was broke, and fled to Ireland, and, as it is commonly reported, ranged there for stealing of horse. James Connel became miserable, and erity are in want. They were in fellowship with John Richmond, and ually guilty with him in everything for which he was condemned; but ing from the truth, the enemy made use of them to witness him to death. It is the editor of the third edition of the "Cloud," in 1730.

my salvation; and oh! how much shall He not own tance, and His poor Church, which is given Him of ti King thereof! and will He give that which He hat His own blood and sufferings to the hands of man? and earth shall pass away, but one jot, or one tittle sh all be fulfilled. Although that men be this day power and strength for the down-bearing of the Chu all that burden themselves with her shall be dashed the snares and gins they have laid for the poor peop shall be taken therein themselves; and although the v yea, all except a poor and contemptible and afflication joined hand in hand, to uphold the tyrannical pow they and all that is against King Christ, shall be I 'Though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not (Prov. xi. 21). And as for that abominable race and the tyrant upon the throne of Britain, that race and fall under that command given from the Lord to xxii. beginning at the 25th verse to the close, but es verse, 'Thus saith the Lord, Wri e ye this man child' shall not prosper in his days: for no man of his see sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling any mor

"And now, my dear friends—I mean the poor wr or any who shall follow the footsteps of them hereaf [i.e., be not afraid of] the cross of Christ, though the and bondage of His poor people shall be lengthened yet again the Lord shall come and shall not tarry, to promise, for the relief of His poor Church; 'for t slack concerning His promise, as some men count ! long-suffering,' waiting for the outcoming of His peor ing them from the people of these abominations; public abominations, but His people must be sepa heart-idol and every private sin, walking as in the God, in all holy conversation, as the sons and d Living God. And also be encouraged to wait upo finish His own work; look that of Micah, vii. 8th 'Rejoice not against me, O mine enemy; when I fa when I sit in darkness, the Lord shall be a light u bear the indignation of the Lord, because I have sinnuntil He plead my cause, and execute judgment for bring me forth to the light, and I shall behold His Ishe was under, that the Lord would plead her cause, and judgment for her; and then in the 13th verse, 'Notwithstandland shall be desolate, because of them that dwell therein, for it of their doings.' Therefore, my dear friends, wait upon the weary not until He works His own work; for it is very likely his land must be laid desolate, before He comfort His people, restore His church to her wonted privileges; yea, and I say, dying witness of Christ, that God's judgments shall be poured ipon Scotland till it be laid desolate. My dear friends, hold fast He come, and be upon your watch-tower, and have oil in your is, that your light may be shining, and your lamps burning, for pridegroom will come in an hour when ye are not aware, and way that ye are not looking for. Now I shall say no more upon lead.

Now I leave my testimony against these called our judges, and it these assizers, both these that sat upon my brethren, and myself; my blood and my brethren's blood shall be required at ands; and my blood shall be charged upon John Balfour, who ne, for he declared to me that he knew me by my garb, that I ne of the persecuted men, and so it was the ground he appred me upon, because I was a sufferer for the name of Christ. as I am of myself, I can freely forgive them and all others, for hey have done to me, and do freely forgive them; but as they lone it against the image of God in me, and in despite against rk, cause, and interest of Jesus Christ, that is not mine to to I leave that to Himself.

upon the 17th day of March, at eight o'clock at night, to die th day of the same, at two in the afternoon; and now this day o suffer martyrdom, and my head to be stricken off and to be upon the Tolbooth, for the name of Jesus. Now, scar [i.e., be not afraid of] the cross of Christ, for oh! if ye knew have met with since I came to prison, what love, what matchve, from my sweet and lovely Lord, ye would long to be with and ye would count it naught to go through a sea of blood for Oh, I invite you, dear friends, to stick to the truths of God, de by Him, that the name of Israel may not be rooted out; is I desire to live and to die in the faith of, that the blood nd spilt in Scotland shall have a glorious crop and vintage.

"And now, as for the generality of this generation, or these bad slidden and backsliding professors, I know not what to say of ther but this is the language to me of their way, and I leave it as a dyir witness for Christ, that these let, and will let, till they be taken o of the way.

"Now I leave my wife and my baby unto Him who gave the unto me; I fully quit with them, and leave them to my Lord at Master, who can make us meet above the clouds. Now I take u farewell of you, and all created comforts, and I am also willing, at more willing ten thousand times to lay them down at His call, the ever I was to enjoy them. Now, farewell all friends in Chris Farewell all relations. Farewell days and nights. Farewell su moon, and stars. Farewell suffering. Farewell irons on feet at hands. Farewell holy and sweet Scripture, which was the savour life unto life to me. And welcome heaven and eternal life. We come the company and souls of just men made perfect through the blood of the Lamb. Welcome, welcome, and never enough welcome my lovely Lord, my Father, and my Redeemer, and the Holy Ghos into whose hands I commit my spirit, for it is thine,

" Sic subscribitur,

"JOHN RICHMOND,"

Archibald Stewart.

HE COPY of a LETTER written by ARCHIBAL STEWART, who suffered martyrdom at the Cross of Glasgow, March 19, 1684. To his Christian Acquain ance.

"My DEAR AND LOVING FRIEND AND ACQUAINS ANCE,—You and I must take good night of on another for a while; but I hope it shall not be long for you know that this time that we have upon earth, lasts but for:

nt; and we are but as a flower that grows up in the night, and is own in the morning, like the shadow that flees away, and is no seen upon earth again; even like Jonah's gourd, that grew up ight and perished in a night. Now you and I must part, and good-night, you of me, and I of you, as willingly, and with as satisfaction, contentment, and submission to our lovely Lord's -I say, with as great submission to the will of our God, as if we going to our sweet and comfortable fellowship meetings, where ruls many times have been refreshed with the fresh gales of the of our God, which indeed was the life of our meetings; for not been the love that we bare to God, and His way, He never have made our meetings so sweet to us; so that the that we continued, and the oftener that we met, the Lord more of Himself known to us, in giving us new confirmations of ove, and tokens of His kindness.

Now, my loving friend, I am going to my Father's house to reap nit of all these waking nights that you and I had together, when knew of it but ourselves and our heavenly Father. hope of it, we shall come to your Father, and my Father, to God and my God (John xx. 17), to your Redeemer and my emer, to reap the fruit of all these meetings we had together. out that will be a joyful harvest time! I am now going to reap it of all my reading, praying, singing, conversing, and meditatnd the fruits of all my trouble, toil, and labour. ness, I will enjoy sweetness; instead of trouble, rest; instead row and grief, joy and gladness: 'For sighing and sorrow shall I am going to reap the fruit of my wounds, and all the iches that they have cast upon me; I am going to reap the of all my sighs and groans, especially these since I came to where I have had very many of them. I am going to reap uit of my fetters, irons and imprisonment for my lovely Lord Master Jesus Christ; and I am going to reap the fruit of my indictment and unjust sentence. Oh! but the fruits of these entioned things will be a weighty crown of glory within a little upon my head, up at my Father's throne, when I shall go no out, and come no more in, having the name of my God written my forehead, and the song of Moses and the Lamb put in my 1, to sing praises through all the ages of eternity!

Now, dear friend, I cannot get Him praised, for the riches of ree grace, freely bestowed on me. Oh! I cannot get Him praised for bringing my soul out of the pit of destruction, and reclaiming my soul from the gates of hell. Oh! my soul and he and all that is within me, praise the Lord for His wonderful love me! and also, my soul invites all the works of creation to pr Him for what He hath done to my soul; for now I can say' David, from my own experience, 'Come and hear, all ye that God, and I will declare what he hath done for my soul.' And wise I can say with David, 'The lines are fallen unto me in ple places; yea, I have a goodly heritage' (Ps. xvi. 6). And more all that, He hath said to my soul, that He will quarrel no mon me for sin, for my God hath said to me, 'But now, thus sai Lord that created thee, O Jacob, and He that formed thee, O fear not: for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by thy: thou art mine. When thou passest through the waters, I will t thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned, neithe the flame kindle upon thee (Isa. xliii. 1, 2). And 'Son, be of cheer, thy sins be forgiven thee' (Matt. ix. 2). Now all is su well with me; I am brought near unto God, through the bl His Son Jesus Christ; and I have no more to do, but to lay this life of mine, that He hath given me, and take up hou habitation with my lovely Lord and Master Jesus Christ, wh chased life and salvation to me by the price of His own blo Oh! but I have gotten an easy cast of it. Oh! am come well and easy to my purpose of redemption, peac happiness. But oh! I cannot get Him glorified, and I will get Him enough glorified, as long as my soul liveth; and I sh as long as He liveth, and that is life without end.

"Now, my dear and loving friend, it is but little advice can leave to you, how to order your life and conversation; shall leave you my last advice, as the Lord shall help me. A hath once made you to accept of Him upon His own term way, hold fast by Him, and claim a right to Him, from Hi promises, and former loving kindness, wherein He hath man Himself to you. And although you be made many times to that He hath left you, when you are casten down and under des yet claim a right to Him; though you have destroyed yourself, [i.e., pertinaciously affirm] kindness upon Him, and resolv Job, that though He should slay you, yet you will trust in For you must not want your down-castings and desertion lings are given you, for the trial of your faith. And low something of this from experience, that we cannot Lord's presence, when we get it; we are so lifted up, ust cast us down again; for our old bottles cannot e new wine of heaven; none of us can be free of deserlong as we live in this earth, we are often under an oud of darkness.

much of your time in prayer and meditation, for I think, is the life of religion; and spend time in Christian conny of your own judgment, and private prayer, as you and we were together; and if you can get none, do your own e Lord will make up all your loss, for He hath engaged all your wants. Now, double your diligence, and make e trial, for you will not get it shifted, if you continue faithed. I am not saying that the trial will take away your am persuaded you will come through difficulties, if the to spare you to see the glorious days that shall be seen again, and to reap of the fruit of it. This will be a high they will be a happy people, that will be the remnant of

dear friend, hold fast, and let no man take your crown, ly at the end of your race; run, and never halt, nor look 1 obtain the prize. I have gotten the first start of you, I hope, you will follow me, before it be long; and we gain; and oh! what a joyful meeting shall it be. Study to your life, and die daily, that death may not sur-must forbear, my time is so short, that I cannot get all hat I have to say; but what is wanting, Himself make. Now, I take my leave of you for a little time, hoping in up above in our Father's house. I pray that God's sing may rest upon you, and wish you even as my own well in the Lord. Your dear and loving Christian friend, I soul's well-wisher.

"ARCHIBALD STEWART.

w Tolbooth, March 15th, 1684."

Captain John Paton.

Meadowhead, a farm-house, about a mile and a half to t east of the small village of Waterside. The present far house of Meadowhead has been built within the century, with t exception of its west end, which is said to be part of that in whi Paton lived. Behind the house is a barn, of some size, the gables which are of dried mud, cased with stones, and overcast with a coing of lime. Within these gables, the tradition is, that Richa Cameron, sometime early in 1681, baptized twenty-two children.

In his younger days, Paton followed the usual outdoor occupation of the inhabitants of his native parish; but when he reached ma hood, he left farming for a soldier's life. John Howie says, of the way and manner in which he went first to a military life, that there a various accounts,—one is, that he served under Gustavus Adolphu and the other, that he was at the battle of Marston Moor. But he accounts are reconcileable with each other, for the battle of Lutze fatal to the Swedish king, yet triumphant to the Protestant cause I sought to advance, was fought November 6th, 1632, while Mark Moor was not till July 2, 1644.

Scotland seems, in the early part of the seventeenth century, have been much in the condition of Ireland in later times,—it experienced the distress arising from a superabundant population. England, although by the accession of James brought under the same crown, was not a very friendly country, and so Scotsmen were in large numbers to the Continent. The General Assembly, Sept. 1, 1647, sent a pastoral letter "unto the Scots merchants, and other our country people, scattered in Poland, Swedland, Denmark, and Hungary," and it refers to their numbers "as many thousands of our countrymen, who are scattered abroad." These merchants were mostly what in modern phrase would be called packmen, and travelled over the Continent, and, in an age when towns were few in towns shops were far from being regularly open, gave ants an opportunity of buying articles of luxury or domestic many, however, the occupation of a soldier was more an that of a travelling merchant. Hence Scotsmen were I the armies of Europe. Sometimes they discovered theming against each other, and when a detachment would be reach, it is said, it was not unusual to hear some of the address them in their own tongue, "come on, gentlemen! like gallanting it at the Cross of Edinburgh."

Gustavus Adolphus, as the champion of Protestantism, ar in 1630 against Austria, he had quite an army of Scotshim. His Scotch brigade was so large, that its superior ounted to 34 colonels, and 50 lieutenant-colonels. One of urious and most interesting folios of that age, is Colonel unro's expedition with the worthy Scots regiment, called Regiment, . . . discharged in several duties and observaervice, first, under the magnanimous King of Denmark, wars against the empire, afterwards under the invincible weden, during his majesty's lifetime, etc. At Lutzen, the Gustavus was commanded by a Scotsman named Henderie Scotch regiments, by their adoption of platoon firing, are ve contributed largely to achieve the victory that did so he liberties of Protestant Europe.

er Paton was at Lutzen we are not told, but "it was for some evment," says John Howie, "at the taking of a certain city, y Gustavus Adolphus, that he was advanced to a captain's hat age he was when he went abroad is not recorded, n that, "when he returned home, he was so far changed, rents scarcely knew him," which may be taken to signify nt away a lad of eighteen or nineteen, and came back a d bronzed soldier, of six or eight and twenty.

army which the Scots sent to the aid of the English Parliarces, and was present at the battle of Marston Moor, July the combined Scots and Parliamentary troops gained the ich both gave a fatal blow to the royal cause, and laid the of Oliver Cromwell's future greatness. After Marston nust soon have returned home, for he was called out, with of his native parish, to resist the raid made by Montrose of the king, and was present at the battle of Kilsyth, August 15, 1645. Here the daring purpose and quick execution of Montrose carried the day, and the army of the Covenanters was totally deteated. Wishart, Montrose's chaplain, a divine evidently of the school of Baron Munchausen, affirms that the Covenanters lost from 4000 to 5000, while the loss of his master was no more than six men. But the statement carries with it its own refutation, for it is impossible that tour or five thousand of the vanquished can have been slain, with a loss of six only to the victor. In the rout that followed the defeat, Captain Paton with difficulty escaped. John Howie tells the following story of what he and two associates did in the retreat:

"The Captain, as soon as he got free of the bog, into which the Covenanters had been driven, with sword in hand, made the best of his way through the enemy, till he got safe to the two Colonels, Hacket and Strahan, who all three rode off together, but had not gone far till they were encountered by about fifteen of the enemy, all of whom they killed except two who escaped. When they had gone a little further, they were again attacked by about thirteen more, and of these they killed ten, so that only three of them could make their escape. But, upon the approach of about eleven Highlanders more, one of the colonels said, in a familiar dialect, 'Johnny, if thou dost not somewhat now, we are all dead men.' To whom the captain answered, 'Tear not, for we will do what we can before we either yield or flee before them.' They killed nine of them, and put the rest to flight."

that three hand to hand conflicts might well cause. But it is much more likely to be true than Wishart's fiction; especially if we remember what a weapon a sword in the hands of a soldier, skilled to use it, becomes, when his antagenists are of the character of Montrose's arm, accustomed more to a whoop, a halloo, and a dash, than to tight in a regular manner.

However tells a simular story of his doings, when some soldiers of the Duke of Hamilton's army, under the command of Middleton, army keel a considerable party of the Covenanters at Mauchline, where they had been celebrating the communion. Paton and his friends non-Penwick, who, at his advice, had taken arms with them, made a spirited resistance. The captain himself killed eighteen with his own hand. In the unhappy dispute, which ended in the Covenanters breaking up into two parties. Captain Paton took the side of the Protestors. He was present at the battle of Worcester. September 3- togs, where he fought for King Charles II, with his usual ardoan;

e genius of Cromwell carried the day, and soon ended the war. returned home to Scotland, and resumed the pursuits of his by taking the farm of Meadowhead, and soon after married Lindsay, but she died in a few months.

Meadowhead, Paton continued to reside for the rest of his He sat under the ministry of William Guthrie, the well-known of the "Christian's Great Interest," and was chosen to be one elders.

hen, in 1666, the Covenanters of Galloway, fired by the insolent ssions of Sir James Turner, took up arms in self-defence, and 1 their friends to join them, Captain Paton could not resist the He was called to command "a party of horse from on, Fenwick, and other places." In the ill-judged march to the bourhood of Edinburgh, he had the charge of the rear-guard. as at Pentland, and was among the last to quit the field, when verwhelming numbers of the royal forces made defence no In his retreat he was overtaken by Dalziel himself, knew him, and thought to have taken him prisoner. it the other; Paton's ball struck Dalziel, but without effect, for ling to the practice of superior officers in that age, he wore armour; and, when Paton proceeded to load the other pistol silver, said to be more effective than lead in piercing steel, and he had with him for an emergency, Dalziel retreated behind tendant, who was slain. Paton and two other friends from ick on horseback, were soon surrounded by Dalziel's soldiery, hey cut their way through, when there were almost no others ng on their own side save themselves, and after they had kept position for nearly an hour.

ow much was secured by the continued resistance of such as Paton, y the dispositions of the commanding officer, Lieutenant-Colonel s Wallace, Mr Dodds has been able to show from researches in tate Paper Office in his valuable volume, "The Fifty Years gle of the Scottish Covenanters." The great body of the Covens, very different from what happened in 1679 at Bothwell Bridge, ed under the covert of night among the hills in their rear.

eneral Dalziel did not suffer Captain Paton to escape without ast another attempt to capture him. He sent three of his ers in pursuit, after he had given them a description so as to nise him. They overtook him, when he was about to leap a, and out of which three terrified Galloway friends had just drawn their horses. The captain, after encouraging his friends, cleared the ditch, and faced about, sword in hand, to receive his pursuers. The head of the first he cut in two with a single stroke of his sword. The trooper's horse, deprived of its rider, and stunned by the blow, fell into the ditch or hag, and in its fall, drew in the two others along with it, where Paton left them, with the message—"My compliments to your master, and tell him I shall not be with him to-night." Paton got safely back to Meadowhead; but he had become a marked man, and henceforward he had many a time to betake himself for safety to the wild moors in his neighbourhood. The winter following Pentland, he and twenty more had a narrow escape at Lochgoin, where they had gathered for prayer and pious conversation.

He was not with the brave company at Drumclog, but he soon after joined them with a number of horsemen from Fenwick and Galston, and was present at the fatal defeat at Bothwell Bridge. It is not said what part he took in the battle, but his presence there led to his being proclaimed a rebel, and to a sum being set upon his head.

Not long after Bothwell Bridge, he had another narrow escape at 1 ochgoin, the circumstances of which John Howie details at length. Although the soldiers surprised him in the house, he managed to escape. Two friends ran with him, and two others less quickly behind him, and now and then fired upon the enemy. One of the shots took effect, and wounded a sergeant in the thigh. This delayed the pursuit, and Paton and his four friends separated—they going together to attract the soldiers, and he by himself. He soon got hold of a horse in the moor, but he had scarcely mounted, when he came upon a party of dragoons, for Newmilns. However, as he was shoeless, the horse saddleless, and riding slowly, he escaped unobserved.

This second series of escapes was soon followed by a third. One of his children died. The time when it was to be buried came to the knowledge of the hireling of government, who drew the stipend of the parish, and he sent word to the soldiers stationed at Kilmarnock to come and seize him in the churchyard. Paton followed the corpse to the burial, but, when near the churchyard, he was persuaded by some triends to turn back, and thus he escaped.

But Captain l'aton was now an old man, and the vicissitudes of a moldier's life, the efforts he had made to advance the good cause, as well as the privations he had suffered through persecution, had his age. Hence, when his enemies at last came upon him, sily taken. In the beginning of August 1683, he was in of Robert Howie, in Floack, in the parish of Mearns, a ngside of which now runs the new road from Kilmarnock w, when a party of five soldiers claimed him as their Contrary to his usual practice, he had no arms, but the the house offered him assistance—had it been ten years had been able for the soldiers single-handed—but he heir aid. He feared that it would bring them into trouble, as now well stricken in years, and worn out with fleeing to place; and moreover, he added, he was not afraid to his interest in Christ he was sure.

oldiers, therefore, made an easy capture. They took him to tak, under the supposition that he was some aged minister, nates of Floack had not yet disclosed his name; but on the place still shown, called Moor Yett, a farmer, standing at tried out—" Dear me, Captain Paton, are you there!" and oldiers first learned the value of the prize they had taken. narnock he was conveyed to Ayr, and from Ayr to Glasthence to Edinburgh.

John Howie relates, General Dalziel met him, when comr his old companion in arms got the better of him—they t side by side at Worcester—and he took him in his arms, -"John, I am both glad and sorry to see you. If I had met te way before you came hither, I should have set you at t now it is too late. But be not afraid, I will write to his r your life."

ial took place, April 16th. He was condemned on his ession that he was at Bothwell, and was sentenced to be the Grassmarket, on Wednesday the 23d. He was preas he laments in his last speech, to petition the Council, delayed his execution till the 30th. On the 30th, the scords further reprieve him:

Paton, in Meadowhead, sentenced to die for rebellion, fter remaining in mosses and moors, to the high contempt of for which he hath given all satisfaction that law requires, till Friday come sen'night, and to have a room by himself, sy prepare more conveniently for death."

w regards this entry so favourable to him, that he is perbishops had not been present when it was made, and that some further favour had been designed. Howie says that Dalziel was good as his word, that he procured a reprieve from the king, but that it came first into the hands of Bishop Paterson, the same whannoyed Marion Harvie in her last hours, who kept it up till it was of no avail.

He was executed on the Friday, May 9, 1684. "He died," say Wodrow, "most cheerfully." When on the scaffold, he handed down his Bible to his wife, Janet Millar, from Eaglesham, whom I married some years after the death of his first. He left her a widowith six children. His oldest daughter was about fifteen.

His testimony is a tersely expressed, soldier-like statement, and i evangelical savour tells how much he had profited under the preacing of his beloved minister, William Guthrie. Its closing paragraphis as remarkable for its beauty of expression as for its undoubting faith in a Covenant-keeping God.

His Bible is at Lochgoin. It is a 24mo, of date 1653. The metrical Psalms at the close are of a much later year, but they were put in by the author of the "Scots Worthies," that he might use the book at Church. Captain Paton's autograph is on the blank side of the title page. The inscription on the inside of one of the board tells its history. It is

"CAPTAIN JOHN PATON'S BIBLE, WHICH HE GAVE TO HIS WIFE FROM OFF THE SCAFFOLD, WHEN HE WAS EXECUTED FOR THE CAUSE OF JESUS CHRIST,
AT EDINBURGH, ON THE 8TH OF MAY 1684.
JAMES HOWIE RECEIVED IT FROM THE CAPTAIN'S SON'S DAUGHTER'S HUSBAND, AND GAVE IT TO JOHN HOWIE, HIS NEPHEW."

At Lochgoin a sword 27½ inches in length is shown as his, but it is light and small, and much rusted. His granddaughter, Annabelle Paton, married Gavin Rowatt, a much esteemed elder in connection with the Reformed Presbytery during the latter half of last century Gavin's eldest son was the Rev. Thomas Rowatt, a faithful and dilingent minister of the Gospel, in Penpont, from 1796 to 1832. In the possession of the minister's nephew, Thomas Rowatt, Esq. of Bonnan hill, Strathaven, is a sword that has been handed down in the family from generation to generation as the Captain's. It is an Andre Ferrara of forty inches in length, and in excellent preservation. It ght, when in the hands of a soldier like Captain Paton, it a formidable weapon.

wie has given a life of him in the "Scots Worthies." It he best in the volume. It contains more traditionary in most of the others. Its close, though somewhat in its language, is a good specimen of Howie's manner.

nother gallant soldier of Jesus Christ came to his end, if whose life, and demeanour at death, do fully indicate of no rugged disposition, as has been asserted of these rers, but rather of a meek, judicious, and Christian compered with true zeal and faithfulness for the cause and ion's King and Lord. He was of a middle stature as ir, strong and robust, somewhat fair of complexion, with ws. But what enhanced him more, was courage and of mind, which accompanied him upon every emergent at though his extraction was but mean, it might be truly that he lived a hero and died a martyr."

Paton was buried in the corner of Greyfriars' churchyard, n the sacred spot where the dust of so many martyrs lies. churchyard his fellow-parishioners, soon after the Revolua monument to his memory. This monument fell down go, but a new one has been erected in its place, and an put on it, written in somewhat fulsome terms, very n the simple yet all the more effective language characemonuments put up to the memory of the martyrs last D.]

HE LAST TESTIMONY of Captain John Paton, who lived in the parish of Fenwick, and suffered at the Grassmarket of Edinburgh, May 9th, 1684.

"DEAR FRIENDS AND SPECTATORS, — You are come here to look upon me a dying man, and you need not expect that I shall say much, for I was never a great orator nor eloquent of tongue, y say as much to the commendation of God in Christ

Jesus as ever a poor sinner had to say. I have been a great sinner as ever lived; strong corruptions, strong lusts, strong passions, : strong body of death have prevailed against me; yea, I have been chief of sinners. I may say, on every back look of my way (though the world cannot charge me with any gross transgression this day, for which I bless the Lord), Oh! what omissions and commissions, wha formality and hyprocrisy, that even my duties have been my grief and fear, lest Thou, a holy God, had made them my dittays [i.e., in dictments], and mayest do. My misimproven time may be heavy upon my head, and cause of desertion, and especially my supplicat ing the council, who have, I think, laid their snares the closer to take away my life, though contrary to their own professed law. to mourn for my giving ear to the counsel of flesh and blood, when should have been consulting Heaven, and to reflect upon myself though it lays my blood the closer to their door; and I think the blood of my wife and bairns; I think their supreme magistrate is not ignorant of many of their actings, but these prelates will not be found free when our God makes an inquisition for blood.

"And now, I am come here, desired of some indeed, who thirst for my life, though by others not desired. I bless the Lord, l an not come here as a thief or murderer, and I am free of the blood of all men, but hate blood shed directly or indirectly. And now I am a poor sinner, and could never merit anything but wrath, and have no righteousness of my own; all is Jesus Christ's, and His alone; and I have laid claim to His righteousness and His sufferings by faith in Jesus Christ; through imputation they are mine; for I have accepted of His offer on His own terms, and sworn away myself to Him, to be at His disposal, both privately and publicly, many times; and, now, I have put it upon Him to ratify in heaven all that I have essayed to do on earth, and to do away all my imperfections and failings, and to stay my heart on Him. And I seek mercy for all my sins, and believe to get all my challenges and sins sunk in the blood and sufferings of Jesus and His righteousness, and that He shall see of the travail of His soul on me, and the Father's pleasure shall prosper in His hand.

"I bless the Lord that ever He led me out to behold any part of His power in the Gospel, in kirk or fields, or any of His actings for His people in their straits. The Lord is with His people while they be with Him; we may set to our seal to this; and while they be united; and oh! for a day of His power in cementing of this dis-

It is sad to see His people falling out by the way, such a fiery spirit, that look to be at one lodging at night, ly these who profess to keep by our glorious Work of Reforand Solemn Engagements to God, and to hold off the sins of Oh! hold off extremities on both hands, and follow nple of our blessed Lord, and the cloud of witnesses in the 1 of the Hebrews. And let your way be the good old path, rd of God and best times of the Church, for if it be not ig to His Word, it is because there is no truth in it.

ow, as to my interrogations:

was not clear to deny Pentland or Bothwell: They asked me g I was at them? I said eight days, and the assize had no sentence upon, for the Advocate said he would not pursue land, by reason of an indemnity before the Privy Council. ne Council asked me, If I acknowledged authority? ority according to the Word of God.

ney charged me with many things, as if I had been a rebel e year 1640, and at Montrose's taking at Mauchline Moor. ord! forgive them, they know not what they do.

adhere to the sweet Scriptures of truth of the Old and New ents, and preached Gospel by a faithful sent ministry, whereby y times communicated Himself to the souls of His people, ne in particular, both in the kirks, and since on the fields, he private meetings of His people for prayer and supplication adhere to our Solemn Covenants, National and Solemn Acknowledgment of Sins and Engagement to Duties, which national.

idhere to our Confession of Faith, Larger and Shorter Cate-Causes of Wrath, and to all the testimonies given by His ormerly, and of late, either on fields or scaffolds, these years in so far as they are agreeable to His Word, and the practice orthy Reformers, and holy, pure zeal, according to His rule. idhere to all our glorious work of Reformation.

ow, I leave my testimony, as a dying man, against the horrid on of our Lord's prerogative and crown-right; I mean that acy, established by law in these lands, which is a manifest on of His crown, for He is given by the Father to be head to 1rch; 'And He is the head of the body, the Church; who eginning, the first-born from the dead, that in all things He might have the pre-eminence: 'For it pleased the Father, that Him should all fulness dwell' (Col. i. 18, 19); and against a Popery, Prelacy, and Erastianism, and all that depend on the hierarchy, which is a yoke that neither we nor our fathers were at to bear, which the poor remnant is groaning under this day, by the horrid cruelty rending their consciences by tests and bonds; taking away their substance and livelihoods by fines and illegal exaction plunderings and quarterings, and compelling them to sin, by he ing. joining, and complying with these malicious curates. 'We unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, for ye shut up the kir dom of heaven against men; for ye neither go in yourselves, neith suffer ye them that are entering to go in' (Matt. xxiii. 13).

"I leave my testimony against the Indulgence, first and last, I ever looked on it as a snare, and so I never looked upon them a part of the hopeful remnant of our Church; and now it is sad see how some of them have joined by their deeds in the persecution of the poor remnant, and almost all in tongue persecution.

"Now, I would speak a short word to two or three sorts of folk but I think, if one would rise from the dead, he would not be her by this generation, who are mad upon idols and this world.

"First, These who have joined deliberately with the persecuto in all their robberies and haling innocent souls to prison, death, a banishment. The Lord will not hold them guiltless. They m read what the Spirit of God hath recorded of them in Jude 11 verse and downward, and Obadiah's prophecy.

"A second sort are these who seem to be more sober and knowing; yet, through timorousness and fear, have joined with them all their corrupt courses for ease, and their own things. Do think that these fig-leaves will cover you in the cool of the day. is a hazard to be mingled with the heathen, lest we learn of the their way. Oh! sirs, be zealous and repent. Seek repentance for Christ; He purchased it with His blood; and do your first work ever there was any saving work on your souls, for He will conquickly; 'and who may abide the day of His coming.' Oh! so the noble grace of repentance grows not in every field; many connot get it, though they sought it carefully with tears. Oh! we while it is to-day; the night draweth on, and it may be very dark.

"The third sort are these who have been most tender; and who of us can say, that we have, out of love to His glory, singly lowed Him. Upon examination, we sear we find it not so, but t come far short. We fear we find not Him such as we or He us such as He would. Oh! we may say, 'From the I the head to the sole of the foot there is no place clean.' in cast a stone at another: we are all wounds, bruises, and We must put His work upon Him who is the fountain foul souls, who breaks not the bruised reed, nor quenches king flax. Give Him much ado, for we have much ado for Oh! that there were no rest in our bones because of our sin. : Father's pleasure, that He should see His seed, and the of the Lord prosper in His hand. Oh! that He would ery one of us understand our errors, and seek after the good , followed in the most pure times of our Church, and get in to 1 Jesus Christ, by faith in His righteousness, by imputation ne of His sufferings for sinners, and keep by Him. but at His back; and I beseech you, improve time; it is preien right improven; for ye know not when the Master calleth, ght, or the cock crowing. Dear friends, the work of the day and calls for more nor [i.e., than] ordinary. Oh! be oft at ne, and give Him no rest. Make sure your soul's interest. rdon freely, and then He will come with peace. Seek all the of His Spirit, the grace of love, the grace of holy fear and Oh! but there is much need of this and the promised ow, I desire to salute you, dear friends in the Lord Jesus ooth prisoned, banished, widow and fatherless, or wandering out for Christ's sake and the Gospel's; even the blessing of sufferings be with you all, strengthen, stablish, support, and ou; and the blessing of Him who was in the bush, which, burned, was not consumed, and my poor blessing, be with ow, as to my persecutors, I forgive all of them—instigators, ners, soldiers, privy council, justiciaries, apprehenders, in ey have done to me; but what they have done in despite the image of God's name in me, who am a poor thing without s not mine to forgive them; but I wish they would seek fors of Him who hath it to give; and would do no more wicked-ow, I leave my poor sympathising wife and six small children e Almighty Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, who hath promised father to the fatherless, and a husband to the widow; the widow and orphans' stay. Be Thou all in all unto them, O Lord Now, the blessing of God, and my poor blessing, be with them. An my suit to Thee is, that Thou wouldest give them Thy salvation.

"And now, farewell wife and children. Farewell all friends are relations. Farewell all worldly enjoyments. Farewell sweet Scrip tures, preaching, praying, reading, singing, and all duties. An welcome Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. I desire to commit my sou to Thee in well-doing. Lord receive my spirit.

" Sic subscribitur,

"JOHN PATON."

James Nisbet.

AMES NISBET belonged to Highside, a farm in the neightourhood of Darvel, in the parish of Loudon, Ayrshire. He was related to John Richmond of Knowe, who was executed March 19, 1684, and he had come to Glasgow to be present at the funeral, when he was recognised by Lieutenant Nisbet, a cousin of his own, and apprehended. He was carried to the guard-house, where the usual questions were put, and not giving satisfactory answers, he was sent to prison.

Nothing is known of his trial except the brief notice he gives of it in his testimony. The chief ground of his condemnation, he says, was that he discounded the authority of the government.

From the note of the compilers, at the close of his testimony, it appears that he experienced much ill-usage when in prison, and it was with difficulty he got his last testimony written. "He died," says Wodrow, "in much peace and full assurance. And they saw good to execute him a little out of the town, and not at the Cross, which very little diminished the confluence."

The parishioners of Loudon have erected a monument to his memory in Newmilns churchyard. There is one also over the place where his remains lie in Castle Street, Glasgow. The inscriptions on both are in the Appendix.—Ep.]

NATIONAL PROPERTY OF THE PROPE

HE LAST TESTIMONY of JAMES NISBET, who lived in the parish of Loudon, and suffered in Glasgow at the Howgate Head, June 5, 1684.

"Now I am brought hither this day, to lay down my life for the testimony of Jesus Christ, and for asserting Him to be Head and King in His own house, and for no matter of fact that they have against me.

re, dear friends and all true lovers of Zion's cause, if I could beak or write anything to the praise and commendation of y Lord and princely Master, Jesus Christ, King and Head s own Church and people, although the most part of the his generation is counting it death to call Him so, yet I, as man, live and die in the faith of it, that He shall appear to nfusion, and for His own glory now trampled upon, and low; for He has said, 'I am the Lord, that is My name; glory will I not give to another' (Isa. xlii. 8).

w I am to lay down my life, and indeed I do it willingly, by constraint; and I bless Him that ever He carved out my as to be a sufferer for Him, who am such a poor, unworthy For if I would have acknowledged a mortal man to be sumight have redeemed my life, viz., C[harles] S[tuart] to me over all causes civil and ecclesiastic, as they have now ip, which belongs to no mortal man upon earth, and to have or him. And shall I pray for that man, in his person and ent, who hath broken down the work of the Lord, and has e the sanctuary of our Lord, who was given of the Father, uid, 'And hath put all things under His feet, and gave Him head over all things to the church' (Eph. i. 22); and in nd Psalm? Now I say, it is for the hope of Israel, and a or the name of Jesus Christ, of which hope I am not ashamed. nvite all who love His name, and the welfare of Zion, to im, for I may set to my seal to it, that He is a good master o will come to Him; for I may say, He has been good to has letten me see a sight of my sins and a sight of the remedy has purchased by His blood, and through His death, to me, born an heir of hell and wrath by nature; but glory be to

His great name, who has made me free from my sin, and made me as if I had never sinned; O glory and praise be to Himself. But what shall I say? for heart cannot conceive, hand cannot write, tongue cannot express! for surely if I could say anything to the praise and commendation of my lovely Lord Jesus Christ, I have many things for which to do it.

- "1. For that, that He has not letten me deny His truths and cause, and His persecuted work; for there is nothing in me, as I am of myself, but I might have been amongst these that have displayed a banner against God, and have made the blood of His people to run in the streets, and have dyed their garments with their blood.
- "2. That He has carved out my lot to be in a land where He has set up His pure ordinances, both in doctrine, worship, discipline and government; for indeed he might have trysted [i.e., appointed] it to be amongst these that are worshipping antichrist, that whore of Rome, whose sentence may be read, Rev. xix. 2. And if C[harles] S[tuart] has not overturned His work, and corrupted the whole land, by overturning the whole fundamental laws, both civil and ecclesiastic, I leave it to any judicious person, that is not biassed and drawn away by that woeful Erastian Supremacy, which is like to overspread the whole land.
- "3. That He hath given His word for a rule to walk by, which word is truth, and the true Word of God. He has made me to walk by it, and it to be my rule; and by His Word and Spirit bearing witness with my Spirit, making me spotless and clean; and I shall be clothed with these robes of His righteousness, which are spotless and clean.
- "Now I shall only give a short account of my principles, as the Lord shall assist; and the Lord help me to get it done in truth and sincerity; for there are many eyes looking on me; the eyes of an all-seeing God, who is of purer eyes than that He can behold iniquity, and the eyes of men who are thirsting for my blood.
- "1. I adhere and sweetly set to my testimony to the covenant of redemption, betwixt the Father and the Son, made before the foundation of the world, for the redemption of poor lost mankind. I mean of these who are elected, called, justified, and sanctified; for which my soul shall bless the Lord that ever I heard tell of the same, and that ever I heard tell that He came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief.
 - "2. To the sacred Scriptures; that they are the true Word of God, sere is life everlasting to be had in them, if ye will apply to search diligently, and pursue after them with a sincere it seeking, with all the soul and heart; and without sincere ing to make it your rule, there is no life; for, says our ord, 'I came not to destroy the law, but to fulfil it.'

- the work of Reformation; as it was reformed in all the ps thereof from under Popery, Prelacy, and Erastianism, ter errors whatsomever, not agreeable to the Scriptures, the ord of God.
- o the Confession of Faith, the Sum of Saving Knowledge, for Worship and Discipline, and to our Catechisms Larger er.
- s were engaged unto the Lord; and Scotland may bless hat ever He engaged them in a covenant with Himself. I that desire to own the same, make it your ground to plead ord, till He come back again to these lands.
- o the preaching of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, faithfully preached by faithful ministers, called and comd, and sent by Himself; and also my testimony to the Igment of Sins and Engagement to Duties, and the Causes d's Wrath against this land this day. But alas! it may be have gone backward, and not forward; the most part of ation have refused to walk any more with Him, ever since only these two, viz., Mr D[onald] C[argill] and Mr R[ichard], which I desire to set to my seal to the faithfulness of men's doctrines, for my soul has been refreshed by them. to my seal to all their proceedings and actings in the work called to, and my soul blesseth the Lord that ever I heard ch.
- to all the appearing in arms, in defence of the Gospel, and te, both before Bothwell and since.
- o the Excommunication at the Torwood, by Mr D[onald] as it is just and lawful, and will stand in force and record, sentance make it null, of which there is little appearance.
- 'o the testimony given at Rutherglen, May 29, 1679; the n given at Lanark, January 12, 1682, by a party whom the ed and stirred up by His Spirit, and owned them in that ive a public testimony against that soul destroying and land ling called the Test, although many in this generation be pleading for the lawfulness of it, and disowning the Covenant, which we were all bound to. Qh! my heart trembles to think what will come on this generation, for their dreadful apostacy and departing from the way of the Lord.

- "10. To all the fellowship meetings of the Lord's people, for reading, praying, and singing of Psalms, and all the other duties proper for, and incumbent upon them. I mean these that desire to wrestle and hold up the case of His ruined work, and his poor suffering remnant.
- "11. To the eight articles, called the New Covenant, taken at the Queensferry off worthy H[enry] H[all].
- "Now as I have left my testimony in short to the truths of God, so I desire to leave my testimony against the defections of the time, as the Lord shall help and assist. Therefore,
- "1. I, as a dying witness, leave my testimony against Popery and Prelacy, which is so much countenanced and set up in Scotland this day, especially by those who seemed to be most eminent, as it is in Gal. i. 6, 'I marvel that ye are so soon removed from Him that called you into the grace of Christ, unto another Gospel.'
- "2. Against Quakerism, Independency, and all other errors which are not according to the Word of God, and our solemn Covenants and Confession of Faith.
- "3. Against the tyrant upon the throne of Britain and Ireland, for his tyranny, oppression, and bloodshed, and for overturning the laws, both civil and ecclesiastic, and not making the law his rule to be ruled by, but he ruling the law, and not the law him; which is not according to the Word of God, as it is in 2 Sam. xxiii. 3, 'He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God.' Even against that tyrant, and all upholders, aiders, assisters, and maintainers of him. Oh! what will become of this generation for their apostacy and departing away from God?
- "4. Against the Oath of Supremacy, for the setting up of persons as supreme, and following and making them their rule, and not taking the Word of God to be their rule.
- "5. Against that Bond taken in the Greyfriars kirkyard, although there be many that denied it, until the Lord in His own due time made it appear, when the trial came to agreater length; for He has said in His Word, that there is nothing done in secret, but He will have it manifested in the light.
 - "6. Against that Bond called the Bond of Regulation, for their to walk according to the will of men, and not according to of God. Surely it is not according to the practice of the : 'But Peter and John answered, and said unto them, Whether ht in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto dge ye' (Acts iv. 19).

Against the Bond pressed by the Highland host in the west. Oh! what may be said of this generation? It may be have gone away backward from my ordinances, and ye have me the living God, and have hewed you out broken cisterns hold no water.

Against that land-ruining and soul-destroying thing called t.

Against all coming out of prison upon Bond and Caution; r men may say of it, it is a complying with the avowed, and a binding themselves to be the prisoners of men, and prisoners of Jesus Christ.

- . Against all compearing at courts and paying of fines; for es that we have done a fault against them; and also, it s of these as just judges, that are imposing these things; but see what they are, for there is no sober man will get leave d an action there. And can these be called judges, and as judges, who are grassators [i.e., robbers] and land judg-
- Against all Cess and Locality, which is imposed for the earing of the Gospel, and for maintaining bloody and avowed to banish Christ and His Gospel out of the land, and to under, rob, spoil, and persecute the poor people of God; for very narrative of the Act, it is set down for that end, and I to the world; see what is said against it: 'But ye are they sake the Lord, that forget my holy mountain, that prepare a r that troop, and that furnish the drink-offering unto that numherefore will I number you to the sword, and ye shall all bow the slaughter: because when I called, ye did not answer; spake ye did not hear; but did evil before mine eyes, and ose that wherein I delighted not' (Isa. lxv. 11-12).
- Against hearing of curates, because they are wolves and hrust in upon the Lord's people to kill and destroy; and the Indulgence first and last; and against the hearing of nd joining with them, or pleading for them; because they are ered in by the right door, and teach for doctrine the commandments of men. Therefore they are in so far not the ministers of Jesus Christ, but the ministers of men, as it is said: 'Verily I say unt you, he that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbed up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber' (John x. 1) And against all ministers and professors, who are now lying at ease when Zion is in trouble, and are shifting their duty for fear of hazard and are sheltering themselves under the shadow of these avowe enemies, pleading in their favours, and have broken the poor peopl of God, and rent the bowels of the Church; and especially those who appeared once in the fields, to hold up a banner for our lovely Lon and Master Jesus Christ. I shall be a witness against them, if repentance prevent it not.

24

"Now, ye that are the poor wrestling remnant, weary not of the cross of Christ, for He is a good Master, and He sends none a war fare on their own charges, for He will own them in all that he carve out for them. Oh! double your diligence, and give Him no rest til He come back again. As in Isa. lxii. 7, 'And give Him no rest, til He establish, and till He make Jerusalem a praise in the earth.' Oh what will come of poor Scotland, for the horrid iniquities and abomi nations, perjury and bloodshed, and Covenant-breaking? Oh! Scot land's punishment will be sad; but my eyes shall be closed, and I shall not see it, and I am well content, seeing I get my soul for: Now I am afraid God will not know many of this generation that have gone such a dreadful length in defection and backsliding But oh, what shall I say! I shall leave it to Himself to do as He may most glorify Himself, in preserving a seed and remnant to serve Him Now I die in the faith of it, that He has a seed whom He will have preserved when He sends forth instruments with slaughter weapons that He has a party that He will set a mark on, as it is said in Ezek ix. 4: 'And the Lord said unto him, go through the midst of the city, through the midst of Jerusalem, and set a mark upon the fore heads of the men that sigh and that cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst thereof.'

"Now I say, weary not of the cross of Christ, although ye should suffer persecution, for He has said, 'In the world ye shall have tribulation, but in me ye shall have peace.' And oh! but He taketh exact notice what is done to His people: 'Thou shouldst not have entered into the gate of my people in the day of their calamity; yea, thou shouldst not have looked upon their affliction in the day of their calamity, nor have laid hands on their substance in the day of their

y' (Obad. 13). Oh! but that be a sweet word: 'It is a saying, for, if we be dead with Him, we shall also live with if we suffer with Him, we shall also reign with him; if we Iim, He also will deny us' (2 Tim. ii. 11-12). Oh, sirs! t heaven for Mammon, and your own souls for what ye can It is true none can merit heaven by their sufferings, s as true that He has said, 'He that will not forsake all and his cross and follow me, he cannot be my disciple.' here are many will brand me with self-murder, because I have many an offer to go to Carolina upon such easy terms. But as I answer, Self-preservation must stoop to truth's preservation. tre indeed many of this generation who pretend to keep their ease and to be followers of Christ; but I defy any, if they be o a public testimony, but they shall either lose their present ion, or else that which is of more worth, even their immortal nd everlasting salvation.

ow as to the heads of my indictment whereon they have ed me to die, they are mainly these:

My approving of Drumclog and Bothwell, and being at w to be lawful and in the defence of the Gospel, and in ence, which both the law of God and nature allow.

For adhering to the National and Solemn League and int; and they declare before my face that both their king uncil had disowned the Covenant, and had taken that way r Acts of Parliament, and said that they were both unjust and il; and shall such be owned and adhered to, who have dethemselves against King Christ, and have broken His laws, we seated themselves in the room of Jesus Christ, which be no mortal man upon earth, and much less to him who is a and a tyrant, I mean Charles Stuart? And here I, as a witness, leave my testimony against that monstrous beast; Saviour calls Herod a fox, and says, 'Go tell that fox, to-day, and to-morrow, and the third day I shall be per-

And mainly my sentence was, that I disowned their autho-For since they had rejected the Covenant, I was the more disown them to be my judges or governors over the land; ey asserted it treasonable, because I said none of the people would say otherwise. And in plain terms and direct words, them to have any power to rule either in civil or ecclesiastic matters. Also these avowed enemies, who are thirsting for my bloo charged me with going up and down the country plundering ar murdering, and so by their law made liable to punishment, even the loss of my life; but I declare, who am within a little to appe before the righteous Judge, that I never intended to wrong any ma And so it is evident they take away my life upon the account adhering to truth; and I bless the Lord that ever He gave me a li to lay down for Him, and that ever He counted me worthy to he down my life for His persecuted truth. O matchless free grac that is making choice of the like of me, and poor weak things confound the strong, and the poor foolish things to confound the wise!

"Now there are three sorts of folk that I would speak word to:

"The first are these that have begun in the way of the Lord, a seemingly have gone a good length, and when the storm of persection arose, for fear of the rough sea of trouble, have drawn bac Oh, mind that word in Heb. x. 38, 'But if any man draw back, he soul shall have no pleasure in him;' and Rom. viii. 35, 'Who she separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?' and man more places of Scripture.

"A second sort are these who are going on in rebellion again God openly and avowedly, as ye may see in Psalm ii. 1, 4, 5, 'W do the heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing? He the sitteth in the heavens shall laugh: the Lord shall have them in crision. Then shall He speak unto them in His wrath, and vex the in His sore displeasure.' O poor Scotland, that once married aw to the Lord, and now has provoked Him to depart and leave and give a bill of divorcement, as it were! Oh, Scotland he sinned dreadfully, what by Covenant-breaking, bloodshed, lying, a swearing.

"Now a third sort are these who desire to keep their garmer clean, and undefiled with the abounding sins of this generation. (on in the way of the Lord, and fear not what man can do, for I has said, 'Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after the have no more that they can do. But I will forewarn you whom shall fear: fear Him, which, after He hath killed, hath power to co into hell.' I can set to my seal to it, that Christ is a good mast and well worthy the suffering for.

And now I can freely and heartily forgive all men what they done to me, as I desire to be forgiven of my Father which is in n; but what they have done against a holy God and His image :, that is not mine to forgive them, but I leave that to Him to se on as He sees fit, and as He may most glorify Himself.

Now I am to take my leave of all created comforts here. And I rewell to the sweet Scriptures. Farewell reading and praying. rell sinning and suffering. Farewell sighing and sorrowing, sing and weeping. And farewell all Christian friends and rela-

Farewell brethren and sisters, and all things in time. And me Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. Welcome heaven and evergious and praise, and innumerable company of angels and of just men made perfect. Now into Thy hands I commit wint, for it is Thine.

" Sie subscribitur,

"JAMES NISBET."

that it was with much difficulty he got anything written, and that only now a line and then a line; and hence some petitions which were in the manuscript were left out; which, oped, will be liable to no misinterpretation.

Arthur Tacket.

his seventeenth or eighteenth year when the battle took place at Bothwell Bridge. He left his mother's house on orning of the defeat with arms, in order to take share in the; but he seems to have done nothing further than give his ice, of which he speaks in his testimony, for he soon again relation. The laird of Raploch shortly afterwards heard that he had been at the battle, and had him seized and carried prisoner to Edinburgh.

He seems speedily to have been set at liberty; but he, as an heritor, had some little property, and so, two years afterwards, in his absence, March 1681, he was adjudged to be a traitor. In the beginning of June 1684, he was apprehended, when coming from hearing Renwick at a conventicle at Blackloch.

The Council Registers, July 1, record, "Duke Hamilton informs the Council that Arthur Tacket, now a prisoner, is an heritor, and forfeited for the rebellion." Heritors present at Bothwell were excluded from the act of indemnity. "The Lords leave to the justices to proceed against him according to their sentence of forfeiture." Under July 22, Arthur Tacket "confesseth before the Council that he was in the rebellion at Bothwell, and lately with the rebels who were in arms in the shire of Lanark. The Lords ordain him to be questioned by torture to-morrow at nine of the clock, before the committee for public affairs." Tacket would not tell who had been the preacher at Blackloch, or whom he had seen when there, and hence the order that he be put to the torture.

When he was brought before the committee for torture, the Advocate assured him, in the name of those present, that if he would be ingenuous and free upon all that was to be asked, what he said should never militate against himself or another man. Tacket boldly answered that he could not credit them, since they had broken their promises, oaths, and subscriptions to God and man; and he could not think they would press him so much to declare who preached, if they were to make no use of what he said. On this the hangman was ordered to open the Boot, and he laid his leg in it. man was about to proceed with the torture, when the surgeon present desired him to wait a little. The surgeon then took the Advocate aside, and told him that from Arthur's youth, and the slenderness of the limb, a few strokes would crush it in pieces, and since they were determined to take his life, and nothing would likely be got out of him, it would be better not to proceed. Upon this statement the Advocate ordered the thumbkins to be brought, which he heroically endured without making any disclosure. The sentence which the Lords of Justiciary passed upon him was "that Arthur Tacket, being upon the 21st of March 1681, found guilty, by an assize, of being in the rebellion 1679, and adjudged to be demeaned and executed # a traitor when apprehended, he being now apprehended, the Lords him to be hanged at the Grassmarket, Wednesday, July 30, two and four in the afternoon."

ne close of his Testimony, Arthur Tacket alludes to an allebrought against Renwick by his enemies, that he was not called and ordained to the ministry. In the Informatory tion, this allegation is examined and set aside. It is said, he went abroad there was no hope of ordination here in l to any who agreed with us, neither could it be safely sought In the next paragraph, while vindicating the classes of en, the anti-sectarian and Catholic nature of the principles the societies very plainly appears. "Though the classes of en, by whom he was ordained, differ from the Reformation and in her best times, in some things; yet considering, (1.) hese differences they were never reformed, and so cannot be therein with defection; (2.) that they agree with the true erial Church of Scotland, in all principles against Popery, Erastianism, and all heretical and sectarian errors; (3.) that I then object nothing against our present Testimony; (4.) y come under a general, and, far other consideration, being ign church, than ministers of the same original church, and le same bond of Covenant with ourselves; for which cause, with them in that act of ordination, came under another conin; (5.) that in the act of ordination they did obtrude none differences, but did take him engaged to teach according to rd of God, and the Confession of Faith of the Church of l, and the discipline thereof. Upon all which considerations lought lawful to accept of ordination from the foresaid classes, ly seeing these differences were before them, and plainly and urly protested against, which was sufficient in the circum-It is then shown that no Cocceian took part in his ordinaly Cocceian was understood one who denied the moral on of the fourth commandment upon Christians under the Cocceius, or John Koch, was Professor in Leyden, stament. His opinions on the Moral Law have been long 1, but his name still lives as the representative of the class of tators who seek to find Christ everywhere in the pages of the tament.

Labadeans were the followers of John Labadie, originally a out who renounced Romanism, and became a zealous Proastor. He seems to have been volatile by nature, and soon adopted opinions on the insufficiency of Scripture as a rule to man, without particular revelations from the Holy Spirit, that led him to decline subscription to the French Confession of Faith, when called to minister to a congregation in Middleburg, in Holland. After his death in 1674, his flock removed to Friesland. As Friesland is the adjoining province to Groningen, Renwick's enemies fancied that Labadeans must have been concerned in his ordination.—Ed.]

HE LAST TESTIMONY of ARTHUR TACKET, tailor in Hamilton, who suffered in the Grassmarket of Edinburgh, August 1, 1684.

"Being appointed to die in the Grassmarket, I thought it was a duty lying upon my conscience before the Lord, to leave this short word of testimony behind me, in testification of my close adherence to all these controverted truths, as they are all agreeable and conform to the written Word of God.

"And now I desire to bless His name with my whole heart and soul for this, that ever He made choice of the like of me, such a poor, weak, feekless [i.e., worthless] insignificant thing as I am in counting me worthy to suffer for His noble cause and controverted truths, His name, interest, and Covenant, now controverted and brought in debate by this God-daring, Christ-dethroning, and God-contemning, adulterous, and bloody generation wherein my lot is fallen. And this I can say, that through His grace, I am well satisfied and heartily content with my lot, that God, in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to carve out unto me. And through His grace I am well helped to great quietness, calmness, and serenity of mind before the Lord, and a holy submission to what is His will towards me in this; that if every hair of my head and every drop of my blood were a life, I would willingly lay them down for my lovely Lord and Master, Jesus Christ.

"Some will possibly say that this is an untruth, and so cannot be believed by them, notwithstanding of all this. But whether it be believed or not, it is true; for I am not dying by constraint and igness; for this I dare say in His sight (my conscience bearing ness), that I am a thousand times more willing to die this day lovely Lord and Master's noble cause, and controverted truths, er I was to live; and the truths of God that are so much coned, are become more precious and clearer unto me at death, er they were heretofore in my life: as David says, Ps. xxiii. 4, th I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort This I have been made really sensible of, by my experience hat I have met with, that the cross of Christ has been all over with love, that it has been made to become like unto a roses unto me; and all that ever I have met with, first and s been made sweet and easy unto me, and no trouble in the nd that He has been a loving and a kind Lord unto me, and been as good as His word. This I can say to His comion, and to the commendation of the cross of Christ, that He ne always the heavy end of the cross Himself, that to me it trouble in the least.

h praise, praise to the riches of His free grace, for His match-I unexpressible love that I have met with since I was brought n; and when I was sorest put at, and threatened with torture e cruel and bloody tyrants, the more of His love and kindness This I have been made really sensible of, when I leet with. dest dealt with, as David says, 'Blessed be the Lord, because th heard the voice of my supplications. The Lord is my 1 and shield; my heart trusted in him, and I am helped; e my heart greatly rejoiceth' (Ps. xxviii. 6, 7). For I have ell helped and owned of the Lord, and that in a very singular , that His presence has made my soul to sing and rejoice the greatest of difficulties and trials that ever I was trysted ited] with.

nd this is a sweet promise and noble encouragement for me xli. of Isa. verse 10-13, 'Fear thou not, for I am with thee; dismayed; for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee: yea, I p thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my isness. Behold, all they that were incensed against thee shall med and confounded; they shall be as nothing; and they that ith thee shall perish. Thou shalt seek them, and shalt not em, even them that contended with thee; they that war thee shall be as nothing, and as a thing of nought. For I the Lori thy God will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear Ecc. I will beip thee.' Which has been well made out unto me in all things that I have met with. For since I was brought to prison I have been well helped of the Lord, that the fear of hell, death, and the grave, and the fear of all things are taken away fully from me, that I am not afraki to venture upon a gibbet for my lovely Lord and Master's noble cause, and for His controverted truths; and this I am really persuaded of, that the truth of God was never so much controverted as now. But I am sure of it, that the truths of God, when they are most controverted, ought to be most zealously owned by His people, I may well acquiesce and assent unto. 'Nevertheless I am continually with thee: thou hast holden me by my right hand. Thou shalt guide me with Thy counsel, and afterward receive me to Whom have I in heaven but Thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire beside Thee' (Psalm lxxiii. 23-25). say in His sight (my conscience bearing me witness), that there is nothing in heaven or in earth so desirable unto my soul as precious Christ; for I am confident and persuaded, that this is His language to me, 'Arise and depart, for this is not your rest, because it is pol-As Paul says, 'For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens' (2 Cor. v. 1). And as Paul says, 'Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption' (1 Cor. xv. 50). I can clearly say by my experience, that through Jesus Christ, whom I desire to take for my King, Priest, and Prophet, and my only Lord and Lawgiver, I have been made more than a conqueror over death, hell, and the grave, and all things in this life.

"Now to come to show you the only head that my sentence of death is founded upon; by men it is mainly for being in arms at Bothwell, which was merely in defence of ourselves, and in defence of the Gospel preached, and standing to the defence of the Covenant of God, which the whole of the land was solemnly sworn and engaged to, with hands lifted up to the most high God, and so bound to stand to the defence thereof. For which I am unjustly sentenced to death by men, of which sentence I am not ashamed this day, but count it my only glory, honour, and dignity, whilst He passed by such tall cedars, which is a matter of wonder and admiration to me. But as He has said in His Word, 'In nothing be ye terrified by your adversaries, which is to them an coken of perdition; but to you of salvation, and that of God; you it is given in the behalf of Christ not only to believe on t also to suffer for his sake.' So suffering is a gift, not given one; and I desire to bless His name with my whole heart, that He has counted such a poor thing as I am, worthy of suffering.

w, this is to let you all know, worthy and dear Christian friends, desiring to keep the way of the Lord, that there was not one all they interrogated me upon, in the sentence of death that pody tyrants passed against me; but only for being in arms vell Bridge. And let none think that I am sentenced to on that head (that I was so cruelly threatened with torture bloody tyrants for), which was for being at the Blackloch, tuse I would not declare who was the minister, and what knew. And although men have, by a permissive and limited issed a sentence of death against me, to take away my natural I know, and am persuaded of, that there is a judge above passed a sentence of life in heaven unto my soul this day, all never be recalled or ranversed [i.e., reversed] again, which ly encouragement; and this He has promised to as many as 1 Him, to give them everlasting life. These that suffer with .ll reign with Him; and these that be dead with Him, shall with Him. As Paul says in Rom. x. 9-11, 'If thou shalt vith thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine it God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the onfession is made unto salvation. For the Scripture saith, ver believeth on Him shall not be ashamed,' which is my fort, and a noble, sweet encouragement for me; and this promised in His Word, 'that He shall feed His flock like a ; He shall gather the lambs with His arm, and carry them som, and shall gently lead those that are with young.' I id by my experience, that the Lord my God has sweetly and I me through the greatest of difficulties that I have been i.e., visited] with, since He made choice of me to suffer for Oh! if ye knew what of His love I have met with, sweet ingredients of the Lord's matchless love have been d and put in my cup, ye would not be afraid to venture sweet cross of Christ, which has been made sweet and easy ECAUSE the heads of truth he gives his testimony to, and the defections he witnesseth against, are much the same with the preceding testimonies; therefore, to avoid all impertinent repetition, they are omitted. He is both full and accurate, passing by nothing of the heads of sin and duty, which at that time were controverted; particularly (which hath not been met with in any of the former) he gives his hearty testimony to that faithful and called mini ster of Jesus Christ, Mr James Renwick, for his holding up the fallen down banner of our Lord, and jeoparding his life in the open fields although some are pleased to say, that he is not lawfully called an ordained to the ministry, but that he was admitted by the Erastia ministers of Holland, such as Cocceians and Labadeans; but it is faithfully witnessed, that he was admitted without them, and by the purest of the ministers of the Church of Holland, according to the Church of Scotland's discipline and government, Covenants, and Con fession of Faith. And he dies with a spirit of meekness, declaring tha he forgives his enemies all the wrongs they had done him, personally considered, though witnessing against the indignities which they have done to Christ, and him as a member of that body whereof Christ's the head. And whereas he was branded with disowning magistrates he declares before God and the world that he owns and allows of all magistrates, superior or inferior, as they are conform to the writter Word of God, and our Solemn Covenants, and as they are a terro to evil-doers, and a praise to them that do well.

Thomas Robertson.

HOMAS ROBERTSON was a native of a parish somewhere in the south of Scotland. In his testimony, he says he had been a hearer of curates. Under their ministry he received no profit, but came away from hearing them with more hardness of heart than when he went. Ere long, he came to the conclusion that were not right with him, and, learning that in the place where there were some hearers of the persecuted Presbyterian s, he, though they were strangers to him, made bold to tell to one of their number. The result was, that he was taken he heard a sermon that left on his mind a conviction of the his former courses. Henceforward he ceased to wait on the of the curates. However, he soon found it prudent to flee gland, where he resided for sometime in Newcastle.

the oath of allegiance was tendered to him, which he and he was thrown into prison. By some means or other ed, and got to Edinburgh, where, at a rigorous search, made imber 29, 1684, in consequence of the publication of the tic Declaration against informers and intelligencers, he was nded. He was brought before the Council, and was speedily I by the usual questions. The Council remitted him to the Justiciary.

trial, along with that of nine others, took place on December lthough it was impossible that he, and the others tried with ald have had any share in the drawing up the Apologetic tion, they were indicted upon the charge, "that upon the October last bypast, they did emit a most barbarous and proclamation."

trial was continued till next day. In the course of the trial, e accused were dismissed on renouncing the Declaration, but Robertson, and George Jackson, and James Graham, whose ies follow in a later part of the volume, and Thomas Wood, ought in guilty, and sentenced to be hanged that day, er 9, 1684, at the Gallowlee, betwixt two and five in the n.

Apologetic Declaration was the natural result of the cruel s of the government. A "proclamation against rebels" had used July 22, 1684, in which the king is made to assert that archy had devolved upon him by God alone, and at the same the sheriffs and subordinate officers of government are when any of the persecuted appeared in their jurisdictions, ogether the lieges, to raise the hue and cry against them, and e them until caught. On August 1, 1684, the officers of the re empowered to call for and examine all persons as can give ormation respecting the so-called rebels.

ne general meeting of the United Societies, in October 15, of their way," and to deter them from acting as spies, as well as to vindicate themselves from false charges, to issue a public declaration. James Renwick was commissioned to draw it up. It was published October 28, 1684, under the title of "The Apologetic Declaration and Admonitory Vindication of the true Presbyterians of the Church of Scotland, especially anent Intelligencers and Informers." It will be found in Wodrow, and it forms part of the Informatory Vindication. It declares:

"As we utterly detest and abhor that hellish principle of killing all who differ in judgment or persuasion from us, it having no bottom upon the Word of God or right reason; so we look upon it as a duty binding upon us to publish openly unto the world, that, forasmuch as we are firmly and really purposed not to injure or offend any whomsoever, but to pursue the end of our Covenants, in standing to the defence of our glorious work of Reformation and of our own lives; yet we do hereby declare unto all, that whosoever stretch forth their hands against us, while we are maintaining the cause and interest of Christ against His enemies, in defence of our covenanted Reformation, by shedding our blood . . . and all intelligencers, together with all such as raise the hue and cry after us we say all and every one of such shall be reputed by us enemies to God and the covenanted work of Reformation, and punished as such according to our power and the degree of their offence." To guard against individual efforts among their followers to take the law into their own hands, it is added, "Finally, we do hereby declare that we abhor, condemn, and discharge any personal attempts upon any pretext whatsomever, without previous deliberation, common or competent consent, without certain probation by sufficient witnesses, the guilty persons' confession, or the notoriousness of the deeds themselves."

It will be noticed that the testimony of Thomas Robertson is somewhat out of the chronological order that has been followed since that of David Hackston of Rathillet, page 39. This is the case also with the short account of John Dick, and the testimony of Thomas Harkness, and his fellow-sufferers. All, however, are within the year 1684.—ED.]

HE LAST SPEECH and TESTIMONY of Thomas Robertson, who lived at Newcastle, and was put in prison there, for refusing the oath of allegiance, and having made his escape thence to Edinburgh, was taken at a public search there, November 29, 1684, and suffered at the Gallowlee, the 9th day of December thereafter.

ow, DEAR FRIENDS,—Time seems to me to be but short; oh! elcome long eternity. It is, and has been the butt of my this considerable time, to eye God's glory, and I preferred it own soul's salvation; yet, when I heard my indictment, it had re effect upon me; and although death hath sometimes been my for the cause of Christ; yet it seemed not a little terrible unto 1 that for the space of six or seven hours; so that sometimes such a prevalency, that I was afraid I should have turned back; vas so put to it, that I had nothing to hold by but former purand determinations; and from the consideration of Christ's ness, I grappled like a man more than half-drowned. old—a small hold of Him whom I could not see. And that rip which I got through His mercy, I kept until I got more; now He has discovered Himself unto me, and He was pleased and make with me a new contract; so that now, through His I am resolved not to let Him go, let the cost be what it will. ow, my friends, I say not this for the discouragement of it is beginning to follow Christ, or any that is already begun; do it as a warning. I would fain have poor things to make ork, and to get sure hold of Him; for although He seems to Himself, and that when poor things think they stand in most ret He will return unto them, in His own appointed time, at for the greater advantage of them that are thus trysted ed].

th! for hearts to love Him! It hath been my great trouble, could never love Him much, nor fall upon the right way of sping Him. Oh! to have my soul soundly knit to Him. Oh! ength. Oh! for strength to be carried straight and cleanly 1, so that I may lose neither hair nor hoof of the truths of Christ. In so far as I am able to understand, it hath been my great care always to know what was sin, and what was duty. I think I have not been out of my duty in so doing; and I think it is the duty of all persons to be concerned in that matter; for how can persons know how to avoid the one, and cleave to the other, except they distinguish betwixt the two. Now, I shall say no more to that, but only, oh! that folk would make it a great part of their work, to distinguish betwixt the two.

"Now, I adhere to the covenant of redemption betwixt the Father and the Son, before the foundation of the world, for redemption of poor things that He has chosen out of the world. O! for love to Him! oh for love to Him! O! now to be with Him, that I may experience the benefit of that Covenant which cost Him His precious blood! And now, seeing He is calling me to give a testimony, I think, if every hair of my head were a man, it is all too little to lay down for Him. O for love to this nonsuch Jesus Christ!

"I adhere and leave my testimony to the Word of God, the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, by which I must be judged; for if we take any other way, we will be sure to go wrong, for the Spirit of God witnesseth with our spirits, that the Word of God is the only rule by which we ought to walk.

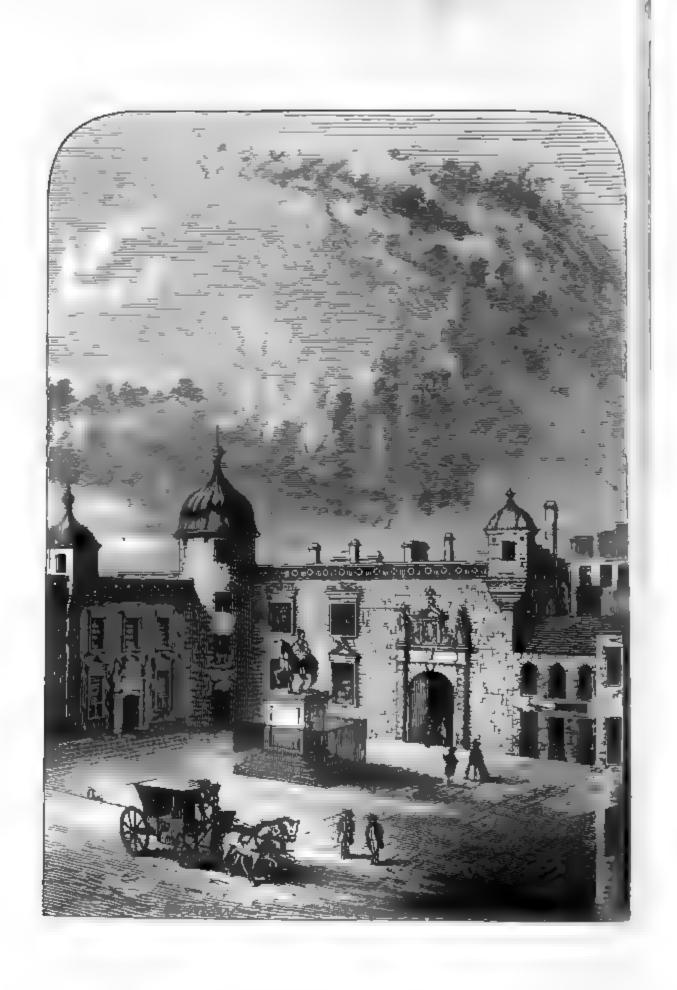

"I leave my testimony to the Work of Reformation, once glorious in our land; although, alas! now defaced, and the hedge and government of Christ's house broken down; and the kingly office of Christ usurped by a cruel and blood-thirsty man, to whom I could wish repentance, if it were the will of God; and to all that associate and join with him; but alas! I think it is hid from their eyes.

"Now, I leave my testimony to the National and Solemn League and Covenant, Confession of Faith, Larger and Shorter Catechisms, Sum of Saving Knowledge, and the several parts of Reformation to this day of my death.

"Also, I leave my testimony to all the faithful ambassadors, and sent servants of Jesus Christ, and to the preached Gospel itself; to Mr Donald Cargill, that worthy servant of Jesus Christ, who kept up the standard and banner of Jesus Christ, when the rest fled from Him, and the Lord's standard. Also, I leave my testimony to Mr James Renwick, as a faithfully and lawfully ordained and called servant of Jesus Christ.

"And I leave my testimony to all the testimonies of the faithful martyrs and witnesses of Jesus Christ, that have laid down their lives the cause of Christ, and are banished to foreign lands for the e of Christ, and His most noble cause.

OLD PARLIAMENT HOUSE, EDINBURGH.

- 'And, also, I disown, disclaim, and witness against all this evil adulterous generation—a generation of revolters, backsliders, evil-doers, that will meet with severe punishment, great wrath and ments, and eternal death besides, except they repent.
- 'And now, in a special manner, being convinced of my sin and in adhering to Prelacy, and spending the most part of my time earing of curates, and thereby approving of them and their corions, and corrupt doctrines; notwithstanding that I came always , from hearing them with more hardness of heart than when I t to hear them; but at last I began to consider that matters were right with me in this case, and hearing that there was a people e place that were hearers of Presbyterian ministers, but not being ainted with them, I knew not what to do to be acquainted. rever, I presumed to tell my case to one of them, who took me ne place where I heard a Presbyterian minister preach, which left nviction upon my conscience of my former courses, and that I out of the way of the Lord for salvation and eternal life. th time I went no more back to follow them that are in direct sition to the way of the Lord, our Covenants, and work of Reation; and by degrees came to see clearly, that the ministers were most even-down for God, and against the defections and ninations of the time, and this adulterous generation, were only that the Lord honoured with the revealing of His secrets and mind concerning the duty of the day; as Mr Donald Cargill, these that were faithful to the death, and sealed the cause with And oh! how did I love and long to be a witness Him, both against my own former ways and the ways of that ninable Prelacy, which now I hate, and to get leave to lay And now He n my life for Christ and His precious truths. granted me my heart's desire, and I seal this with my blood this is the way of God, and His truth, which I now lay down
- 'Not having time, I shall say no more, but leave my wife to the I guiding of the Lord, and commend Him and His way for her illow, and my love to her and all my dear friends in Newcastle. well, farewell in our blessed Lord Jesus. And welcome Lord s, for whom I suffer, and whose love I long to have in possession. come heaven and holy angels, and the spirits of just men made perfect, through the blood of the Lamb. Welcome Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, into whose hands I commit my Spirit.

" Sic subscribitur,

"THOMAS ROBERTSON."

James Nicol.

AMES NICOL was a merchant burgess in Peebles. He was in arms at the battle of Bothwell Bridge, but had hitherto escaped capture, although he seems to have been in the list of those sought after by the government. He was in Edinburgh, August 15, 1684, and was present at the trial of Thomas Harkness, Andrew Clark, and Samuel M'Ewen, whose Testimonies are given in a subsequent page, where his spirit was roused to anger at the haste with which they were tried and condemned to death.

After the trial he was taking his horse in the Grassmarket to leave for home, when the guard came down with the three martyrs for execution. He delayed his departure, and joined the crowd to witness the execution. As he was coming away, he loudly cried out against the cruelty that had been perpetrated. He was immediately laid hold of and carried to prison. On the 18th, and again on the 19th, he was brought before the Privy Council. On the 20th he says he was before the Justiciary. On the 22d he was indicted for treason, and was finally tried, Wednesday, August 27.

The proof against him was his own confession that he was at Bothwell with arms, that he owns Sanquhar Declaration, and the paper published at Rutherglen. He was hanged that day between two and four in the afternoon, along with William Young from Evandale, a good man, but somewhat crazed in mind, who had been condemned on still less ground; for the chief points in his confession were that he had heard Donald Cargill, and that if he had been old enough he had been at Bothwell. James Nicol's examination must have struck Daniel Defoe; for, in his Memoir of the Church of Scothard Robert Scothard Robert Robert it is given with much the same fulness as in the "Cloud of sses." He calls him another of these sufferers who cannot be ten when we are recording the zeal of the Church of Scotland's rs, who, in imitation of the primitive zeal of the first centuries, I himself to the sacrifice, without any one laying hand on nuntainhall's notice of James Nicol is very different from De-It is: "15th August,—Three of the rebels taken at Enterkin iced to be hanged; the Council resolves, that any condemned othwell, disowning the king's authority, or any other treason, be allowed but three hours, and [be] executed the same day ice is pronounced. At their execution there was one Nicol g on (he was once a chapman, and had been at Bothwell), ried to the hangman he would do him a mischief; who being was examined, boldly disclaimed the king, owned the Coveand was condemned to be hanged, 27th ditto, for his being at rell."

r Livingstone, mentioned by James Nicol, was John Livingstone, I known from his connection with the revival at the Kirk of . John Howie has a life of him in the "Scots Worthies." The he had in bringing home Charles II. from Holland in 1650, is etailed by himself in his "Brief Historical Relation of his own in the Wodrow Society's Select Biographies.

charles II. was crowned at Scone in 1651. It is a discourse table for its boldness, and the utterance of constitutional printhat must have been extremely distasteful to a monarch so f arbitrary power as Charles soon proved himself to be. The n has been several times reprinted. The last occasion seems e been in a 12mo volume of "Several remarkable and valuable ns, Speeches, and Exhortations, at the Renewing and Subscribe National Covenant and Solemn League," published in 1741, preface by Ebenezer Erskine of Stirling.

mes Russel, spoken of in the close of James Nicol's testimony, ed the Societies very early in their history. Michael Shields, in count of the third general meeting held at Tala Linn, Tweeds-June 15, 1682, speaks of him as a man of a hot and fiery

At this meeting he was for suspending Alexander Gordon of oun, because he had accepted the sacrament of baptism to his rom Alexander Peden, and the contention was so hot that the meeting divided, each party taking a different part of the field on which they had met. This divisive spirit Russel kept up. He withdrew from association with Renwick and the great majority of the Societies, and thid his utmost to oppose their measures both at home and abroad.

Mr John Flint was sent out by the Societies to Holland in November 1682, in order to complete his education for the ministry. He went to the University of Gröningen. While there, he quarrelled with Renwick. He did all he could to prevent his ordination, in which he failed, and he ever afterwards continued a bitter enemy to him. He was ordained at Lasswade 1688. After two calls he was translated to the New North Church, Edinburgh, Oct. 25, 1709. He was a correspondent of Wodrow, chiefly on the subject of the Abjuration Oath, about which he had scruples. He was evidently a man of some learning. He assisted, when in Holland, in bringing out the Dutch edition of the "Synopsis Criticorum" of Poole. Boston sent him his "Fourfold State" to revise, and his "Essay of the Accentuation of the Hebrew Bible." Wodrow says, "His book in Latin against Mr Simson as to the process betwixt him and Mr Webster, shows his reading and knowledge of the Arminian controversy, and that he was a pious, warm-hearted, useful minister." He died in his 71st year, Jan. 19, 1730.

It will be noticed that the passages of Scripture quoted are considerably different from the text of the authorised version. They seem to have been quoted from memory.—ED.]

HE TESTIMONY of James Nicol, merchant, Burgess of Peebles, who suffered at the Grassmarket of Edinburgh, August 27, 1684.

His Interrogations before the Privy Council, August 18.

First, I was interrogated by two in a room privately, thus:

Q. "Were you at Bothwell Bridge?

n not bound to be my own accuser.

ot," said one of them, "to desire you; but only say upon word, that you were not there?

n not bound to satisfy you; but prove what you have to ne, and especially you, till I come before my accusers. 1e, 'I am one of them.' Then I answered, 'I was there.' w came you to rise in arms against the king?

ause he has broken the Covenant of the Lord my God.

; the Prelate's death murder?

it was not murder.

- : Hackston's death murder?
- .t it was, indeed.

w dare you own the Covenant, seeing the king gave n it by the hand of the hangman?

I dare own it; for although ye should escape the hand doing, yet ye shall all pay for it, ere all be done, and As for me, I would not do it for the whole earth.

was interrogated by other two, who asked some frivos which I baffled to silence.

was brought in before the bloody crew.

ow, sir, "said they, "Do ye own the king's authority? vn all things that the precious Word of God owns in less all faithful magistrates.

do you not own King Charles also?

are not for a world; because it is perjury; for he has iself in a high degree, and that in doing all things con-Vord of God, and Confession of Faith, and Catechisms shorter.

ow ye to whom ye are speaking?

ow I am before men.

uid one of them, "ye are speaking to the Chancellor and Council, sir.

sid I, "I have told you already that he has unkinged so have you degraded yourselves from being princes.

he king were here, what would you say, sir?

now how I ought to speak to the king if he were king. narily said to him, and so to let you know that I am no erroneous in anything, but a pure Presbyterian, and of a olic spirit, I call you 'sirs,' because ye are noblemen by t because ye are my judges.

- C. Will re not say. God bless the king's majesty?
- A. I dire not bless them whom God hath rejected: 'If any man bring another doctrine than ye have received, bid him not God speed, nor receive him into your house,' 2 John 10; and Ps. 10i, near the beginning, says David, 'Their drink-offerings will I not offer, nor take up their very names in my lips' (viz., them that hasten after other gods), and therefore I dare not pray for him.
 - C. "And will ye not pray for him?
- A. "If he belongs to the election of grace, he has a part of my prayers. And also, if he were a king that had kept Covenant with God. I would give him a double share, and make mention of his name: but he is an apostate.
- So, my friends, they looked still one to another at every question and answer.
 - C. * How old are you, sir?
 - A. "I am fifty-one years.
- C. "How dare you own the Covenants, seeing we have burk them by the hand of the hangman?
- A. "I dare own them upon all perils whatsoever to the utmost of my power, all the days of my life." And with that they smiled and laughed one to another, and to me, and said, 'My days were near an end.' I said, 'I am now in your power, but if ye take my blood, ye shall take innocent blood upon yourselves, as in Jer. xxvi. 14, 15, "As for me, I am in your hand; do with me as seemeth good and meet unto you; but know for certain, that if ye put me to death ye shall bring innocent blood upon yourselves, and on this city and the inhabitants thereof.' And as for me, if ye take my blood, it is as innocent blood as ever ye did take, for I did never wrong any man to this day.

Q. "Do you go to the Church?

A. "I went aye to the Church where I could get any faithful minister to go to: but for your Prelates' kirks, and Baal's priests, I never heard any of them, nor ever intend to do, if I were to live an hundred years.

"But (said they) ye shall not live long now, sir. How do ye prove by the Scripture what you say against Prelates?

A. "By many Scriptures, 'The kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them, and they that exercise authority upon them are called benefactors; but it shall not be so among you: but he that is greatest among you, shall be the servant of all;' not like your glutton, belly-god Prelates, who are riding in coaches in great at they would not suffer me to speak more, nor cite more asked several questions which I have not got memory of; rord I said, concerning the tyrant, "He was brought home ingstone and others, and put in a nobler estate than any; whole world, crowned a covenanted king with the eternal for him, and to carry on His work and cause, he and all; which if he had continued in, he would have been the ing in all lands and nations in the world, and would have for to all the kings in Europe; but now he hath made himand a reproach to all the nations, so have all you; and ason why I dare not own him nor you either is, because he are robbed Christ of His crown, although it be not in your lo it."

bade take me away to the iron house, and put on the irons ich they did on both my hands, that I could write none ill I got a mean to put them off the one hand.

on Tuesday they called me before them again, being the of this instant.

That say ye the day [i.e., to-day]? Do you adhere to all ye day?

adhere to all and haill [i.e., whole] upon all perils what-

Do ye approve of Bothwell Bridge? es, I do.

o you go to the kirk at Peebles?

o, nor never intend to go there, nor no place else which the perjured Prelates.

) o you own the Covenants?

adhere to every point of them, because they are in short on to the whole sum of Scripture, as the sum of the law is e Lord our God with all our soul, and heart, and mind, ur whole strength, and our neighbour as ourselves:' so it le duty which the Lord requires of me and all men.

.nd how do you reject the king, seeing the Scripture com. to obey him?

declare, that the people make a king, and not the king and that he was received home, and crowned for no other end, but to maintain that interest to the utmost of his power; and no longer to be owned as king, than he did own that wherefore he was crowned; so that we were freely loosed from him, as soon as he played his base pranks, in taking the malignants by the hand, and murdering a prince and a prophet, viz., Argyle, who set the crown upon his head, and Mr Guthrie, who was a godly reformer in our land." Next I said, "What thought they of Mr Douglas, who preached and gave him all his injunctions at Scone?

- "They said to me, He should have been hanged for his pains.
- "But I said, God would be about [i.e., deal] with them all for rejecting the Word of the Lord in these directions.
- Q. "How do ye disown him, seeing the most part both of ministers and professors do pray for him.
- A. "Because the General Assembly at the West Kirk disowned him altogether, till he made a declaration of humiliation for his own sins and his father's. And the Parliament being then sitting at Edinburgh did ratify the Assembly's act, and disowned him till he should do that, which accordingly he did, and so we are loosed freely.
- Q. "Do ye own Airsmoss, Sanquhar, Rutherglen, and Lanark Declarations?
- A. "Yes, I do; because they are agreeable to the Covenants and work of Reformation." And many more questions they asked, which I cannot now particularly remember, but I told them in general that I was against Popery, Prelacy, malignancy and profanity, and all that is against sound doctrine, discipline, worship and government; and all errors whatsomever, which are contrary to sound Presbyterian doctrine, be what they will; for there is none other right, but erroneous, how fair a face soever they have, which shall be found not agreeable to the Apostle's doctrine.
- "And then they read something of which I had said, and questioned if I would subscribe what I had said. I answered, No.
- Q. "Can ye write? Yes, I can write. Then do it, said they: But I said, I would not do it at all.
 - "Now, my friends, I say, these are a part of my interrogations.
- "Again, I was brought before the Justiciary (as they call themselves), on the 20th of this instant, and interrogated thus:
 - Q. "What, now, sir, what think ye of yourself the day?
 - A. "I praise my God I am the same I was.
- Q. "What think ye of what ye said yesterday before the Chancellor and the Council?
 - A. "I hold all, and decline nothing: No, not one ace.

- Q. "Were ye at Bothwell Bridge?
- A. "Yes, that I was.
- Q. "Had ye arms?
- A. "Yes, that I had.
- "One of them said, 'God help you,' And I said, 'I wot [i.e., 10w] not if ye can pray for yourself.' But, said he, 'I wish you better or [i.e., than] ye do yourself.' But I said, No; for ye would have e disown my great Lord, the King of Zion, and obey men, yea, base en, whose breath is in their nostrils, who give out laws and comandments contrary to His.
 - Q. "How dare ye rise in arms against the king?
- A. "It is better to obey God than man, and he is an enemy to od.
- Q. "Would ye rise yet in arms for the Covenants against the ing's laws, if ye had the occasion?
 - A. "Yes, that I would, say the contrary who will, upon all peril.
- Q. "What think ye of yourself in spoiling the country of horse ad arms, sir?
- A. "Sir, I had not the worth of a spur whang [i.e., thong or strap] f any man's, but was mounted of horse and arms of my own.
 - Q. "Where have ye been all this time?
 - A. "Sometimes here and there, in England and Scotland.
 - Q. "Whom have ye conversed with?
 - A. "I was about my business, being a merchant.
- "They said, Ye have been about another business; for ye are bund to be a fugitive and a vagabond.
 - A. "I have been a merchant from my youth.
 - Q. "But where had ye your chamber in this town?
 - A. "I had none these several years.
 - Q. "Where quarter ye in this town?
 - A. "I have not been much in it these seven or eight years.
- Q. "But where were ye the night and the last night before the xecution?
- A. "I was not in town; I came but in at the port [i.e., gate] just when the first was cast over.
- "Then they looked one to another, and whispered together. But hey would fain have had me wronging my landlords in all the parts of the country, and in all burghs; but glory to my Lord, I have vronged none yet, nor yet hope to do, for it was aye my care, and orayer to God earnestly, that I might wrong no man, and that I had names suffer before any were wronged by me, which He has kept me from to this day. Then they read what I had said.

- Community what ye have said?
- A. Na sa
- (). Can pe veite, sir?
- A Yes that I can
- * Well sind they, write down that he can, but will not
- They take the ever six times that my time should not be long and said to me. Where have a minister?
 - A. "I will have none of your Baal's priests.
- THE COURSE have gotten leave, I should have made them abominable to them and also at every question Invould have made them ashamed"

After relating the comsion of his being apprehended, which was thus: he having seen three of his dear Christian brethren condemned before the Justiciary, at ten in the forenoon, and going to the West port to take horse, was obliged to stay till his saddle was mended; when he was remain to mount his horse, he hears that the three men were brought to the place of execution; at two asternoon he went thither, and seeing the barbarity of the enemies in murdering his dear brethren, moved with a strong neal against these murderers, cried out, in the style of the prophet Amos, "A cow of Bashan has pushed three men to death at one push, contrary to their own base laws, in an inhuman way; " he subjoins, " Therefore, cease to kill me with your reproaches when I am dead, as ye did while I was living; for ye laboured to kill and murder my name this many a year, which I forgive you with all my heart, and pray the Lord may forgive you." And having related how that upon the 22d day of August, one brought him his indictment, withal telling him, that upon the 27th he would be sentenced, and go immediately from the bench to the scaffold; he adds—

"Now, my dear friends, I think all I have written is confused, because I could hardly get leave to write two lines, but was either put from it by the keepers, or called from it by one confusion or other, therefore ye must excuse me; but although it be not accurately written, yet there is no error in it. It is what I lay down my life for, and adhere to as the testimony of a dying man, who must very shortly appear before my Lord, and give an account of all that I have done and written. However, my friends, mistake me not, although it be confused, and ye find some things twice over; for there is no more fear on me now, than the quietest time that ever I had, as to what an do to me; although I be sad as to matters betwixt God and twixt my glorious Lord and me, as good cause I have, who it as I do; but I hope, I shall get a glorious outgate [i.e., dece] when His time comes, which I have always waited upon ot mine) for which I bless Him this day."

nat further this martyr wrote in prison, cannot be published as ids, in regard that, he being perpetually interrupted by the s, and having the irons on his hands (as himself testifies) could tit written with that composure which he would. Wherefore, ome of the more remarkable heads of it, mostly in his own

He declares his cheerfulness to lay down his life for the cause ist, and faith once delivered to the saints; admiring the riches free grace of God, in Christ's laying down His life for poor s, and blessing them with such a noble, precious and excellent ig, as to be called the sons of God, which the angels cannot p, though they have been a long time prying into it; and invites to the same exercise of admiring and praising God's love, in g, through the blood of Christ, rebels and enemies, friends and ts.

He rejoices in his lot of suffering, thus, "Oh! but it be an ent thing to be called of the Lord, to lay down my life for Him is glorious interest! To me it is more than all the world: I : prize it. It has been my desire these twenty-four years to nartyr for my Lord, and to witness for Him, if it be His will, at else. I bless my Lord for it, I have subscribed a blank, and in His hand, to do with me whatsoever is the determinate it of His will and decree, and not to call myself.'

He blesses God, that though he would have got his life for what others, whom he calls better than himself, have done, and crown, to hold fast Lord come, which he hoped would be quickly, to himself, and the land.

He testifies his assurance of God's love to him, and his chilwhom he heartily and cheerfully gives away to God, as he had roted them to Him in covenant; he exhorts them in the words ring father, to be for God in their generation, to live in love lity, leaving them to the protection and provision of His God, ag them not to be moved for his sufferings, which he protests ald not exchange for the whole world.

- 5. He charges them all to beware of wronging themselves by reproaching him anent the manner of his being apprehended, showing what a hand of divine Providence there was in it, and blessing God for it, and for the sweet peace he had in suffering.
- 6. He owns himself to have been the greatest sinner upon the earth, and hence takes occasion to magnify the redeeming love of Christ, in calling him effectually, and keeping him in the right way, and from the national sins and corruptions of the age.
- 7. He refers to a list of papers written by him, declarative of his judgment concerning the duty of the day, as a reason, among others, why he wrote no formal testimony in the prison; save only that he testifies, First, generally against all things contrary to any point of truth in the Old and New Testament, or contradictory to the Covenants and work of Reformation; and more particularly. against the sinful silence of ministers in Britain and Ireland, at the command of a bloody, vile, adulterous, perjured tyrant and his underlings; against the indulgences and indemnities; against componing [i.e., compounding or settling] and conforming either with a perjured tyrannical crew of statesmen, or with base, vile, filthy Prelatists, their blind guides, and Baal's priests; against backslidden ministers and professors, who condemned a poor young generation for adhering to truth, for slaying Christ in His members, for pleasing men, and displeasing a never enough exalted and glorious Lord; and, finally, disowns all that is contrary to a Gospel and apostolic spirit.
- 8. He proceeds to warn and exhort all sorts of persons, and more especially the young generation, to repentance and amendment of life, enforcing his exhortation with the consideration of judgments and strokes to come upon the land; upon which head he is exceeding large, founding his assertions upon the threatenings pronounced in the Word against these sins, wherein he demonstrates Scotland, England. and Ireland to have been eminently guilty; interposing withal sweet and ravishing considerations of God's love to him, and to his other suffering witnesses, which, after large and pathetic ejaculations of praises to God for His redeeming love, protesting, that he expects salvation not by any merit, but of free grace, saying, "I have been beginning to pray and praise these thirty-six years, weakly as I could, but yet I am just to begin this night, both to praise and pray; for I lay no more stress upon all that I have said and done, believed and suffered, nor [i.e., than] on a straw, God is my witness; so that I must have salvation upon Wednesday at three or four of the clock, as freely hief on the cross." He winds up in imitation of David, with ords, "And what can poor silly [i.e., feeble] James Nicol say resuming again the consideration of God's wrath against the stir up all ranks to repentance.

er he has concluded his speech with the usual formality of farewell to all his suffering brethren, and all sublunary things, ing and welcoming the heavenly joys, and eternal enjoyment the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, into whose hands he comspirit; he adds, by way of postscript:

ow, dear friends, my Testimony being finished, and I being e borders of eternity, having forgot that which I see a great ty to leave my testimony against, I think it a most concerning cessary duty to leave my testimony against J[ames] R[ussel] I J[ohn] F[lint], because J[ames] R[ussel], and these in fellowth him, have separated themselves from the persecuted suffering it of the Church of Scotland, and Mr J[ohn] F[lint] has taken im, with their consent, to officiate the work of a minister, conthe Word of God; he has run, although not sent of God, nor nor ordained of lawful church members. And now he and we risen up in opposition to God, His cause and persecuted it in the Church of Scotland, calling them all perjured that are g unto death, imprisonment, and banishment for precious

And therefore, I, as a dying witness for Him, even my Lord my only Saviour, who converted me thirty-six years since, and se twenty-four years helped me to pray to Him, to enable me ess against all error, and defection, and has kept me right and to this day of my longed-for desire, do leave my witness and my against Mr J[ohn] F[lint] and J[ames] R[ussel], and all that to them."

John Dick

burgh. He took his degree at the University, and was studying Divinity. In his examination, he says he was not at Pentland, but being discovered to have friends who knew Janes Mitchell, who shot at Archbishop Sharp, July 11, 1668, he found it advisable for a time to leave Scotland. He was not at Drumdot, but was present in arms at Bothwell Bridge.

He was seized at Edinburgh at the information of a poor wome, bribed to tell where he was, and who after his execution lost he reason. He was examined August 29, 1683, and again on the 315, before the committee of public affairs.

He was tried, September 4, before the Lords of Justiciary, and condemned to be hanged at the Grassmarket on the 26th. On September 16, he, with twenty-four others, made his escape from the Canongate Tolbooth, as is narrated in the following note upon Thomas Harkness. The days that immediately followed he seem to have employed in writing his testimony, for its forty-ninth page is dated October 1, 1683.

He was again apprehended on the beginning of March 1684, and on the fourth day of the month was brought before the Lords of Justiciary, and was handed over to the magistrates to be hanged in the Grassmarket next day, between two and four in the afternoon.

Wodrow gives the following letter, written to his father on the morning that he suffered. It says much for his faith and hope:

"DEAR SIR,—This hath been one of the pleasantest nights I have had in my lifetime. The competition is only betwixt it and that I got eleven years ago at Nesbit in Northumberland, where and when, in a barley ridge upon the Saturday's night and Sabbath morning before the last communion I did partake of in Ford Church, the Lord firmly laid the foundation-stone of grace in my heart, by making me with my whole soul close with Him upon His own terms, that is

Him to be my King, Priest, and Prophet, yea, to be my all to renounce my own righteousness, which at best is but rotten id to rest upon His righteousness alone for salvation; as also, myself entirely, without reserve, in soul, body, heart, affected the whole faculties of my soul and powers of my body, to Him disposed at His pleasure for the advancement of His and the upbuilding of my own soul, and the souls of others; g this clause (being conscious to myself of great infirmity) e fountain of free grace and love should stand open for me, and so oft as my case should call for it.

his my transaction with my whole soul, without the least of suspicion of the want of sincerity, which I found had been g in endeavours of that nature formerly, now my blessed Lord me to, or rather made in me, and solemnised that night and g ere I came off that ridge.

confirmed it no less than ten or twelve times, and the oftener ated, the gale continued so fresh and vigorous, that I was to cry, Hold, Lord, for the sherd is like to burst: so that I by dearest Lord is now a-coming, and that the hands of Zerubwho hath laid this foundation, is now about to finish it; and,

He is building very fast, for which my soul blesseth Him, you may join with me in so necessary a work.

hope, ere long, the copestone shall be put on, the result of all shall be praises and shouting to Him that sits upon the throne, the Lamb throughout all the ages of eternity, of long-lasting his, with my earnest prayers while in the body, that the Lord help you to mind His glory, and your own soul's eternal is all the legacy you can expect from him who is both, our affectionate son and Christ's prisoner,

"John Dick.

S.—I hope, ere I come home, to get another sight of you. ne see this till I be in my grave. The Lord gave me to you so I entreat you, be frank in giving me to Him again, and the ee this be, the less cause you shall have to repent."

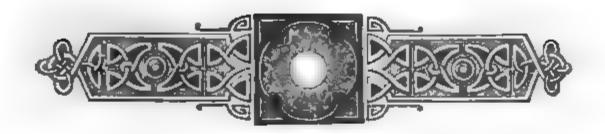

last words he uttered upon the scaffold, as reported in the his Testimony, have the same confidence in the Redeemer: nd now I know, yea, I am firmly persuaded, that my dear ven my exalted and glorified Lord Jesus Christ, will carry me hrough this dark valley and shadow of death, and will receive my soul immediately after I go off this ladder unto glory, where I shall be ever with Him.

Then he said again, crying with a loud voice: "Now when I can hardly get speaking for the rope about my neck, farewell all friends and followers of Christ; and again I say, farewell and adieu all earthly enjoyments." And so, having given the hangman a sign when he would be ready, he prayed a little within himself, and when he had done, he gave the sign, and at the giving thereof, he drew the napkin over his face and cried out, "Farewell all friends in Christ, and into thy hands, O Lord, I commit my soul." So he was turned over. And so ended the life of this faithful and now glorified martyr for Christ. And to God the Father, Son, and Blessed Spirit, be eternal praise and glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

The testimony of John Dick is a quarto of fifty-eight closely-printed pages. It is without a date. It is simply said to have been "printed in the year——." It bears to have been left to a particular friend to communicate to the world after his death, but which was never published "till now, at the desire of some real and sincere lovers of the true peace and welfare of the Church of Scotland."—Ed.]

PON the 5th of March, 1684, suffered that worthy gentleman, Mr John Dick, studentof Theology, whose elaborate and judicious testimony had been here inserted, but that it has been lately published in print by itself, and so is in a great many people's hands already, and the reader may have recourse to the said print for it; which, upon perusal, he will find second to none, for a steady zeal and adherence to the Reformation; an orderly method, pithy and pertinent defences against the cavils of the adversaries, and proper and necessary advices to fellow-sufferers, abating only his adherence to Hamilton Declaration, wherein he seems to differ from the rest of the sufferers of that time; and owning the king's authority, which yet he does in such a limited and restricted sense, as thereby not to own the wicked laws, and exercise thereof; though it is true the reflections and limitations with which he declared his owning it, were such as did noways agree to the tyrant, and consequently it was a real, though not a formal denial thereof. Only in the said printed Testimony, there are several errors of the transcriber, or the press, which the judicious reader will not impute to the author.

Thomas Harkness, Andrew Clark, Samuel M'Ewen.

HOMAS HARKNESS of Locherben, a wild retreat among the hills in the parish of Closeburn, Dumfriesshire, had been attached to the persecuted Presbyterians from his To escape persecution he and his brother James found it prudent to take refuge in Ireland. Here, however, they did not long remain, but returned again to Scotland to their native district, where their enemies soon came to know them, and gave (says Dr Simpson in his "Gleanings among the Mountains") James, the name of "Harkness with the long gun," and Thomas, " Harkness with the white hose." So much was James esteemed, that Claverhouse repeatedly attempted, by means of his emissaries, to gain him over to the royal forces, by the promise of a captaincy, but he remained steadfast. At last he and a number of his friends were, sometime in 1683, surprised by a party of dragoons and carried to Edinburgh. Here they were imprisoned in the Canongate Tolbooth, but on the 16th of September, they and others, twenty-five in all, made their escape. The window of their prison was cross-barred with iron; one bar was cut, but the space was not large enough, and other three had to be removed. This took them a long time and much labour, while they were constantly expecting to be discovered; but, although a sentry paced on the street below (they were on the third storey), the noise of the sawing was never heard. About nine o'clock at night, when the first bar had just been cut, it slipped out of the cutter's hand, and fell on the street. They thought all was now over, but the bar lay on the street all night, till a friend coming past in the morning picked it up, and contrived to get it sent to them. When their preparations were completed, a beam in the floor above them was cut, and its inmates got down. As they were coming out from the window, two friends overpowered the sentinel, and threatened him with death if he spoke. All escaped, and though some of them were strangers to Edinburgh, they got safe away, and not one of them, with the exception of John Dick, was ever again caught. Dr Simpson tells of a visit which James Harkness and his companions made, as they were going homewards, at Biggar, upon the leader of the party who had taken them to Edinburgh; how they made him prisoner; and how, by giving him his life when in their hands, he was won over to their side, and altogether left the ranks of the persecutor. He tells also of a successful disguise that James Harkness assumed when a body of soldiers came to his house under the forced guidance of a neighbouring proprietor. They took him for the servant rather than the master, and the mistake was not discovered until he was out of their reach. It was he who planned the successful rescue at Enterkin Pass in the close of July or the beginning of August 1684, so graphically told by Defoe in his "Memoirs of the Church of Scotland." He lived to survive the Revolution.

There is no reason to believe that, deeply concerned as James Harkness was in the rescue at Enterkin, his brother Thomas had any share in it at all. Some days after Claverhouse and a company of soldiers were searching the neighbourhood, and when in the parish of Closeburn or Dalgerno, they came upon Thomas Harkness, Andrew Clark, Samuel M'Ewen, and Thomas Wood. It is said they were sleeping, and when roused up by the soldiers they were for running away, when they were pursued, shot at, and wounded. the soldiers would not allow to be washed nor dressed. woman, who came and offered her aid to dress them, the soldiers seized and carried prisoner part of the way. They were taken first to Lanark and then to Edinburgh. On the way, they came to a narrow pass where Claverhouse feared he might be attacked, and he ordered the soldiers, as soon as any one appeared in sight, to kill the prisoners, although they had confessed nothing, and nothing had been proved against them.

When brought before the Council, three of the soldiers affirmed that the prisoners were at Enterkin, and that there they had received their wounds. But both of these charges they constantly denied. Thomas Wood was reserved till a later occasion, but his three associates were taken from the Council to the Court of Justiciary that very day. They were charged with high treason, "in as far as in this month of August they had engaged with a party of the king's soldiers; that they did not own the king's authority, or denied it; that they refused to call Bothwell rebellion; that they had conversed with persons put to the horn; and that they had conversed one of them with another, being rebels." Three soldiers affirmed they had snapped guns at them.

as all the evidence brought against them. Nevertheless, the found them guilty of being in arms, and that one of them prea gun to the king's forces, that they had ball upon them, that ad conversed with rebels, denied authority, and fled from his y's forces; and they were sentenced to be hanged at the Grass-t. The sentence was carried into effect with the greatest haste, y were examined before the Council, tried, and executed all in ne day.

trick Walker says, Thomas Harkness was within thirty years of ndrew Clark nineteen, and Samuel M'Ewen seventeen. Andrew was a smith in Leadhills, brother to Adam Clark of Glenim, a anter too, whose escapes from his enemies Dr Simpson has Of Samuel M'Ewen nothing seems to be known further e himself tells in his letter. Both the joint testimony and the are short, but they are remarkable for their cheerful, pious spirit, r the fearlessness with which death is looked forward to. They dded in the third edition. In the first edition, the compilers say, ving to the persecutors' cruelty, leave may not have been got to my testimony, or, if written, it has not come into their hands. xdrow gives the 5th of August, as the date of their execution, he says is the date of the registers, but other papers make it th, the date of the "Cloud," and also that of Patrick Walker. rill be noticed, that the chronological arrangement, characteristic volume, from the Testimony of David Hackston, p. 39, to that n Nisbet, p. 288, which has been slightly departed from in the ony beginning with John Wilson, is again resumed.—ED.]

PON the 15th of August 1684, Thomas Harkness in Locherben, Andrew Clark in Leadhills in Crawford parish, Samuel M'Ewen in Glencairn parish, Thomas Wood in ichael, were all indicted of the crimes of treason and rebellion, ng at the rescue of their dear brethren at Enterkin, for refusing the king's authority, as the same was established by the laws, rd he had usurped Christ's prerogative, and broken the Covend for not praying for him in the terms prescribed by the it, for their maintaining the lawfulness of defensive arms, and for adhering to the covenanted work of Reformation against 18's laws,—as their indictment bears at large.

1

TOTAL TESTIMONY of Thomas Harkness in Localescent Andrew Clark in Leadhills, in Crawford parish, and Shoot at McEwen in Glenckim parish, who were sentenced, and suffered at Edinburgh, August 15, 154

· Tight Friends and Relations whatsomer-The property of the property of this we bless the Lord, visited will be give such a palmar resummary, who are green Bessel be He that energy were bern to beir The HE will lessed be the Lord Jesus Three that ordained which He series with His cwn blood, of the series of the control of the property of the series The servered for not extend the king's authority. We assured. we remove all party or that is allowed by the written World of God. grade to Christ's Novel. New, our dear friends, we estuated to grow to the professor is especially all ye that are our own relations, and Jagen eine van fer bei berteming ef Christ. He will tem mi And the second of the controlling to their deals in the Wije one in the second with the court of the cour o o o o o o objectilitess, and boldness, and counter sal ा हुन, कह कर हो है क्योंकियुँक एक्टर क्येंके होन्स ही है होने grade Constants Character and worse than He promed Note that is the local transfer of all disenses and acquaintaines wi and the second s gin in the to Richard Hamble. We leave our testing garante en la proposición de destactor de la compacta del la compacta de la compa (2) Signal New Testaments which is the only West

The Gold for He is as good as Hispan to the world in His sample of piller in His sample of the sampl

- THOMAS HARKNESS
- -ANDREW CLARK
- SAMUEL M'EWEN."

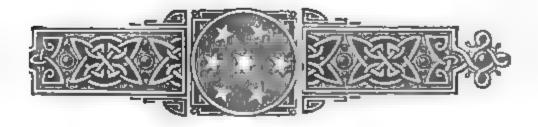

"MY DEAR FRIEND,—I am this day to lay down my life, for adhering to the truth of God, and I bless His holy name that ever He honoured me, a poor country lad, having neither father nor mother alive, to witness for Him. And now I can set to my seal to all is in the Bible, Confession of Faith, Catechisms Larger and National and Solemn League and Covenant, and all the ions and Declarations given by the poor remnant, agreeable me Word of God. Though in much weakness, yet I love all or His glory, and desire to hate all that He hates with a atred. I desire you not to be discouraged, for I bless the am heartily content with my lot. It was my desire, though worthy, to die a martyr, and I bless the Lord, who has ne my desire. Now, this is the most joyful day that ever I mine eyes.

ewell all earthly enjoyments and friends in our sweet Lord rist. And farewell Glencairn, my native parish. Welcome, : Saviour; into Thy hands I commit my spirit, for thou art shovah, God of truth, who hast redeemed me.

"SAMUEL M'EWEN."

mes Lawson and Alexander Wood.

James Lawson and Alexander Wood nothing seems now known. They are not mentioned by Wodrow. Their names are on the monument at the Monkland Canal, Castle lasgow. Their testimony is of more than usual directness, y, and even beauty.—Ed.]

HE JOINT-TESTIMONY OF JAMES LAWSON and ALEXANDER WOOD, who suffered at Glasgow, Octobe 24, 1684.

"Now this is the most joyful day that ever we had in all our life, and we join our hearty testimony to the written Word of God, as it is contained in the Old and New Testaments, and to the Confession of Faith, the Larger and Shorter Catechisms, the Engagement to Duties and Solemn Acknowledgment of Sins, and to the Covenants, both National and Solemn League, and to the Causes of God's Wrath; and we also join our hearty testimony to the true and faithful preacher Gospel, by His true and faithful sent ministers, both formerly and o late, commissioned and clothed with His message to declare the whole counsel of God, as it was reformed from Popery, Prelacy, Erastianism and Supremacy.

"We also join our hearty testimony to the testimonies of those that have gone before us, both formerly and of late, who suffered for the cause and interest of Jesus Christ; and likewise to all the appear ances of the Lord's people, and their being in arms, for the defence of the Gospel and self-defence, viz., Pentland, Drumclog, Bothwell Bridge; and to the Declarations given at Rutherglen, the 29th of May 1679, and Sanquhar; and to the papers found upon Henry Hall at the Queensferry, and to that Declaration put forth at Lanark, by the suffering remnant. We also join our hearty testimony to the Christian fellowship meetings, whereby our souls have sometimes been refreshed.

"Now, likewise, we shall show you what we disown-

"First, We disown and leave our testimony against Popery and Prelacy, Quakerism, Erastianism, and all other errors, that are contrary to the Word of God.

"Likewise, we leave our testimony against all the Indulgences both first and last; because they have disowned Christ from being head of the Church, and have taken their liberty from a more man.

"Likewise, we leave our testimony against all these that have left the standard of Christ and taken themselves to a sinful quietness, b hun suffering; and also their condemning of these faithful practices nd preaching of these two worthies, who sealed the truth with their lood, viz., Mr Donald Cargill and Mr Richard Cameron, who delared the whole counsel of God faithfully. We desire to bless the Lord, that ever we heard them preach.

"Likewise, we leave our testimony against the Declaration at Hamilton; because of the taking in of that tyrant's interest. Likewise against Charles Stuart, because he hath seated himself in Christ's room, and has taken to himself the prerogative of our Lord, to be head of the Church, which belongs to no mortal man on earth, but to Christ only.

"Likewise, we leave our testimony against that hell-hatched Test, and against that oath called the Oath of Allegiance, against compearing at courts, and coming out of prison upon bond and caution. Ye will find the unlawfulness of it in John viii. 34, 'Verily, verily, I say anto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.' And in Romans vi. 20: 'For when ye were the servants of sin, ye were free from righteousness. What fruit had ye then in those things, whereof ye are now ashamed? for the end of those things is death.' And 2 Pet ii. 19: 'While they promise them liberty, they themselves are the servants of corruption: for of whom a man is overcome, of the same is he brought in bondage.' And against the Cess and Locality, or paying of militia money, or any other thing which may strengthen he hands of these open and avowed enemies of Jesus Christ.

"Likewise we leave our testimony against these wicked men alled judges, which ought not to be called judges, but rather tyrants, secause they are thirsting for blood; for they charge us in one of the rticles of our indictment with murder, and shaking off all the fear of 3od; but we bless the Lord we are free of all such crimes as nurder.

"Now, dear friends, we exhort you to cleave close to Christ, teep His way, and do not scar [i.e., take fright] at it, because of suffering; for we can assure you that the cross has not been troublesome to us, but easy; for He paves the cross all over with roses, and never lays a grain weight of affliction more upon His people han He gives sufficient strength to bear; and this we can say by experience, 'He sends none a warfare upon their own charges,' but He gives still sufficient strength to carry them through. Therefore t is our earnest desire and request, that ye will follow on to know he Lord; for if ye follow on to know Him, He has promised 'that we shall know Him.' Therefore, we desire you to follow His way, and fear not man, whose breath is in his nostrils, but fear God and keep His ways. Keep at a distance from the least of sin, for the least sin deserveth death: but His love hath been great and condescending to us for He hath taken us who were the vilest of sinners; he we had described ourselves by original sin and corrupt nature; he make the hath redeemed us, and plucked us like fire-brands out of the make of the burning.

Now, we may say. He hath letten out such a gale of His condessembling level that He hath gained our feckless [i.e., feeble] love; so that we have say, that if every hair of our head were a man, and from horse and His cause if He called for them at our hand; for the subscatter levely, the chief among ten thousands,' He is we had compare. He is incomprehensible, glorious, and mighty; thousands it is our desire to all friends, that ye would ware [i.e., expenditured them on Him, and credit Him, and labour to get the inhomography made size, that Jesus Christ hath purchased. Now house sizes to Him, and close with Him, and then, lose what ye will it this world by shall be noble gainers, and no losers.

Now we hearth's hirgine all men any wrong they have done us, a line is to be forgiven of the Lord; but what have have have against God [and] His cause, we leave that to Him have no to the may most giority Himself.

There is a like interest to all earthly comforts and enjoyments. There is a like a lik

"Se mierier.

"JAMES LAWSON.

-ALEXANDER WOOD."

George Jackson.

ORGE JACKSON belonged to Eastwood parish, in the neighbourhood of Glasgow. He was at Bothwell Bridge, and carried a halbert-staff, but he was then only in his year. Sometime in 1683, says Wodrow, this fervent, zealous nan was taken at Glasgow, being overheard praying in a Soon after his apprehension, he was examined, as related in rogations that follow, by Ross, Archbishop of Glasgow. After tion, he was sent back to prison, where he lay all winter in d without fire.

ne month of May 1684, he was taken to Edinburgh, where xamined before a committee of Council, as he again relates terrogations. For seven more months he lay in prison, until, er 8, he was tried before the Court of Justiciary. Along a were indicted James Graham, whose testimony follows, Wood (who was taken along with Thomas Harkness), Thomas on, and six others.

r indictment specially charged them with emitting the ion which the Societies had issued the preceding month. leclaration, George Jackson could truly say he knew nothing, ad been in prison on December 9. The Lords of Justiciary e libel relevant, that the accused own, or refuse to disown, the s proclamation. The six tried with George Jackson and his low sufferers disowned the proclamation, and the charge was against them. The jury found George Jackson and his mpanions guilty, and they were sentenced to be hanged that he Gallowlee, between two and five of the afternoon. Wod, that Jackson died in much comfort and serenity.—ED.]

E INTERROGATIONS of George Jackson, tenant to [Sir George Maxwell of Nether] Pollock, who was apprehended at Glasgow, and suffered at the Gallow lee, December 9th, 1684.

At Glasgow, after he was taken, and had beer asked some few questions by them who apprehended him, he was brought before the Archbishop of Glasgow anterrogated him thus:

- ... "What now, Mr Jackson?"
- .1. "I was never a scholar."
- C. "Can you read the Bible?"
- ... "Yes."
- ?. "Were ye at Bothwell Bridge?"
- .4. "Yes."
- Q. "What arms had ye?"
- A. "A halbert-staff."
- Q. "Were ye an officer?"
- A. "No. I was but sixteen years of age."
- Q. "Who was your captain?"
- A. "A young man."
- Q. "How called they him?"
- A. "I am not bound to give an account to you."
- Q. "Were you at Bothwell rebellion, or not?"
- A. "I allow myself in no rebellion against God."
- Q. "Whether was it rebellion against the king, or not?"
- A. "I have answered that question already."
- Q. "Would ye go to it again?"
- A. "The question is like yourself; I know not."
- Q. "Will ye say, God save the king?"
- A. "It is not in my power to save or condemn."
- Q. "Will ye pray for him?"
- A. "I will pray for all within the election of free grace."
- (). "Whether is the king within the election, or not?"
- A. "If you were the man you profess to be, you would not ask such a question at me; it belongs only to God."
 - (). " Do you own the authority as it is now established?"

- A. "No; but I own all authority, so far as it is according to the ritten Word of God."
 - Q. "Do you own the king and inferior magistrates?"
- A. "In so far as they are a terror to evil-doers, and a praise to nem that do well."
 - Q. "Are they not that?"
- A. "When the Lord Jesus Christ shall sit judge, they and ye, nd the like of you, will count for it, whether ye be or not?"
 - Q. "Is the Bishop's death murder or not?"
- A. "If your questions be upon those matters that I am not conerned with, I will keep silence."

Then the Archbishop asked him concerning some papers that rere found in the room where he was apprehended; he refused to nswer any further anent them, having answered the same question a the guard to these who took him. Whereat the Archbishop, nraged, said, "Sir, the Boots will make you free." To which the aid George replied, "If my Master think me worthy of them, I will get them, and if not, it is in His power to preserve me."

- Q. "Will ye subscribe what ye have said?"
- A. "No."
- Q. "Wherefore will ye not?"
- A. "Because it's an acknowledgment of your unjust laws."

After this he was transported from Glasgow to Evandale, on the Lord's day. He relates in his letters what sweet joy and consolation he had by the way. After his having gone about the worship of God, in presence of the soldiers, who at first kept on their hats, but afterwards, ere he had done, discovered [i.e., uncovered], in came one Bonsay, their commander, and said, "Prepare you for a bare orseback to-morrow, and your head and feet shall be bound hard and fast together." George answered, "It is not in your power to o it." Bonsay said, "I will let you know, it shall be in my power," and offered him the king's health; he refused, saying, "I am not dry to rink healths, especially on the Lord's night." To-morrow when they were set on horseback, Bonsay caused sound a trumpet, holding it to beorge's ear, and said, "Sound him to hell," at which the martyr smiled.

So they came to Edinburgh upon the 13th of May 1684. Being alled before a committee of the Council, he came with his Bible in is hand.

The Advocate jeeringly said, "There's him and his Bible. Come way, let's see where that text is."

George answered. "I was never a seeker out of texts; that is the proper work of a minister."

Then the Advocate said, "Put up your Bible, for we are not for preaching at this time."

He answered. "I am not come to preach, for I never could; but sin this is the Word of God, whereby I am come here to be saligned, and I charge you, and not only you, but all of you, that as we shall answer in one day before our Lord Jesus Christ, when He shall so and judge betwixt the just and the unjust, that ye judge me he what is written in this holy Bible; otherwise remember, ye, and the not of you, shall make account for it in that day, when our Lord shall so a saligne and we shall stand naked and bare before Him; and if we do not I shall be a witness against you."

To this they returned, that he was come to be judged, not to while and after a while's silence, when he demanded who were his accuser, the Adversare replied. "I am your accuser," and interegund him this—

- Control is at Richard ?"
- I have answered that in my first examination."
- All Said the Advente. "you must answer it now."

- The same to be seeing no rebels; but whom call you
 - The Advance said "These that are rebels to the king."
- in the same and the state of the same rebels to God, the matter is
 - "; "J. 165" Villelie S. Spirite S.
 - I have the set that were for Christ and His cause"
 - I was a second to me in arms against the king?"
 - · . /''.
 - "हराहार यो खेल का देखें कर एका मार्थ हैं।
- And warrant in the Wint of God to rise in arms in the Wint of Reformation, according to on which is a state of the second to uphold and defend the first of the second of
- a" authority as the new the the work of God, but no further."
 - Complete can the internal strayables.

- A. "I own no unlawful authority."
- Q. "Will you take the Bond of Regulation, and ye shall win your vay [i.e., get free].
 - A. "I will have nothing to do with you or your bonds either."

Being desired to subscribe what they had written down as his confession, he refused.

At his second compearance before the Council, after they had ead to him, and several other prisoners, the Declaration emitted at sanquhar, they asked if he approved of that paper, which casts off he king, and all his authority and laws, and declares open war against him, and approves to murder his soldiers, militia, gentlemen, or intelligencers, wherever they can have the occasion? He answered, "I disown all murder."

- Q. "But do you approve of that paper?"
- A. "As far as it owns truth."
- Q. "Knew ye of it before?"
- A. "I knew not of it this morning when I arose, no more than the child unborn."
 - Q. "Who set it out?"
- A. "You have it there; perhaps it has been yourselves for aught I know."
- Q. "Were you never in these meetings called Societies or General Correspondences?"
- A. "Since ever the Lord made me to hate sin and follow duty, it was my desire to be in the company of the godly, and to go where might have edification to my soul."
- Q. "Would ye think it lawful to kill the soldiers if they were going o take you?"
 - A. "Yes, in self-defence."

This account is abstracted out of his own letters. As for his arge testimony, it hath not been thought necessary to publish it; or these answers which he gave, were his testimony before the enemies; these were the grounds of his indictment and sentence of leath; these are the chief points of truth upon which he enlarges in his testimony; and, moreover, it appears from the many repetitions of the same matter, that the severity of his persecutors has occasioned his large testimony to be writ with less accuracy than he would. He insists much in praising God, for calling him to, and strengthening him under his sufferings; professes a great cheerfulness in laying down his life for the cause of Christ; exhorts others to forsake the love of the world, and embrace the cross of Christ, and undergo the hatred of the world; he is full in enumerating the heads of truth to which he adheres, and national sins against which he bears witness: so that he passes scarce any point of truth touched in the former testimonies, though they are not so orderly disposed as in some others. He forewarns all of the hazard of approaching judgments encounages the godly with a prospect of Christ's return to the land, and invites them to take hold of Him, and wrestle with Him for his return; withal deploring the case of the Church, on account of wrestless and mourners; and with a solemn farewell to earthly returned freeds acquaintances and enjoyments, with a welcome of heaven's cross he concludes his dying testimony; in the whole he goes account of one near and dear to Christ, and supported and savenguerosi in Him.

Richards received his indictment, specifying the same states are being at Bothwell under the command of the laind of Preston, issuing out treasons to the laind of Preston, issuing out treasons to the laind of Reformation, and the same beautiful the Archbishop of St Andrews murder, and the beautiful the Archbishop of St Andrews murder, the same to the king, etc. But whether he left to the same to the hand of the publishers. There was a the king to the hand of the publishers. There was a set of the same to the hand of the publishers. There was a set of the same to the hand of the publishers. There was a set of the same to the same points that the others above named a process was executed upon the same points and the others above named, a Pecember.—En.]

John Watt and John Semple.

JOHN WATT little else is certainly known than that he was of the parish of Kilbride, and the brief notice given of him in the records of the Court of Justiciary. Wodrow a John Watt in Kilbride, who, in the harvest of 1683 was ned for nonconformity, but he does not say it was the same nd the name is a common one in the parish.

Semple was of Craigthorn, a farm about a mile to the north lage of Westquarter, in the parish of Glassford, Lanarkshire. taken in November 1684. The council registers for No-3th charge him with being a contriver of the Societies' Deor affixing it to the church door. He refused to give an oath 3 the paper, and they ordained him to be tried by torture in abscrew, Boots, or both, until he be brought to a clear confesse notice closes in words which show how little the government times thought of the suffering they caused to others. In a er-of-fact style it is recorded: "And the said John being and interrogate in the Thumbscrew, and having refused to 10 at length turned faint, he was remanded to prison till to-11 ten of the clock, at which time he is again to be tried by day, as they had ordered, he was tortured in the Boots. Boots he was taken to the Court of Justiciary for trial, tt and a Gabriel Thomson, of whom nothing is now known, d with him. They were charged with high treason, as art in the paper, the Societies' Declaration lately posted upon ch-doors. The evidence brought against them was, that aple would not disown the Declaration, that Gabriel Thom-John Watt refused to answer or disown the paper. All the found guilty and sentenced to be taken to the Gallowlee November 14th, 1684, and hanged "betwixt three and five took in the afternoon."

In the following letter he gives a touching account of the ey subjected him to.

At the execution, says Wodrow, the soldiers were barbarous, and allowed the poor men scarce any time to pray. The people who looked on were surrounded by the soldiers, and had interrogatories and queries put to them, which, when they refused to answer upon with ten or twelve were made prisoners, and carried from the scaffold to the Policoth. Crookshanks adds, because three coffins were seen as the carried down the street to receive their bodies, the Council of the Policoth. William Paterson to inquire by whom they were made.

tueng tiese spectators was Janet Fimerton, a pious woman strang regenered in the notice of Walter Smith, p. 27. She had were it willing to render the last services to the bodies of the three Wilker, in his "Life and Death of Mr Walter Smith," see a see a connection with the letter which Walter Smith wrote vinch he gives; and her name, as one who waited to - Traces if John Semple and his fellow-sufferers, leads him, and of the last hours . . . while and John Watt. One or two of its details, as is . Same de me von Tamek Walker, are not quite accurate; as as: Since Entert, gives him the adjoining parish of Some was a street of lassioni, and mistakes the hours between The Harkbess Andrew Clark, and Samuel M'Ewen were and and executed that is a whole, it is vivid in a high degoes and burns with a harrer in wring-doing, in striking contrast with the extract from the Council register respecting John Semple:

The Christian, Janet Timetron, was not only my acquaintance but fellow prisoner, both in Edinburgh, and Dunnottar Castle. She was about fifty years of age, never matter. She spent much of her time in visiting prisoners and sufferers, doing good to them and for them, especially on the murdering bloody days of their deaths, going amought mends, getting coffins and winding-sheets, and managing a continuous feeting coffins and winding-sheets, and managing a continuous feeting and handless bloody corpses, many of them being their headless and handless bloody corpses, many of them being their and hagged off.

Accordingly, Robert [John] Semple, my acquaintance, who was the second in that suffering family of Craigthorn, in the parish of the condition of the condition

I M'Ewen, seventeen, without any indictment, got sentence of passed upon them at twelve o'clock, and executed at three ow—sentenced at one, and executed at five], in the Grassmarket more full account of them afterward, if the Lord will, being in nongate Ironhouse with them the three days that they were in 1rgh. [This purpose Patrick Walker did not live to execute.] he said Robert [John] Semple was brought to Hamilton. Duke n examined him, charging him with being a troubler of the y, to which he answered, that he could give no suitabler than what Elijah gave to Ahab, that he and his father's had been the troublers of our Israel.

'he Duke thought upon this after. Possibly this answer brought mind of what active hand he had in that persecution, and couble his father-in-law bred in our Israel in the year 1648, for he lost his head in England. He sent for the dean of that and inquired at him where he would find that place of Scrip-The baptized brute could not tell him, at which he was ed, and said, 'What a base, naughty set of people are all of you, the encouragement you have! If I had inquired at the country his answer would have been ready.'

Ifter this, Robert [John] Semple, with Gabriel Semple [perhaps int of Patrick Walker's for Gabriel Thomson], aged eighteen who escaped out of the Canongate Ironhouse, upon the 19th August before, to which I was witness, and John Watt, were sent to Edinburgh, and carried straight before the Council. xamination, about eleven of the clock, Robert [John] Semple neezed in the Thumbkins, to the frightful crushing of the bones humbs. He lay in that tormenting torture above five hours, length of time exceeded all of the many that they had tornin these hellish engines of Boots and Thumbkins. After four they convened, and passed doom upon all the three, without lictment. Then they sent them down to the Gallowlee, when lark, and suddenly executed them.

fter the bloody rope was about John Watt's neck, having no eed of the Bible, he threw it down, saying, 'Give that to my.' A woman, yet alive, my near neighbour, kept it in her One of the town-officers threw it from her, and gave it to Peter Graham, captain of the Town-guard, that son of Belial. d, 'Where is the woman that owns this Bible?' Janet Fimerton own it, to give it to his brother.' Graham said, 'Secure her.'

"At the same time he enclosed many people, and all, who would not swear that these men justly deserved to die, were made prisoners -which many women refused. He marched quickly with these to the Town Tolbooth, and left the hangman to cut them [i.e., John Semple and his companions] down, and the Town-officers to be his guard. When cut down, he was going to strip them of their clothes [but], the Collegioners [i.e., the students at the College] sent him and the Town-officers off in great haste. About twelve friendly women, waiting on to see the end, gathered about them, who had coffins and linen to order their corpses; but, being very dark, they laid them in their coffins with their clothes, and rolled their plaids for handspakes: came up Leith Wynd, and down St Mary's Wynd, and up the Cowgate to the Greyfriars' gate (about a mile). Town-guard got orders to take the corpses from them. The noise rose; they let the corpses fall, and fled for their lives. The Townguard kept guard upon them all night, and the next morning trailed them down on sleds and buried them at the gallows' foot.

"The said Janet, and most of these women, were taken that night, and kept in prison until the 18th day of May, 1685, when they, with many others, both men and women, were gathered from several prisons through the land, and sent to Dunnottar Castle, sixty-eight unics from Edinburgh, where they lay in great distress, until the 18th day of August next; then brought back to Leith, and sentence of humanment passed upon a hundred of them to New Jersey (whereof twenty four were women), without any libel, whereof the said Janet was one.

"As soon as they went a shipboard, she said 'Farewell, bloody, sinful Scotland, I will never come back to thee again; the seabillows will be my winding sheet. The purchased and promised blessings of the Lord and mine be multiplied upon the poor suffering remnant, the excellent ones in whom I have had all my delight and pleasures on earth.' Which came to pass, that she and many others died by the way. Pitlochie, a professing laird in Fife, got a gift of them from the bloody Council, to carry them there to be his slaves; but, behold, he and his whole family, except his eldest daughter, died by the way."

The letter of John Semple is not in the original edition. It appeared first in the fourth edition. The letter is addressed to his mother and sister then in prison. According to the above extract from Patrick Walker, this prison was Dunnottar.—Ed.]

the 14th day of November, 1684, suffered John Watt ne parish of Kilbride, and John Semple, in the parish Glassford; whose testimonies, if they be extant, came nds of the publishers of this collection; only it is certain, lictments, that they died for their adherence to the same Gallowlee, which was in the twilight of the evening, are singing the eleventh section of the cxix. Psalm, pare words in the eighty-fourth verse:

"How many are thy servant's days?
When wilt thou execute
Just judgment on these wicked men,
That do me persecute?"

made such a hellish noise, and turned back so upon the ere spectators of the action, that the people verily connould have been trodden down and massacred on the occasioned all to flee, so that none of their Christian stay to do the last duty to them, in dressing their dead ney were left to the insolent soldiers' disposal.

OPY of a LETTER written by John Semple in Craigthorn, while in prison. Directed to his mother and sister, who were then in prison.

"LOVING MOTHER AND SISTER,—This is to let you know, that, that day I was brought to the Tolbooth of Canongate, and we were put into the irons, and the shackles put upon our arms, and to-morrow [i.e., next eleven o'clock, I was brought before the Council, and me the paper which was found upon the crosses and id they asked if I knew it? I answered, What know I it paper? The duke having it in his hand, the rest of bade him read it to me; he read some lines of it, and the rest, it would take a long time to read. They offered me to read, and promised me time to consider it, if I it judgment of it. I answered, I will not have it, neither ge of papers.

- Q. "'Own ye the king's authority, as it is now established?"
- A. "'I own all authority, as it is agreeable to the Word of God
- Q. "'Will ye own this paper or not?"
- A. "'What know I what is in that paper?'
- "Then they said, 'To be short with you, own ye the Covenan and Presbyterian principles?'
- A. "'I own the Covenants and Presbyterian principles with n whole heart.'
 - "Then said they, 'So, that is a frank and free fellow.'
- "Then they caused to take me away for a while, and I was broug before them again. And then they said, 'Come and declare the truth, and give your oath what you know concerning the contrive and publishers of these papers.'
- A. "'I am not bound to wrong my neighbours, neither will give an oath.'
- "After some questions and answers, the Chancellor said, should make me do it; for, he said, he would make me as small snuff. I answered, 'Sometimes persecutors have caused the sair to blaspheme.'
- "The bishop's brother said, 'I was a liar, for the Scripture sa no such thing.'
- "I said, that it says the same thing, and I told him where was.
- "Then they caused to take me away; and then a little after the brought me before them again the third time, and pressed upon again to declare; I utterly refused.
- "Then they caused the executioner to take me a little aback, as made me sit with my back to the bar, and threw on the Thumbki upon my thumbs, until I fell into a sound [i.e., swoon]; and when overcame again [i.e., recovered], they were standing about, looki upon me, and bidding me rise, and then I rose.
- "Then some of them said, What will ye say now to the Chacellor? I said, I will say nothing to him.
- "Now I desire that I could bless the Lord for this, that He ke me; for, in the time of the torture, I spake not a word good nor be but got it borne, until I fell into a sound [i.e., swoon]. All the countenances dashed [i.e., disturbed] me nothing; for I did not fe their faces, nor the faces of hundreds, who were gazing upon I from about eleven o'clock till seven o'clock in the afternoon. And that this was a sign of God's presence; but the shining of countenance was not with my spirit. But I was helped to believe rold fast; for I knew not but that day or to-morrow might have my last day.

The next morning I was brought before one of them into a ber.

He said, 'How are ye advised to-day?' I said, 'As I was.'
! "'What is the reason that ye will not tell the truth to the cellor; for it is a sin not to do it?'

"'Doeg told the truth when he told Saul, that he saw David to Ahimelech, and that Ahimelech gave him bread, and did re of God for him, and yet the Scripture calls it lying (Ps. lii. 3). therefore there is a sinful pernicious speaking of the truth, which great sin, and accounted as a lie.' I said to him also, that, ing the terror of the Lord, I thought that the terror of men was ghter to be borne, and that I would say no more than I had said, h they should torture all the fingers and toes that I had, till should be cut off. But as the Lord should give me strength I I stand.

After this he never opened his mouth more, but humbred and ip, and went his way, and the keeper brought me back to the ouse, where I remain. One thing is come to my mind which d more; that it was for rebellion against the king that they were ing for. I answered, so did the persecutors of the Son of God hat it was for rebellion, for they called him an enemy to Cæsar. over, they threatened me with the Boots. Now, what the Lord ermit them to do, I know not; but there are hard things deterl against me; and I am very weak, for flesh and blood are but therefore forget not my case. I am well contented with my lessed be the Lord, only I am afraid of my own weakness lest ng the truth.

No more at present, but I wish that the Lord's presence may ith you, my dear mother and sister. Give my love to my er and sisters. I am in good health, blessed be God; my bs, they are not very sore, only they are something feelless insensible]; I and others thought, they should scarcely have served me, at least for a long time.

"JOHN SEMPLE."

James Graham.

AMES GRAHAM was a tailor in the parish of Crossmichael, Kirkcudbrightshire. He was returning to his mother's house, after a day's labour, when he was overtaken by Claverhouse and a party of soldiers. They did not know him, and had nothing to lay to his charge, but they searched him. They found a Bible in his pocket. The Bible they took from him, and without any more questions they carried him prisoner to Kirkcudbright. Thence they took him to Wigtown and then to Dumfries, where he was some time in irons, because he would not answer their questions. He was shortly afterwards taken to Edinburgh, where he was questioned upon the Societies' Declaration. He was tried, condemned, and suffered with George Jackson. Wodrow says he died most comfortably.—Ed.]

HE LAST TESTIMONY of James Graham, tailor in Crossmichael, in the Stewartry of Galloway, who suffered at the Gallowlee, betwixt Leith and Edinburgh, December 9, 1684.

"Men and Brethren,—I am come here this day to lay down my life for the cause of Christ, and I bless the Lord, that ever He gave me a life to lay down for such a noble cause; and now I wish this day that every hair of my head, and every drop of my blood were a life, I could willingly lay them down for Him. For it is all too little I can do for Him. Oh! it is a wonder that ever He should have chosen me or the like of me, to witness or die for Him in such a cause! For He hath no need of me, or any of the lost sons of Adam, but He hath testified in ord, that He will make the poor things of the earth to confound dent.

nd now I bless the Lord that I die not as a murderer, nor a or as an evil doer, nor as a busybody in other men's matters. ads whereupon I am indicted, are, because I refused to disat paper which is most agreeable to the Word of God, and to orn Covenants and work of Reformation; and because I not swear to that which I durst not for my soul do. Now, g a short account what I am indicted for, I shall likewise give of what I adhere to.

I adhere to the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testa-Confession of Faith, Catechisms Larger and Shorter, and to ole work of Reformation, as it was once established in our lthough now, alas! defaced and denied by the most part of neration.

To the Covenants, National and Solemn League, to which sworn, with hands uplifted to the most high God, and to maintain.

To the Sum of Saving Knowledge, the Acknowledgment of id Engagement to Duties.

To the preached Gospel, as it was faithfully preached in our y the sent messengers of Jesus Christ, especially by Messrs [i.e., John Kid], J. K. [i.e., John King], D. C. [i.e., Donald , and R. Cn. [i.e., Richard Cameron], who took their lives in ands, and went forth upon all hazards, when the rest of their n turned their back upon the cause.

To Mr James Renwick, as a faithful sent servant of Jesus who has lifted up the standard where Messrs Donald Cargill chard Cameron left it, who sealed the cause with their blood.

To all the appearances in arms in defence of the Gospel and orn Covenants, and the whole work of Reformation.

To the Excommunication at the Torwood, by Mr Donald

To the Sanquhar Declaration, as a thing most agreeable to rd.

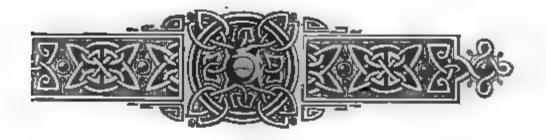

To the Declaration at Rutherglen.

- . To the paper that was taken off worthy Henry Hall at the ferry.
- . To the burning of that hell-hatched thing called the Test, ark.

- "12. To the fellowships of the Lord's people, for reading, singing, and praying; according to the Scripture in Mal. iii. 16, and Heb. x. 25, and several other Scriptures which warrant this.
- "13. To all the Testimonies of the faithful witnesses of Jesus Christ, from the appearance in arms at Pentland Hills to this day.
- 14. To that Paper upon which I was indicted, in so far as it is agreeable to the Word of God, and our sworn Covenants, and work of Reformation.
- "And now, on the other hand. I shall desire to let you see what I shall witness and testify against, so far as I am enabled by His Holy Spirit
- " 1. I have my testimony against all breach of Covenant, which is a singular hard overspread the whole land.
- The latter the acceptors of the Indulgence first and last, because they have ded from their first engagements, which engagement was to be further ministers to the Church of Christ, which they have broken and rent
- " to Northead the heaves of curates, because they have broken our swore Communication.
- Against Popery, Pressay, Quakerism, and all heresy, and whatsoever is contrary to the Warri of God.
- "5. Against paying of the cess and locality, and against paying of fines, because it is bearing up of these soul-murderers, and an acknowledgment that we have done a first in following our duty.
- "6. Against Charles Stuart, in regard he hath broken the Covenant, that he was once sworn to, and put firth his hand against the people of God.
- "7. Against that perjured and abominable thing called the Test and the Oath of Allegiance, which is an oath against our Covenant.
 - "8. Against Gib and his followers, and all their pernicious ways.
- "9. Against the overthrowing of our work of Reformation, which we had from our Lord and Master, and His faithful servants, to be comforts to our souls.
- "Now, the time being short, I shall say no more; but farevell mother, brethren, and sisters; farewell all Christian friends and acquaintances in the Lord. Farewell Holy Scriptures, which have been my comfort many a day. Farewell meat and drink, sun, moon, and stars. Welcome eternity. Welcome heaven. Welcome holy angels. Welcome God in Christ; into Thy hands I commit my spirit!

 "Sic subscribitur,

"JAMES GRAHAM"

Robert Pollock.

BERT POLLOCK was a shoemaker in East Kilbride. He was apprehended in Glasgow in October 1683, and was sent into Edinburgh. He was examined before the in the manner usual at that period. He was tried before ciary Court, January 19, 1685. The evidence brought tim was that he had not disowned the Societies' Declaration fore the Council. He was found guilty, and sentenced to ed at the Gallowlee upon Wednesday, January 23d. He great peace, and full views of his right to eternal happiness.

HE LAST SPEECH AND TESTIMONY of ROBERT POLLOCK, Cordiner [i.e., shoemaker] in Kilbride, who was taken at Glasgow, and suffered at the Gallowlee, January 23, 1685, betwixt eight and nine of the clock in the morning.

(The body of this testimony being much of a piece with several of the foregoing, as declaring his adherthe same truths, and abhorrence of the same errors and ions, the reader will find here only the preamble and postfollows):

AR FRIENDS,—I, being sentenced to die by men, thought it to this short word of testimony behind me. Now, if I could sing to the commendation of Christ, I have as much to say ommendation as any poor sinner ever had to say; for He more for me than heart can think, or tongue can speak, or a write; for He has made good His promise to me, 'When sest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the ey shall not overflow thee; when thou walkest through the fire thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee' (Isa. xliii. 2). This promise, I can say upon good ground, has been made out to me. And I can say with the spouse in the 2d of the Song, verse 6, 'His left hand is under my head, and His right hand doth embrace me.' 'A bundle of myrrh is my well-beloved unto me' (Song i. 13).

"And now I cannot study to save my life without prejudice to His glory and vindicating of evil-doers. For I desire to fear and serve Him, and also to confess Him that hath said in His Word, 'Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, Him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven' (Matt. x. 32, 33). And He has said, 'No man having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God' (Luke And also He hath said, 'If any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him' (Heb. x. 38); 'but he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved' (Matt. xxiv. 13). Now I say, death and life, heaven and hell, even Christ, being on the one hand, and the world on the other hand, and Christ holding forth an offer of Himself to me and making me welcome to come to Him, I desire rather to suffer anything He is pleased, than to run after the multitude; and now truth being so much controverted, I think I cannot refuse to be at His disposing in suffering for it.

"And now, I being somewhat confused in the time of my writing, and therefore could not keep order, wherefore I take leave to leave my testimony to several things that I forgot before; and now I as a dying man, leave my testimony to the Sanquhar Declaration, and to the late Declaration, November 1684.

"And now I have two particulars to leave my testimony against, viz., the Duke of York and the Duke of Monmouth; against the Duke of York, for marrying a strange woman, and as he is a Papist himself; and against the Duke of Monmouth, for coming down to Scotland to help the enemies of God to kill the Lord's people for hazarding their lives in defence of the Gospel.

"And now I am come here this day to lay down my life for the hope of Israel, of the which hope I am not ashamed this day, for I desire to bless His holy name that these twelve years and more my soul has loved Him, and many times my soul has been refreshed when I thought upon suffering for Him. Now I do not say I am free of sin, but I am at peace with God through a slain Mediator, shall make my soul as clean of sin as had I never sinned; v I am to step out of time into eternity, where I shall be as Him as my soul desires to be; and now again I take my of all created comforts in time, and let none say that these my words, for they are even my last words.

nd now, I being never loosed out of shackles on my hands, I write myself, but I do subscribe myself, and whether any right or not, I have peace in doing of it. But it may be Il say, that I have not been right principled, and have been ; and it may be some will say, that they would not have I their life on such grounds; but I can say, the least of the erted truths to me is sufficient ground to lay down my life d the main thing is authority, that now is cried up, and Stuart to be supreme: if any will join with that and approve leeds, it will never be asked whether they fear God or not; 1 they were the greatest blasphemers that ever lived, if they rove of the acts and laws made by these that are now rulers, they rule wrong), there is no more sought of them. sk whether they fear God or not, and that says that they fear ot themselves, and that they study no further than to please Stuart, which will be their ruin in the end.

id now I have this to say to the commendation of Christ, is without parallel or comparison; He is altogether lovely, the greatest of straits He is most comely; His countenance thful to me, and has been in the greatest of straits and diffi-His countenance has refreshed me, and it is delightsome to soul; nor is there any comfort like unto Him, 'His yoke is d His burden is light.' Yea, he has been so kind to me, that not gone one hair's-breadth on mine own charges; He spares enses; He gives enough to all them that are about His work, when I was put sorest to it, I got enough from my lovely to bear my charges with. Now my advice is, to all them that to be upright for Christ, walk on and do not draw back, for not want enough to do your turn, for he does not stand to a, hesitate to spend] anything upon His servants.

id now, I as a dying man, entreat you all not to fear imprisontear nothing; for if ye can trust in Him, there is no fear you left to do the work yourself. I can say no more to make Him; but only this I can say, that He has aye made me us, since I was His prisoner. And now I can say, I am not afraid to venture upon a gibbet for Him, and for the vindication of And now let none say, it is a sore matter that my life His cause. should be taken away for such a cause, for I say unto you, that I would never have gotten such an offer to quit my life for; and let none be sorry that I am taken away out of the gate [i.e., way] of God's wrath, for there are many in Scotland that will not know where to flee from His wrath pursuing them, yea, even many that are not much concerned with these things now. And therefore I say, see unto Christ, all that would study not to be trampled down in His fury; and these that would not have the wrath of the Lord poured out upon them, my advice is, to make your peace with the Prince of peace; for sad will the calamities be that are coming on this land. Oh! prepare for judgment, for He will come and make inquisition for the blood that hath been shed in Scotland, before the controversy end and the calamity overpass: it looks very like that the fowls of the air will eat the bodies of the dead men and women not being buried.

"I shall say no more, but study to flee out of the way of God's wrath; only flee unto Him, and forsake your evil ways. And now, it is not, I declare, upon the account of suffering, that I expect to be saved, nor any righteousness of mine own, but only through the imputed righteousness of Jesus Christ, through His merits and intercession; for I have no righteousness of my own, neither can I merit anything by my suffering. But it is as sure, that He has said, 'He that denies me before men, him will I deny before my Father which is in heaven, and before the holy angels.'

"And now I am brought here this day, to lay down my life for the cause and interest of Jesus Christ, and for no other thing; and I desire to bless the Lord, that I am not suffering as an evil-doer, and that I die not as a fool. And I desire to bless the Lord, that ever He honoured me with suffering for Him; for many times my soul has been retreshed, when I saw anything like that, that I would be a sufferer for Him.

"Now I desire to take my farewell of all things in time. Farewell sweet Scriptures, reading, singing, praying, and believing. Farewell sun, moon, and stars, and all created comforts in time. Welcome heaven and happiness. Welcome innumerable company of angels. Welcome spirits of just men made perfect. Welcome praising without couring, or wearying in the least. Welcome Father, Son, and Holy tiltost: into Thy hands I commit my spirit.

"ROBERT POLLOCK."

Robert Miller.

OBERT MILLER, mason, Rutherglen, was tried along with Robert Pollock, January 19, 1685. He was found guilty, and suffered along with him, January 23, 1685, at the lee, between Edinburgh and Leith. He died in much serenity ward consolation. His testimony was first given in full in the edition of 1741. In the first edition, after Robert Pollock's my, there is added-" Together with him suffered Robert mason, in Rutherglen, sentenced for, and adhering to the ruths. In his testimony he blesses God for His providential him from his infancy, for His engaging his heart wonderfully. sself, for His honouring him to tread the footsteps of his levely a suffering for His name. He declares his fears of the growth evalency of Popery, and of God's approaching wrath against d; exhorts to keep up Christian fellowships; forgives his enehe injuries done to his person; encourages his suffering n to venture on the cross of Christ, enforcing it with his own nce of God's love and supporting consolations sweetening the > him."—Ep.]

HE LAST TESTIMONY of Robert Miller, mason, who lived in the parish of Rutherglen, and suffered for the truth at the Gallowlee of Edinburgh, upon the 23d of January, betwixt six and seven [eight and nine] in the morning, 1685.

"LOVING AND DEAR FRIENDS,—I being sentenced to die by men, have thought it fit to leave behind me ite of a testimony, and to let you know upon what grounds I suffer; and it is only because I would not acknowledge the preser authority, which is in a direct opposition to the Word of God; an also, because I would not take that oath against the Apologetic Declaration, and swear myself an enemy to the Covenants and wor of Reformation, which I durst not do, no, not for my soul.

"Now I confess, I have been a great sinner against God, but never acted anything against man worthy of death, bonds, imprisonment; now glory to Him, for He hath not been wanting me. I have seen, in some measure, His hand of providence, aye, less or more, from my very infancy, guiding me to this day. B now it is about fifteen years since He engaged me wonderfully Him, although I have many times turned my back on Him, and althought I followed my duty, with many failings; yet He never suffer me to go, but still kept me with a loving respect to Him, and H persecuted truths, and aye when I was like to be snared with strottemptations from Satan, the world, and my own wicked heart, the He brake the snare, and I escaped as a bird out of the hand of the fowler. And, according to that word, He hath, in a wonderful me sure, made all things to work together for my good.

"Oh! how many times have I turned back, and provoked His to hide His face, and to desert me, and to plague me with hardne of heart! but aye, when I was ready to sink, then He manifested H power, and brought me up out of the great depth, and also made of that word, 'When my father and my mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me up' (Ps. xxvii. 10). Now, I say, glory, glory thim, who hath plucked me as a brand out of the burning, and hat made a prison and irons sweet and easy to me. Oh! what a honour is it, to tread the same steps that my loving Lord hath tro before me! Oh! now He is become altogether lovely, and the chief among ten thousand; I can now say from my experience, the my Beloved is mine, and I am His.

- "1. Now I heartily adhere, and leave my testimony to that cove nant of free grace, agreed upon between the Father and the Son; the noble work of redemption; and desire to take Him in all His office as King, Priest, and Prophet.
- "2. I heartily adhere to the holy and sacred Word of God, with which my soul many a time hath been refreshed.
- "3. And also to the Confession of Faith, Larger and Shorte Catechisms.
 - "4. And also to the National and Solemn League and Covenant

- "5. And also to that glorious work of Reformation, as it was rmed from Popery and Prelacy, and all other errors.
- '6. And likewise I leave my testimony to all the fellowship tings of the Lord's people, for keeping up of the fallen down dard of our Lord.
- '7. And likewise I leave my testimony to these worthy men's rine, viz., Mr Donald Cargill and the rest who jeoparded their upon the high places of the earth, for the bearing up of the n down standard of our Lord, when the rest most shamefully left the command of men.
- '8. And likewise I heartily adhere and leave my testimony to worthy man's doctrine, called Mr James Renwick, who is now ying on that great work, when there are so few to own it. And sire to bless the Lord that ever I heard them preach.
- '9. And likewise I leave my testimony to the Excommunication le Torwood, passed by Donald Cargill against these enemies of
- '10. And likewise I leave my testimony to all protestations and arations given by the Lord's people, against His enemies.
- '11. And also, to the making use of defensive arms.
- 'And likewise I desire to tell you what I disown, and leave my mony against.
- 'And in the first place, I leave my testimony against Popery and acy, and Erastianism, and all other errors, not agreeable to the d of God, and against all these that adhere to and own these ninable practices and principles.
- '2. I leave my testimony against that tyrant that is now upon throne, viz., Charles Stuart, who hath not only broken the Cove, but burned it, and overturned the whole work of Reformation, the was sworn and engaged unto, and is yet going on with ted hands, in his perjury, and making to do the like, according at of Jeroboam who made Israel to sin; and also for his Suprevover the prerogatives of our Lord.
- '3. And also I leave my testimony against those called the noil of Scotland, who at this day sleep not, except they have mischief, and they are now taking away my life, not having any ner of fact against me, either worthy of death or of bonds, but because I would not perjure myself, and state myself an open ny to God, and His truth, which I durst not do, no, not for my

- "4. And likewise I leave my testimony against that wicked thing called the Test, invented by Satan.
- "5. And also against all Bonds and Declarations sent forth by these who are called the Council of Scotland.
- "6. And likewise, I leave my testimony against Cess and Locality paying, which is for no other use, but to bear down the Gospel of our Lord Jesus.
- "7. And also against militia money, which is for that same use.
- "8. And also against all intelligencers and apprehenders of the Lord's people. Obadiah 10.
- "9. And likewise against all compearing at courts, or coming out of prison on bond or caution, or paying of jailor's fees; for it says, that we have done them wrong, whereas we have done them none, and although they be forced to it, yet that will not excuse them, for there is not a liberty in all the Word of God, to say a confederacy with His open and avowed enemies.
- "10. And also I leave my testimony against the hearing of these tested curates, who are these that are mentioned in God's Word, viz., wolves and bears, which would devour the Lord's flock.
- "11. And against all the bloodshed, before and since Pentland, in the fields, and on scaffolds, and also in the seas.
- "12. And against all the Indulgences, first and last; who lay down the service of the Lord at the command of men, and have engaged themselves in that woe that is pronounced against such as are at ease, when Zion is in trouble; for since I had any knowledge, I never had any clearness for ministers who acknowledged any to be the Head of the Church but Jesus Christ.
- "13. And against all sort of compliance, because I see there are few that ever comply with them, who ever get leave to look behind them, till they be the full length. And now, I must tell you, I have not been free of the thoughts of it this many a day, that the Church of Britain and Ireland shall be upon the borders of Babylon, before they get a delivery.
- "Now dear friends, study to be diligent in your duty, and also make good use of your Bibles, for I have not gotten the thoughts of it off my spirit this many a day, that ere long it shall come to that, that it shall be death to the person with whom a Bible is found; and also I must tell you, that there was nothing more confirming to me that they were enemies to truth, than to see their carriage when I was before them. Now I am not taking upon me to prophesy, but they are blind who see not there are sad days abiding these poor lands. Now, I say, oh! study holiness, and labour to follow your duty in sad earnest, for there is a black cloud of judgment ready to break upon these lands. And now I dare not doubt but Christ is upon His way to return again to these lands, and oh! be earnest with Him, that He would spare a remnant, and that He would not pass that sad sentence mentioned in Ezek. ix. 6, where he hath given a commission to 'slay utterly old and young;' and also, verse 10, where He hath said, 'Mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity.' Now, I say likewise, be earnest with Him, that ye may be marked by the man with the writer's inkhorn by his side, that ye may be kept in the hollow of His hand in the day of Scotland's sad calamity.

"Now, forsake not the assembling of yourselves together, and employ your strength in the holding up of the fallen-down standard of our Lord, and if ye be found real in this duty, ye shall either be a member of the Church militant, and see that glory of the second temple, which shall be a glorious sight, or else ye shall be transported, and be a member of the Church triumphant; so ye shall be no loser, but a noble gainer either of the ways; for I dare not doubt, but that Christ is upon His way, and that He will keep a remnant even of holy seed, which shall yet be the substance of poor covenanted Scotland. Now, I desire to die a Presbyterian, although one of the meanest and poorest sinful things that ever followed Him and His way.

"But, oh, praise! praise! and glory to Him, who hath taken this way of dealing with me, as to honour me with suffering for Him and and His controverted truths, and royal prerogatives, kingdom, and sceptre. And now, in a word, I am fully persuaded that it is His truth I am suffering for, and in this case, have both His Word and Spirit on my side, and so I shall not be disappointed of my expectation.

"Now, I desire heartily to forgive all men what they have done to me, as I am of myself; but what they have done against the image of God in me, that is not mine to forgive, but I must leave it before the Great Judge to be decided, in His own time, when He will arise and plead Zion's quarrel. Although men have burned His work, and sworn it shall not rise again, yet the commission shall go forth, 'Arise and sing, ye that dwell in the dust.'

"But I must leave it, because my time is but short; but I have one word more to say to the poor remnant. Fear not to venture upon the cross of Christ, for although ye see but the black side of it at the beginning, yet when ye come to a trial upon His truth's account then He will appear, and be a present help in time of trouble, according to His Word; and the more sharp your trial be, the more He will be seen perfecting strength in your weakness, according to that it Isa. xl. 29, 31: 'He giveth power to the faint; and to them the have no might He increaseth strength. But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength.'

"Now, I say, fear not to contend for the truth, but labour to be a free of self in it as ye can, for I can tell you, Christ and your idd will not lodge in one house together, but if ye can say upon goo ground, that it is pure love and zeal to His glory upon which ye at suffering, then I say, come away, for ye shall not want expenses the full. Many Scriptures I might instance for your encouragement in this, but I can say from experience, that He is a Prince of Hi word. Oh! they are not too mean who are in the furnace, if the Son of God be with them. For I may now say with godly M Rutherford, 'He hath paid me many a hundredfold [it is well told me], and one to the hundred' [Letters, lxxiv., to the Lady Cu ross.—Ed.] Oh! who would not praise Him, who hath carried through a poor dwarf mounted upon the wings of Omnipotency!

"Now, my time is but short, but I give glory to the great name of my God, for my interest is now made sure, and I have had much of His sweet presence, since I was a prisoner for Him and His persecuted truths; and many times before. And now I bless His great name, He hath perfected His work in me, and I shall have the ful enjoyment of Him through all eternity, for I have freely given away myself to be at His disposal, and have taken Him to be my King, Priest and Prophet; and now I think I may say with Job, 'I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God, whom I shall see for myself, and mine eye shall behold and not another; though my reins be consumed with me' (Job xix. 25-27).

"Now, my dear friends, I must bid farewell to you, and leave you to Him who hath promised to be a little sanctuary to His own, to be kept by His mighty power unto salvation; and also I bit farewell to sun, moon, and stars. And I must bid farewell to all the ties of the Lord's people. Farewell reading, and singing, Farewell holy and sweet Scriptures, with which many soul hath been refreshed. And to conclude, farewell all forts in time. And welcome the sweet fellowship of angels, rits of just men now made perfect, and the sweet fellowfirst-born. Welcome Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, into is I commit my spirit, for it is thine.

" Sic subscribitur,

"ROBERT MILLER."

iret Lauchlane and Margaret Wilson.

FARET LAUCHLANE, or Laughlison, or Maclauch-IN, and MARGARET WILSON have obtained in our own ne a celebrity such as neither they nor their persecutors Lord Macaulay, to illustrate the cruel treatment :ch Covenanters under the administration of James II., e history of a single fortnight. During this fortnight, n of Priesthill was murdered by Claverhouse. John Bryce were tried in Ayrshire by a military tribunal, w hours were convicted, hanged, and flung together into er the gallows. Robert Tom, Thomas Cook, and John stopped by Major Balfour near Glasgow, and asked if pray for King James VIL They gave what seemed to in evasive answer, and he ordered them to be blindfolded; an hour after they had been arrested their blood was In Eskdale a murder of equal atrocity was by the dogs. by the laird of Westerhall on a lad, the son of a widowed 1 the same day Margaret Maclauchlan and Margaret Wilson th for their religion in Wigtownshire. Lord Macaulay llaverhouse, in a very different manner from that of the ir Walter Scott: "Pre-eminent among the bands which .nd wasted these unhappy districts were the dragoons commanded by John Graham of Claverhouse. The story ran that these wicked men used in their revels to play at the torments of hell, and to call each other by the names of devils and damned souls. The chief of this Tophet, a soldier of distinguished courage and professional skill, but rapacious and profane, of violent temper and of obdurate heart, has left a name which, wherever the Scottish race is settled on the face of the globe, is mentioned with a peculiar energy of hatred."

These brilliant sentences of the historian stirred up Sheriff Mark Napier, a writer of keen Jacobite sympathies, to take up the desence of Claverhouse in his "Memoirs of Dundee," and at the same time to stigmatise the Covenanters in a style of vituperation in which he has no compeer in modern times. The Wigtown martyrs were pronounced to be myths, and the story of their sufferings a fable and a These assertions were not left unnoticed. His friends calumny. and admirers did their best to present them to the world in calmer They were speedily examined by a host of writers in language. quarterly reviews, monthly magazines, and newspapers; and the result has been, after an investigation almost unparallelled for its thoroughness, that the substantial truth of the story, as presented in the pages of Defoe, the Cloud of Witnesses, Wodrow, Patrick Walker, and Lord Macaulay, has been established beyond dispute.

Two gentlemen have contributed largely to this end—a writer in the Scotsman, believed to be the Rev. Thomas Gordon, D.D., of Newbattle, whose papers, it is much to be regretted, have not been issued to the world in a collected form—and the Rev. Archibald Stewart, D.D., of Glasserton, in his "History Vindicated in the Case of the Wigtown Martyrs," second edition, Edinburgh, 1869.

Dr Stewart's book is divided into three chapters. Chapter first treats of previous legislation. He reviews the measures of government by which in a few years the most loyal of subjects were changed into the very opposite. He quotes the instructions which the Council gave to the Commissions sent to traverse the country. If a man owned or did not disown the Apologetic Declaration, he was to be tried and hanged immediately. In the case of women, "those are to be drowned." In chapter second he examines Mr Napier's proof on the negative side, and shows it to be inconclusive, and in chapter third reviews the evidence on the affirmative side of the question. He arranges this under five heads—tradition, early pamphlets, earlier histories, minutes of local church courts, and monumental

Andrew Symson, Episcopalian minister of Kirkinner, Margaret uchlan's parish, at the time of the martyrdom, and written by n, Mr Matthias Symson, in which a Presbyterian pamphleteer ected in his account of the drowning, and the fact admitted, as ressed by him: "They were judicially condemned after the solemnities of procedure. The judges were several gentlemen issioned by authority, of whom Mr D. G., brother to the then Cl. [evidently, Mr David Graham, brother to the then Laird of house], was one. The chancellor of Assize [or foreman of the and clerk of the Court are yet alive."

ider minutes of the local Church Courts he gives:

-) The Minutes of the Presbytery of Wigtown, dated February 08, and of the Synod of Galloway, October 19, 1708, enjoining a tion of accounts of the sufferings for religion in the late times of ution.
-) The Minute of the Kirk-session of Kirkinner, April 15, The part relating to Margaret Maclauchlan is—"Post sederunt, all the members except John M'Culloch, William 2, and John Martin, younger in Airles. Inter alia, the er gave in the account of the sufferings of honest, godly : in the late times, which was read, and is as follows: Margaret lison, of known integrity and piety from her youth, aged about , widow of John Milliken, wright in Drumjargan, was, in or about ar of God 1685, in her own house, taken off her knees in prayer, arried immediately to prison, and from one prison to another, it the benefit of light to read the Scriptures; was barbarously I by dragoons who were sent to carry her from Mahirmore to wn; and being sentenced by Sir Robert Grier of Lagg to be ed at a stake within the flood-mark, just below the town of wn, for conventicle keeping and alleged rebellion, was, accordthe said sentence, fixed to the stake till the tide made, and own within the water by one of the town officers by his halbert throat, till she died."
- The part of the Kirk-session of Penninghame, February 19, The part of the minute relating to the Wilson family is: ert Wilson of Glenvernock, in Castle Stewart's land, being to an excess conform to the guise of the times, and his wife it challenge for her religion, in good condition as to worldly, with a great stock on a large ground (fit to be a prey), was

A Cloud of Witnesses.

take the Test and hear the curates, refused both; were take the tier, thed, and lived in the wild mountains, bogs, and caves parents were charged, on their highest peril, that they should the country people were obliged by the terror of the law to arsue them, as well as the soldiers, with hue and cry.

"In February 1685, Thomas Wilson, of sixteen years of age, Margaret Wilson, of eighteen years, Agnes Wilson, of thirteen years, children of the said Gilbert—the said Thomas keeping the mountains, his two sisters, Margaret and Agnes, went secretly to Wigtown to see some friends, were there discovered, taken prisoners, and instantly thrust into the thieves' hole as the greatest malefactors; whence they were sometimes brought up to the Tolbooth, after a considerable time's imprisonment, where several others were prisoners for the like cause, particularly one Margaret Maclauchlan of Kirkinner parish, a woman of sixty-three years of age.

"After their imprisonment for some considerable time, Mr David Graham, Sheriff, the Laird of Lagg, Major Winram, Captain Strachan, called an assize, indicted these three women, viz., Margaret Maclauchlan, Margaret Wilson, Agnes Wilson, to be guilty of the rebellion at Bothwell Bridge, Airsmoss, twenty field conventicles, and twenty house conventicles. Yet it was well known that none of these women ever were within twenty miles of Bothwell or Airsmoss; and Agnes Wilson, being eight years of age at the time of Airsmoss, could not be deep in rebellion then, nor her sister of thirteen years of age, and twelve years at Bothwell Bridge its time. The assize did sit, and brought them in guilty, and these judges sentenced them to be tied to palisades fixed in the sand, within the flood mark, and there to stand till the flood overflowed them and drowned them.

"They received their sentence without the least discouragement, with a composed smiling countenance, judging it their honour to suffer for Christ's truth, that He is alone King and Head of His Church. Gilbert Wilson, foresaid, got his youngest daughter, Agnes Wilson, out of prison, upon his bond of a hundred pounds sterling, to produce her when called for; but was obliged to go to Edinburgh for this before it could be obtained. The time they were in prison, no means were unessayed with Margaret Wilson, to persuade her to take the oath of abjuration, and hear the curates, with threatenings and flattery, but without any success.

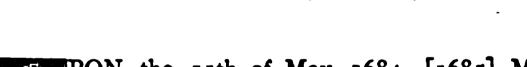

the eleventh day of May 1685, these two women, Marauchlan and Margaret Wilson, were brought forth to They did put the old woman first into the water, and rater was overflowing her, they asked Margaret Wilson ought of her in that case? She answered, 'What do I rist wrestling there? Think ye that we are sufferers? hrist in us, for He sends none a warfare on their own Aargaret Wilson sang Psalm xxv., from the 7th verse, read hapter of the Epistle to the Romans, and did pray, and But before her breath was quite gone, ter covered her. her up, and held her till she could speak, and then asked ould pray for the king. She answered that she wished n of all men, but the damnation of none. Some of her ing on the place, cried out, 'She is willing to conform,' ous to save her life at any rate. Upon which Major Winthe oath of abjuration to her, either to swear it, or return She refused it, saying, 'I will not; I am one of Christ's et me go.' And then they returned her into the water, nished her warfare, being a virgin martyr of eighteen years ring death for her refusing to swear the oath of abjuration e curates.

said Gilbert Wilson was fined for the opinion of his crassed with frequent quarterings of soldiers upon him, a hundred men at once, who lived at discretion on his that for several years together; and his frequent attenee Courts at Wigtown almost every week, at thirteen miles r three years time; riding to Edinburgh on these accounts, losses could not be reckoned and estimated, without within five thousand merks, yet for no principle or action; and died in great poverty lately, a few years hence, very aged woman, lives upon the charity of friends. His s lived to bear arms under king William in Flanders, and f Edinburgh; but had nothing to enter the ground which sed, where he lives to certify the truth of these things, others who knew them too well."

rart minutely examines the roll of the Sessions of Kirkinner ghame, and the Presbytery of Wigtown, and shows that t members had ample opportunities of knowing the truth of the sufferings of the two martyrs which they attested. Napier has replied to Dr Stewart's book in his "History Rescued in answer to History Vindicated;" but it is not a reply. It does not set aside any of Dr Stewart's proofs that the martyn actually were drowned. Dr Hill Burton is a writer of Whig sympathies; but he is an Episcopalian, and has really no bias in favour of the Covenanters, so that his judgment upon Sheriff Napier's "History Rescued" may be regarded as impartial. In a note appended to his "History of Scotland," Edinburgh, 1870, vol. vii., p. 549, as it was passing through the press, he says: "Of course this [i.e., 'History Rescued'] had to be read before final correction, that it might be seen whether it contained any new and unexpected discovery. But the two hundred and seventy additional pages revealed no other discovery, save a remarkable instance of that well known frailty of heroic natures, which deprives them of the capacity of knowing that they are beaten."

As might be expected, the Wigtown martyrs have been the theme of poetry. One of the happiest of Mrs Stuart Menteith's ballads, in her "Lays of the Kirk and Covenant," is that entitled "The Martyrs of Wigtown." The eloquent page in Lord Macaulay's history, in which he tells the story of their end, has inspired Mr Millais to one of the best efforts of his pencil in his "Margaret Wilson," in Once a Week, some years ago.

The date "11th May 1684" is plainly a misprint for 11th May 1685. The testimony of Robert Pollock is dated January 23, 1685, and the succeeding testimony of Thomas Stodart is August 12, 1685, so that the chronological order requires 1684 to be corrected to 1685, the date on the monument in Wigtown Churchyard over the grave of Margaret Wilson.—Ed.]

in the parish of Kirkinner, and Margaret Lauchlane in the parish of Kirkinner, and Margaret Wilson in Glenvernock in the shire of Galloway, being sentenced to death for their noncompliance with prelacy, and refusing to swear the oath of abjuration, by the Laird of Lagg, [i.e., Sir Robert Grierson, Captain Strachan, Colonel [Winram] Mr David Graham, and Provost Cultron [i.e., of Wigtown], who commanded them to receive their sentence on their knees, which they refusing, were pressed down by force till they received it: and so were by their order tied to a stake within nark, in the water of Blednoch near Wigtown, where, after I made them wrestle long with the waves, which flowing, on them by degrees, and had sometimes thrust them under nd then pulled them out again to see if they would recant, luring death with undaunted courage, yielded up their spirits former was a widow woman of about sixty-three, of a most n and blameless conversation, a pattern of piety and virtue, ing constantly refused to hear the curates, was much pursued ed, and at length taken by the soldiers while she was devoutly ping God in her family; and being indicted of being at Bothdge, Airsmoss, and twenty field conventicles, and as many conventicles, after sore and long imprisonment, without y refreshments of fire, bed, or diet, at length suffered this ath.

other (Margaret Wilson), a young woman of scarce twentyars of age, after she with her brother, who was about nined her sister fifteen years old, had been long driven from her's house, and exposed to lie in dens and caves of the randering through the mosses and mountains of Carrick, le, and Galloway, going to Wigtown secretly to visit the Margaret Lauchlane, was taken by the fraud of one Patrick vho, under colour of friendship, having invited her and her drink with him, offered them the king's health, and upon usal of it, as not warranted in God's Word, and contrary to n moderation, went presently out and informed against them; r was dismissed, as being but fifteen years of age, upon her paying a hundred pounds sterling for her ransom; she being I and examined, whether she owned the king as head of the and would take the abjuration-oath; not answering to their , but adhering to the truths of Christ, was in like manner ned, and after great severities of imprisonment, suffered the death; being put oft into the water, and when half-dead again, to see if she would take the oath, which she refused While her fellow sufferer was wrestling with the s being put first in to discourage her; the persecutors asked t she thought of that sight? She answered, "What do I see ist (mystical) wrestling there?" One of the times that she en out of the water they said, Say "God save the king:" she g with Christian meekness, "I wish the salvation of all men, but the damnation of none:" Upon which one of her friends, alleging she had said what they demanded, desired them to let her go; but they would not, seeing she refused to take the oath.

During her imprisonment she wrote a large letter to her friends, wherein, besides the lively and feeling expressions of her sense of God's love, she doth, with a judgment not usual for her age and education, disclose the unlawful nature of the Abjuration Oath, hearing of curates, owning the king's Supremacy, which was the thing the persecutors meant by his authority, and proves the necessity of her suffering upon these heads.

Thomas Stodart.

date July 24th, 1685, in a decree of Council containing a list of prisoners confined in the Canongate Tolbooth, in order to be banished to his majesty's plantations abroad. Thomas Stodart, James Wilkie, Matthew Bryce, are excepted, on the ground that they "not only obstinately refused the oath of allegiance, but most impertinently and indiscreetly misbehaved themselves before the Council." The Council further ordains that they immediately be put in irons, and grants warrant to his majesty's Advocate to process them criminally before the justices.

The three were tried on August 6th, and were found guilty of treason because they refused the Abjuration Oath. They were sentenced to be hanged at the Grassmarket, Wednesday, August 12th 1685.

In his testimony, Stodart says the reason of his condemnation was that he could not give such an answer to their questions about the government and the king's authority as was satisfactory to his judges, and his refusal to disown the Apologetic Declaration. His testimony is one of much simplicity. Wodrow justly says it is very plain and natural for a common country man.

Matthew Bryce and James Wilkie, mentioned in the paragraph close of Thomas Stodart's testimony, as his fellow-sufferers, else is known. Matthew Bryce lived in the parish of Carmun-Wodrow corrects the date of their execution given in the 1d" as July 27th, into August 12th.—ED.]

HE LAST TESTIMONY of Thomas Stodart, who suffered at the Grassmarket of Edinburgh, August 12th, 1685.

"MEN, BRETHREN, AND FATHERS, HEARKEN,—I being to take my farewell of the world, I leave this my dying testimony, according to the form of the Christians of old; I having like the same ground for it that he ho used that word; that was Stephen; who was condemned, se he spoke blasphemous words against the law and the temple. cause I will not adhere to, nor approve of their laws, which ave power in their hands, they condemned me to die, though ould not witness so much against me for speaking against them, sey never essayed to prove the sentence upon me, which now I study in a word to give you an account of.

and first, I received my sentence of banishment, and then notanding of that I was committed to the justices to abide the assize, tey passed upon me the sentence of death, for no other cause an give, but because I could not give such an answer to their ons about the government and the king's authority (as they it), as could satisfy their lusts, and that I durst not disown the getic Declaration; and so I humbly conceive it will come to the ground of my suffering, that I could not own Christ's es nor the power that they have taken to themselves against nor disown Christ's friends and their actings as they required; herefore I am sentenced, albeit I owned as much of the authority
y Christian can be obliged to; that is to say, lawful authority ling to the Word of God; but I desire to be submissive to His ho hath called me to this, and to have high thoughts of Him.
not get words to set Him out, but I find something to say to the commentation of These as a is said in Cana ii. 1: 'He is the case of Sauran and thy of the valley.' the sweetest rose that ever I smalled and never sweeter than when under the cross, and suffering upon the account.

May I shall not be long. I have sold you upon what account I suffer in a our of love in Clause and by faith in His mercy, that I remove upon in I shall end it with a word. I thought it my duty it added to the Word of God and it everything agreeable thereto; and I would suffer for everything as a ground which I think is right, and taken our of the Word of God having encouragement from His blessed promises. Thus such the Lord that created thee, 0 Javoid and He that formed thee. O Israel Fear not: for I have redeemed them I have called thee by thy name; thou art mine When their passest through the withers I will be with thee' (Isa xiid I, 2).

"And I have this to say also, that in all my imprisonments He was wroderfully seen in owning me and carrying me through all the temperations that I was mysted [i.e. visited] with; if I would tell you them all they would take up much paper and time; and time being short I cannot get it done: but I think I must speak something to the commendation of free grace, that hath made me to suffer all cheerfully. I have read in the Apostle. It is a faithful saying: For if we be dead with Him, we shall also live with Him: if we suffer, we shall also reign with Him? (2 Tim. ii. 11). It is good at all times, but especially now. O but the people of this generation be greatly involved in sin; by reason they are so greatly and deeply involved in the breach of Covenant, which though it must not be owned by the law of the land, yet I dare not but own it. fain say, as it is said, 'And Elijah said, As the Lord of hosts liveth, before whom I stand, I will surely show myself unto him to-day' (1 Kings xviii. 15). I own it before all, and I own myself to have joined, and do allow it heartily in joining with that poor persecuted party so much disowned. The thing that I did in that case I thought it my duty. I leave my testimony to my owning of it; and that I have joined myself to that which was most agreeable to the I leave my testimony in behalf of these that I Word of God. joined with, that little handful in their societies and fellowships, which have been very refreshful to my soul, and I have been much delighted in these; for I thought it was the Church of God.

"And therefore I leave my testimony against all superstition and contrary to that way I received of the Lord there, and every-contrary to the Word of God,

I leave my testimony against all unlawful deeds, and all murderits and actings, whatsoever they be.

I leave my testimony against Popery and Prelacy, and whatsoplant is not of my heavenly Father's planting, and everything try to sound doctrine, and the power of godliness.

I leave my testimony also against these that hear the curates, gainst all them that have said in effect, the Word is a lie; that cause they will not take it to be their rule; for that is the only we should take to be our rule, in all steps of our sojourning

Now I think I must take my farewell of all created comforts, ll the things of the world, which have been so great a mean to many of this generation scar [i.e., be frightened] at the cross of t, which is much mistaken by the world. He was so condescendhat He paved the way for poor sinners Himself, and made it ht and easy; and wonderful it is to think upon. The way that to heaven is very straight, and very easy. Also to these that e He is that universal King, that lives and reigns forever, and 10 subject themselves and obey Him, and consent to His terms, even know peace and shall enjoy His presence, which is the of all things. It is peace with God that is the matter of the er's rejoicing, and makes them all to flighter [i.e., flutter or throb] oy in following Him, who is the way, the truth, and the life; and to know is life everlasting; that doth and may give great ge to these who love this way of His, that is so greatly iched by the people of this generation. I think ye may conwhat I mean by the saying of this. And now, my dear friends ellow-sufferers, and brethren in the Lord, O but the counsel of ord be wise, in bringing me hitherto!

And I shall say no more, but touch at one thing, and that is, here I join my hearty testimony with all that ever the people of did in His way, and for His cause in His Gospel terms; to all the that has been shed for the Gospel, in all fields and scaffolds oever. So I take my farewell of all things under heaven. Fare-o the world, the flesh and sin, and also to all friends and rela-and kinsmen, and brethren; and also I take my farewell of er and brethren, and sisters. And also I bid farewell to all my ed privileges and enjoyments. As also, I take my farewell of all the sweet Societies that have been so refreshful to my soul sevent times. Farewell friends in Christ. Farewell sun, moon, and stars. Welcome heaven. Welcome my God and angels, and glorifed spirits. And so come. Lord Jesus.

"THOMAS STODART."

OGETHER with the foregoing martyr, two others received the sentence of death, viz., Matthew Bryce and James Wilkie, who suffered at Edinburgh, July 27 [August 12], 1685.

The former whereof declares in his testimony, that they were interrogate only on these two questions:

"1. Will ye take the oath of allegiance? To which they answered, No, we will not take it.

= 2. Will ye own the authority? They answered, We will om all authority according to the Word of God; upon which they were immediately all three sentenced to be hanged. Whence the said martyr very justly infers that they had nothing else to charge upon him as the cause of his death, but that he spoke of the Word of God. His testimony as to all the material heads, is consonant with this of Thomas Stodart's.

Edward Marshall.

HE notices in the Council Records of EDWARD MARSHALL are very scanty. Under November 19, 1685, Edward Marshall, forfeited for being at the rebellion 1679, now prisoner in Falkirk, is appointed by the Council to be brought in to Edinburgh Under November 26, they recommend it to the justices [i.e., the Lords of Justiciary] to meet, and, in regard Edward Marshall will not own the king's authority and was forfeited, that they name the day of his execution. November 30, the Lords of Justiciary met, and sentenced him, Edward Marshall, of Kaemuir, forfeited January 17, 1682, for treasonable crimes, mentioned in the verdict of the assize, and ned to be executed to death, demeaned [i.e., punished] as a r, and underly [i.e., undergo] the pains of treason when appre-ed; and now being apprehended, the Lords appoint him to be to the Grassmarket, on Friday, December 4th, betwixt two and n the afternoon, and there to be hanged till dead.

n his testimony he reports the questions that were put to him is trial. They were of the usual character. He tells that he ehind him a wife and seven children.

Laemuir, where Edward Marshall lived, is a farm near to the Farm, on the river Avon, in the parish of Muiravonside. There mention of his name in the parish records, and the family left istrict more than forty years ago, previous to our informant, Mr lerson, session-clerk, coming into office. The tradition of the 1 is, that a family of the name of Marshall once lived at Kaeand that one of the family suffered to the death for the cause edom.—ED.]

HE LAST TESTIMONY of EDWARD MARSHALL, of Kaemure, in the parish of Morren Side [i.e., Muiravonside], who suffered at the Grassmarket of Edinburgh, December 4th, 1685.

"First, I leave my testimony against all that have joined with the malignant party, either in rising in arms, or in paying of cess, or any manner of way contrary to ovenants and Work of Reformation, once famous and maintained to whole ministry, noblemen, gentlemen, and commons of all but now opposed and borne down by the generality of this om; and particularly against such persons as once owned the nant, and avowed the cause of Christ, and are now employing strength for overturning the same, as it is in Ps. lxxiv. 6.

Now, the things upon which I was accused and sentenced were: pining in arms with that party at Bothwell, and owning of the and Covenants, and for adhering thereunto; for they questioned I would call it rebellion? But I would not, but accounted it uty.

- "Then they asked me if I would own James VIL as king of Britain? And I told them, I owned him as far as he owned God, His cause, and people.
 - "Then some of them said, That was not all.
- "Then they asked, If I would pray for the king of Britain? I answered, This is not a place appointed for prayer.
 - "Then they laughed, and said, Remove you.
- "Now, dear friends, be not discouraged, although they threaten you with imprisonment or death for the cause of Christ; for He that calls you to suffering is able to support and bear you up under it; for I found more of His presence since I came to prison, than I did heretofore: for Christ suffered imprisonment and death for us, and ought not we to suffer for Him? As concerning this, that my enemies and carnal friends reproach me with self-murder, I am conscious to myself, that it is not so, but out of love to Christ and His covenanted work.
- "Now I recommend my wife and seven children to the good guiding of my God, who hath hitherto protected me; for He has promised to be a husband to the widow, and a father to the fatherless, providing they will walk in His ways, and keep His commandments. Now, I recommend my soul to God, who hath preserved me hitherto, and who unexpectedly has singled me out to suffer for Him, who am the unworthiest of all sinners, and I never thought that He should have so highly privileged me, as to account me worthy to give a testimony for Him, though sometimes it entered into my thoughts, O if I would be called to it!
- "Now, farewell dear wife and sweet children. Farewell all friends and relations, especially such of you as have given up your names to Christ. Farewell sun, moon, and all worldly enjoyments. Welcome Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, into whose hands I commit my spirit. "Sic subscribitur.

"EDWARD MARSHALL"

			•
	•			·
		•
				•

TORWOOD CASTLE,

John Nisbet.

IN NISBET, of Hardhill, is one of the most interesting of the sufferers during the twenty-eight years' persecution. His great-grandfather, Murdoch, attached himself to the of the Reformation in Scotland—the Lollards of Kyle, uence of the persecution that arose, Murdoch had to flee land, and took a copy of the New Testament "in writ"

The manuscript New Testament was preserved in the John Nisbet's time, and had been bequeathed to the his father, a man who is said to have very carefully trained illy in the fear of God.

Visbet was of a tall and powerful frame. Like his friend aton, in the neighbouring parish of Fenwick, he passed his nood in military service abroad. He returned to his native ortly after the peace of Münster in 1648, which closed the ars' War, and soon afterwards had the happiness to be Margaret Law, a young woman, says his son, "who proved equal, true, and kind yoke-fellow."

is present at the battle of Pentland, November 28, 1666, eft for dead upon the field, but he revived and escaped ert of night, although it was a year before his wounds were aled. The soldiers came to the house in quest of him, ng him" (says the son, in a passage in his Diary, which gives ture of the sufferings of the time, extracts from which Dr is given in the Appendix to the Memoirs of Veitch and "they held a drawn sword to my mother's breast" [who was re birth to a child, the writer of the Diary], "threatening to rough unless she would discover her husband. She, weepthem that for anything she knew he was killed (for she it was so), and that she had not seen him; so they took for [i.e., suited] them in the house, and went off."

some days after, getting notice that he was still alive, they ith greater fury than before, and threatened her with present death, first with a drawn sword at her breast, and also with a bended pistol; and contrary to all law, Divine and human, they dragged her alongst with them, with a burning candle in her hand, through all the rooms of the main house, and then through all the office houses, they still raging with their drawn swords and bended pistols; but, after all their search, they, missing my father, beat the servants, to strike the greater terror on my mother to tell where her husband was; but she could not.

"Then they took a young man, called David Finlay, alongst with them to where their chief commander lay, called General Dalziel. He caused the said David Finlay to be shot to death in less than half-an-hour's warning, and carried away all my father's stock of moveable effects, which was considerably great; and for half-a-year there was hardly a day ever passed but they were at the house, either in the night or day, in search of my father.

"In the year 1678, there was a great host of Highlanders came down in the middle of the winter to the Western shires. The shire of Ayr was the centre of their encampment or cantoning, where they pillaged, plundered, thieved, and robbed night and day; even the Lord's day they regarded as little as any other.

"At their first coming, four of them came to my father's house, who was overseeing the making of his own malt; they told him they were come to make the Fig (so they termed the Presbyterians) [i.e., Whig] to take with God and the king. This they came over again and again. They pointed to his shoes, and said they would have the broque off his foot, and accordingly laid hands on him, but he threw himself out of their grips, and turning to a pitchfork which was used at the stalking of his corn, and they having their broadswords drawn, cried 'Claymore,' and made at him; but he quickly drove them out of the kiln, and, chasing them all four a pace from the house, knocked one of them to the ground.

"The next day about twenty of them came to the house, but he not being at home, they told that they were come to take the Fig [i.e., Whig] and his arms. They plundered his house, as they did the house of every other man who was not conform to the then laws; and such were their thievish dispositions, and so well versed were they at the second sight, that, let people hide never so well, these men would go straight to where it was, whether beneath the ground or above, as though they had been at the putting of it there, search for it, dig it up, and away with it.

en my father came [to Drumclog], the good people who to hear sermon, and the enemy, were drawn up in battle rder to fight. Five or six of the gentlemen who came to hear hat were most fit to command the country people, took upon command, because some of them had been formerly in the as likewise my father had been; two of whom went to meet when within sight, and gave him an account how matters pointed out to him where Mr King was guarded on the enemy by an officer and four dragoons; and the officer s to shoot Mr King if they lost; and if the country people hat were or should be taken prisoners were to be hanged ely after battle. My father being a strong, bold, and resowent on boldly and in all parts of the action, especially in of Mr King, whom he set at liberty; which boldness and f his was much taken notice of by the enemy. The enemy day, and had about thirty or thirty-five of their number reof they said my father killed seven with his own hand, ch exposed him and all his to their after revenging fury." othwell Bridge, according to Wodrow, he was a captain. pied the post of danger at the bridge, and stood as long as would stand by him. In the retreat he managed to escape. lenounced as a rebel, and three thousand merks set upon ife was a woman of a heroic spirit, and though she and her d (like those in an earlier age, of whom Inspiration hath the world was not worthy) to wander about in deserts and ains, and in dens and caves of the earth, she sympathised and never, says her son, was heard or seen to show the ontent with her lot. For more than four years she bore her trials, till in December 1683, after an illness of eight the brought them to a close. She died in "a sheep's cot, no light nor fire but that of a candle, no bed but that of stool but the ground to sit on."

His property was confiscated, and his wife and children rift upon the world, and all threatened with a like punishment 1 to harbour him and his.

He immediately hastened to the place where she died. entered the hut the dead body had been in the grave il days, and new calamities had fallen upon him. The he beheld was the chesting of his daughter, who had died a few hours before; and on looking round the hut, in a corner lay two of his sons, in the delirium of fever. He spoke to them, but they were unconscious of his presence; at which he groaned, records his son, and, in the language of the patriarch of Uz—language in which pious resignation in the midst of calamity has so often found utterance—said, 'Naked came I into this world, and naked must I go out of it: the Lord is making my passage easy." Under the protection of midnight the body of the daughter was buried in Stonehouse Churchyard, as had been done to the mother eight days before. Next day a search was made for the bereaved husband and father, but for this time he escaped their hands

He was at last taken on a Sabbath morning, in the beginning of November 1684, when at Midland, a farm-house in Fenwick parish The old house has been since pulled down, and a new one erected on its site. He, with Peter Gemmel, George Woodburn, and an old man, John Ferguson or Fergushill, from Mains of Enterkin, Tarbolton parish, had met for prayer and conference the preceding evening, to allay some difference that had arisen in the branch of the United Societies to which they belonged. They had not been long assembled when they learned that Lieutenant Nisbet, a cousing of Hardhill, and a party of soldiers, were in quest of them. the morning they resolved to separate, but after leaving the house they were obliged to return, on account of the illness of John Fergus The soldiers soon came in sight, and spent an hour in search ing the house, but failed to find out where the four were concealed and so they left Midland. On the way two men met them, one of whom, it is said, told them, "They were good seekers, but ill finders." They returned, and their renewed search was successful.

The four defended themselves as best they could. They had only three charges, which they shot away, save one which missed fire, and they received twenty-four in return. When the soldiers next dashed in upon them, they kept them at bay with their empty guns, used a clubs. At last the soldiers threatened to fire the house, when the went out, John Nisbet foremost, who got his back to the wall, and stood and defended himself. In a short time he received sew wounds, but still maintained his ground, when the commander can to his assailants and asked, "Why had they not despatched the obstinate rebel." But the moment he saw him, he recognised his and cried, "Ho! it is Hardhill; spare his life, for the Council h offered 3000 merks for him." He ordered bedclothes to be brough were thrown over him, and prevented him from wielding his l, and he was thus secured. His three companions were shot. John Nisbet was then, as is narrated in the account preng his testimony, taken to Edinburgh, where he was examined the Council.

Ie was tried, November 30th, and found guilty, and sentenced hanged at the Grassmarket, December 4th. He must have oyed his time diligently during the four days that intervened een his sentence and his execution, for, besides the testimony in rolume, we have in our possession a MS. quarto volume, in the 1g of John Howie, of Lochgoin, which contains another with the wing title: "The Testimony of John Nisbet, who lived at Hardin the parish of Loudon, from the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, 1685." about a third shorter than that given in the "Cloud." Its closing noces are—Now, in all I have said, possibly some may mistake me, and hat I commend myself. But thus and thus I have said, to comlithe goodness of God, with whom there is no respect of persons. I can say, from long and sad experience, that of all that have privileged to suffer for truth, I have been the most notorious r; and this I leave under my hand, when I am now within seven ght hours to enter into eternity, that all may wonder and admire ondescension of free grace and rich love so freely bestowed upon To the commendation of His matchless goodness, He has passed illtiness and sin in me beyond many. . . . And now I shall up my time, and discourse with this. Let all wonder, admire, praise Him for what he has done to me and for me."

N.B.—Let none doubt of the veracity of this testimony... ugh it be not the same as to matter or method with that publifirst in quarto by his son—a soldier in the Castle of Edinh—and now in the 'Cloud of Witnesses,' perhaps it might be r by him corrected and enlarged, or else wrote at a later time, e one is more full on his own case, and the other less so.

(Signed), "John Howie, Jany. 1776." leither Wodrow nor the "Cloud" gives an account of his last s. A quaintly-expressed and deeply-interesting narrative is nded to his life. It is—'An Appendix, related and attested by some of his intimate aintance, that were eye and ear witnesses to his martyrdom."

"This valiant Christian, and faithful courageous martyr for truth, John Nisbet, in Hardhill, with whom we were for many years familiarly acquainted, was a strict observer of the Sabbath, a great examiner of the Scriptures, a great wrestler in prayer, reserved always as to his own case and soul's concernment; nor did many know how it was with him as to that, till he came to prison. Notwithstanding, he was always ready to contend for truth when it was opposed (which he usually termed precious), and had Scripture ready at all times to back what he spoke, either directly or by necessary consequence to the purpose in hand. . . .

"After he wrote this his last speech, he was taken out immediately to the Council, and from that to the place of execution; all the way thither he had his eyes lifted up to heaven, his face shined visibly, he seemed to rejoice, but spoke little till he came to the scaffold. When he came there he jumped up on it, and cried out: 'My soul doth magnify the Lord, my soul doth magnify the Lord; I have longed these sixteen years to seal the precious cause and interest of precious Christ with my blood. And now, now He hath answered and granted my request, and has left me no more ado, but to come here and pour forth my last prayers, sing forth my last praise to Him in time on this sweet and desirable scaffold, mount that ladder, and then I shall quickly get home to my Father's house, see, enjoy, serve and sing forth the praises of my glorious Redeemer, for ever more, world without end.'

"Then he resumed the heads of his last testimony to the truth, and enlarged upon what he owned and what he disowned. But drums were always caused be beat when he spoke to the people, which you are sure deprived us much of the satisfaction that otherwise we might have had; yet over this difficulty we heard him say: 'The covenanted God of Scotland hath a dreadful storm of wrath provided, which He will surely pour out suddenly and unexpectedly like a thunderbolt upon these covenanted lands, for their perfidy, treachery, and woeful apostacy; and then men shall say, They have won well away that got a scaffold for Christ.

"He exhorted all to make much use of Christ for a hiding-place, for blood, blood shall be the judgment of these lands. He sang the first six verses of the 34th Psalm, and read the eighth to the Romans. He offered prayer with great presence of mind and very loud; but for noise of drums, as hath been said, we could not distinctly hear what he either spoke or prayed, except when his face was the place where we stood, so that in such disturbing circumthis is all of his scaffold speech that we could safely gather. It up the ladder rejoicing and praising the Lord, which we all ly saw.

hus he died 4th December 1685, the fifty-eighth year of his age, e full assurance of his interest in the ever-blessed Lord Jesus as also of the Lord's returning to this poor land to raise up en tabernacle of David therein in a more remarkable way and than ever, which sight he saw afar off by faith, and rejoiced " testimony, as given in the following pages, contains a very mount of passages from Scripture. These passages seem to have been cited by him, but were printed at full length, sublished by his son James, who issued in 1718 "A true relate life and sufferings of John Nisbet, in Hardhill." It was ed in 1847, in the second volume of "Select Biographies," or the Wodrow Society, by the late Rev. W. K. Tweedie, D.D., rgh. In substance it is given in the following pages. John has given him a place among the Scots Worthies, and from a and manuscript sources, has told some facts not to be found re.—ED.]

N the 4th of December 1685, suffered John Nisbet, in Hardhill, in the parish of Loudon, whose testimony, though it be extant, could not be found by the publishers of these is; only that the memory of so eminent a martyr be not buried, is short relation, which is all the account they could find conhis sufferings. [In the fourth edition of 1741, John Nisbet's ny is inserted with the following note: "The testimony martyr is now come to the hands of the publisher of this and is inserted in its proper place, immediately after this :"—ED.]

to his child, from one of the outed ministers [John Blackame to be troubled by the enemies on that account, and the leclared out of the pulpit his purpose to excommunicate him t Lord's day, but was prevented by sudden death. When that of the Lord's people renewed the Covenants at Lanark, and appeared in arms at Pentland Hills, he engaged in the covenant with them, and was sore wounded in the fight, insomuch that he was left for dead. But by God's goodness he recovered, and all alongst testified against the abominations of Prelacy, Supremacy, Arbitrary Government, and Indulgence, till the rising in arms at Bothwell, where he did good service, being not only a zealous Christian, but a courgeous soldier. After this the enemies seized all his goods, expelled his wife and four small children from house and hold, and offered a large sum of money for himself; but the Lord preserved him, while He had work for him.

He was a close follower of the Gospel faithfully preached in the fields; was kept steadfast in the truth from extremes on right or left hand; and was assistant in publishing the declarations for truth, emitted during that time.

At length, in November 1685, being in a poor man's house in the parish of Fenwick, with other three, after he was sore wounded, he was taken by Lieutenant Nisbet, the other three being shot dead on the spot. The lieutenant having caused tie him, asked, 'What he thought of himself now?' He answered, 'I think as much of Christ and His cause, for which I suffer, as ever, but I judge myself at a loss, being in time, and my dear brethren in eternity, whom you have unjustly murdered.' The bloody wretch swore that he had reserved him for a further judgment. He answered, 'If the Lord stand by me, and help me to be faithful to the death, I care not what piece of suffering I be put to endure.'

He was carried first to Kilmarnock, from thence to Ayr next morning, and being brought back to Kilmarnock again, was thence transported to Edinburgh, where, being brought before the Council by the foresaid Lieutenant Nisbet, who demanded his money for him they interrogated him to this effect.

- " Q. Were you at that conventicle? (naming time and place).
- "A. Yes.
- " Q. How many men and arms were there?
- "A. I went there to hear the Gospel preached, and not to take an account of what men and arms were there.
 - " Q. Which way went ye when the preaching was done?
 - "A. Which way we could best think of, to escape your cruelty.
- "Q. Where keep ye your General Meetings, and what do you at them?
 - "While he was about to answer, one of the Councillors interrupted him, telling in his fashion what was done at such General Meetings, and that there was one of them kept at Edinburgh, and asked the prisoner if he was there? who answered, No.

- "Then they said to him, We hope you are so much of a Christian, as to pray for the king. He answered, Prayer being a holy ordinance of God, we ought to pray for kings as well as others, but not when every profligate bids us.
 - " Q. Do you own the king as sole sovereign?
- "A. He being Popish, and that from his youth, and I a Protestant of the Presbyterian covenanted persuasion, I neither can nor will own him, while he remains such.

Whereupon, incontinent [i.e., forthwith], without further process, they passed sentence upon him, which he received not only with Christian submission, but with much thankfulness, blessing and praising his God, who had counted him worthy to suffer for His name. And during the time of his imprisonment he was wonderfully assisted and graciously supported of the Lord under his cross, having both assurance of the pardon of his sins, and his peace with God, and also a firm persuasion of the justness of the cause and work to which he adhered, and for which he was put to such sufferings. Besides the seven wounds which he received when he was apprehended, he had a merciless weight of irons upon him, during the whole time of his imprisonment.

In his testimony he invites and exhorts all to embrace the cross, encouraging them by his own sweet experience of God's presence under it, declares his adherence to all the truths contained in the Word of God, summed up in the Confession of Faith, sworn to in the Covenants, and sealed with the blood and faithful testimonies of former martyrs, and, among others then controverted, to the "Method of transmitting a Testimony," taken by the reverend Mr James Renwick, and the suffering remnant. He manifests his detestation of all the courses of defection, and witnesses against all the wrongs done to Jesus Christ, either in His cause or in His members; and particularly bears testimony against the Earl of Argyle's misstating the quarrel in his Declaration, and his too lax and promiscuous admitting of all sorts into his army. He concludes with a solemn farewell to the world, and recommendation of his soul into the hands of God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

The above narrative was transmitted by one of his nearest relations, who had full knowledge of the whole matter.

HE LAST AND DYING TESTIMONY of JOHN NISBET in Hardhill, which he delivered to a friend in the Ironhouse, when he was taken out to the scaffold in the Grassmarket of Edinburgh, where he died, Friday, December 4th, 1685.

"I have always thought, that to live for Christ and die for Christ is a sufficient testimony for truth; yet now, when I am within a few hours of eternity, to prevent mistakes, to satisfy my dear friends and let them know how it is with me, and to let the world know what I die witnessing for, and testifying against, I judge it proper to leave a few lines behind me.

"As for myself, it hath pleased the Lord Jehovah, of His superabundant goodness and infinite mercy, powerfully to determine my heart to close with, and embrace the Lord Jesus Christ, as He is made offer of in the everlasting Gospel, for my king, priest and prophet. And that this conquest and captivating of me to His obedience (who was an heir of wrath and a mass of sin and sinful corruption), is the fruit of electing love, according as it is manifested in the covenant of free, free, free grace, will evidently appear from these Scriptures following, which He, by the power and concurrence of His holy Spirit, hath made effectual to the convincing, converting, strengthening, and enabling of me to be His, and to be for Him through weal, and through woe, through good report, and through bad report; and they are so many sweet cordials to my soul, when stepping out of time into eternity.

"'Thy people shall be willing in the day of Thy power' (Ps. cx. 3). 'For the children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works, but of Him that calleth. For he saith to Moses [see Exod. xxxiii. 19], I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy; and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion. So then it is not of him that willeth nor of him that runneth, but of God that sheweth mercy' (Rom. ix. 11, 15, 16). 'God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the truth' (2 Thess. ii. 13). 'Then I was by Him, as one brought up with Him: and I was daily His delight, rejoicing always e Him; rejoicing in the habitable part of His earth; and my its were with the sons of men. Now therefore hearken unto) ye children; for blessed are they that keep my ways. ction, and be wise, and refuse it not. Blessed is the man that th me, watching daily at my gates, waiting at the posts of my For whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall obtain favour of But he that sinneth against me wrongeth his own soul: all that hate me love death' (Prov. viii. 30-36). 'For whom He oreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the e of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many Moreover whom He did predestinate, them He also ren. 1: and whom He called, them He also justified: and whom He ed, them He also glorified. Who shall separate us from the of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, kedness, or peril, or sword? Nay, in all these things we are than conquerors through Him that loved us' (Rom. viii. 29, 30, 'In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of the Gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye red, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise, which is arnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased ssion, unto the praise of His glory' (Eph. i. 13, 14). saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to orks, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was us in Christ Jesus before the world began' (2 Tim. i. 9). by works of righteousness which we have done, but according is mercy He saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and ring of the Holy Ghost; which He shed on us abundantly gh Jesus Christ our Saviour' (Titus iii. 5, 6). 'God is faithful, nom ye were called unto the fellowship of His Son Jesus Christ ord' (1 Cor. i. 9). 'Being justified freely by His grace, through edemption that is in Jesus Christ; whom God hath set forth to propitiation through faith in His blood, to declare His righteousfor the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance od' (Rom. iii. 24, 25). 'Even as David also describeth the edness of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousness out works' (Rom. iv. 6). 'How much more shall the blood of it, who through the eternal Spirit offered Himself without spot od, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living '(Heb. ix. 14). 'To wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling vorld unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation' (2 Cor. v. 19). 'That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God' (Eph. iii. 17-19). ing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified' (Gal. ii. 'For if by one man's offence death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ' (Rom. v. 17). 'All that the Father giveth Me shall come to Me; and him that cometh to Me I will in no wise cast out. And this is the Father's will which hath sent Me, that of all which He hath given Me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day' (John vi. 37, 39). 'For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost' (Rom. xiv. 'There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit' (Rom. viii. 1). 'These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God' (1 John v. 13). 'And be renewed in the spirit of your mind' (Eph. iv. 23). 'And be found in Him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith: that I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death' (Phil. iii. 9, 10). fore we are buried with Him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life' (Rom. vi. 4). path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day' (Prov. iv. 18). 'Being confident of this very thing, that He which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ' (Phil. i. 6). 'Nevertheless my loving kindness will I not utterly take from him, nor suffer my faithfulness to fail. My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips' (Ps. lxxxix. 33, 34). 'Therefore being ified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus rist: by whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherewe stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God' (Rom. v. 1, 2). ho are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation dy to be revealed in the last time' (1 Pet. i. 5). 'And if chiln, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ: if so be t we suffer with Him, that we may be also glorified together' om. viii. 17). 'For I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ: it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; the Jew first, and also to the Greek' (Rom. i. 16). 'To whom d would make known what is the riches of the glory of this stery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of ry' (Col. i. 27). 'Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for m meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your ls' (Matt. xi. 29). 'Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He ll sustain thee: He shall never suffer the righteous to be moved' 'For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but thty through God, to the pulling down of strong holds' (2 Cor. x. 'I will cry unto God most high; unto God that performeth all igs for me' (Ps. lvii. 2). 'He that covereth his sins shall not sper; but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy' ov. xxviii. 13). 'But I will sing of thy power; yea, I will sing id of thy mercy in the morning: for thou hast been my defence . refuge in the day of my trouble. Unto thee, O my strength, I sing: for God is my defence, and the God of my mercy' . lix. 16, 17). 'Thou hast ascended on high, thou hast led tivity captive: thou hast received gifts for men; yea, for the ellious also, that the Lord God might dwell among them. the Lord, who daily loadeth us with benefits, even the God of our He that is our God is the God of salvation; and ration. Selah. o God the Lord belong the issues from death' (Ps. lxviii. 18-20). or we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were disred, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, mal in the heavens' (2 Cor. v. 1). 'To the general assembly and rch of the first-born, which are written in heaven, and to God the lge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to us the Mediator of the new Covenant, and to the blood of inkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel' (Heb. xii. 23, Ps. xlv. from the 1st to the 9th verses; John i. 1st to the 15th ses, and xviii. throughout; Isa. liii. to the end; with many more.

"Let none reflect upon me for citing so much, for the Scripture hath been to me from my youth the living oracles of His divine and When I was crying, 'What shall I do to be saved?' sacred lips. and when I was saying, 'How shall I know the way of the Lord that I may walk therein?' then His Word was 'a light to my feet and a lamp to my path,' exhorting me, as it is in Isaiah lv. 1-8-- 'Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come, ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price. Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labour for that which satisfieth not? hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness. Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David. Behold I have given Him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to Behold, thou shalt call a nation that thou knowest not, the people. and nations that knew not thee shall run unto thee because of the Lord thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel; for He hath glorified thee. Seek ye the Lord while He may be found, call ye upon Him while He is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and He will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for He will abun-For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are dantly pardon. your ways my ways, saith the Lord.' 'And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst' (John vi. 35). hold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me' (Rev. iii. 20). 'Only acknowledge thine iniquity, that thou hast transgressed against the Lord thy God, and hast scattered thy ways to the strangers under every green tree, and ye have not obeyed my voice, saith the Lord. Turn, O backsliding children, saith the Lord; for I am married unto you: and I will take you one of a city, and two of a family, and I will bring you to Zion. Return, ye backsliding children, and I will heal your backslidings. Behold, we come unto thee; for thou art the Lord our God. Truly in vain is salvation hoped for from the hills, and from the multitude of mountains: truly in the Lord our God is the salvation of Israel' (Jer. iii. 13, 14, 22, 23). 'O Israel, return unto the Lord thy God; for thou hast fallen by thine iniquity. Take with you words, and turn to the say unto him, Take away all iniquity, and receive us graciously: I we render the calves of our lips' (Hosea, xiv. 1, 2). 'I have heard Ephraim bemoaning himself thus; Thou hast chastised and I was chastised, as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke: hou me, and I shall be turned; for thou art the Lord my God' exxi. 18.) 'Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and e: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me' (John xiv. 6). he Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth ome. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, a take the water of life freely' (Rev. xxii. 17).

When I was grappling with sin, Satan, and the world, and my ricked and deceitful heart, the grand enemies of my salvation, Vord was as props and pillars to me: so that though I got ounds, and was oft sorely beat, yet at the last I came off vics, by the help of Him who is God all-sufficient to all who, h grace, lay hold on Him for help. It is by Him that I have the good fight, that I have finished my course; and that I ept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of ousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at It is by Him, shining in His Word, that I know all my old sins and transgressions are freely pardoned, and that I have right and title to what is expressed (1 Cor. i. 30). So that now tilt and condemning power of sin, being fully pardoned by a I act of God's free and sovereign grace, through the merits of ord Jesus Christ, effectually applied and witnessed unto by the Spirit, upon and to my spirit, there is no room left me to any more of my being freely justified by Him, of my being in with Him, and in a state of grace, or the power, dominion, and sin, original and actual, being subdued, taken off, and washed by the virtue of the Spirit of sanctification, being created anew ist Jesus unto good works; and being sanctified throughout in ody, and spirit, and made meet to be a partaker of the inheritf the saints in light, by Him who loved me, and gave Himself death for me, and redeemed me by power and by price.

low being in such a case of communion with Him, I am till I be freed of the remains of a body of sin and death, till eed of the world and all things therein, and also of this natural id be possessed of Himself and with Himself, in His eternal ance, which is incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away; e which He hath provided for all whom He hath chosen, for all whom He hath called, for all whom He hath justified, and all whom He hath sanctified. Oh! to be there, where I shall sin no more, where I shall be tempted no more, neither feel any more of His hidings, the withdrawings of His Spirit's presence and light of His glorious countenance; but shall be ever with Him, see Him as He is, and serve Him for ever and ever.

"Now, my dear friends in Christ, I have always, since the public Resolutioners were for bringing in the malignants and their interest, thought it my duty to join with the Lord's people in witnessing against these sinful courses; and now we see clearly that it has ended in nothing less than making us captains that we may return to Egypt by the open doors that are made wide, to bring in Popery and set up idolatry in the Lord's covenanted land, to defile it, and thereby to provoke Him to pour down His fierce wrath upon it, and the inhabitants thereof.

"Wherefore it is the unquestionable and indispensable duty of all who have any love to God, to His Son the Lord Jesus Christ, to the thriving of His kingdom, to their own souls' salvation, and to the following generation, to act a close, constant, and needy dependence on the Lord Jehovah's all-sufficiency, for light, for counsel, for direction, for strength and stability, to make conscience in bearing testimony for Him, for His persecuted truth, work, and interest in these lands, which was sworn to with uplifted hands to God the searcher of all hearts. And O that herein all could act a faithful part for Him who hath done so much for poor wretched us, when we were lying dying and rotting in our blood-red sins, when passing by us with His love and life-giving visit, saying unto us, 'Live, live.'

"And on the other hand, to witness faithfully, constantly, and conscientiously against all that the enemies have done, or are doing, to the overthrow of the glorious Work of Reformation, and banishing Christ out of these lands, by robbing Him of His crown rights (for He and He alone is head of His own Church), and by burning the Covenants, which are the marriage bonds betwixt Him and these lands; and by persecuting His gospel ministers and members, who are labouring to keep their garments clean, and their hands free of all the corruptions and compliances in these evil times. And however it be, that many, both ministers and professors, are turning their backs upon Christ and His cross, reproaching and casting dirt upon you and the testimony of the day, yet let not his weaken your hands, stumble, nor discourage you from going in the strength of the Lord your God, to contend earnestly for he faith once delivered to the saints, and witness a good confession for Him and His cause, resisting unto blood, striving against in; and herein let your soul possess itself with patience; for I ssure you, it will not be long to the fourth watch. And then He sill come with garments dyed in blood, to raise up saviours pon the mount of Zion, to judge the mount of Esau; and then the ouse of Jacob and Joseph shall be a fire, and the malignants, 'relates, and Papists, shall be for stubble; the flame whereof shall e great.

"But my generation work being done with my time, I go to Iim who loved me, and washed me from all my sins, to Him who as counted me worthy to suffer for His name. And O that I had nany lives to lay down for Him, and much blood to seal His toble and honourable cause with, even that He, who graciously sitied, and hath now given me the full assurance of being a member of His Church triumphant, which is the new Jerusalem, and city of the living God!

"I die adhering to the Scriptures of the Old and New Testanent as the undoubted Word of God, an unerring rule of faith and nanners, and a firm foundation for principle and practice in the vays of godliness and true holiness. 'All Scripture is given by nspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness' (2 Tim. iii. 16).

"And [I die adhering to] the Confession of Faith, Catechisms Larger and Shorter, as agreeable thereunto, and safely founded hereupon. 'Hold fast the form of sound words, which thou hast leard of me in faith and love, which is in Christ Jesus' (2 Tim. i. 13). Therefore, leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go in unto perfection, not laying again the foundation of repentance com dead works, and of faith towards God' (Heb. vi. 1); [and] the sum of Saving Knowledge, the Directory for Church Government in er doctrine, worship, and discipline.

"I own all the attained unto pieces of Reformation in the hurch of Scotland, particularly betwixt the years 1638, and 1649, he Covenants, National and Solemn League, the Acknowledgment f Sins, and Engagement to Duties.

"I own the Protestation given by the Remonstrators against the 'ublic Resolutioners, the Apologetical Declaration, and all Declarations hitherto emitted at Rutherglen, Sanquhar, and Lanark; with all dying speeches and testimonies of these who have sealed the truth with their blood, so far as they agree with God's holy Word.

"I own all the appearances in arms that have been at Pentland, Drumclog, Bothwell, Airsmoss, and elsewhere, against God's stated enemies, and the enemies of the Gospel, as it hath been preached by all Christ's faithful ambassadors in Scotland since the Reformation, and now by that faithful servant of Christ, Mr James Renwick; and the testimony of the day as it is stated and carried on by him and his adherents at home and abroad—[abroad referreth principally to Messrs John Brown, John Nevay, and Robert M'Ward, who were banished to Holland by King Charles and the Duke of Lauderdale. Note in edition of 1718.—ED.]—and kingly government as appointed and emitted in the Word of God, they entering Covenant ways, and with Covenant qualifications; but I am persuaded Scotland's covenanted God will cut off the name of the Stuarts, because they have stated themselves against religion, Reformation, and the thriving of Christ's kingdom and kingly government in these lands. And although men idolise them much now, yet ere long there shall none of them be to tyrannise in covenanted Britain any more.

"On the other hand, I die protesting against, and disowning Popery in all its superstitious bigotry and bloody cruelty; and Prelacy the mother of Popery; and all that depends upon that hierarchy; and the unhinging and overthrowing of the glorious work of Reformation by their woeful Act Rescissory: burning the Covenant, turning out Gospel ministers, filling their rooms with profane erroneous curates, and setting up Charles Stuart to be head of the Church; and so robbing Christ of His royal and incommunicable prerogatives by their cursed Act of Supremacy.

"I protest against the putting malignants into places of power and trust in Church, State, and armies; and all declarations anywhere published, tending thereunto; and against all paying of stent, cess, and locality, to strengthen the enemies hands to persecute Christ in His members; and all shedding of their blood in fields, seas, scaffolds, prisons, or any otherwise; and all robbing, plundering, or spoiling them of their goods; and all raising of the hue and cry after them; and all sinful oaths, such as the Oath of Supremacy, the Bond of Peace, the Test, the Oath of Conformity, the Abjuration Oath, and the Oath Superinquirendis.

^{*} Here the reader is referred to that relation of his, which in this particular is at more length expressed in the short account before this testimony.

"I die testifying against the woeful Indulgence, the fruits and consequences of which have so much strengthened the enemy, increased our divisions, widened our breaches, and deadened the spirits and cooled the zeal of the Lord's people, stumbled and offended the weak, and in a great measure retarded the carrying on of a testimony for truth, by condemning the things contended for, and reproaching these that contend for truth.

"Wherefore, I leave my testimony against all the acceptors thereof, and all ministers and professors, who are any way guilty of any of the woeful defections and sinful compliances with the enemies of truth, or any way guilty of condemning, reproaching, and ridiculing Mr James Renwick and his correspondents, or the testimony which they are carrying on. And let all such ministers and professors know that this their practice, at the best, is a denying of Christ, and a shifting of His cross. Therefore let them take warning, and ponder these Scriptures: 'Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven. He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me: and he that loveth son or daughter more And he that taketh not his cross, and than me is not worthy of me. followeth after me, is not worthy of me' (Matt. x. 32, 33, 37, 38). 'Then said Jesus unto His disciples, if any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me' (Matt. xvi. 24; Mark viii. 34). 'For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the Gospel's, the same shall save it' (Mark viii. 35; Matt. x. 39). 'For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?' (Matt. xvi. 25, 26; Mark viii. 36, 37). 'Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation; of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when He cometh in the glory of His Father with the holy angels' (Mark viii. 38). Lord spake thus to me with a strong hand, and instructed me that I should not walk in the way of His people, saying, Say ye not, A confederacy, to all them to whom this people shall say, A confederacy; neither fear ye their fear, nor be afraid. Sanctify the Lord of hosts Himself; and let Him be your fear, and let Him be your dread.

In the shall be for a same many: That for a store of stumbling and fir a make if inferior in liath the houses of Israel, for a gin and for a mare us the manifements of freezem. And mary among them shall sumilie mil fill mil te triken mi te sarret, and be taken (Isa TIL 11-13. IS S ENTESSE! THE LIE IN The same chapter. 'My son, I simes entire ties masen that not. If they say, Come with us, ien is no wan in induci ien is link privily for the innocent without muse: let us swilling them up three as the grave; and whole, as Thise that in live and the in. we shall find all precious substance, we still fill the houses with spell: cost in they lot among us; let us all have one purse: my some walk not shou in the way with them; refran the fact from their part : for their feet run to evil, and make haste in shed liberal. Prov. 1, 10-16. Wee mote them that call ed groud and groud evil; that put duriness for light, and light for darkness; that put little for sweet and sweet for bitter! Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes, and prodent in their own sight! Which justify the whike i for reward, and take away the righteousness of the righteous from him! Therefore as the fire devoureth the stubble, and the flume consumeth the chaff, so their root shall be as romenness, and their likesom shall go up as dust: because they have cast away the law of the Lord of hosts, and despised the word of the Holy One of Israel 1822 v. 20, 21, 23, 24). He that justifieth the wicked, and He that confirmneth the just, even they both are abomination to the Lord' (Prov. xvii. 15). 'They hate him that rebuketh in the gate, and they althor him that speaketh uprightly' (Amos v. 10). 'For if I build again the things which I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor 'Gal. ii. 18). 'But unto the wicked, God saith, What hast thou to do to declare my statutes, or that thou shouldest take my covenant in thy mouth? Seeing thou hatest instruction, and castest my wor is behind thee. When thou sawest a thief, then thou consenteds: with him, and hast been partaker with adulterers. Thou givest thy mouth to evil, and thy tongue frameth deceit. Thou sittest and speakest against thy brother; thou slan-These things hast thou done, and I derest thine own mother's son. kept silence; thou thoughtest that I was altogether such an one as thyself: but I will reprove thee, and set them in order before thine eyes' (Ps. l. 16-21). The prophecy of Obadiah throughout, the first and last chapter of Isaiah to the end, with many more.

"Now it is my last request and soul's desire that all who have made Moses' choice to suffer affliction with the people of God, rather than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, and are true lovers of Zion's righteous cause; that you set much time apart, and mourn and afflict your souls, for your original sin, heart plagues, sins of persons and families, sins of kings and kingdoms; and for all the dreadful apostacies, hateful compliances, and sinful sidings of ministers and people with the enemies of God and godliness, and mourn that there is not more faithfulness and zeal for the cause of God amongst His people: read Ps. l., Ezra ix., Neh. ix., Jer. ix., Lam. iii. and Ezek. ix. to the end.

"My dear friends, forbear your contentions and censuring one of another; sympathise with and love one another, for this is His commandment; keep up your sweet fellowship meetings, and desirable general meetings, with which my soul has been often refreshed; and what is agitated in them, for carrying on of a testimony for truth, and against defections, let it be managed with Scripture light for direction, and with zeal temperate with knowledge, and with the spirit of meekness accompanied with patience and humility. Be always ready to give a reason of your faith, and be much denied to the world, to yourselves, and to your natural life; and when God in His providence calls you to lay it down for Him, do it cheerfully, and embrace the cross of our sweet Lord Jesus with open arms: for He will not send any a warfare on their own charges; take for your rule and encouragement these Scriptures, with others, that I leave to your own search: 'Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God. But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the affections and lusts. Let us not be desirous of vain-glory, provoking one another, envying one another' (Gal. v. 19-26). 'Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. And let us not be weary in well-doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not. As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith' (Gal. vi. 7-10). 'Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before Him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon His name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth Him not' (Mal. iii. 16-18). 'Say ye to the righteous, that it shall be well with him; for they shall eat the fruit of their doings. Woe unto the wicked! it shall be ill with him: for the reward of his hands shall be given him. The show of their countenance doth witness against them; and they declare their sin as Sodom, they hide it not. unto their soul! for they have rewarded evil unto themselves' (Isa. iii. 10, 11, 9). 'To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them' (Isa. viii. 20). 'But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall' (Mal. iv. 2). 'And I will wait upon the Lord, that hideth His face from the house of Jacob, and I will look for Him' (Isa. viii. 17). 'Only let your conversation be as it becometh the Gospel of Christ: that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the Gospel; and in nothing terrified by your adversaries: which is to them an evident token of perdition, but to you of salvation, and that of God. For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on Him, but also to suffer for His sake' (Phil. i. 27-29). 'And He said unto me, Thou must prophesy again before many peoples and nations, and tongues, and kings' (Rev. x. 11); and Heb. x. 21-39. 'Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless, afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby. Wherefore lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees; and make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way; but let it rather be healed. Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord: looking diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God; lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby many be defiled' (Heb. xii. 11-15).

'And I looked, and, lo, a Lamb stood on the mount Sion, and with Him an hundred forty and four thousand, having His Father's name written in their foreheads. And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder: and I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps: and they sung as it were a new song before the throne, and before the four beasts, and the elders: and no man could learn that song but the hundred and forty and four thousand, which were redeemed from the earth. These are they which were not defiled with women; for they are virgins. These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth. These were redeemed from among men, being the first fruits unto God and to the Lamb. And in their mouth was found no guile: for they are without fault before the throne of God' (Rev. xiv. 1-5). 'Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints' (Jude 3). 'Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of His might. Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all to stand. Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God' (Eph. vi. 10-17).

"And scar not [i.e., be not frightened] at His sweet, lovely and desirable cross; for although I have not been able because of my wounds (that I received at my taking) to lift up or lay down my head, but as I was helped, yet I was never in better case all my life; He has not given me one challenge since I came to prison, for any thing less or more; but on the contrary, He has so wonderfully shined on me with the sense of His redeeming, strengthening, assisting, supporting, through-bearing, pardoning, and reconciling love, grace and mercy, that my soul doth long to be freed of bodily infirmities and earthly organs, that so I may flee to His royal palace, even the heavenly habitation of my God, where I am sure of a crown put on my head, and a palm put in my hand, and a new song put in my mouth, even the song of Moses and the Lamb, that so I may bless, praise, magnify and extol Him, for what He hath done to me and for me.

"Wherefore, I bid farewell to all my dear fellow-sufferers for the testimony of Jesus, who are wandering in dens and caves. Farewell my children, study holiness in all your ways, and praise the Lord for what He hath done for me, and tell all my Christian friends to praise Him on my account. Farewell sweet Bible, and wanderings and contendings for truth. Welcome death. Welcome the city of my God, where I shall see Him, and be enabled to serve Him eternally with full freedom. Welcome blessed company, the angels and spirits of just men made perfect. But above all, welcome, welcome, welcome, our glorious and alone God, Father, Son and Holy Ghost, into thy hands I commit my spirit, for thou art worthy. Amen.

James Renwick.

AMES RENWICK was born February 15, 1662, at Moniaive, in the parish of Glencairn, Dumfriesshire.

His father, Andrew Renwick, was a weaver, and in profession and practice a fervent and faithful Christian, which was enough, says Alexander Shields in his Life of Renwick, to nobilitate the birth of his worthy son, who had what honour was wanting in his first birth made up in the second. He died as he lived, in the Lord, February 1st, 1676, the same day twelve years after that his son was taken to die for the Lord.

His mother, Elizabeth Corsan, was of like piety with her husband. She had several children, but all died previous to the birth of James. Their loss filled her with grief. Her husband tried to comfort her by declaring that he was well satisfied if his children, die when they were heirs of glory. Her prayer, however, was Hannah like, hild from the Lord that might not only be an heir of glory, e to serve Him on earth. When James was born, she received an answer to prayer, and felt herself bound to dedicate him Lord. It soon appeared that the dedication was accepted. learned to speak he learned to pray. His mother lovingly hat, by the time he was but two years of age, he was disto be aiming at prayer even in the cradle and about it with the work of grace on his soul, his natural faculties to early ripeness. He could read the Bible in his sixth wonderful attainment in that century, when learning was not easy as it is now; and 'his inclination was constant for his

th some difficulty his parents kept him at the parish school, y were poor, until means were found, through the assistance of who admired the good parts of the boy, of sending him to urgh. Here he remained until ready for the University, which ended until he passed through the classes necessary for a. The piety of his childhood was not cast aside by him when ent at college. He resisted the temptations that abound in a and at the close of his curriculum such was his tenderness of ence, that he would not take the oath of allegiance required the degree of Master of Arts could be conferred. But shortly urds, by some means not mentioned by his first biographer, he, with other two students, obtained the degree privately, without the oath of allegiance.

er taking his degree he remained in the capital for some time, uting his studies in theology, and associating with the indulged ers, or with those who, unable to comply with the Erastian ds of the government, lived in retirement in Edinburgh or in Their silence respecting the sins of the time, ghbourhood. e spectacle of the frequent martyrdoms that took place, set thinking, and led him to inquire after ministers who had not in m consented to the supremacy exercised by the crown over These he could not find, while he at the same time urch. o the conclusion that he could no longer attend the ministraf the indulged. The execution of Donald Cargill, at which he esent, so moved him that he determined to adopt the martyrs' ony, and to cast in his lot with the persecuted. He entered y into the plan formed in the close of 1681, by those who sympathised with the cause for which the martyrs suffered, of establishing societies throughout the country, to meet at regular intervals for prayer and conference.

He was present at the publication of the Declaration at Lanark, January 12, 1682, although he had no share in drawing it up, otherwise he would have softened some of its expressions. year, the Societies sent Alexander Gordon of Earlstoun to the United Provinces, in order to vindicate themselves from the slanders that had been circulated, to their discredit, among the foreign churches. One result of this mission was, that steps were taken to send young men abroad to study for the Christian ministry. In the "Faithful Contendings," in the account of the fifth General Meeting of the Societies, held at Edinburgh, October 11, 1682, is recorded what was done to send out Renwick and three companions. Twenty-five pounds Scots were voted to each to defray the expenses of the voyage, as well as what was needful to provide them in clothes and other necessaries. Renwick sailed in December, and went to Gröningen, where John a Marck, the author of the "Medulla Theologia" -a favourite text book with Dr Chalmers-was at that time Professor of Divinity and Church History. Here he made such progress in his studies, that, at the recommendation of Marck himself, he was ordained by the Classis of Gröningen, 10th May 1683. He left Holland early in the following August, and, after a long and stormy passage, in which the vessel had to put into Rye, in Sussex, where he narrowly escaped apprehension, he reached Dublin. Here, after a short stay, he found friends who procured him a passage to Scotland. But his difficulties were not at an end, for all the harbours were then strictly watched, and the captain at first would not land him but at a regular port. At last he was prevailed to put him ashore, tradition says, somewhere below Gourock.

It was September when he arrived, but he refrained from preaching until the tenth General Meeting—October 3, 1683—at Darmead, in Cambusnethan parish, where he gave an account of his studies; and handed in his testimony to the truths of God, and to His cause; a document drawn up by him before he left Gröningen, and containing some expressions which he afterwards regretted, but valuable as showing how well acquainted he was, at that early age, with the true state of the controversy between the persecuted and the Government, and how earnestly he had espoused the cause for which the martyrs suffered. At this meeting they gave him a call to be their minister, which he accepted, and entered on his ministry by preaching at the same place, Sabbath, November 23.

William Wilson, in his collection of sermons by Renwick, has given notes of the discourses he preached that day. After a short preface he lectured on Isa. xl. 1-8: "Comfort ye, comfort ye, my people, saith your God," etc.; and preached two sermons on Isa. xxvi. 20: "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself, as it were, for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast." The notes of the lecture are meagre: they occupy little more than two octavo pages; but those of the sermons are much fuller: they extend to seventeen pages, and are evidently a faithful report of what he said. They are remarkable sermons for one so young in years, and more than justify the recommendation of Marck, that he should be ordained as speedily as possible.

Those who fancy that the burden of Renwick's preaching was upon matters of church government, and declamation against the tyranny of the time, will have their fancies sent to the winds when they read such a statement of the Gospel message, and such impassioned pleading that men would come to Christ, as are contained in the following paragraphs, in illustration of the proposition—"There is both ability and willingness in the Lord to give you whatsoever your necessity requires."

"There is Ability. What would you have? Salvation and deliverance? then He is able to save to the uttermost all that come unto Him. Lift up your eyes, and behold a wonder which you cannot know, and put forth this question, 'Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah?—this that is glorious in His apparel, travelling in the greatness of His strength?' And His answer will be unto you: 'It is I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save.' Gainsay it who will, the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in His hand. He shall see of the travail of His soul, and be satisfied.

"And now, methinks, I hear some of you saying, All this is true; we can set to our seals to it. But is He willing? This is our question.

"Willing He is indeed. He is not more able than He is willing. What are all His promises, but declarations of His free willingness? What are all His sweet invitations, but to tell you that He is willing, and ye are welcome. 'Let him that is athirst come, and whosoever will, let him come, and take of the water of life freely.' Ah! what say you to it? Give us your seal to His willingness also. Go, say which site Come: we know He is willing, and we set to our se this willing. Em is He willing to receive me? Satisfy me this and then I will be right. All cheat: ye are taking your wo hack again now, and iming of your seal. If ye except not yourse He will not except you. His invitation is unto all: "Every or come; he that hath no money, come."

Now, why will see he so il in yourselves, as to debar yourselve for He doth not do it. Ye may as well and as rationally say, the ye are not a body as in say He debars you. His invitation is every one. Now assent in this; and then, before you except you self out of this invitation, you must first say you have not a being neither of soul nor body. We say, for you to think that He except you, it is all one as to deary yourself to be one of the children Adam.

"Now, O come, come niggard! what aileth thee? Come, whould ye have that is not in Christ? Oh! that sweet invitation Come! we cannot tell you what is in it. There is a depth in it if all the angels in heaven cannot fathom. It is no less than Je Christ, who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again: our justification, spreading forth His arms and inviting you. He opening up Himself—His all-sufficiency and super-transcende excellency—and calling to all poor, needy things, 'Come, here enough for you; give in your desires, and you shall have them saffied to the full.' What, then, have ye to say to the bargain? Concome; it is a rich commodity, and there is no sticking at the price only receive and have—the easiest of all terms. There is no more required at your hands.

"But say ye, ha! sir, ye go without your bounds; the invitation your text is to His people only: ye are, then, all wrong. We are so far wrong as ye trow [i.e., believe], for the invitation is to His people to enter into their chambers, and to all who will come and become this people to enter into their chambers; and so this is a free mark we must invite all to come. Ye who are enemies, lay down your arms against Him, and come. Ye who are upholding His enem and complying with them in their sinful courses and abominated by paying them cess and locality, and by furnishing them meat a drink (which is more than a bidding them God speed, which Holy Ghost, by the mouth of John, forbids), quit the putting of sword into God's enemies' hands, and come. Ye who have gi bonds to the adversary; break your covenant with hell and death, and come; break your sworn allegiance to the devil, and come and swear a new allegiance to Jesus Christ, and ye shall never rue it. Ye who compear before their courts, and pay them fines, whereby ye both acknowledge them who are robbers of God, and call your duty your sin, quit these courses, and come. Ye who go to the curates, leave these perjured, blind guides, and come. Ye who go to the indulged, leave these traitors to God. Ye who go to the backslidden, silent ministers, leave these betrayers of the cause, and deserters of the cross of Christ, and come; leave all these, and follow Him; He is a true guide, and will be so to you. Ye who any ways seek or take the enemy's protection, leave it, and come; come to Him, and ye shall find chambers indeed both for safety and delight. ye that are strangers to Him, come; ye that are in nature, come; and ye that know Him, come. We must preach this word 'Come' unto you so long as ye are here, until ye be transplanted out of this spiritual warfare into celestial triumph. Oh! sirs, come, come, ask what ye will, and He shall give it. Oh! come, come!"

The reader of these paragraphs will not wonder that Renwick at once became a favourite preacher among the persecuted Covenanters, and that there were demands for his services from many quarters. In a few months, in the first year of his ministry, he is said to have baptized no less than six hundred children. His fame as a preacher soon came to the ears of the enemies of liberty then in power, and August 30th, 1684, the form of summoning him before the Privy Council was gone through at the Cross of Edinburgh and the Pier of Leith; and, in the following month, letters of intercommuning were issued against him, in which he is called, after the fashion in which the Government of the time were wont to speak of the salt of the earth, a seditious vagabond and pretended preacher, is accused of debauching some of our unwary subjects into the same wicked, unnatural, and seditious principles with himself, and closing with the following sentences, as notable for their virulence as for their grammar:

"We command and charge all and sundry our lieges and subjects that they nor none of them presume, nor take upon hand to reset, supply or intercommune with the said Mr James Renwick, rebel foresaid; nor furnish him with meat, drink, house, harbour, victual nor no other thing useful or comfortable to him; or to have intelligence with him by word writ or message or any other manner of way wherement make pain of being exteemed art and part with him in the crimes forested and partsed therefore with all rigour to the terror of others. And we hereby require all our Sheriffs to apprehend and commit to prison, the person of the said Mr James Remarks wherever they can inch or apprehend him."

ļ

Remark and the Societies answered the Letters of Intercommuning by the Apologetic Decigration. The Government rejoined by a proclemation, characterised by the same wild fury of expression as the Letters of Intercommuning, in which the Societies are styled inscient and desperate rebels, and the Declaration execrable and treasonable. At the same time, stemer and more relentless measures than ever were taken to suppress the meetings of the Societies, and to seize the persons of their members. The Lords of the Privy Council asked the opinion of the Court of Session whether an owning of the Apologetic Declaration was an act of treason, and received as answer that it was. Fortified by this answer, it was resolved that all who owned, or would not disown, the Apologetic Declaration, whether they had arms or not, should be immediately put to death, wherever persons holding the commission of the Council might find them; provided two witnesses were present. The result of these steps was that of all the twenty-eight years of persecution, 1685 was the most terrible and most marked by the cruelty of the persecutor. Renwick himself had many a hairbreadth escape, yet none of his meetings was ever surprised by the emissaries of Government; and persecution had no other effect upon him than to strengthen his conviction that the work he was engaged in was the Lord's. And by the grace and goodness of God, says his biographer and companion in tribulation, Alexander Shields, he was still more animated and enlarged in spirit, and enabled in body to increase his diligence in preaching, baptising, and examining every week once at least; which had such success, that a great and effectual door was opened to the bringing in of many to Christ, out of ignorance and darkness of nature, and bringing back many from the times' sins and compliances, and calling out such multitudes, flocking after the persecuted Gospel ordinances in the open fields, that it was impossible for him to answer all the calls he received from all parts to preach to them.

At the nineteenth general meeting of the Societies, held May 28, 1685, at Blackgannoch, on the Spango Water, in the parish of Kirkconnel, the second Sanquhar Declaration was agreed upon.

Immediately after the meeting, about two hundred and twenty rew up in arms, and marched to Sanquhar, five miles to the of Blackgannoch, where, after a psalm and prayer by Renwick, eclaration was published, and a copy left on the Cross. The ation is manifestly from the pen of Renwick, and is a well sed vindication of the Societies from the charge of encourage-assination brought against them by their enemies, as well as estation against the illegality of the Duke of York, a professed, ascending the throne as James II. Defiant as was this ation, the Government found it most prudent to take no notice. They evidently felt that the less said about the religion of the ng the better.

t the misrepresentations of Renwick and the Societies by enemies did not cease. The failure of the Earl of Argyle's rise, which Renwick had refused to join until its aims were more in harmony with the principles he had been accustomed intain, increased the numbers of those who misrepresented ut his usual answer, when told of their misrepresentations was, I not say so of them," while he charged his friends not to contith such weapons, and to have a care not to render railing for Slanders, too, rose up among the members of the Societies, pursued his course undeterred by all that might be said against December 1686, a reward of £100 sterling was offered to any 10 should bring in James Renwick dead or alive, but it had no in leading any of his followers to betray him.

1687, three successive proclamations were issued, allowing terians to meet in their private houses for worship and preachut field meetings were strictly forbidden. The object of nment in these proclamations was to prepare the way for the oleration of Popery. Many, however, took advantage of these mations, and some ministers went so far as, in rather a fulsome r, to thank the Government for the fettered permission afforded o preach. Renwick drew up an answer to the proclamations, into Edinburgh, January 1688, and gave a copy of it to Mr Kennedy, then indulged minister in Edinburgh, to be com-From Edinburgh he went to ated to the rest of his brethren. there he preached in several places, and for the last time at vstounness on January 29. Notes of a sermon preached on y 24, from Ps. xlv. 10: "Hearken, O daughter, and consider, cline thine eye; forget also thine own people and thy father's house," of a second, preached January 27 from Luke xii. 32: "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom,' and of his last sermon, from Isaiah liii. 1: "Who hath believed our report, and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed," are in Wilson's collection. They are obviously not so well reported as the notes of his first sermon, but they are full enough to show the expository, the evangelical, and earnest character of his preaching up to his last days. If there be any change in these later sermons from the first, it is to the better, for they present more exhaustively the lessons taught in the text.

He returned to Edinburgh, January 31. He lodged in the Castle Hill, at the head of the Bow, in the house of a friend, John Lookup, near where Free St John's Church now stands. The house was that of a trader in what were called "uncustomed goods from England," a profession in that age, from the character of the men then in power, by no means looked upon with disfavour by patriotic Scotsmen. An excise officer on the watch for contraband goods heard family prayer in the house, and suspected the voice was that of Renwick. He had the house surrounded next morning about daybreak. An entrance was soon made, when the excise officer exclaimed, "My life for it, this is Mr Renwick," and declared that all within must go to the guardhouse, to show what trade they were of. Renwick rejoined, "I shall soon show you what is my trade."

The excise officer now went out to the street and called for assistance to carry the dog Renwick to the guardhouse. Meanwhile Renwick, with two friends in the house, tried to escape by another door, but it was found watched by the excise officers, and when one of the two sought to break through he was driven back. Renwick fired a pistol, which at once opened a way for himself and friends, but as they went out he received a blow from a staff that partly stunned him, and made him fall once or twice as he ran down the Castle Wynd towards the head of the Cowgate, where he lost his hat. By his falls the pursuers gained on him, and the loss of his hat marked him out, so that he was soon caught by a person on the street, but his two friends made their escape. He was taken to the guardhouse, and put in irons by the order of a committee of Council. examined on February 3. He himself has given an account of his examination in a letter contained in the Collection of his Letters. (Letter lx.) When he was searched, his pocket-book was taken from him, but it contained nothing but a few names in full, as many more in the first letter only, and notes of two sermons which he had preached January 18, at the Braid Craigs, two miles south from Edinburgh, at a place still pointed out. These names, as their owners were out of danger, he readily explained.

On February 3, he received his indictment, which will be found in full in Wodrow. He was tried Wednesday, February 8, and was sentenced to be executed the following Friday. The Lord Justice General, Earl of Linlithgow, asked him if he desired longer time. He replied it was all one to him; if it was protracted it was welcome, if shortened it was welcome; his Master's time was the best time. Without his knowledge, however, the day of execution was delayed for another week.

During this week his friends were forbidden to see him, and every effort was made by the government to get him to petition for a reprieve. Writing materials were taken from him, but he managed to write the testimony and letter that follow. On the morning of execution he wrote a short letter to his dear friend Sir Robert Hamilton, full of faith and confidence. He says, "I go to your God and my God. Death to me is as a bed to the weary. Now, be not anxious, the Lord will maintain His cause and own His people; He will show His glory yet in Scotland; farewell." The compilers of the "Cloud" have given a short account of his last words, to which we have added Alexander Shields' narrative of what he said just before he was executed. He was buried in the Greyfriars Churchyard. A monument was erected to his memory in 1828, at Moniaive, near the farmhouse where tradition says he was born.

In 1687, James Renwick, in conjunction with Alexander Shields, drew up the only work ever published by him: "An Informatory Vindication of a Poor, Wasted, Misrepresented Remnant of the Suffering, Anti-popish, Anti-prelatic, Anti-erastian, Anti-sectarian, true Presbyterian Church of Christ in Scotland; United together in a General Correspondence; By way of Reply to various Accusations in Letters, Informations, and Conferences given forth against them." The first eighteen, or perhaps the first thirty, of its 108 pages bear traces of Alexander Shields, but the rest is evidently from Renwick himself. It is much to be regretted that the "Informatory Vindication" should be so little known, as its ability, its catholicity, and its terseness and clearness of statement make it one of the most readable documents of that age, and altogether worthy of its title. No one who reads it dispassionately, but will feel that a Government that could put to death the author of such a document, for no other crime than the avowal of its opinions, was deservedly overthrown in the Revolution of 1688.

In 1724 John M'Main, M.A., schoolmaster at Liberton's Wynd, published, in an 18mo volume of 248 pages, Alexander Shields' Life of Renwick. Shields finished it in September 1688, but it had lain in manuscript till it came into M'Main's hand. M'Main has added to it a preface of forty pages, in which he takes exception to Wodrow's history for doing scant justice to the sufferers whose testimonies are given in the "Cloud." Shields' Life contains more of characteristic declamation against the tyranny of the time than narrative. Nevertheless, it is one that the reader will be grateful for, and no doubt wish that we possessed similar lives of more than one of the sufferers of that age.

In 1748 William Wilson published two 18mo volumes, with the title, "A choice Collection of very valuable Prefaces, Lectures, and Sermons, preached upon the mountains and muirs of Scotland in the hottest time of the late persecution, by that faithful minister and martyr of Jesus Christ, the Reverend Mr James Renwick." The collection has been several times reprinted in one octavo volume. Although printed from notes, taken by hearers, that are often obviously imperfect, the collection is yet one of interest and value.

In 1764 the Rev. John M'Millan, for many years minister of the Reformed Presbyterian Congregation that met at Sandhills, near Glasgow, published a 12mo volume, entitled "A Collection of Letters, consisting of ninety-three, sixty-one of which were wrote by the Rev. Mr James Renwick." The first letter is dated July 1682, and the last is that written to Sir Robert Hamilton on the morning of his execution. Far more than his sermons, these letters reveal the character of Renwick, and show him to have been what Alexander Shields calls him, "a ripe Christian." Mr M'Millan printed them from the manuscript, but not very accurately, and with the omission of the postscripts, which are at least as valuable as the rest of the The original autographs of Renwick's last speech and testimony, and of his letter to his Christian Friends, are in the library of the Free College, Edinburgh. Through the kindness of the acting librarian, the Rev. John Laing, we have been permitted to examine The examination has shown a great many obvious misprints, or mistakes in the transcription, in all previous editions of the "Cloud." These we have corrected, and given an exact copy of what Renwick wrote. The handwriting shows marks of haste or of being under some restraint, but has much of the legibility, and even beauty, so characteristic of his earlier letters, at least twenty of which we have seen in his own autograph.—Ed.]

HE LAST SPEECH AND TESTIMONY of the Reverend Mr James Renwick, Minister of the Gospel, who suffered in the Grassmarket of Edinburgh, February 17, 1688. Emitted from his own hand, the day before his suffering.

"My DEAR FRIENDS IN CHRIST,—It hath pleased the Lord to deliver me up into the hands of men; and I think fit to send you this salutation, which I expect will be the last. When I pose [i.e., question] my heart upon it, before God, I dare not desire to have escaped this lot; for no less could have been for His glory and vindication of His cause on my behalf. And as I am free before Him of the profanity, which some, either naughty, wicked, or strangers to me, have reported that I have been sometimes guilty of, so He hath kept me, from the womb, free of the ordinary pollutions of children; as these that have been acquainted with me through the tract of my life do know. And now my blood shall either more silence reproachers, or more ripen them for judgment. But I hope it shall make some more sparing to speak of those who shall come after me; and so I am the more willing to pay this cost, both for their instruction, and my succeeders' ease.

"Since I came to prison, the Lord hath been wonderfully kind; He hath made His word to give me light, life, joy, courage and strength; yea, it hath dropped with sweet smelling myrth unto me; particularly these Psalms and promises: 'For now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son' (Gen. xxii. 12). 'Neither be ye sorry, for the joy of the Lord is your strength' (Neh. viii. 10). 'There the wicked cease from troubling; and there the weary be at rest. There the prisoners rest together; they hear not the voice of the oppressor' (Job. iii. 17, 18). 'But He knoweth the way that I take: when He hath tried me, I į÷.

Ξ

:=

small come first is grad. My foot bath held His steps, his way have I kept and not becamed. Neither have I gone back from the conmaniment if His lips: I have esteemed the words of His mouth more than my necessary food. But He is in one mind, and who can turn Him? and what His soul desireth, even that He doeth. For He terformerit the thing that is appointed for me: and many such things are with Him of the xxiii. 10-141. The word of the Lord tried Him: Ps. cv. ::. Thou therefore gird up thy loins, and arise, and speak and them all that I command thee; be not dismayed a their faces, lest I confound thee before them. For, behold, I have made thee this day a desenced city, and an iron pillar, and brase walls against the whole kind, against the kings of Judah, against the princes thereof, against the priests thereof, and against the people of the land. And they shall fight against thee; but they shall not prevall against thee; for I am with thee, saith the Lord, to delive thee ' [Jen. i. 17-19]. 'A glorious high throne from the beginning is the piace of our sanctuary. O Lord, the hope of Israel, all that forsake thee shall be ashamed, and they that depart from me shall be written in the earth, because they have forsaken the Lord, the fountain of living waters. Heal me, O Lord, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shail be saved' (Jer. xvii. 12-14). 'He that toucheth you toucheth the apple of His eye' (Zech. ii. 8). 'But before all these, they shall lay their hands on you, and persecute you, delivering you up to the synagogues, and into prisons, being brought before kings and rulers for My name's sake. And it shall turn to you for a testimony' (Luke xxi. 12, 13), and xix. of St John's Gospel. 'Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God. For consider Him that endured such contradiction of sinners against Himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds' (Heb. xii. 2, 3). 'Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love Him' (James 'Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that He may exalt you in due time: casting all your care upon Him; for He careth for you. Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary, the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour' (1. Pet. v. 6-8). 'I know thy works: behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it: for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my Behold, I will make them of the synagogue of Satan, which say they are Jews, and are not, but do lie; behold, I will make them to come and worship before thy feet, and to know that I have loved Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth. Behold, I come quickly: hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown. Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out: and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is New Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God: and I will write upon him my new name' (Rev. iii. 8-12). Revelation, chapters xix., xx., xxi., and xxii., and several other Scriptures. O what can I say to the Lord's praise! It was but little that I knew of Him before I came to prison; I have found sensibly much of His divine strength, much of the joy of His Spirit, and much assurance from His word and Spirit concerning my salvation.

"My sufferings are stated upon the matters of my doctrine, for there was found with me the sum of my two last sermons at Braid's Craigs, which I wrote after I did preach them: the former whereof was upon Ps. xlvi. 10: 'Be still and know that I am God; I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth.' And in the latter upon Heb. x. 38: 'Now the just shall live by faith: but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him.' And I was examined upon the application made therein unto the sins of the time; all which I owned once and again, as it is to be seen in my indictment; and being tried, and an assize set, I adhered to my former confessions explicitly; so my sentence of death was drawn forth upon these three heads:

- "I. Because I could not own James VII. to be my lawful sovereign.
- "2. Because I taught the unlawfulness of paying the cess, expressly exacted for suppressing the faithful and free preaching of the Gospel.
- "3. Because I taught it was people's duty to carry arms at the preaching of the Gospel, now that it is persecuted, for defending of themselves, and resisting unjust violence.
- "I think such a testimony is worthy many lives, and I praise the Lord, for His enabling me to be plain and positive in all my confessions; for therein I found peace, joy, strength, boldness.

I have met with many assaults in prison, some from some of the Indulged party, and some from some of the Prelatic; but by the strength of God I was enabled to stand, that they could neither bow me nor break me. I was also assaulted by some of the Popish party. I suppose they were of their ecclesiastic creatures; but they found none of their own stuff in me; I told them, after sundry debatings, that I had lived, and should die, an enemy to their way. However, some that knew me not, reproached me with Jesuitism. But I was much pressed by sundry to seek a reprieve, and my answer was always, that I adhered to my former confession, and if they pleased to let their appointed time of my death stand, let it stand; and if they pleased to protract it, let them protract it; for I was ready and willing both to live and die. Howbeit there came a reprieve for eight days, but I had no hand in it.

"They still urged, Would I but say that I desired time, for conference with some persons anent my principles? I answered, that my time was in the Lord's hand, and I was in no hesitation or doubt about my principles myself: I would not be so rude as to decline converse with any, so far as it might not be inconvenient for me in my present circumstances, but I would seek it with none.

"I have no more to say upon this head, but my heart doth not smite me for anything in the matters of my God, since I came to prison. And I can further say to His praise, with some consciousness of integrity, that I have walked in His way, and kept His charge, though with much weakness, and many infirmities, whereof you have been witnesses.

"Now, my dear friends in precious Christ, I think I need not tell you that, as I have lived, so I die, in the same persuasion with the true reformed and covenanted Presbyterian Church of Scotland. I adhere to the testimony of the day, as it is held forth in our Informatory Vindication, and in the testimony against the present toleration; and that I own, and seal with my blood, all the precious truths, even the controverted truths, that I have taught. So I would exhort every one of you to make sure your personal reconciliation with God in Christ, for I fear many of you have that yet to do; and when you come where I am, to look pale death in the face, ye will not be a little shaken and terrified if ye have not laid hold on eternal life. I would exhort you to much diligence in the use of means; to be careful in keeping your societies; to be frequent and fervent in secret prayer; to read much the written Word of God, and to examine yourselves by it.

"Do not weary to maintain, in your places and stations, the present testimony; for when Christ goeth forth to defeat antichrist, with that name written on His vesture and on His thigh, KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS, He will make it glorious in the earth. And if you can but transmit it to posterity, ye may count it a great generation work. But beware of the ministers that have accepted this toleration, and all others that bend that way; and follow them not, for the sun hath gone down on them. Do not fear that the Lord will cast off Scotland; for He will certainly return, and show Himself glorious in our land. But watch and pray, for He is bringing on a sad overthrowing stroke, which shall make many say that they have easily got through that have got a scaffold for Christ; and do not regard the sufferings of this present world, for they are not worthy to be compared to the glory that shall be revealed.

"I may say, to His praise, that I have found His cross sweet and lovely unto me; for I have had many joyful hours, and not a fearful thought since I came to prison. He hath strengthened me to outbrave man and outface death; and I am now longing for the joyful hour of my dissolution; and there is nothing in the world I am sorry to leave but you; but I go unto better company, and so I must take my leave of you all.

"Farewell beloved sufferers, and followers of the Lamb. Farewell Christian intimates. Farewell Christian and comfortable mother and sisters. Farewell sweet societies. Farewell desirable general meetings. Farewell night wanderings, cold and weariness for Christ. Farewell sweet Bible, and preaching of the Gospel. Farewell sun, moon, and stars, and all sublunary things. Farewell conflicts with a body of death. Welcome scaffold for precious Christ. Welcome heavenly Jerusalem. Welcome innumerable company of angels. Welcome General Assembly and Church of the first-born. Welcome, crown of glory, white robes, and song of Moses and the Lamb. And, above all, welcome, O thou blessed Trinity and One God! O Eternal One, I commit my soul into Thy eternal rest!

"Sic subscribitur,

"JAMES RENWICK.

"February 13, 1688."

LETTER to his Christian Friends, written in the time of his reprieval.

"My DEAR FRIENDS IN CHRIST,—I see then what hath been the language of my reprieve; it hath been, that I might be further tempted and tried; and I praise the Lord He hath assisted me to give further proof of steadfastness. I have been often assaulted by some Popish priests; but the last time that they came, I told them that I would debate no more with such as they were, and that I have lived and would die a Presbyterian Protestant, and testified against the idolatries, heresies, superstitions, and errors of their antichristian way.

"But yesterday, I was cast into a deep exercise, and made to dwell under the impression of the dreadfulness of everything that might grieve the Spirit of God. I found sin to be more bitter than death, and one hour's hiding of God's face more insupportable. And then at night I was called before a party of the Council, and the Chancellor produced the Informatory Vindication, and asked if I knew it. I answered, 'I did know it' And being interrogated, I confessed that I had a great hand writing of it. They pressed me to tell my assistants. I told them they were those they were persecuting; but would satisfy them no further. They also urged me, upon pain of torture, to tell where were our societies, who kept our general correspondences, and where they were kept. I answered, though they should torture me, which was contrary to all law after sentence of death, I would give them no further notice than the book gave. I was, moreover, threatened to tell of my haunts and quarters, but I refused to make known any such thing to them; so I was returned to prison again. Such an exercise as I had was very needful for such a trial; and I would rather have endured what they could do unto me than have dishonoured Christ, offended you, and brought you into trouble.

"But I hope, within less than three days, to be without the reach of all tentation. Now I have no more to say. Farewell again in our blessed Lord Jesus.

"JAMES RENWICK.

" February 15, 1688."

SHORT ACCOUNT of his LAST WORDS upon the Scaffold.

Before he went out of the Tolbooth, he was at dinner with his mother, sisters, and some Christian friends, when the drum beat the first warning to his execution; which so soon as he heard, he leapt up in a ravishment of heavenly joy, saying, "Let us be glad and rejoice, for the marriage of the Lamb is come;" and I can say, in some measure, "The bride, the Lamb's wife, hath made herself ready." And, till dinner was over, he enlarged upon the parallel of a marriage, and invited all of them to come to the wedding, meaning his execution. When he was come to the scaffold, the drums being beat all the while, none of the distant spectators could hear anything that he said; only some very few, that were close by him, did hear it; whereof one has collected the following account. He delivered himself to this effect:

- "Spectators, or (if there be any of you) auditors,—I must tell you I am come here this day to lay down my life for adhering to the truths of Christ, for which I am neither afraid nor ashamed to suffer; nay, I bless the Lord that ever He counted me worthy, or enabled me to suffer anything for Him; and I desire to praise His grace that He hath not only kept me free from the gross pollutions of the time, but also from many ordinary pollutions of children; and such as I have been stained with, He hath washen me from them in His own blood. I am this day to lay down my life for these three things:
- "1. For disowning the usurpations and tyranny of James Duke of York.
- "2. For preaching that it was unlawful to pay the cess expressly exacted for bearing down the Gospel.
- "3. For preaching that it was lawful for people to carry arms for defending themselves in their meetings for receiving the persecuted Gospel ordinances.
- "I think a testimony for these is worth many lives, and if I had ten hundred [Wodrow's Mauuscript has "ten thousand."—ED.] I would think it little enough to lay them all down for the same.

- "Dear friends, spectators, and (if any of you be) auditors,—I must tell you that I die a Presbyterian Protestant.
- "I own the Word of God as the rule of Faith and manners; I own the Confession of Faith, Larger and Shorter Catechisms, Sum of Saving Knowledge, Directory for Worship, etc.; Covenants, National and Solemn League; Acts of General Assemblies,—and all the faithful contendings that have been for the work of reformation.
- "I leave my testimony approving the preaching of the Gospel in the fields, and the defending the same by arms.
- "I adjoin my testimony to all that hath been sealed by blood, shed either on scaffolds, fields, or seas, for the cause of Christ.
- "I leave my testimony against Popery, Prelacy, Erastianism, etc.; against all profanity, and everything contrary to sound doctrine; particularly against all usurpations made upon Christ's right, who is the PRINCE OF THE KINGS OF THE EARTH, who alone must bear the glory of ruling His own kingdom, the Church; and, in particular, against the absolute power usurped by this usurper, that belongs to no mortal, but is the incommunicable prerogative of JEHOVAH, and against this toleration flowing from that absolute power."

Upon this, he was bid have done. He answered, "I have near done." Then he said:

"Ye that are the people of God, do not weary in maintaining the testimony of the day, in your stations and places; and whatever ye do, make sure an interest in Christ, for there is a storm coming that shall try your foundation. Scotland must be rid of Scotland before the delivery come. And you that are strangers to God, break off your sins by repentance, else I will be a witness against you in the day of the Lord."

Here they caused him desist. Upon the scaffold he sung a part of the 103d Psalm, from the beginning, and read the 19th chapter of the Revelation.

[In prayer he said, "Lord, I die in the faith that Thou wilt not leave Scotland, but that Thou wilt make the blood of Thy witnesses the seed of Thy Church, and return again, and be glorious in our land. And now, Lord, I am ready—'the bride, the Lamb's wife, hath made herself ready.'"

The napkin then being tied about his face, he said to his friend attending him—"Farewell. Be diligent in duty. Make your peace with God, through Christ. There is a great trial coming. As to the remnant I leave, I have committed them to God. Tell them from me not to weary, nor be discouraged in maintaining the testimony. Let them not quit nor forego one of these despised truths. Keep your ground, and the Lord will provide you teachers and ministers, and when He comes, He will make these despised truths glorious upon the earth.

Then he was turned over the ladder, with these words in his mouth: "Lord, into Thy hands I commit my spirit, for Thou hast redeemed me, Lord God of truth."—From Alex. Shields' "Life of Renwick."—ED.]

And having thus finished his course, served his generation, and witnessed a good confession for his Lord and Master, before many witnesses, by the will of God, he yielded up his spirit into the hands of God who gave it.

He was the last that sealed the testimony of this suffering period in a public way upon a scaffold.

AN APPENDIX

CONTAINING

ME PARTICULARS RELATING TO THE FOREGOING TESTIMONIES, AND OTHER SUFFERINGS OF THAT TIME.

• . •

HOUSE IN FALKLAND (Where Richard Cameron was born).

Mr Richard Cameron.

HERE is a short life of Richard Cameron by Patrick Walker, It abounds in the same curious matter as his other lives. Its substance is given by John Howie in the "Scots orthies." The house in Falkland where Richard Cameron was irn is still pointed out. Some years ago the title-deeds were amined, and it was found that Cameron's father had borrowed oney on the house in order to send him to college.

M'Millan's collection of Letters contains two letters from ichard Cameron to Alexander Gordon of Earlstoun, and one to Lady arlstoun. They are short, but they tell of the writer's piety, and of a warm affection for his friends.

John Howie's Collection of Lectures and Sermons contains three efaces, two lectures, and six sermons by Richard Cameron. Two the sermons are on John v. 40, "Ye will not come unto me that might have life." When preaching on this text, Patrick Walker ys, "he fell in such a rap of calm weeping, and the greater part of at multitude that there was, scarce a dry cheek to be seen among em, which obliged him to halt and pray." A manuscript copy of this sermon, transcribed by William Wilson in 1720, from notes take by a hearer, is still extant. It is evidently more correct than Howie transcription, who seems occasionally to have altered a Saxon wor into its Latinized form, and not by any means added to the poir and vigour of the sermon by the change. A few sentences from Wisson's manuscript will show how impassioned a preacher Richar Cameron must have been:

"There are many here that are at this—' Indeed, I find it ve difficult to close with Christ.' Before we speak to you we will pra a word.

"Now for you that are saying this, 'It is true it is not easy! bring folks to Christ; I have had a profession these many years, b I fear I have not come to Christ.' Our Lord is here this day, sayin 'Will ye take me.' Ye that have had a lie in your right hand, wh say ye to it? ay or no? Ye that have been plagued with deadne hardness, and unbelief, what say ye to it? Will ye take Him? He saying [to you], will ye take me. . . . O what fault have ye to Him There are many saying, 'an [i.e., if] I take Him, I will get a cro with Him.' That is true. But ye get a sweet cross. And thus v offer Him to you in the parish of Douglas, Affleck [i.e., Auchinled and all about. Take Him, for we shall take instruments before the hills and mountains that we offer Him to you this day. Will ye ta Him, ye that are free of the cess: will ye take Him? Ye that are fr of the Bond that is going through; will ye take Him? Ye that a free of the Indulgence, ye poor ignorant things; will ye not take H this day? Ye shall be welcome now when the old wily professors: taking offence at His way and cross. O will ye cast up your eyes Him!

"Angels are wondering at this offer. They are standing looki on with admiration at their Lord and your Lord that is making so an offer here this day.

"O what wonder is this. They, gone to hell these hundreds years, are crying and howling, 'O and we had such an offer as y parish of Affleck [i.e., Auchinleck] has this day.' Come, come Him, and never a word shall be of your sins—sin shall be buried!

"But will ye not come to Him? If ye will not, it shall be me tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah than for you. But what will say to me? What shall I say to Him that sent me this day. Wh shall I say, there were some yonder that were content to give H their hand, heart, house and land? Now, if ye can make a be bargain with any other, do it. Look to these hill-tops there, over the shawhead. Take them in your view—they are all witnesses. Look to them, they shall all be witnesses when you are dying, and we take you all witnesses one against another. O how will it aggravate your sorrow and pain when they come in your mind and conscience; 'O sirs, I heard you invited and obtested to take Christ, and that on the last of May, and we are witnesses.' There is some tenderness among you. That is well-faured [i.e., well favoured], I confess, but that is not all. The angels will go up to the throne and say, 'We saw and bear witness to the new bargain the day [i.e., to-day]; we saw some in the parish of Affleck [i.e., Auchinleck], Douglas, and Crawford-john close with the offers of our Master the day in the Gospel.' O they will be welcome news to heaven!

"And there are some in hell; they will be saying, 'Woes me! Some are going away yonder the day [i.e., to-day], and will never come here.' 'O,' says the devil, 'we shall set the troopers upon them, we shall set the dragoons upon them; you minister shall be hanged, and the people hauled to prison, and sent to the sea, and they shall be drowned or banished.' But we defy him and them both."—ED.]

SHORT RELATION concerning the Reverend Mr RICHARD CAMERON, minister of the Gospel, who was killed in a rencounter [i.e., encounter] at Airsmoss, July 22, 1680.

Because in the foregoing speeches there is frequent mention made of the Reverend Mr Richard Cameron, and testimony given to the faithfulness of his ministry, it will not be perhaps ungrateful to some to insert the following relation of some remarkable things anent his call to the ministry, which was rehearsed by himself a little before his death; where he told some Christian friends, that after his having gone through the ordinary course of university learning, he was a schoolmaster and a precentor to a curate at Falkland, for some time, and at some occasions used to attend the sermons of the indulged ministers, as he had opportunity.

At length it pleased the Lord to incline him to go out to the field-meetings, which when the curates understood, they set upon him partly by flatteries, partly by menacing threats, and at length by more direct persecution, to cause him forbear attending these meetings; but such was the powerful and wonderful working of the Lord by His Spirit upon him, that he entirely deserted these Prelatic curates, having got a lively discovery of the sin and hazard of that abominable Prelacy. And no sooner was he enlightened anent the evil of Prelacy, but beginning more narrowly to search into the state of things, that he might know what was his proper and necessary duty, the Lord was pleased to discover to him the sinfulness of the Indulgence, as flowing from the ecclesiastical supremacy usurped by the king; and being zealously affected for the honour of Christ, wronged by that Erastian acknowledgment of the magistrate's usurped power over the Church, he longed for an opportunity to give a testimony against it.

And accordingly, being in the family of Sir William Scot of Harden, who attended the indulged meetings, he took opportunity (notwith standing many strong temptations from Satan to the contrary) to witness in his station against the Indulgence; particularly one Sabbath, sites he was called to attend the lady to church, he returned from the course, reclusing to go that day, and spent the day in his chamber where he met with much of the Lord's presence (as he testified), and very evident discoveries of the true nature of these temptations and sequences of Satan, which had like to have prevailed with him before And the Monday, giving a reason to the said Sir William Sot and he lady, why he went not to church with them, he took occasion to be place and express in testifying against the sinfulness of the Indulations, in its complex nature, and original rise and spring from where is showed; and thereupon leaving that service, being no tivities acceptable to them, because of his faithfulness, he came to the seath, and having met with the Reverend Mr John Welch, he stavel in his company a considerable time; who, finding him a man qualified for the ministry, pressed upon him to accept a license to properly which he refused for some time, chiefly upon this reason, that he having such clear discoveries of the sinfulness of the Indul-REPORTS AND THE TOTAL AGAINST it explicitly, so soon as he should have equivariantly to preach in public; and, considering that none of the event ministers, who had been of standing and experience in the Williams, had not expressly declared the sinfulness thereof in public, he was affaul that his being singular in it, considering his youth, and his being but new entered upon the work of the ministry, might perhaps make his doctrine the less useful and weighty to the people.

But the force of his objection being removed by Mr Welch's serious solicitations, he was prevailed with to accept a license from some of the outed ministers, who had not complied with the Indulgence, and were as yet preaching the Gospel in the fields. And having preached occasionally with Mr Welch and others, in several places of the western shires, and finding the people warmed and affected with his doctrine, by the good hand of God blessing the word, he adventured sometimes, as the Lord assisted him, to be express and clear in declaring the sinfulness of the Indulgence, and of joining with the acceptors thereof; whereupon the ministers, who had licensed him to preach, conceiving it prudence not to be so explicit anent that step of compliance, began to persecute him with censure for his freedom in preaching against it, and called three several meetings upon that account, one at Dunscore in Nithsdale, another at Dindeugh in Galloway, and a third at Edinburgh.

After his return from Holland, where he received ordination to the exercise of the ministry, he went to some of those outed ministers, inviting and pressing them much to come out and preach in the fields, as they had done before the overthrow at Bothwell; but the persecution being then very hot against all such as had not accepted the Indulgence and Indemnity, they refused to adventure upon that Wherefore, notwithstanding such sad discouragements from the professed friends, and violent persecution by the declared enemies of the Reformation, he adventured upon all hazard to preach publicly in the fields, in order to discharge the dispensation of the Gospel, which the Lord had entrusted him with. And he continued so doing, till he sealed that cause and testimony with his blood; being, after some valiant resistance in his own defence, killed by a party of soldiers under the command of [Bruce of] Earlshall, and his head and hand, cut off by one Robert Murray, were brought and laid before the Council, who ordered them to be placed upon the Netherbow Port of Edinburgh.

The Bond of Mutual Defence.

HERE was found upon him when he was killed, so scribed by him, his brother Michael Camero Archibald Stewart, John Potter, and about the others, the following Bond of Mutual Defence, who justly deserve to be insert here in its proper room being most agreeable to the true state of the testime which these renowned martyrs sealed with their blo [This bond appeared first in the third edition.—En

We, under subscribers, bind and oblige ourselves to be fait to God, and true to one another, and to all others who shall join us, in adhering to Rutherglen Testimony, and disclaiming the Hatton Declaration, chiefly because it takes in the king's interest, we are loosed from by reason of his perfidy and Covenant break both to the most high God, and the people over whom he was set, in the terms of his propagating the main ends of the Covenants, to the Reformation of religion; and instead of that, usurping to his the royal prerogatives of Jesus Christ, and encroaching upon hierties of the Church, and so stating himself both in oppositio Jesus Christ the Mediator, and the free government of His house

"And also in disowning and protesting against the reception the Pake of York, a professed Papist, and whatever else hath! done in this land given to the Lord) in prejudice to our covera and universally sworn-to Reformation. And although, as the who searcheth the heart knows, we be for government and gover both civil and ecclesiastic, such as the Word of God and our Chants allow; yet, by this we disown the present magistrates, openly and anomedly are doing what in them lies for destricted our work of reformation from Popery, Prelacy, Erastia and other heresics and errors; and by this we declare also, the are not any more to own ministers indulged, and such as dreamed under with ministers or professors of any rank, that are guilty chefections of this time, until they give satisfaction proportion the acandal and offence they have given.

* RICHARD CAMERON.

MICHAEL CAMERO

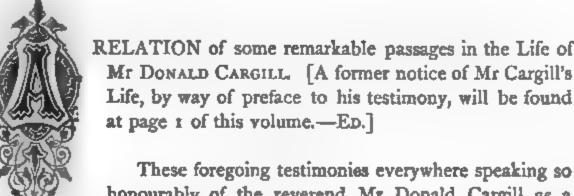

*ARCRIBALD STEWART. JOHN POTTER," et

Mr Donald Cargill.

OWIE, in his collection of lectures and sermons, has given twenty pages of notes of the lecture and the discourse delivered by Donald Cargill before the Torwood Excommunication, and the sermon afterwards on Lam. iii. 31, 32, "For the Lord will not cast off for ever. But though He cause grief, yet will He have compassion according to the multitude of His mercies."

In Wilson's manuscript sermons, already referred to, there are also notes of the whole. They show that Howie, as in the case of those of Richard Cameron, has sometimes made changes on the text of the manuscript that are by no means an improvement.—Ed.]

RELATION of some remarkable passages in the Life of Mr Donald Cargill. [A former notice of Mr Cargill's Life, by way of preface to his testimony, will be found at page 1 of this volume.—ED.]

honourably of the reverend Mr Donald Cargill as a faithful Minister of Jesus Christ: a true and full relation of his life, and more especially of his ministry, would be very necessary to a right understanding of the state of their testimony; but by reason that there are not in the hands of the publishers such wellattested narrations thereof, as might furnish them with an exact and full history thereof, let it suffice for the present to set down the following accounts collected by that worthy and religious gentleman, Sir-Robert Hamilton of Preston, who ushers them in with this personal character of Mr Cargill:

"First (saith he) as he was of a most holy, strict, tender and composed practice and conversation, so he was affectionate, affable, and tender-hearted to all he judged had anything of the image of God in them: sober and temperate in his diet, saying commonly, It was well won that was won off the flesh; generous, liberal, and most charitable to the poor, a great hater of covetousness, a frequent visitor of the sick, much alone, loving to be retired; but when about his Master's public work, laying hold of every opportunity to edify; in converse still dropping what might minister grace to the hearers; his very countenance was edifying to beholders, often sighing with deep groans: preaching in season and out of season, upon all hazards, ever the same in judgment and practice."

There were several things remarkable in the manner of his calling to the ministry: for after he had perfected his philosophy course, at the University of St Andrews, his father, a godly and religious gentleman pressed much upon him to study divinity, in order to fit him he the ministry: but he, through his great tenderness of spirit, constantiv refused telling his father, that the work of the ministry was are great a weight for his weak shoulders, and requesting him to command him to any other employment he pleased. But his father seed many he reserved to seek the mind of the Lord therein, and for that the ser after a fire of private fasting, and after long and earnest weeking with the Lack by prayer, the third chapter of Ezekiel's prowhere and these were's in the first verse, "Son of man, . . . the house of Israel," made a strong impression upon his mind so that he durst never after refuse his ticher's desire, to herain immelt to that study, and dedicate himself wholly to that office. Whi having got a call to the Barony Parish of Glasgow, Divine Providence ordered it so, that the first text upon which the Presbytery ordered him to preach was in these very words of the third of Ezekiel, which he had got clearness from before; whence he was the more confirmed that he had God's call to that rurish

The parish had been long wacara, by reason that two ministers of the Public Resolution party—viz. Mr George Young and Mr Hugh Blair—had still opposed the settlement of such godly men as had been called by the people, and had practised secretly with the council of Glasgow not to suffer any to be settled there that might be settled? The Public Resolutions: but in reference to Mr Cargill's wall, they were by God's good providence much bound up from their wonted opposition. Mr Cargill perceiving the lightness of the people, and their unconcernedness under the Word, was much discouraged thereat, and resolved to return home, and not to accept the call, and when urged by the godly ministers not to do it, and his reason asked, he answered, "They are a rebellious people." The ministers solicited him much to stay, but could not prevail. At last when his horse was drawn, and he just about to take journey, being in Mr James Durham's house, when he had saluted several of the Christian friends that came to see him take horse, as he was bidding farewell to a certain godly woman, she said to him, "Sir, you have promised to preach on Thursday, and have you appointed a meal to a poor starving people, and will ye go away and not give it? If you do, the curse of God will go with you." This so commoved him, that he durst not go away as he intended, but sitting down, desired her and others to pray for him. So he remained, and was settled in that parish, where he continued to exercise his ministry with great success, to the unspeakable satisfaction of his own parish, and of all the godly who heard and knew him, till, after the introduction of Prelacy, he was first put from the exercise thereof in public, and likewise chased and pursued for exercising it privately, by the bloody violence of persecutors.

For, upon the 29th of May, which was then consecrate to King Charles in commemoration of his happy (unhappy) restoration, he had occasion to preach in his own Church. It falling upon the ordinary week-day, wherein he used to preach, he saw an unusual throng of people come to hear him, as thinking he had preached in compliance with that solemnity. Upon his entering the pulpit he said, "We are not come here to keep this day upon the account for which others keep it. We thought once to have blessed the day, wherein the king came home again; but now we think we shall have reason to curse it. And if any of you be come here in order to the solemnising of this day, we desire you to remove." And he enlarged upon the unlawfulness of solemnising it, with several weighty arguments.

This did extremely incense the malignant party against him; so that being hotly pursued and searched for, he was forced to abscond, remaining sometimes in private houses of his parish, sometimes lying without all night among broom near by the city, yet never omitting any proper occasion of private preaching, exercising, catechising, visiting families, and other ministerial duties. And after a while he returned to his church, and preached publicly, and gave the communion, not without great fear among the people, lest he should have been taken out of the pulpit by the persecutors.

At length, when the churches were all vacated of Presbyterians by an Act of Council, commonly known by the name of the Act of Glasgow, Middleton sent a band of soldiers to apprehend him, who, coming to the church, found him not, he having providentially just stepped out of the one door a minute before they came in at the other, whereupon they took the keys of the church door with them and departed. Meantime, the Council passed an act of confinement, banishing him to the north, but he did not regard it; and so being at length apprehended at Edinburgh, was brought before the Council and strictly examined, being signally strengthened w bear faithful testimony to his Master's honour, and His persecuted But by the interposition of some persons of cause and truths. quality, his own and his wife's relations, he was liberated. returned presently to Glasgow, and there performed all the ministerial duties as when he was in his own church, notwithstanding the diligence of persecutors in searching for him.

During this time, partly the great grief he conceived for the ruin of the work of God in the land, partly the toils and labours of his calling and inconveniences of his accommodation, did so break his voice, that he could not be heard by many people together, which was a sore exercise to him, and a discouragement to come to preach But one day, Mr Blackader coming to preach near in the fields. Glasgow, he essayed to preach with him, and standing on a chair (as his ordinary was) he lectured on Isa. xliv. 3, "I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour my Spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring." The people knowing that his voice was sore broken, were much discouraged lest they should not have heard, by reason of the great confluence; but it pleased the Lord so to loose his tongue and restore his voice to that distinctness and clearness, that none could readily exceed him in that respect ever after; and not only his voice, but his spirit was so enlarged, and such a door of utterance given him, that Mr Blackader, succeeding him, said to the people, "Ye that have such preaching as this, have no need to invite strangers to Make good use of your mercy." preach to you.

After this he continued to preach within a very little of the city, a great multitude still attending upon and profiting by his ministry, being wonderfully preserved in the midst of dangers; the enemies several times sending out some to watch him, and catch something from his mouth, whereof they might accuse him. Particularly one day the archbishop of Glasgow sent one of his domestic servants to take notice what he would say concerning the prelates; he, knowing nothing thereof, was directed of the Lord to have these words in prayer, while he was bewailing the overthrow of the work of God: "What shall we say of the prelates? the good Lord make us quit of them; for we will never have a day to do well, till once the Lord remove that abominable party, that has destroyed the vineyard of the Lord:" which was all that the spy had to return to his master with.

To relate all the surprising deliverances that he met with, in escaping very narrowly from his enemies, would take much time; take only a few instances.

In the month of October 1665 they made a public search for him in the city; he being informed of it, took his horse and rode out of the town, and at a narrow pass of the way, he met a good number of musketeers, and as he passed by them, turning into another way upon the right hand, one of them asked him, "Sir, what of the clock is it?" He answered, "It is six." Another of them knowing his voice, says to his fellows, "There's the man we're seeking," which he hearing, put the spurs to the horse and escaped.

He most usually resided for the space of three years and upwards in the house of one Margaret Craig, a godly and honest woman, lecturing evening and morning to such as came to hear him, where, though they searched frequently for him, yet Divine providence so ordered it, that at all the times he was either casually or purposely absent, though they managed their searches with much closeness; but the Lord was so graciously kind to him, that He left him not without some peculiar notices of approaching hazard (our atheistical wits perhaps will call them enthusiasms; but the secret of the Lord is with them that fear him); as for instance, on a certain Sabbath, when he was going to Woodside to preach, as he was about to mount his horse, the one foot being in the stirrup, he turned about to his man, and said, "I must not go yonder to-day," and within a little, a party of horse and foot came in quest of him, and not finding the mark they aimed at, fell upon the people, apprehending and imprisoning many of them.

Another remarkable escape was, at a search purposely made for taking him in the city. They came to his chamber, and found him not, for he was providentially in another house that night; the search was so strict that several other ministers were taken [but the soldiers], were not permitted to come near the house where he was. But the following is yet more remarkable.

One day while he was preaching privately in one Mr Callender's house, they came and beset the house; the people within put him and a friend with him out at a window, closing the window up with books, and they two stood at the outside of the window all the while of the search, which was so strict that they searched the very ceiling of the house, till one of them fell through to the lower loft. Had the searchers removed but one of the books, they had infallibly apprehended him, but the Lord so ordered it, that they did it not, for when one of the soldiers was about to take up one of them, a maid cried to the commander, that he was going to take her master's books, so he was ordered to let them alone; thus narrowly he escaped this danger.

Another not imparallel was, that, one day, hotly pursued upon the street, being obliged to flee into the first house he could come at which happened to be a soldier's house, yet the soldier's wife was so far from discovering him, that she kept him safe till the search was over.

A little before the fight at Bothwell he was pursued from his own chamber out of the town, being forced to go through several thom hedges, and no sooner is he out, but he sees a troop of dragoons in rank, right opposite to him; back he could not go, soldiers being everywhere posted to catch him; wherefore he went forward near by the troop, who looked to him, and he to them, till he was gone by them, but coming to the place of the water where he intended to go over, he saw another troop standing upon the opposite bank of the water, who called to him; he made them no answer; but, going a mile further up the water, escaped to Langside, and preached there next Sabbath, without interruption.

At another time, being in a house, beset with soldiers, he escaped through the throng of them, they taking him to have been the goodman [i.e., the head] of the house. So much anent his remarkable deliveries.

After Bothwell he fell into deep exercise anent his call to the ministry, but by God's grace he happily emerged out of that, and had also much light anent the duty of the day, being a faithful contender against the enemies' usurped power in granting, and ministers' and professors' lukewarmness and sinful compliance in accepting, indulgences and indemnities, oaths and bonds, and other corruptions and abominations of the time, till at length he suffered for his testimony.

Among other parts of his contendings against the enemies of ruth and godliness, that which exasperated the enemies most, was he Torwood Excommunication, wherein he, moved with zeal against he indignities done to the Son of God, by overturning His work and estroying His people, delivered up to Satan some of the most candalous and principal promoters and abettors of this conspiracy gainst Christ, as formally as he could in his circumstances; who, aving earnestly sought the concurrence of his brethren, could not btain it, and therefore was left to do the work his alone, or leave it ndone, which he could by no means think of; considering that all ther sorts of weapons had been used against them, save that of cclesiastic censure, and the neglect of it might bring upon this thurch that severe reproof given to Pergamos, Rev. ii. 14, 15, for aving in her communion the Nicolaitans, and them that held the octrine of Balaam; and that sore animadversion made upon the thurch of Thyatira, for suffering that woman Jezebel; and lest the ord might come and fight against His Church with the sword of Iis mouth, on account that such were not expressly cast out of her ommunion.

Wherefore in September 1680, after sermon upon Ezek. xxi. 5-27, "And thou profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is ome;" having made a short and pertinent discourse on the nature, ubject, causes, and ends of excommunication, and declared his notives, leading him to it, not to be any private spirit or passion, ut conscience of duty and zeal to God, he pronounced the sentence s follows:

- "We have spoken of excommunication, of the causes, subject, and nds thereof. We shall now proceed to the action; being constrained by the conscience of our duty, and zeal for God, to excommunicate ome of these, who have been the committers of so great crimes, and uthors of the great mischiefs of Britain and Ireland, but especially hese of Scotland; and in doing of this, we shall keep the names by which they are ordinarily called, that they may be the better known.
- "I being a minister of Jesus Christ, and having authority and lower from Him, do in His name, and by His spirit, excommuniate Charles the Second, King, etc., and that upon the account of hese wickednesses:
- "1. For his high mocking of God, in that after he had acknowedged his own sins, his father's sins, his mother's idolatry, and had olemnly engaged against them, in a declaration at Dunfermline, the 16th day of August 1650, he hath, notwithstanding of all this, gone on more avowedly in these sins than all that went before him.

- "2. For his great perjury, after he had twice at least solemly subscribed that Covenant, he did so presumptuously renounce, disown, and command it to be burned by the hand of the hangman.
- "3. Because he hath rescinded all laws for establishing of that religion and reformation engaged to in that Covenant, and enacted laws for establishing its contrary; and is still working for the introducing of Popery into these lands.
- "4. For commanding of armies to destroy the Lord's people, who were standing in their own just defence, and for their privileges and rights, against tyrannies, oppressions, and injuries of men; and for the blood he hath shed, in fields, on scaffolds, and in seas, of the people of God, upon account of religion and righteousness (they being most willing in all other things, to render him obedience, if he had reigned and ruled them according to his Covenant and oath, more than all the kings that have been before him in Scotland).
- "5. That he hath been still an enemy to, a persecutor of the true Protestants, a favourer and helper of the Papists, both at home and abroad, and hath hindered to the utmost of his power, the due execution of just laws against them.
- "6. For his relaxing of the kingdom, by his frequent grant of remissions and pardons for murderers (which is in the power of no king to do, being expressly contrary to the law of God), which was the ready way to embolden men in committing of murders, to the defiling of the land with blood.
- "Lastly, To pass by all other things, his great and dreadful uncleanness of adultery and incest, his drunkenness, his dissembling with God and man; and performing his promises where his engagements were sinful.
- "Next, by the same authority, and in the same name, I excommunicate, cast out of the true Church, and deliver up to Satan, James Duke of York. And that for his idolatry (for I shall not speak of any other sins, but what have been perpetrated by him in Scotland), and for setting up idolatry in Scotland, to defile the Lord's land, and his enticing and encouraging others to do so.
- "Next, In the same name, and by the same authority, I excommunicate, and cast out of the true Church, and deliver up to Satan, James Duke of Monmouth, for coming into Scotland, upon his father's unjust command, and leading armies against the Lord's people, who were constrained to rise, being killed in and for the right worshipping of the true God: and for his refusing that morning at Bothwell Bridge a cessation of arms, for hearing and redressing their injuries, wrongs, and oppressions.

"Next, I do by virtue of the same authority, and in the same name, excommunicate, cast out of the true Church, and deliver up to Satan, John Duke of Lauderdale, for his dreadful blasphemy, especially that word to the prelate of St Andrews:—"Sit thou at my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footstool:" his atheistical drolling on the Scriptures of God, scoffing at religion, and religious persons: his apostacy from the Covenant and work of reformation; and his persecuting thereof, after he had been a professor, pleader and presser thereof: for his perjury in the business of Mr James Mitchell, who, being in Council, gave public faith, that he should be indemnified, and that to life and limb, if he should confess his attempt on the prelate, and notwithstanding of this, before the Justiciary Court, did give oath that there was no such act in Council: for his adulteries and uncleanness: for his counselling and assisting the king, in all his tyrannies, overturning and plotting against the true religion: for his gaming on the Lord's day; and lastly, for his usual and ordinary cursing.

"Next, I do, by virtue of the same authority, and in the same name, cast out of the true Church, and deliver up to Satan, John Duke of Rothes, for his perjury, in the matter of Mr James Mitchell; and for his adulteries and uncleanness; for allotting the Lord's day for his drunkenness: for his professing and avowing his readiness and willingness to set up Popery in this land at the king's command; and for the heathenish, barbarous, and unheard of cruelty (whereof he was the chief author, contriver, and commander, notwithstanding that he had otherwise engaged lately) to that worthy gentleman David Hackston of Rathillet; and lastly, for his ordinary cursing, swearing, and drunkenness.

"Next, I do, by virtue of the same authority, and in the same name, excommunicate, cast out of the true Church, and deliver up to Satan, Sir George Mackenzie, the king's advocate; for his apostacy, in turning into a profligateness of conversation, after he had begun a profession of holiness: for his constant pleading against, and persecuting to death, the people of God, and alleging and laying to their charge, things, which in his conscience he knew to be against the Word of God, truth, reason, and the ancient laws of this kingdom:

and his pleading for sorcerers, murderers, and other criminals, that before God, and by the laws of the land, ought to die; for his ungodly, erroneous, phantastic and blasphemous tenets, printed to the world in his pamphlets and pasquils.

"And lastly, I do, by virtue of the same authority, and in the same name, excommunicate, cast out of the true Church, and deliver up to Satan, Thomas Dalziel of Binns, etc.; for his leading armies, and commanding the killing, robbing, pillaging, and oppressing of the Lord's people, and free subjects of this kingdom; and for executing of lawless tyrannies and lustful laws; for his commanding to shoot at a post one Finlay at Newmilns, without any form of law, civil or military, he not being guilty of anything that they themselves counted a crime: for his lewd and impious life, led in adultery and uncleanness from his youth, with a contempt of marriage, which is the ordinance of God; for all his other atheistical and irreligious conversation; and lastly, for his unjust usurping and retaining of the estate of that worthy gentleman William Mure of Caldwell, and his other injurious deeds in the exercise of his power.

"I think, none that acknowledge the Word, can judge their sentences to be unjust; yet some, it may be, to flatter the powers, will call them unorderly and unformal, there not being warning given, nor probation led. But for answer, there has been warning given, if not of all these things, at least of a great part of them: and for probation, there needs none, the deeds being notour and public, and the most of them, such as they themselves do avow and boast of. And as the causes are just, so, being done by a minister of the Gospel, and in such a way as the present persecution would admit of, the sentence is just; and there are no kings nor ministers on earth, who, without repentance of the persons, can reverse these sentences upon any (such) account: God, who is the Author of that ordinance, is the more engaged to the ratifying of them; and all that acknowledge the Scriptures, ought to acknowledge them. Yet some, perchance, will think, that though they be not unjust, yet that they are foolishly rigorous. We shall answer nothing to this but that Word, which we may speak with much more reason than they did who used it, 'Should he deal with our sister as with an harlot?' deal with our God as with an idol? Should they deal with His people as murderers and malefactors, and we not draw out His sword against them?"

Henry Hall.

BRIEF relation of the Persecutions and Death of that worthy gentleman, Henry Hall of Haughhead, who suffered martyrdom at Queensferry, June 3d, 1680. [For a further account of the Queensferry paper found upon Henry Hall, see page 35. In the following Relation it is abridged to about a fifth of its original size, and like most abridgments, it gives but an imperfect idea of the document itself, or of the power with which it states rights and liberties then denied to the subject, but now regarded as a heritage which no ruler can take away.—ED.]

Henry Hall of Haughhead, having had religious education, began early to mind a life of holiness; and was of a pious conversation from his youth. He was a zealous opposer of the Public Resolutions, insomuch that when the minister of the parish where he lived complied with that course, he refused to hear him, and went to Ancrum, to hear Mr John Livingstone. Being oppressed with the malicious prosecutions of the curates and other malignants for his nonconformity with the profane courses of abomination that commenced at the unhappy restoration of that most wicked tyrant Charles the Second, [he] was obliged to depart his native country, and go over the border into. England in the year 1665, where he was much renowned for his singular zeal in propagating the Gospel among that people, who, before his coming among them, were very rude and barbarous; but many of them became famous for piety after.

In the year 1666, he was taken on his way to Pentland, coming to the assistance of his covenanted brethren, and was imprisoned with some others in Cessford Castle; but by the Divine goodness he soon escaped thence, through the favour of the Earl of Roxburgh, to whom the castle pertained, the said Earl being his friend and relation, from which time till about the year 1679 he lived in England, much beloved of all that knew him, for his concern in propagating the knowledge of Christ in that country; insomuch that his blameless and shining Christian conversation drew reverence and esteem from his very enemies.

"But about the year 1678, the heat of the persecution in Scotland obliging many to wander up and down through Northumberland and other places, one Colonel Struthers, intending to seize any Scotsman he could find in those parts, and meeting with Thomas Ker of Hayhope, one of Henry Hall's nearest intimates, he was engaged in that encounter upon the account of the said Thomas Ker, who was killed there; upon which account he was forced to return to Scotland, and wandered up and down during the hottest time of the persecution, mostly with Mr Richard Cameron and Mr Donald Cargill; during which time, besides his many other Christian virtues, he signalised himself for a real zeal in defence of the persecuted Gospel preached in the fields, and gave several proofs of his valour and courage, particularly at Rutherglen, Drumclog, Glasgow and Bothwell Bridge; whereupon, being forfeited and violently pursued, to eschew the violent hands of his indefatigable persecutors, he was forced to go over to Holland; where he had not stayed long when his zeal for the persecuted interest of Christ, and his tender sympathy with the afflicted remnant of his covenanted brethren in Scotland, then wandering through the desolate caves and dens of the earth, drew him home, choosing rather to undergo the utmost efforts of persecuting furies than to live at ease, when Joseph was in affliction; making Moses' generous choice, rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, that he might be partaker of the fellowship of Christ's sufferings, than to enjoy what momentary pleasure the ease of the world could afford; nor was he much concerned with the riches of the world, for he stood not to give his ground to hold the prohibited field-preachings upon, when none else would do it. was a lover and follower of the faithfully-preached Gospel, and was always against the Indulgence; he was with Mr Richard Cameron at these meetings where he was censured.

About a quarter of a year after his return from Holland, being in company with the reverend Mr Donald Cargill, they were taken notice of by two bloodhounds, the curates of Borrowstounness and Carriden, who went to Middleton, governor of Blackness Castle, and informed him of them; who, having consulted with these blood-thirsty ruffians, ordered his soldiers to follow him at a distance by two or three together, with convenient intervals for avoiding suspicion, and he (the said Middleton) and his man riding up, observed where they alighted and stabled their horses; and coming to them, pretended a great deal of kindness and civility to Mr Donald Cargill and him, desiring that they might have a glass of wine together. When they were set [i.e., seated] and had taken each a glass, Middleton laid hands on them, and told them they were his prisoners, commanding, in the king's name, all the people in the house to assist, which they all refused save a certain waiter [i.e., excise officer], through whose means the governor got the gates shut, till his soldiers came up; and when the women of the town, rising to the rescue of the prisoners, had broke up the outer gate, Henry Hall, after some scuffle with the governor in the house, making his escape by the gate, received his mortal blow upon the head with a carabine, by Thomas George, waiter; and being conveyed out of the town by the assistance of the women, walked some pretty space of way upon his foot, but unable to speak much, save only that he made some short reflection upon a woman that, interposing between him and the governor, hindered him to kill the governor, and so to make his escape timeously.

THE TOLBOOTH,

GLASGOW

So soon as he fainted, the women carried him to a house in the country, but notwithstanding the care of chirurgeons [i.e., surgeons] he never recovered the power of speaking more. General Dalziel being advertised, came with a party of the guards, and carried him to Edinburgh. He died by the way. His corpse they carried to the Canongate Tolbooth, and kept it there three days without burial, though a number of friends convened for that effect, and thereafter they caused bury him clandestinely in the night. Such was the fury of these limbs of antichrist, that, having killed the witnesses, they would not suffer their dead bodies to be decently put in graves.

There was found upon him a rude draught of a paper containing a mutual engagement to stand to the necessary duty of the day against its stated enemies; which was called by the persecutors Mr Cargill's covenant, and frequently in the foregoing testimonies, the Queensferry Paper, because there it was seized by the enemies. This paper Divine Providence seems to have made, as it were, the dying words and testimony of that worthy gentleman, and the enemies made it one of the captious and ensnaring questions they constantly put to the sufferers; and therefore it will not be impertinent here to insert the heads of it, as they are compendised by the learned author of the Entire Loose," page 133 [Edition of 1744, p. 148]; for it was a writered by Mr Donald Cargill, that the draught was not digested and polished as it was intended, and therefore it will be so far from heing a wrong to recite the heads of it only, that it is really a piece at mance done him, who never intended it should see the world as a way when the enemies found it. I shall not pretend to justify expression in it, but rather submit it entirely to better judgments: nor did the sufferers for most part adhere to it, without the minimum. "In so far as it was agreeable to the Word of God, and our National Covenants," and, in so far as it seems to import a purpose of assuming to themselves magistratical authority, their practice declares all along, that they did not understand it in that sense.

The tenor of it was an engagement—

- "I. To avouch the only true and living God to be their God, and to close with His way of redemption by His Son Jesus Christ, whose righteousness is only to be relied upon for justification; and to take the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be the only offect matter of our faith, and rule of conversation in all things.
- "2. To establish in the land righteousness and religion, in the truth of its doctrine, purity, and power of its worship, discipline, and government: and to free the Church of God of the corruption of Prelacy on the one hand, and the thraldom of Erastianism on the other.
- especially that of Scotland, and in the worship prescribed in the Scriptures, without the inventions, adornings, and corruptions of men: and in the Presbyterian government exercised in sessions, presbyteries, synods, and general assemblies, as a distinct government from the civil, and distinctly to be exercised, not after a carnal manner by plurality of votes, or authority of a single person, but according to the Word of God making and carrying the sentence.
- and whatsoever is contrary to the kingdom of Christ, especially Idolatry and Popery in all its articles, and the overthrow of that power that hath established and upheld it; and to execute righteous indigment impartially, according to the Word of God and degree of offences, upon the committers of these things, especially, to wit blasphemy, idolatry, atheism, sorcery, perjury, uncleanness, profanation of the Lord's day, oppression, and malignancy.

- "5. Seriously considering that there is no more speedy way of re-Laxation from the wrath of God, that hath ever lain on the lands since it engaged with these rulers, but of rejecting them, who have so mani-Festly rejected God—disclaiming His Covenant, governing contrary to all right laws, Divine and human, and contrary to all the ends of government, by enacting and commanding impieties, injuries, and robberies—to the denying of God His due, and the subjects theirs; so that, instead of government, godliness, and peace, there is nothing but rapine, tumult, and blood, which cannot be called a government, but a lastful rage; and they cannot be called governors, but public grassators and land-judgments; which all ought to set themselves against, as they would do against pestilence, sword, and famine raging amongst them—seeing they have stopped the course of law and justice against blasphemers, idolaters, atheists, sorcerers, murderers, incestuous and adulterous persons; and have made butcheries on the Lord's people, sold them as slaves, imprisoned, forfeited, etc., and that upon no other account but their maintaining Christ's right of ruling over their consciences, against the usurpations of men. Therefore, easily solving the objections:
 - "(1.) Of our ancestors' obliging the nation to this race and line: that they did not buy their liberty with our thraldom, nor could they bind their children to anything so much to their prejudice, and against natural liberty (being a benefit next to life, if not in some regard above it), which is not as an engagement to moral things; they could only bind to that government which they esteemed the best for common good; which reason ceasing, we are free to choose another, if we find it more conducible for that end:
 - "(2.) Of the Covenant binding to defend the king: that that obligation is only in his maintenance of the true Covenanted Reformation, which homage they cannot now require upon the account of the Covenant which they have renounced and disclaimed; and upon no other ground we are bound to them—the crown not being an inheritance that passeth from father to son, without the consent of tenants:
 - "(3.) Of the hope of their returning from these courses, whereof there is none, seeing they have so often declared their purposes of persevering in them. And suppose they should dissemble a repentance—supposing also they might be pardoned for that which is done, from whose guiltiness the land cannot be cleansed but by executing God's righteous judgments upon them—yet they cannot now be believed, after they have violated all that human wisdom could devise to bind them:

"Upon these accounts they reject that king and those associated with him in the government, and declare them henceforth no lawful rulers, as they had declared them to be no lawful subjects—they having destroyed the established religion, overturned the fundamental laws of the kingdom, taken away Christ's church-government, and changed the civil government into tyranny, where none are associated in partaking of the government, but only those who will be found by justice guilty as criminals; and declare they shall, God giving them power, set up government and governors according to the Word of God and the qualifications required (Exod. xviii. 21); and shall not commit the government to any single person or lineal succession; being not tied, as the Jews were, to one single family, and that kind being liable to most inconveniences, and aptest to degenerate into tyranny. And moreover, that these men set over them shall be engaged to govern principally by that civil and judicial law (not that which is any way typical) given by God to His people Israel—as the best, so far as it goes, being given by God especially in matters of life and death, and other things, so far as they reach and are consistent with Christian liberty — exempting divorces and polygamy, etc.

"6. Seeing the greatest part of ministers not only were defective in preaching against the rulers for overthrowing religion, but hindered others also who were willing, and censured some that did it; and have voted for acceptation of that liberty, founded upon and given by virtue of that blasphemously arrogated and usurped power, and appeared before their courts to accept of it, and to be enacted and authorised their ministers, whereby they have become ministers of men, and bound to be answerable to them as they will; and have preached for the lawfulness of paying that tribute declared to be imposed for the bearing down of the true worship of God; and advised poor prisoners to subscribe that bond, which, if it were universally subscribed, they should close that door, which the Lord hath made use of in all the churches of Europe, for casting off the yoke of the whore, and stop all regress of men, when once brought under tyranny, to recover their liberty again. They declare they neither can nor will hear them, etc., nor any who encouraged and strengthened their hands, and pleaded for them, and trafficked for union with them.

- "7. That they are for a standing Gospel ministry, rightly chosen and rightly ordained, and that none shall take upon them the preaching of the Word, etc., unless called and ordained thereunto. And whereas separation might be imputed to them, they refel [i.e., clisprove] both the malice, and the ignorance of the calumny—for if there be a separation, it must be where the change is; and that was not to be found in them, who were not separating from the communion of the true Church, nor setting up a new ministry, but cleaving to the same ministers and ordinances that formerly they followed, when others have fled to new ways and a new authority, which is like the old piece in the new garment.
 - "8. That they shall defend themselves in their civil, natural, and divine rights and liberties. And if any assault them, they shall look on it as a declaring a war, and take all advantages that one enemy does of another; but trouble and injure none, but those that injure them."

A List of the Banished.

The time the "Cloud of Witnesses" was drawn up, the conpilers do not seem to have had access to such full information as Wodrow. Hence the list of the banished given by them is far from being full. It is, however, generally accurate so far as it goes. The additional information given has been inserted in brackets throughout the list.—En.]

speak nothing of those whom the cruelty of the persecutors forced to a voluntary exile, of whom there can be no particular account had, besides the six of seven ministers [i.e., James Simpson of Airth, Robert M'Ward of Glasgow, John Brown of Wamphray, John Livingston of Ancrum, John Nevay of Newmilns, Robert Trail of Edinburgh, and James Gardiner of Saddle] that were banished and went to Holland, banished] to Barbadoes, before the year 1666.

[Wodrow gives an account of the banishment of William Gordon of Earlstoun to Holland; of four boys in 1664 to the Barbadoes; of two brothers to Virginia; of John Sproul, apothecary, Glasgow, who, on his return, in 1680, from Holland, in order to take his wife and family to Rotterdam, was apprehended, and put to the torture, as stated in a former note (p. 98); and of several persons in 1665, whose names are not given, to the Barbadoes.—Ed.]

and seven or eight country people to France, several others [were

After the year 1678, there were banished to be sold for slaves, for the same cause for which others suffered death at home, of men and women about 1700—viz.: NNO 1678.—To Virginia 60, whereof three or four were ministers, who were all by the mercy of God delivered at London.

[In May 1678, a conventicle was held at Williamwood, in the parish of Cathcart, Renfrewshire. John Campbell of Sorn, Matthew Crawford of Eastwood, and some others not mentioned, preached. An alarm was given which dispersed the meeting. Several of the ministers escaped, but the dragoons pursued the people that had been assembled, and about seventy were taken prisoners to Glasgow. Among others were the well-known Alexander Peden, Robert Meikle, chaplain to Sir James Stewart, and Adam Abercorn, chaplain. After a few days' confinement they were taken to Edinburgh. On May 28th, and June 13th, the Council banished them to his majesty's plantations in the Indies, and Ralph Williamson of London gave security that he would transport them and sell them to the best advantage. in prison till December, when a warrant was given to deliver them to Edward Johnston, captain of the St Michael of Scarborough, lying at Their names, amounting to sixty-seven, are given in Wodrow. Leith. The passage between Leith and Gravesend was five days longer than Williamson had expected, and when the ship arrived he was not to The captain waited for some time, and as provisions ran be found. short, and Williamson did not appear, he set them ashore and left them to shift for themselves. Wodrow says that the country people were very kind to them when they knew the cause of their sufferings, and they generally got home safe after they had been absent from their homes about nine months. Wodrow also gives, under the same year 1678, the sentence of banishment passed upon William Temple, James Miller in Kirkcaldy, David Barclay, Robert Marnock, and seven or eight more; John Harroway, Alexander Buchanan in Bucklyvie, and three or four others there; Andrew Buchanan in Shargarton, and three more tenants there; Thomas and William Govans, and nine others.—ED.]

NNO 1679.—Of the prisoners taken at Bothwell were banished to America, 250 [rather 257. See fuller account in prefatory note to the testimony of John Malcolm, p. 66], who were taken away by (William) Paterson, merchant in Leith, who transacted for them with Provost Milns, laird of Barnton [and bailie or provost of Linlithgow], the man that first burned the Covenant: whereof real number were interned by shipwreck at a place called the Mo Heart of Teamers in Crimer, being shut up by the said Paterson where tement the hundres: iffly only escaped. The names, so may river as article to had independent those who escaped being mark with a sure for fiscingness as ke.

du n'un sire n'Ellestale:

The of Gasgree Francis Wodrow, Walter M'Kechnie, Ale maier Francis William Miller.

Fursi ai Garun Andrew Spodgrass.

Frank in Killimite Richert Auld, John Struthers, James Clalinin Clark William Rodger.

Frank of Shorts From Lembert Russel, John Aitk Robert Chrimers John Thomson,* John Killen, Alexand

Farsh at Camboscother, William Scular.*

The Markinshis William Waidel.* William Grinlaw, Thor Marke William Miles John Wynet, James Waddel, John Gariner.* Thomas Barton.

Purish of Recited - More.* William Breakenrig.

Fursit of Evandule, John Cairnduff, John Cochran, Rol Alisen Andrew Terrence, Thomas Brownlee, John Watt William Alisen Andrew Atton.

Parish of Cadden, William Fram.*

Parish of Glassford, John Miller, John Craig.

Parish of Carnwath, Thomas Crighton, James Couper.

Parish of Quathquan, James Penman,* James Thomas Wilson.

Parish of Carstairs, Thomas Swan.*

Parish of Biggar, John Rankin.

Parish of Lesmahagow. George Weir, Robert Weir, Ge Drafin.* [after his escape he was conveyed to America.—Out of the shire of Ayr:

Parish of Fenwick, James Gray, Andrew Buckle, David Ct David Bitchet, Robert Tod, John White, Robert Walk John Wylie, William Bitchet.

Parish of Loudon, Thomas Wylie.

Parish of Dalmellington, Hugh Simpson, Walter Hur Walter Humper, younger,* Hugh Cameron,* Qu M'Adam,* Parish of Cumnock, John Gemill, James Mirrie.

Parish of Ochiltree, Andrew Welsh.

Parish of Auchinleck, Andrew Richmond.

Dundonald, Andrew Thomson.*

Mauchline, William Reid, William Drips.

Parish of Muirkirk, John Campbell, Alexander Paterson.

Parish of Digen [i.e., Dreghorn], James Bouston.

Parish of Galston, James Young, George Campbell.

Parish of Kilmarnock, Thomas Finlay, John Cuthbertson, William Brown, Patrick Watt,* Robert Anderson, James Anderson.

Parish of Stewarton, Thos. Wylie, Andrew Wylie, Robt. Wylie.

Parish of Barr, Alexander Burden.

Parish of Colmonell, Thomas M'Lurg, John M'Cornock, John M'Lellan.

Parish of Girvan, William Caldwell.

Parish of Dalry, David M'Cubbin, William M'Culloch.

Parish of Maybole, William Rodger, Mungo Eccles, John M'Whirter, Thomas Horn, Robert M'Garron, John M'Harie.

Parish of Craigie, George Dunbar.*

Parish of Straiton, James M'Murrie, Alexander Lamb, George Hutcheson.

Parish of Kirkmichael, John Brice, Robert Ramsay, John Douglass, John M'Tire, James M'Connel.

Parish of Kirkoswald, John White, Thomas Germont.

Out of the shire of FIFE:

Parish of Newburn, James Beal.

Parish of Largo and Kilconquhar, Andrew Prie, James Kirk.

Parish of Ceres, John Kirk, Thomas Miller.*

Parish of Strathmiglo, Robert Boog.

Out of [the shire of KINROSS]:

Town of Kinross, James Lilburn.

Parish of Orwell, Robert Kirk,* Robert Sands.*

Out of the shire of PERTH:

Parish of Kilmadock, John Christison.

Parish of Kincardine, Patrick Keir, John Donaldson.

Parish of Glendevon, John Murie and Andrew Murie.

Out of the shire of BARONTHROW [i.e., RENFREW]:

Parish of Eastwood, James Cunningham.

Parish of Neilston, John Govan.

Paisley, William Buchan, William Auchinclose.

Out of the shire of LENNOX [i.e., Dumbarton]:

Parish of New Kilpatrick, James Finlayson.

Out of the shire of STIRLING:

Parish of Drummond, Daniel Cunningham.

Parish of Kippen, James Galbraith.

Garguenock, Thomas Miller, Patrick Gilchrist, James Sands,* Thomas Brown, James Buchanan.

Parish of St Ninian's, Thomas Thomson,* Andrew Thomson,* John Neilson, John M'Nure.

Parish of Denny, James M'Kie.

Parish of Airth, Andrew Young, John Morison, Robert Hendrie.

Parish of Falkirk. Hugh Montgomerie.*

Mairavonside, Thomas Phalp.

that of the shire of West Lothian:

Pender. James Easton, John Easton, Andrew Easton, John Addie. Alexander Bishop.

Talmeny, John Thomson.

Thomas Inglis, Patrick Hamilton, John Bell, William Younger, William Henderson, John Parish of Kirkliston, John Govan.

Richard Unit Ration.

Physics of Albertona, John Gib, James Gib.

Paried of Limitingow, Thomas Borthwick.

March of Kinnell John Borrowstounness], Andrew Murdoch Chicae in the Alter of Min-Lothian:

Parish of Children, James Steel, Thomas Gilchrist, James Grate, Micheleiter, John Rown, Alexander Mutray.

Past Califer, Parkel Samuel.* Alexander Bissit.

Parish of New, Thomas Pringle.

Parish of Temple, James Tinto.

Purish of Liberton, Thomas Mackenzie.*

Parish of Crichton, James Fork.

Parish of Cranston, Thomas Williamson.

Musselburgh, William Rend

Out of the shire of East Lorman:

Parish of Dunbar, James Tod.

Out of the shire of NITHSDALE:

Parish of Glencairn, David Mackervail, John Ferguson, Robert Milligan, John Milligan,* John Murdoch,* John Smith,* William Ferguson,* James Colvil, Thomas Rosper.

Parish of Closeburn, Thomas Milligan, John Kennedy. Out of the shire of Galloway:

Parish of Kirkcudbright, James Corson, Andrew M'Quhan,* John M'Bratney,* John M'Gie.* [Wodrow gives an extract from a letter of James Corson, dated Leith Roads, in which he says that all the trouble they met with since Bothwell was not to be compared to one day in their present circumstances, that their uneasiness was beyond words, yet, that the consolations of God overbalanced all; and expresses his hope that they are near their port, and that heaven is open for them.—ED.]

Parish of Balmaghie, Robert Caldow,* James Houston.

Parish of Kelton, James Donaldson.

Parish of Kirkmabreck, Robert Brown, Samuel Beck, Samuel Hannay.

Parish of Penninghame, John M'Tagart, Alexander Murray.*

Parish of Borgue, Andrew Sprot, Robert Bryce, John Richardson,* John Martine,* John Brice, William Thomson.

Parish of Girthon, Andrew Donaldson.

Parish of Dalry, John Smith,* John Malcolm.* [See his "Dying Testimony," p. 66.]

Irongray, Andrew Wallet.

Balmaclellan, John Edgar.*

Lochrutton, Andrew Clark.*

Ettrick Forest, John Scot.

Parish of Galashiels, Robert Macgill,* Robert Young.

Out of the shires of MERSE and TEVIOTDALE—

Parish of Nethan [i.e., Nenthorn], Samuel Nisbet, John Deans, James Aitchison.*

Parish of Cavers, James Leydon,* John Glasgow,* William Glasgow,* John Greenshields, Richard Young, Samuel Douglas, James Young,* James Hopkirk.

Kelso, William Hardie.

Jedburgh, John Mather.

Parish of Ancrum, George Rutherford.

Parish of Sprouston, Walter Waddel and Thomas Cairns.

Farmer of Mairose, John Yeung and Andrew Cook.

First of Listenium William Scot, John Pringle, Alexander Villiam until from Union

First a Asticie William Heri

First if Familia ... Bowden, Andrew Newbigging.

Funda of Suling [L. Southiers], James Couston, William Swanston, * John Eine.

Passe of Houseke John Oliver

Figures was impared the kingdom, March 4, 1684:
Thomas Juneau George Juneau, James Forrest elder,
Thomas Tuneau, John Chine James Gourlay, —— Gillies
To Victive, Jennes Gioren.

Victims and in their joint maximum they relate that the Chantelor, after a long special changing them with rebellious principles, included they were lumished in West Fanciers, never to return under than in learn. In their resument they vindicate themselves from the change of discoving and rebellion, and profess their attachment to the formation Countries on the Covenants, against Popery, Prelarg and John Johns has a sequence restimony of his own, in which the gives the reason with he rought not say "God save the king." He select the remainment is less him know the meaning of the words, and they that it separate is his person, and government, and have and ressent accurage. This he says satisfied him that he was right a reason to after them.—En-unsperted in James Gelsen's ship, called sometime Balle Gelsen in Glasgow, of whom it is observed, that in God's rightsous judgment he was case away in Carolina Bay, when he communiced in the "Rising San". They received their sentence, July 17, 1984. The names of such as subscribed the joint testimony are these: Marthew Machan, James McClintock, John Gibson, Gavin Black, John Paten, William Inglis, John Young, John Galt, John Edwards, Thomas Marshal, George Smith, William Smith, Robert Urie, John Buchanian, Thomas Brice, John Simon, Hugh Simon, William Simon, Archibald Cunningham, John Alexander, John Marshal.

[In May 27, 1684, the Council passed an act, granting prisoners to Walter Gibson, merchant in Glasgow, to be by him transported to America. On June 19, Sir William Paterson reported to the Council that twenty-two prisoners are in the tolbooth of Glasgow; and they are ordered to be transported in Walter Gibson's ship. all of these, seem to have been shipped along with the twenty-one subscribers to the joint testimony against the king's supremacy and the renouncing of the Covenants above mentioned. The ship was commanded by Walter Gibson's brother, James, a person well known in Scotland at the time of the publication of the "Cloud of Witnesses" as the commander of the "Rising Sun," a ship of sixty guns, and the chief ship in the second squadron sent out to the ill-fated Darien settlement. When the settlement broke up, the "Rising Sun" returned homewards, and had reached as far as the Gulf of Florida, when a violent storm carried away the masts, shattered the boats, and compelled them, with the help of a jury mast, to make for In ten days they reached Charleston, and lay at anchor until their guns were taken out so as to get over the bar, when a hurricane arose, and the ship and all on board perished, September 3, 1700.

Captain Gibson behaved with extreme harshness to the prisoners on the voyage. Their daily allowance of water was a mutchkin (less than an English pint), and an ounce and a-quarter of salt beef; and during the voyage they experienced all the horrors of what was known in the next century as the middle passage.—ED.]

HEREAFTER in July 19, 1684, John Mathieson, John Crighton, James M'Gachen, John M'Chesnie, James Baird, were banished to New Jersey in America.

[Wodrow's date is June 19, 1684. "He says: At Edinburgh the Lords, by sentence, appoint James M'Gachen in Dalry, John Crighton in Kirkpatrick, John Mathieson in Closeburn, John M'Chesnie in Spittle, libelled for reset and converse with rebels, found guilty by their confession judicially adhered to, to be transported to the plantations."

John Mathieson survived the Revolution of 1688, returned home, and died Oct. 1, 1709. He wrote a testimony some years before his death, when he was under sore sickness and in expectation of his approaching end. John Calderwood of Clanfin published it in 1806 in his "Collection of Dying Testimonies," a volume now very

The Markieson like not a few of the Presbyterians some wants that the Revolution inveight in strong terms against William lessably because he was ignorant of the difficulties the king that it commend against difficulties that Burnet in his history uncommended shows might well have baffled even a more courageous start that the Prince of Change. Mathieson's testimony had been seen by last Marking, who calls it one of the most curious of the many curious papers wanter by the Covenanters of that period; but he makes the mass at its incompensate language against King William, and increas that such language was a characteristic of the age. The first part at its resummant, it which he records his sufferings, is not without its measure and its coulet might be parallelled by the experience of many of the sufferers of that time. He says:

THE PROOF HERE AND SOCIETIES About to step out of this rale it makes and laws of the years of the here been few and eval and have not attained unto the days of the pears of the like of any fathers in their pilgrimage' (Gen. 2. The laws of the pears of the pears of the pilgrimage of the pears of the pear

The much in religion or the things that accompany salvation, if they are me seen [12], mered in [2] as to back and belly, but the Lord, who show well with the half or do with me, inclined my heart to better things from me wouth and it length brought me to the knowledge of the war by converse with some good neighbours, such as Thomas Contrate and the heavy married I left off bearing the curates, and with them from which alterwards brought on my persecution; but not being itself and subject as the generality of the country was a tearing resumming against the their defections; until I became acquainties with some of these who were declared rebels, and then the particularly and some of these who were declared rebels, and then the particularly and practice. But this I observed, that I never went out a ten way through I then this is ignorabily, but I met with chastise who are some are in other from the Lord to bring me back again to Him.

And where it pleased him body majesty to bring me to a wanderto and suffering the first monderful was His loving kindness that and suffering were the warmings He gave me at several times that I was appropriated which I divident to relate. But at length, how a previously the latter day at my own house by a party of the house of the latter latter had sent for by Doeg John howard to the general the latter I was by his command, sent to prison in Dumfries, where, after continuing for a season, I was carried from that to Edinburgh with some others, and there sentenced, by a party of the bloody Council, to Carolina, in America.

When I was on the sea, and there, or in my way going, which was nineteen weeks from our entering into the ship until we set our foot on shore and came to land again, I endured a sore fight of affliction from the enemy of my salvation, but the Lord helped me to resist that evil one. . . . We suffered great straits while on ship-board, and on shore also, by him and his who carried us captives to that land, yet the Lord was with me and was exceeding kind to me in that strange land. Their cruelty to us was because we would not consent to our own selling or slavery; for then we were miserably beaten, and I especially received nine great blows upon my back very sore, by one of his sea-fellows, so that for some days I could not lift my head higher nor my breast; which strokes or blows I looked upon to be the beginning of all my bodily pains and diseases that have been upon me since that time until now.

"But soon after, by a remarkable providence, getting free from these bloody butchers, from Carolina we sailed to Virginia, in which voyage we suffered a long and dangerous storm, and great hunger. From Virginia we went into Pennsylvania, where I was near unto death by a great weighty sickness. From Pennsylvania we went to East Jersey, where we met with the rest of our banished brethren; and from thence we went into New England. But being sorely grieved with the miscarriages of some of our friends there, I left New England, and returned to East Jersey, whereafter soon I fell sick; and during which sickness I was kindly entertained and taken care of by the man and his wife in whose house I lay, and with whom I had bound myself. For, albeit we had escaped from them that had brought us over, and could not work to them, yet we behoved to work for something to bring us back again. From thence I came to New York on my journey homeward, where I agreed with a shipmaster to bring me to London.

"During my abode or being in that strange land, the Lord helped me twice or thrice to covenant with Him, but on these terms, that He would carry me and my burden both, and save His noble truth from being wronged by me; still confessing and acknowledging unto Him that I could keep neither word nor writ unless He kept me and it both. And so, on His own terms, I took Him for my king, priest, and prophet. After my first covenanting with Him in these lands, I wan [i.e., got] to such a clearness of my interest and salvation, that the very thoughts of it made me often to leap for joy in the midst of all my sorrows, sore travail, and labour, I had in these lands. And when alone, which was often, I was readily best in my case, for I was grieved with the vain and wicked conversation of the inhabitants of the land. And, now, what shall I say to the commendation of my kind Lord and Master Christ? For many and wonderful were His loving kindnesses unto me in all my travels in that land, even to me, one of the silliest [i.e., frailest] things that ever He sent such an errand; so that, as it passes my memory to relate, I think truly, it would seem incredible to many to believe when they heard them told, even what He hath done for poor insignificant unworthy me, during my abode in these lands; which, betwixt being taken from my own house, and my returning home, was something more than three years.

"But for all that, my heart was still at home with the poor suffering remnant in Scotland. For though fire and sword had been in one end of it, I could have been content to have been in the other end of it. So, from New York coming to London, and from thence soon after I arrived in Scotland. So then at length being safe there, and restored to my friends and relations, I clave to and joined with that jurty after whom while in my banishment I had so great a desire, and continued with them all alongst, hearing with much delight the continued with them all alongst, hearing with much delight the continued with them all alongst, powerfully preached as occasion where the faithfully preached, yea, powerfully preached as occasion where the shining light Mr James Renwick."

The Surject. in his "Gleanings among the Mountains," tells a moon of severy of his reception in his own house on his return home. The severy of his reception in his own house on his return home. The severy of control the house, his wife was busy preparing dinner for the severy. She did not recognise him, but took him for a traveller, who has some in to rese himself. She pressed him to take some to the field with a severy or to surpers. As she went out, he rose, and followed her severy of the highlight, said to the hystanders. The min to severy with her hospitality, said to the hystanders. The min who has not a his some whispers to his mother. "If my father has how her has not a his some whispers to his mother. "If my father has how her that at his emittance crying out. "My his has been harden their centrer it. I for His remains he had not should have a her that at his emittance crying out. "My his

HEREAFTER were taken away in banishment, by one Robert Maloch, fourteen men, whose names are not recorded. [Wodrow's notice is equally short: "And August 15, about fifteen more are ordered to the same place."—ED.]

NNO 1685. In the time of Queensberry's Parliament, of men and women were sent to Jamaica two hundred.

[Among these prisoners was Gilbert Milroy of Kirkala in Penninghame parish, who survived the Revolution, and returned home, and was in 1710, says Wodrow, a very useful member of the session of Kirkcowan. He wrote an account of his sufferings. and his brother William had doubts about abjuring the Societies' Declaration, and so had kept from home out of the way of the soldiers. The soldiers came and plundered their house, and carried away eighty black cattle and about five hundred sheep, besides household stuff. Next day the brothers were brought to Minnigaff, and, not answering the usual questions to satisfaction, were sent on to Edinburgh, where they were imprisoned in Holyrood, as the ordinary prisons were full. When brought before the judges, they refused to take the oaths, and were sentenced to have their ears cut off and to be banished for ten A few days after sentence, the prisoners were taken out and tied six and six of them together, and marched to Newhaven, such as were not able to walk being conveyed in carts, and put on board a ship lying there, and thrust under deck two and two of them together to the number of an hundred and thirty. In this state they were kept during the voyage, and so great were their sufferings through insufficient food, a scanty supply of water, and want of fresh air, that when they arrived at Jamaica, after a passage of three months and three days, thirty-two had died on the way. They were landed at Port Royal, and kept in prison ten days, until they were sold as slaves. The proceeds of their sale were kept for Sir Philip Howard, an Englishman, who had received a gift of them from the king. Sir Philip, however, did not live to enjoy it, for when leaving London for Port Royal, he fell between two ships and was drowned.—ED.]

HE same year, one Pitlochie transported to New Jersey one hundred, whereof twenty-four were women.

[In 1685 there are several acts of Council banishing prisoners, and handing them over to John Scot, laird of Pitlochie.

Under March 10, he received a warrant to go to the prisons of Edinburgh, Glasgow, and Stirling, and transport a hundred of the prisoners to the plantations. He seems also to have gone to Dunottar, and to have got about thirty there, among others Patrick Walker, the well known writer of "Remarkable Passages in the Likes of Peden, Cameron, Cargill, etc;" but he escaped while they were waiting at Leith. The ship sailed September 5. stately turned the Land's End, when fever broke out, especially service who had been confined for so many months in the the ship twice screen a leak; and so deadly was the voyage, which lasted for nitives weeks, that their numbers were about seventy less when ther served at New Jersey (whither the wind drove them rather Ther It implies where the captain had proposed to take them)-Triving housest and his wife being among the dead. On landing, the reserves seem to have been left at large, and the inhabitants et a reser, are named a little way up the country, hearing of their remarkants invited all who were able to travel to come and live with them, and sent houses for such as were not, and entertained them that writer freely and with much kindness. In spring Pithank's sometime sample to citizen them as his property, and sued them before the tours at the province. The governor sent the we have a jury, who have the accused had not of their war accord come to the same and hot bargained with Pitlochie ur money or service, and mereine, according to the laws of the recently, they were free. More at the prisoners retired to New Faxland, where they were very kmily entertained. "So," concludes Wodrow, "Pitlochie proposed to be enriched by the prisoners, and vet he and his lady died at sea on the voyage. He sold what remained of the estate to pay the freight and much of the money remaining was spent upon the law-seek in New Jersey. silvers to be but a hazardous venture to make merchandise of the suffering people of God."—ED.]

N the same year thirteen more were sent to Barbadoes. Their names are not in the hands of the publishers, if they be at all recorded.

William closes not mention this exact number, but under November an extract from the Council registers, which sentences Parkl Paterson in Eaglesham, William Freugh there,

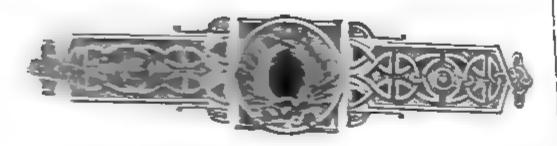

James Rae, Uddingston, and John Park, weaver in Lanark, for Conventicles and refusing the Oath of Allegiance, to be banished; and under December 9, 1685, eleven more receive the same sentence.—ED.]

NNO 1687 [1685], three-and-twenty men and women were sent to Barbadoes, whose names that subscribed the Joint Testimony are as follows: John Ford, Walter M'Min, Adam Hood, John M'Gie, Peter Russel, Thomas Jackson, Charles Dougal, James Grierson, John Harvie, James Forsyth, George Johnson, John Steven, Robert Young, John Gilfillan, Andrew Paterson, John Kincaid, Robert Main, James Muirhead, George Muir, John Henderson, Anaple Jackson, Anaple Gordon, Jean Moffat.

[1687 is here, from the place in which the paragraph stands, evidently a misprint for 1685. The compilers do not seem to have known that these were part of the banished given to Pitlochie. The substance of the joint testimony, with the names here given, and five others, occurs in Wodrow, and is dated from Leith Roads. August 28, 1685, while the ship was lying there waiting orders to sail.—ED.]

John Stewart, James Douglas, John Russel, James Hamilton, William Hannay, George White, Gilbert MacCulloch, Thomas Brown, John Brown, William Hay, John Wright, John Richard, Alexander Bailie, Marion Weir, Bessie Weir, Isabel Steel, Isabel Cassils, Agnes Keir.

[In Wodrow the same names and three others occur under 1687. He says, "April this year I find that sixteen men and five women were banished to America, and gifted to Captain Fairn, who carried them away in Captain Croft's ship, then lying at Leith. Their testimony they jointly signed lies before me, and therein they signify the reason of their sentence was, because they would not acknowledge the present authority to be according to the Word of God, nor disown the Sanquhar Declaration, nor engage not to hear Mr James Renwick, and conclude with leaving their testimony against the evils of the times, and sign thus." Then follow their names.—Ed.]

A Les of those Killed in the Fields.

SECRE ACTIONS of those who were killed in the open here without the elementary or my process of law, by the executaments of the Council's marrieding First whose unter the term specified. The Council's marriedly Edict was assent November on male. In was "The Lords of his majory's Treve Council to terrory trians any person who come or will not asown the late treasonable lecturation [14] the Appliagent Declarton, mon min, vaccher they have arms trade to be immediately on to tent, this being manys done in presence in two wineses, and the person of persons having commission from the Council for "that effect." The Short Memorial, etc., hawa up by Alexander Shears, the author of the "Hind Let Louse," and quoted from in this Short Account, is a quarto of 56 closely-prompt tages. It is a calm and able statement of the unlawful and tymamon, character of the administration of the governments of Charles II. and Junes VII. The pages here quoted form the much smaller part it the memoral ...that occupied with a "short recapitalization in hole it some inspances of our several kinds of sufferings, which a mount in some of the most principal districtions thereof in the five western sures,"—En-

The in about of the many handreds, who exist their or commend their deaths in prison, it is severally they men with of cold, hunger, there, will of more and air, fetters, tortures, sugmenting the a break of immense albour; nor can any full account thereof he had considering the vast numbers of some and the neglect of writing memoirs of these things at heing seized by the personators, who were industrious to suppress such accounts of their own villainies from the view of posterity. The number of such as suffered under colour of law, and judicial trial, from Mr James Guthrie the first, to Mr James Renwick the last, has been computed to amount to about one hundred and forty. But the councillors, willing to ease themselves of that lingering way of doing business, not content with Popery's gradual advancement, were for doing their work all at once; and accordingly authorised captains, lieutenants, sergeants, and single soldiers to shoot all suspected persons, wherever they could catch them, without further trial of their pretended crimes; and accordingly, betwixt the year 1682 and 1688, when a revolution of affairs put a stop to their career and bloodshed, there were murdered in the open fields the following persons, besides others that no certain list has been got of, as they are enumerated in a print, entitled, "A Short Memorial of the Suffering and Grievances of the Presbyterians in Scotland, particularly of those of them called by nickname Cameronians," printed in the year 1690. Which is as follows:

OHN GRAHAM of Claverhouse, Viscount of Dundee, in the year 1682, with a party of his troops, pursued William Graham, in the parish of [Kells], in Galloway, making his escape from his mother's house, and overtaking him, instantly shot him dead. [There is no account of this martyr either in Wodrow or Crookshanks. His remains are interred in the churchyard of Kells.—Ed.]

HE said Claverhouse, together with the Earl of Dumbarton, and Lieutenant-General Douglas, caused Peter Gillies, John Bryce, Thomas Young (who was taken by the Laird of Lee), William Fiddieson, and John Bruning, to be put to death upon a gibbet, without legal trial or sentence, suffering them neither to have a Bible, nor to pray before they died, at Mauchline, 1685.

[Peter Gillies was a bleacher in Stirling. In 1674, a Presbyterian minister preached in his house. Tidings of the sermon came to the curate, and the result was that Gillies was turned out of his house, and stripped nearly of his all. In 1685, when in Muiravonside, the curate, displeased at his nonconformity, informed against him, and got a party of Highland soldiers, just arrived at Falkirk, sent to apprehend him, which they did April 30th. John Bryce, a weaver in West Calder parish, who had come to get some cloth, was taken with him. Peter Gillies' wife had given birth to a child a few days previous.

In the presence nevertheless, they threatened him with immediate there are him ed him twin whitest allowing him to speak to her or The soldiers is suches. It is the boar after, some of the soldiers many many to the wife a stray of their own, saying that her husband the same the same where his arms lay, and that if she gave them and the which he spired and if not he would be shot. She calmly remier, that he had no more size knew of, and if they got liberty to take his he are while emberrour is say. Good is the will of the Lord, and the wine the till mings well could not wrong her or hers. At the the spatiers have in a passion, sweete and threatened to burn her with the are the plumbered the boose of all they could carry was . Assurable the far prisoners had been tied together, and arrest to the stations before them. When they had got a few miles as the time manifolded Ferre Gilles and set him on his knees =: " The minimum before him, and kept him n was reserved for maintain mai time took him with them to the As they passed through Thomas Young. the series the series are not been acquaintance."

The same of Mainten Wellwood, two miles west of the same with the same of the same with the same with the same of the same with the same with placed and incremental non, he wanted not impressions that he was in the and women non in heart he reach of enemies. This ther were taken it Manchine and next day they were examined by Lieutenian-Beneral Transmitted and an indictment great from which Wolfred at fibers solihers, and an indictment great from which Wolfred has preserved. As might be expected, the were found grafty and semigned in he hanged at the town end of Marchine next fier. May bit. No comins were allowed them, we dead stockes but the stilliers and two country people made a bold and flung them together into it. Such is the substance of Wolfred's account of them. It differs somewhat from that in the total has the difference is seeming rather than real. A trial before a new of fifteen soldiers and following immediately on the indictment being put into their bands was not a legal trial. Lieutenant-General

Douglas is not mentioned by Wodrow, but Mauchline was at that time his head-quarters.—Ed.]

HE said Claverhouse coming to Galloway, in answer to the Viscount of Kenmure's letter, with a small party surprised Robert Stuart, John Grier, Robert Ferguson and James M'Michael, and instantly shot them dead at the water of Dee in Galloway, December 1684. Their corpses being buried, were at his command raised again.

[Claverhouse came upon them at Auchincloy. There were eight of them altogether, two of whom made their escape. The six were Robert Smart and John Grier from Galloway, Robert Ferguson and James M'Michael from Penpont, Robert Smith from Glencairn, Robert Hunter. The six had no other resource but to stand on the All were soon overpowered except James M'Michael, defensive. who fought single-handed with Claverhouse, until Claverhouse had to cry for assistance, when, according to tradition, M'Michael said to him, "You dare not abide the issue of a single combat! Had your helmet been like mine, a soft bonnet, your carcass had ere this found its bed on the heath." A dragoon came to Claverhouse's relief, and coming up behind M'Michael split his skull in two. Friends buried M'Michael's body, but Claverhouse, when he heard of the burial, ordered the corpse to be taken out of the grave and hung on a tree. M'Michael had been at Airsmoss and the rescue at Enterkin. was he that, supposing his friends to be in danger, shot Peter Pearson, curate at Carsphairn. For this deed he had been expelled from the fellowship of the Societies. After James M'Michael was killed, Robert Ferguson, Robert Stuart, John Grier, who had been overpowered, were shot. Robert Smith and Robert Hunter, Claverhouse carried to Kirkcudbright, and went through a form of trial with them. They were speedily condemned, when they were not permitted to write a line, not even a letter to their relations. When brought to the gibbet, and they began to speak to the people, the drums were beat to prevent them being heard. After they were hanged they were beheaded.—Ed.]

HE said Claverhouse in May 1685, apprehended John Brown in Priesthill, in the parish of Muirkirk, in the shire of Ayr, being at his work about his own house, and shot him dead before his own door in presence of his wife.

[John Brown of Priesthill was known in the district as the Christian carrier. He was of more than ordinary piety and knowledge, and possessed unusual skill in communicating to others what he knew. He had never attended the services of the curates, but in other respect had given no offence to the government, yet he found it prudent to hide in the moorlands. His long exemption from molestation had evidently emboldened him to return home, when he speedily fell into the hands of the destroyer.

On the morning of the first of May 1685, between five and six o'clock, after he had made worship with his family, he was on the way to cut peats with his spade in his hand, when in the thick mist he was surrounded by Claverhouse and three troops of dragoons on the road from Lesmahagow. Whether Claverhouse had any knowledge of his character is not known, but he brought him from the peat ground to his house, a bleak, desolate spot, fully four miles to the north of Muirkirk railway station, and from which at the present time, not a hut, not even a tree is to be seen. Here he was examined, and gave his answers distinctly and solidly, which made Claverhouse ask his guides through the muir if ever they heard him preach. "No, no," was the reply, "he was never a preacher." "Well," said Claverhouse, "if he has never preached, much has he prayed in his time. Go to your prayers," he added to John Brown, "for you shall immediately die."

The carrier prayed with great fervour. Thrice Claverhouse interrupted him. On one of these times John Brown was pleading that the Lord would spare a remnant and not make a full end in the day of His anger, when Claverhouse said, "I gave you time to pray, and you are begun to preach." John Brown calmly turned round about on his knees, and said, "Sir, you know neither the nature of preaching nor praying that call this preaching;" and then continued without confusion.

When he was ended, Claverhouse said, "Take good-night of your wife and children," for she stood by with a child of his former wife clinging to her, one of her own in her arms, and was soon to give birth to another. "Now, Isabel," were his words to her, "the day is come that I told you would come, when I spake first to you of marrying me." "Indeed, John," she replied, "I can willingly part with you." "That is all," he said, "I desire. I have no more to do but die. I have been ready to meet with death for years past." He kissed her and his children. He gave them his blessing, and wished purchased and promised blessings to be multiplied upon them. Claverhouse now ordered six of his soldiers to fire on him; but such had been the effect of the martyr's prayers, that not even one of these men, long used to deeds of violence, would obey his command, and in a rage he shot him with his own hand.

"What thinkest thou of thy husband now, woman?" was his question to the widow, as she gazed on the lifeless body. "I thought ever much good of him, and as much now as ever." "It were but justice," was his reply, "to lay thee beside him." "If ye were permitted," was her heroic answer, "I doubt not your cruelty would go that length; but how will ye answer for this morning's work?" "To man," the murderer replied, "I can be answerable; and as for God, I'll take Him into mine own hand." But this was empty bravado, for even on his seared conscience the dying words of his victim left an impression that he could never wear off.—Ed.]

HE said Claverhouse authorised his troops to kill Matthew Mickelwrath without any examination, in the parish of Colmonell in Carrick, anno 1685.

OLONEL JAMES DOUGLAS, now Lieutenant-General, brother to the Duke of Queensberry, together with Lieutenant John Livingstone and a party with them, surprised five men in a cave at Ingliston, in the parish of Glencairn, betrayed by Andrew Watson. Their names were John Gibson [brother to James Gibson of Ingliston, heritor of the ground], Robert Grierson [from Galloway], Robert Mitchell [from Cumnock], James Bennoch [from Glencairn], John Edgar [Robert Edgar; he fled from his house for refusing the abjuration oath]—all which were at the command of the said Colonel Douglas brought forth and immediately shot dead, without giving them so much time as to recommend their souls unto God. One John Ferguson, sometime a professed friend, thrust one of them through, supposing he was not dead. This was done in the year 1685.

[Wodrow's account of this murder is taken from a narrative written at the time. He says, directed by Watson, Colonel James Douglas and Lieutenant Livingstone came suddenly on the cave and surprised the five in it. The soldiers shot in on the cave, wounded one, and then rushed in. Without any examination, or the slightest form of trial, Colonel Douglas immediately ordered them to be taken out and shot, though nothing could be laid to their charge but that they were found in the cave. John Gibson was first shot. suffered to pray, which he did to the admiration and conviction even of the soldiers themselves. He sang part of Ps. xvii., and read John xvi. His sister got forward to him by the compassion of some of the soldiers. He told her this was the joyfullest day ever he had His mother, too, managed to get to him, and he in the world. charged her not to give way to grief, but to bless the Lord upon his account, who had made him both willing and ready to suffer for His cause and interest. After again praying, he was despatched. other four were shot all at once without being permitted to pray They had great peace and consolation. separately. The volley killed three of their number, while one was sorely wounded but conscious. When this was observed by Ferguson, a renegade, he drew his sword and thrust him through the body. When the martyr was weltering in his blood and that of his fellow-sufferers for Christ, he said, "Though every hair of my head were a man, I am willing to die all those deaths for Christ and His cause," and with these words he died. The inscriptions over the graves of John Gibson, Robert Mitchell, James Bennoch, and Robert Edgar, are in the Appendix.—ED.]

HE said Colonel James Douglas and his party shot to death John Hunter, for no alleged cause, but running out from the house of Corehead (in the parish of Moffat) the same year, 1685.

[John Hunter was a native of the parish of Tweedsmuir, in the south of Peeblesshire. He had a neighbour, Welsh by name, usually called, however, in the district, "The Babe of Tweedhopefoot," probably from his great bodily strength. Welsh had often sheltered the persecuted, and had himself suffered much because of his sym-He heard that Colonel James Douglas was in pathy with them. the neighbourhood; and, expecting a visit from him, he determined to withdraw to the wilds for concealment. John Hunter, a good They retired to man, of like mind with him, accompanied him. Corehead, near the source of the water of Annan. Colonel James Douglas got notice of their flight, and pursued them with his soldiers. He soon gained ground on them. When they saw they were being overtaken, they made for the "Straught Steep," which, from its inaccessibility to cavalry, they hoped would give them a safe retreat. But as they were reaching it, the dragoons began to fire, and a ball struck John Hunter, as he was scrambling over the rocks, and he was shot dead. His remains were laid in the churchyard of Tweedsmuir. The inscription over them is in the Appendix.—Ed.]

HE said Colonel or Lieutenant-General James Douglas, with Lieutenant Livingstone and Cornet Douglas, surprised six men at prayer at the Caldunes, in the parish of Minniegass —viz., James Dun, Robert Dun, Andrew Macaulay, Thomas Stevenson, John M'Clude, and John Stevenson, in January 1685.

["Nothing," says Wodrow, "was charged upon them but that hey were persons hiding, and at prayer. Whether the Oath of Abjuration was offered or not, my information doth not bear; but vithout any further process, they were immediately taken out, and hot to death."—ED.]

HE said Colonel or Lieutenant-General James Douglas caused take Andrew M'Quhan out of his bed, sick of a fever, and carry him to Newton of Galloway, and the next day shot im dead, the foresaid year 1685.

[M'Quhan was unable to answer the questions put to him by Colonel James Douglas, and so the soldiers took him, ill as he was, out of bed, carried him with them to the Newton, and next morning May 11, 1685), shot him dead, without process or trial.—Ed.]

HE said Colone or Lieutenant-General James Douglas commanded Thomas Richard, an old man of seventy years, to be shot in time of prayer (he was betrayed and taken by Peter Inglis), Anno, 1685, at Cumnock, in Kyle.

[Thomas Richard was a farmer in Greenock Mains, a farm to the vest of Muirkirk parish, Ayrshire. Wodrow calls him a good man, near eighty years of age. He had been in hiding in the high moorands, to the north of the parish, where it touches Lanarkshire, when Peter Inglis, a cornet, and son to Captain Inglis, of evil notoriety or his cruelties, and four or five others, came to him in his hidingplace, in the guise of friends. They had each Bibles, and asked Thomas to read and pray with them. The good man, suspecting no leceit, readily complied with their request. After prayer, they talked with him about an attack they proposed to make on a neighbouring They asked him if he knew where any of the honest party garrison. vere. Still fearing no guile, he told them he knew not of any at present, but that he had lodged some of them a few days ago, and was not unwilling to give them any entertainment he had. At last one of them betrayed himself by an oath, when all threw off the mask, and, to the astonishment of the old man, made him their prisoner, and carried him to Colonel Douglas, then at Cumnock, who, on this confession, without trial of any kind, next day ordered him to be shot.—Ed.]

APTAIN DOUGLAS finding one — Mowat, a tailor, merely because he had some pieces of lead belonging to his trade, took him, and without any further trial, shot him dead, between Fleet and Dee, in Galloway.

HE said Captain Douglas and his men, finding one——Auchenleck, a deaf man, for not making answer, through defect of his hearing, instantly shot him dead off horseback, near Carlinwark, anno 1685.

IR ROBERT DALZIEL, and Lieutenant Straiton, having apprehended Daniel M'Michael, not able to flee, by reason of his being sick, and detained him four hours prisoner, took him out, and shot him at Dalveen, in the parish of Durrisdeer, in Nithsdale, January 1685.

[Daniel M'Michael was the brother of James M'Michael. lived in Lurgfoot, now Blairfoot, in Morton parish, Dumfriesshire, and his house was a well-known resort of the pious people in the neighbourhood. In July 1685 he was confined to bed with fever. Some of his friends had met in his house for religious exercises, and they had stationed a watchman, to give notice in case of danger. It was not long until he saw a party of soldiers, in the distance, approaching. They had been told by an informer of the meeting. The watchman immediately gave the alarm, when all prepared for flight. Ill as he was, Daniel was not forgotten, for they knew his illness would not ward off from him the cruelties of the They wrapped him in the warm bed-clothes, and conveyed him to a cave, not far from his house, where he and his friends had often concealed themselves. They were not long there until one of On the way, he called at the smithy, their number left the cave. where he learned the hiding-place had been betrayed. He hastened back, and told them the cave was known to their enemies, who

d soon be there. It was at once resolved to leave. The better ffle the soldiers, they separated into two parties, one going in the tion of Durrisdeer, and the other to Kirkhope. But the soldiers divided, and gained on the party in which Daniel M'Michael was is earnest request, they hid him in a cave, concealed under the of a mountain-stream. Here, however, the dogs that accomed the soldiers scented him out, and he was dragged from his at, and carried to Durrisdeer.

fany questions were put to him, which he declined to answer, many things were laid to his charge, which he denied, and said new nothing of. At length he was told that unless he took the in token of recognition of the government in Church and State, "Sir," he replied, "that is what, in all things, I canust die. lo; but very cheerfully I submit to the Lord's disposal as to my "Do you not know," said the commander, "your life is in my "No, sir," he rejoined, "I know my life is in the Lord's ; and if He see good, He can make you the instrument to take ay." He was then ordered to prepare for death next day. fe," he replied, "must go for His cause, I am willing; my God prepare me." "That night," says Wodrow, "he enjoyed a sweet of communion and fellowship with God, and great outlets of joy consolation; so that some of the soldiers desired to die his 1, and not a few convictions were left in their bosoms."

'he soldiers had determined to take him north next day to Crawwhere their main body was stationed, but his feeble state comd them to halt on the way, at the entrance to Dalveen Pass, e they ordered him to prepare for death. They gave him liberty ay, which he did to the wonder of the bystanders. of Psalm xlii., and read John xvi., and spoke, "with much ty and solidity," to Captain Dalziel. After the napkin had been over his face, he said, "Lord, Thou broughtest Daniel through r straits, and hast brought me, Thy servant, hither, to witness for Into Thy hands I commit my spirit, and : and Thy cause. to praise Thee through all eternity." He then gave the sign e soldiers, when the four appointed fired, and he fell dead. A ment marks the place where he fell. His remains rest in Durrischurchyard. The inscription over them is in the Appendix.—

HE said Captain Dalziel and Lieutenant Straiton, with their men, found William Adam hiding in a bush, and instantly killed him, at the Wellwood, parish of Muirkirk, in Kyle,

February 1685.

[Wodrow says there was no charge against him; but that he was thrashing, and seeing Sir Robert Dalziel's dragoons approaching, and fearing lest they should come upon him in the barn, and put the usual questions to him, he went out at the back, and hid himself in a marshy piece of ground, among some bushes. The soldiers saw him running away, and searched for him, and when they found him, instantly killed him. The place where his body lies is quite in keeping with this account. It is a sequestered spot, by the side of a brook the Proscribe Burn—and the ground rising up from it is besprinkled Dr Simpson, in his "Gleanings among the with clumps of reeds. Mountains," gives a much more romantic version, although by no means irreconcilable with that by the historian, of the story of his He was about to be married to a pious young woman, and death. he had appointed a meeting with her by the brook. He was first there, and profitably to spend the time till she came, he took out his Bible, and began to read. He had not read long till his eye caught the dragoons close upon him. He started to his feet. They immediately rode up to him, and shot him dead on the spot. Meanwhile his betrothed was hastening to the meeting-place, and heard the sound of firearms from the direction whither she was going. tradition says, she feared the worst, and her fears seemed justified as she saw the horsemen coming. She met the horsemen as she was passing along a wooden bridge over the river Ayr, while they were crossing the same stream. One of the dragoons, riding close by the side of the bridge, drew his sword, and struck her with its broadside, as if he would push her into the water. Embittered in spirit, and her courage roused, it was the work of a moment to wrap her apron round her hand, to seize the sword by the blade, wrench it out of the soldier's hand, snap it in two, and fling the pieces into the water. This done, she ran to the meeting-place, to find her William lying dead on the ground.—ED.]

APTAIN BRUCE, captain of dragoons, apprehended James Kirko (of the parish of Keir), at the intelligence of one James Wright, carried him to Dumfries, detained him prisoner one night, next day (May 13, 1685) brought him forth to the water sands, and, without process, shot him dead. The dying man desired a little time to make his peace with God; the captain answered, oftener than once or twice, "No, no; no more time, devil peace ye get more made up." Some gentlewomen coming to beg his life, were hindered by one John Craik, of Stewarton. The foresaid Dalziel's second son was one of them that shot him, though without command.

[Wodrow adds, he calmly replied, "Sir, you mistake it; you cannot mar my peace with God." At this the captain raged, and cried to the soldiers, "Dogs, make ready," and so they shot him dead, without giving him time to pray. The inscription on the monument over his remains is in the Appendix.—Ed.]

HE said Captain Bruce surprised at Lochenkit, in the parish of Kirkpatrick [Durham], in Galloway, six men, and instantly killed dead four of them, viz., John Gordon, William Stewart, William Heron, and John Wallace, and carried the other two, Edward Gordon and Alexander M'Cubin, of Glencairn, prisoners, and the next day, he and monstrous [Sir Robert Grierson of] Lagg, without any trial, caused hang them upon a growing tree, near the Kirk of Irongray, and left them there hanging, 19th February 1685.

[William Heron and Alexander M'Cubin were from Glencairn, the other four were from Galloway. William Heron, John Gordon, William Stuart, and John Wallace, lie buried where they were shot in Lochenkit Muir. A monument marks the spot. The inscription is in the Appendix. Alexander M'Cubin and Edward Gordon were next day taken to Irongray. The oak tree on which they were hanged is one of a clump, and all grow out of what is evidently a cairn. When they were brought to the tree foot, a friend of Alexander M'Cubin asked him if he had any word to send to his wife. "I leave her," he replied, "and the two babes upon the Lord, and to His promise; a Father to the fatherless, and Husband to the widow, is the Lord in His holy habitation." When the hangman asked forgiveness, he said, "Poor man, I forgive thee and all men; thou hast a miserable calling upon earth." They both died, says Wodrow, in much composure and cheerfulness.—Ed.]

HE said Captain Bruce and his men took out of his bed Thomas M'Haffie, sick of a fever, and shot him instantly, in the parish of Straiton, in Carrick, January 1685.

[Thomas M'Haffie is described by Wodrow as son to John M'Haffie, in the Largs, in the parish of Straiton, Ayrshire. He was well-known in the district for his piety. Dr Simpson tells of an escape he made from the soldiers when on his way to a meeting near Maybole. On the morning on which he was shot, he was concealed in a glen on the farm of Linfairn, about three miles to the south of the village of Straiton. He was then ill of fever, caught from exposure in the damp caves in which he had been forced to hide himself from his enemies. In this condition he heard the approach, of the soldiers, when he rose from his hiding-place and fled. reached the house of a friend, but so exhausted that he at once threw himself upon a bed. Captain Bruce and his soldiers speedily reached the house, and made him their prisoner. He was examined in the usual manner, but he declined to answer their questions. The abjuration oath was offered him, which he declined. Bruce then ordered his soldiers to drag him from the bed, which they immediately did, and took him out to the high road, and without any further process, shot him dead. A stone on the farm of Linfairn marks the spot where he fell. His remains are in the churchyard of Straiton. The inscription on the monument over them is in the Appendix.—ED.]

AMES DOUGLAS, cornet of dragoons, commanded to shoot John Semple, essaying to escape out of a window, in the parish of Dailly, anno 1685. Kilkerran shot him.

[Wodrow gives an account of the murder of John Semple, which he says has been attested by several honest people yet in the parish of Dailly, from their particular knowledge of all its circumstances. It is of touching simplicity. John Semple was a person who lived a very quiet and innocent life with his wife, and three or four children. He never carried arms, nor gave the least disturbance to the government, only from a principle of conscience he came not to the church to hear the Episcopal ministers; and being given to hospitality, and of a compassionate temper, he did sometimes harbour those poor people who were then hunted for their lives.

Upon these accounts, April this year 1685, Alexander Fergusson, of Kilkerran, living at Moorston, a country house about a mile from Eldington, went to Blawhan garrison, commanded by Dundas, and informed against John Semple. The commander detached a party about sunset, Alexander Fergusson being their guide, who conducted them first to his own house at Moorston, where they supped. About midnight, when they reckoned he would be at home, and all ready for their purpose, they came straight towards Eldington, and surrounded the house. John Semple hearing the sound of their feet, and whispering about the house, dreaded what was the matter, and having a right thought of their design, considered with himself what to do in that extremity, and at length concluded to venture his escape out at a narrow window, which while he was endeavouring, and half out and half in, five or six of the party espied him, and discharged their pieces at him, and killed him dead on the spot.—ED.]

HE said Coronet Douglas apprehended Edward Mackeen, and by search finding a flint-stone upon him, presently shot him, without any further trial, February 1685.

[Edward M'Keen would seem to be the same as Edward Kyan, whose murder is narrated by Wodrow. On February 28, 1685, at eleven o'clock at night, Lieutenant or Cornet Douglas, with twentyfour soldiers, surrounded the house of Dalwine, having been informed that there were whigs met together there. They apprehended a David Martin, and finding Edward Kyan, a young man from Galloway, who had come thence to buy corn, and who had fled in between the gable of one house and the sidewall of another, they dragged him When questioned, he gave what they reckoned unsatisfactory answers, and as one of the soldiers was dragging him away, Lieutenant Douglas, without further warning, shot him through the head, and as he lay on the ground struggling with death, fired his other Shortly after, one of the soldiers, pretending he saw pistol at him. life in him, fired a third shot at the body. After they had killed Edward Kyan, David Martin was brought out, his coat stripped off him, and he was set on his knees beside the mangled body. he was about to be shot, at the allegation of one of the soldiers that discoveries might be got out of him, he was spared, but the poor man, through the fear and terror he had been put to, well nigh lost his reason, and was rendered bedfast till his death, four years after.—ED.]

IEUTENANT - GENERAL DRUMMOND commanded, without any process or trial, John Murchie and Daniel Meiklewrath to be instantly shot, after they were taken at Altercannock, in the parish of Colmonell, in Carrick, Ayrshire, anno 1685.

At the same time his soldiers did shoot dead Alexander Lin.

APTAIN INGLIS and his dragoons pursued and killed James Smith, at the burn of Anne, in Kyle, about two miles south of Newmilns, 1684.

[Dr Simpson gives an account of the murder of a man of the name of Smith, who appears to have been this James Smith. He lived in the farm of Threepod, or rather Threepwood, in Galston He was a man of retired habits, and had cherished in secret the principles of the persecuted; but his natural timidity had kept him back from an open avowal of his thoughts. At length he resolved to take a decided step. He took his infant child for baptism to a conventicle, held in the night time at a spot fourteen miles distant. After baptism, he retraced his steps, and arrived at his own house before daybreak. To prevent suspicion, after laying down the child, he immediately betook himself to the barn, and commenced to thrash corn. In spite, however, of his caution, he had been discovered, and information given to his enemies. safety, he sought a hiding-place in the fields, but here he was found out, and two soldiers sent to apprehend him. On their approach, he drew his sword in self-defence, and skilfully warded off the strokes of his assailants. But the soldiers, finding he was not to be so easily captured, tried stratagem. While the one fought with him face to face, the other stole behind him, and threw a cloak over his head, which at once blindfolded him, and entangled his sword arm, so that he was easily overpowered, when the two at once put an end to his life. He was buried where he fell.—ED.]

ETER INGLIS, his son, killed one John Smith in Cunningham, 1685.

The said Peter or Patrick Inglis also killed one James White, struck off his head with an axe, brought it to Newmilns, and played at football with it. He killed him at Little Blackwood, the foresaid year [May] 1685.

[Twelve men were met for prayer, a night in the beginning of May 1685, in the house of James Paton, a wright, and tenant of Little Blackwood, about two miles to the south-east of Fenwick, Ayrshire, when a noise was heard outside. They soon found they were surrounded. James White was the only one that had a firelock. As Patrick Inglis entered the house, after he had broken the door open, James White pulled the trigger, but the priming burned, without the they fired, and he fell dead. Three of the rest escaped, but the others were soon overpowered, and were spared through the intercession of James Paton's wife, who, before her marriage, had known Patrick Inglis, when he was quartered in her father's house. The soldiers cut off the head of James White, and carried it to Newmilns, where next day they played with it as a football on the green. The eight prisoners were taken to Newmilns, and put in the prison there—now in ruins. The next day they were brought out to be shot, when doubts were raised by one of the soldiers as to the legality of their proceedings, when it was resolved to send to Edinburgh for authority from the Council. Meanwhile, during the interval, the friends of the prisoners broke open the prison, and all escaped. James White's remains lie in Fenwick Church. The inscription on the monument over them is in the Appendix.—ED.]

HE said Peter Inglis shot John Barrie, with his pass in his hand, in Evandale, April 1685.

[John Barrie had his pass, and showed it to Peter Inglis, but nothing would satisfy him. He would have it that he was one of the wanderers, and so he shot him. His remains lie in Strathaven churchyard. The inscription is in the Appendix.—Ed.]

AJOR BALFOUR, together with Captain Maitland, and their party, apprehended at their work, Robert Thom, John Urie, and Thomas Cook, and instantly shot them at Polmadie, near Glasgow, May 1685.

[Wodrow gives an account of this murder, attested by a John Reid and Andrew Cochran. He sent it to Captain Maitland, who was alive when the history was being written, and he acknowledged that the whole of the countrymen's account was true. On May 11th, 1685, they were at Polmadie Mill, and they saw Major John Balfour, Captain James Maitland, and several others, arrive. Major Balfour asked them to whom they belonged. They said they were servants to Sir James Hamilton's tenants, in Shawfield. They were ordered to stand still. They saw them apprehend Thomas Cook and John Urie, who were weavers, and were taken in their working clothes from off their looms. Thomas Cook was first taken, and because he did not come immediately when called, Major Balfour struck him on the face with a horsewhip, so that the blood gushed out, and he could scarcely speak. He next pushed a cocked pistol into his face, crying, "Blood and wounds! he is a rebel." Shortly after, some twenty foot soldiers arrived, and they ran through the houses, and seized Robert Thom, a labourer. When all the three were taken, they were examined. They were asked, "Would they pray for King James VII.?" They answered, they would pray for all within the election of grace. "Do you," asked Balfour, "question the King's "Sometimes," they replied, "they questioned their election?" own." Upon this he swore, and said they should die presently, because they would not pray for Christ's vicegerent; and so, without one word more, he commanded Thomas Cook to say his prayers, for he should die. The poor man besought Balfour to spare him. "For how long?" he asked. "For two days," was his moderate request. But the Major swore he should live no longer. Balfour then drew out three musketeers, and placed them behind Thomas Cook, while he knelt in prayer. Cravats were taken from the bystanders, and put over the faces of the three. He then ordered the soldiers to fire, and Thomas Cook fell dead. The other two he despatched in the same manner; and within an hour of their apprehension, all three were murdered, and the dogs were licking their blood. The remains of the three martyrs are in Cathcart churchyard. The inscription on their monument is in the Appendix.— ED.]

OLONEL BUCHAN, with the Laird of Lee, and their men, shot John Smith, in the parish of Lesmahagow, February 1685.

[John Smith lies buried in Muirkirk churchyard. The inscription on his monument is in the Appendix.—Ed.]

IEUTENANT LAUDER shot to death William Shillilaw, at Woodhead, on the Water of Ayr, [July] anno 1685.

[In July 1685, Lieutenant Lewis Lauder, a subaltern officer in the garrison of Sorn, met, at the Woodhead of Tarbolton, William Shillilaw, of Stairhead, a lad of eighteen or under. From his age, he could not have been at Bothwell. His only fault was, that his name had been given in by the curate for non-attendance at the parish church. Seeing him cross the road, he ordered one of his dragoons to apprehend him. When he was brought to him, after a few of the usual questions, Lauder ordered him to be shot, which was done on the spot. His remains lie in Tarbolton churchyard. The inscription on his monument is in the Appendix.—Ed.]

IEUTENANT NISBET and his party shot to death John Fergushill, George Woodburn, and Peter Gemmel, in the parish of Fenwick, in the said year.

[They were shot at the time when John Nisbet of Hardhill (see p. 448) was apprehended and taken to Edinburgh. George Woodburn's sword—an Andrea Ferrara, of 40½ inches in length—is still in the possession of one of his descendants, in the farm of Mains, in the parish of Loudon. Peter Gemmel was an ancestor of Robert Pollok, author of the "Course of Time," a native of the adjoining parish of Eaglesham. Hence, doubtless, the title of one of Pollok's "Tales of the Covenanters"—"Ralph Gemmel." A monument to John Fergushill and George Woodburn is in Fenwick churchyard, and a separate one to Peter Gemmel. Their inscriptions are in the Appendix.—ED.]

IEUTENANT MURRAY with his party, shot one John Brown, after quarter given, at Blackwood, in Clydesdale, March 1685.

[Lieutenant Murray was going through the parish of Lesmahagow, and met him in the fields. He first promised him quarter, as he made no resistance; but in a few minutes, without process or sentence, he shot him near Blackwood, now a residence of W. E. Hope Vere, Esq., and said to be the original of the Milnwood of Sir Walter Scott's fiction. John Brown lies buried within a hundred yards to the east of the mansion-house. The inscription on his monument is in the Appendix.—ED.]

IEUTENANT CRICHTON did most barbarously, after quarter, shoot David Steel, in the parish of Lesmahagow, December [20], 1686.

[David Steel was tenant of the farm of Nether Skellyhill, in the parish of Lesmahagow. He was at Bothwell Bridge, and henceforward he was a marked man. His name occurs on the fugitive-roll of 1684. So rigorous was the search made for him, that he dared not pass the night in his own house, but generally slept in a hut about four miles from Skellyhill, near the source of the Nethan. A writer in the "Edinburgh Christian Instructor" for 1830, says that the traces of this hut are still preserved, and pointed out by the shepherds. In the close of 1686, he ventured to return to, and take up his stay On December 20th, Lieutenant Crichton, with a at, Skellyhill. detachment of horse and foot, came to the house. David Steel got the alarm shortly before they arrived, and slipped through a backwindow, and ran to the Logan water, about a quarter of a mile away, with the soldiers behind him in pursuit. He crossed, but in crossing he fell into the water, and wetted the powder of the musket he had He still, however, continued his flight to the steep taken with him. and bush-grown banks of the Nethan, about a mile away, where he would soon have stayed the progress of his pursuers. But ere he reached the Nethan, the dragoons were almost upon him, and his strength failed him; while Crichton called him to surrender, and he should have quarter, and be taken to Edinburgh, and have a fair David Steel surrendered on these terms; but Crichton had no intention of fulfilling them. He took him back to Skellyhill, where his wife, Mary Weir, had been watching his flight. With her only child in her arms, she ran to meet him. Crichton took David to the field before his own door, and ordered the dragoons to shoot him; but they reminded him of his promise to spare the man's life; and on his peremptorily commanding them to fire, they declared they would neither shoot him nor see him shot, and mounted their horses, and rode off to Upper Skellyhill. Crichton now turned to his foot soldiers, who were Highlanders, and the ignorant savages had no They fired, and several balls pierced the martyr's head. The murderers immediately left, and when the neighbours arrived, they found the widow by the mangled corpse of her husband. dition relates that the first words which she was heard to utter were, "The archers have shot at thee, my husband, but they could not reach thy soul: it has escaped like a dove, far away, and is at rest!" And then, clasping her hands, she prayed, "Lord, give strength to thy handmaid that will prove she has waited for Thee, even in the way of Thy judgments." Skellyhill is still tenanted by a descendant of Steel. Two thorn bushes near the house mark the place where he was murdered. A monument was erected in 1858 or 1859, within a few yards of the spot. The remains of Steel lie in Lesmahagow churchyard. The inscription on the monument over them is in the Appendix.—ED.]

HE laird of Stenhouse, Sir Robert Lawrie of Maxwelton, and John Craik of Stewarton, did instigate and urge Cornet Baillie and his party of dragoons to shoot William Smith in Hill [parish of Glencairn], after he had been prisoner one night (it was the day of Maxwelton's daughter's marriage), who also refused to let him be buried in the churchyard. This Douglas of Stenhouse, being a laird of mean estate, was advanced (for such services as this, and his excessive harassing, spoiling, and fining the people of God, and because he was a papist), to the honour of being secretary for Scotland to James the Seventh; but the wicked's honour is short lived; his name is extinct, having neither root nor branch, male or female, nor any remembrance left unto him. The said Lawrie of Maxwelton's steward reported that a cup of wine delivered that day into his hand turned into congealed blood; but be that as it will, himself died by a fall from his horse some years after.

[William Smith was a young man of eighteen. Cornet Baillie of the garrison of Caitloch met him in the fields near his father's house, and had nothing against him save his refusal to answer the questions put to him. Notwithstanding, he took him prisoner to Caitloch. When his father heard of it he prevailed with his master, Lawrie of Maxwelton, to meet with Cornet Baillie at the kirk of Glencairn, to get, as he hoped, his son set free. That day, March 4th 1685, William Smith was brought before them, and still refusing to answer the questions put to him, Maxwelton immediately passed sentence of death upon him in virtue of the power he said he possessed as com-Cornet Baillie called this sentence in question as illegal, missioner. unless he summoned a jury and tried him before it, but Maxwelton would hear of no delay, and threatened to report the cornet for sparing him so long. Accordingly he was carried out to the Racemoor, near by, and shot. He died, says Wodrow, with a great deal of holy composure and courage, and in full assurance of faith, declaring to the spectators that he suffered for no rebellion or any crime, but only for converse with the persecuted people as they came and went; and for refusing to discover their haunts and lurking He said much for the comfort of his parents when he took his farewell of them.—ED.]

IR JAMES JOHNSTONE of Westerhall caused apprehend Andrew Hislop in the parish of Hutton in Annandale, and delivered him up to Claverhouse, and never rested until he got him shot by Claverhouse his troopers. Claverhouse would have delayed it, but Westerhall was so urgent that Claverhouse was heard say "This man's blood shall be upon Westerhall." At length upon his urgency Claverhouse ordered a Highland [gentleman] captain of a company [traversing the country with him] to do it, but he refused, and drawing off his Highlanders to a convenient distance, swore that "her nainsel would fight Claverhouse and all his dragoons first." Whereupon he caused three of his own dragoons do it, May [10th] 1685. observable of this Westerhall that he was once a great professor, and one who had sworn the Covenant, and when the Test was framed he bragged that he was an actual covenanter and scorned the Test; but when he had the trial he embraced it, and became a bitter enemy to the work and people of God, and this man having been taken in his ground he would have him shot to give proof of his loyalty. died about the Revolution in great torture of body by the gravel, and horror, and anguish of conscience, insomuch that his cries were heard at a great distance from the house as a warning to all such apostates.

[Andrew Hislop was a young man, and lived, as did his brother and sisters, with his mother, a pious woman. To her house one of the persecuted came in sickness, and in a few days died. punishment for reset and converse, Mrs Hislop and her sons buried the corpse under cover of night in a neighbouring field. grave was discovered, and Sir James Johnstone came with a party of men and lifted the body. They soon found whence the corpse had come, and immediately went and stripped the widow's house of its contents, and pulled it to the ground, inflicting on the poor woman a computed loss of six hundred and fifty pounds Scots. While she and her family were thus forced to wander, Claverhouse, says Wodrow, and not Westerhall, fell upon Andrew Hislop in the fields, and brought him prisoner to Eskdale to Sir James Johnstone. James immediately passed sentence of death upon him. house was unwilling to execute the sentence, perhaps, says Wodrow, not wanting his own reflections upon John Brown of Priesthill's murder ten days before. At last he ordered the Highland captain, as narrated above. When the three dragoons were ready to fire, they refused to do so, and courageously told them he could look his death bringers in the face without fear, and that he had done nothing whereof he was ashamed; and holding up his Bible, which he had in his hand, charged them to answer for what they had done, and were to do, when at the great day they were to be judged by that book. His remains lie where he was shot at Craighaugh in Eskdale. The inscription on the monument over them is in the Appendix.— ED.]

IR ROBERT GRIERSON of Lagg, having the command of a part of Claverhouse's troop and Strachan's dragoons, surprised John Bell of Whiteside, David Halliday, portioner of Mayfield, Andrew M'Robert, James Clement, and Robert Lennox of Irelandtown, and barbarously killed them, after quarter, without time allowed to pray; when John Bell of Whiteside begged a little time to pray, Lagg answered, "What the devil have you been doing? Have you not prayed enough these many years in the hills?" and so shot him presently in the parish of Tongland in Galloway, February 1685.

[John Bell of Whiteside in the parish of Anwoth, Kircudbrightshire, was the only son of the heiress of Whiteside, who after his father's death had married Viscount Kenmure. He was a man of piety and sagacity, and had suffered much since the battle of Bothwell Bridge, where he seems to have been. Immediately after the battle his house was plundered. In 1681 Claverhouse and a party of soldiers lay several weeks in his house, until they had devoured all the provisions they could find; and when they left they carried off all his sheep. For several years he dare not live under his own roof, but had to hide himself in the moors. Dr Simpson, in his "Gleanings among the Mountains," relates several traditional stories It was in February of narrow escapes he made from his enemies. 1685 that he at last fell into their hands. He and his four friends were upon the hill of Kirkconnel, in Tongland Parish, Kirkcudbrightshire, when they were taken and immediately shot. after the murder, Viscount Kenmure, Claverhouse, and Lagg met at Kirkcudbright, when the Viscount challenged the murderer for his cruelty to one whom he knew to be a gentleman, and nearly related to him, and especially that he would not permit his corpse to be Lagg swore at him, and told him, "Take him if you will, and salt him in your beef barrel." At which the Viscount drew his sword, and would have run him through, had not Claverhouse interfered and separated them. John Bell's remains are in Anwoth Churchyard, David Halliday's are in Balmaghie, Robert Lennox's in Girthon. The inscriptions are in the Appendix.—ED.]

HE said Laird of Lagg, with the Earl of Annandale, having command of some troops of heritors, pursued another David Halliday [of Glencayre] and George Short, and apprehended and shot them, under cloud of night, in the parish of Twynholm, in Galloway, anno 1685.

[On June 10th, according to Wodrow, but July 11th, according to the inscription on the monument in Balmaghie, over the remains of David Halliday, Lord Annandale fell in with the two martyrs. On their surrender he gave them quarter till they should be tried next day; but when Sir Robert Grierson of Lagg came up, he would have them shot immediately, as they lay bound upon the ground. They begged they might have the next day to prepare for eternity, and Lord Annandale told Sir Robert he had promised them so much. But nothing would move Lagg. He swore they should have no time, and ordered his men to shoot them forthwith. The soldiers refused until he threatened to do it himself, when the two were shot as they lay. The remains of Short are also in Balmaghie churchyard. The inscriptions on the monuments of both martyrs are in the Appendix—ED.]

HE laird of Culzean [Sir Archibald Kennedy] for that time captain of a troop of militia and heritors, killed William M'Kirgue at Blairquahan Mill [parish of Straiton, Ayrshire], anno 1685.

The laird of Culzean, with the laird of Ballochmiln, also shot Gilbert M'Adam in the parish of Kirkmichael [Ayrshire] July 1685.

[Gilbert M'Adam was the son-in-law of James Dun in Benwhal, Dalmellington, a worthy man who suffered much in his family for their nonconformity. One son was murdered by the soldiers, and two were banished. Gilbert M'Adam was apprehended in 1682 and taken to Dumfries for his nonconformity. James Dun went and gave security under a penalty of four hundred pounds for his appearance when called, and he was set free. On his failing to appear, the penalty was exacted. Shortly afterwards he was again taken and carried to Glasgow, where, when he refused to take the oath, he was banished and sent away in Bailie Gibson's ship. His father had given him £20 with him, with which he bought his freedom in America, and he returned home in 1685. On a Saturday night in June or July, in the house of Hugh Campbell in Kirkmichael, he and some friends were met for prayer, when Sir Archibald Kennedy, with a company of soldiers, surrounded the house. Gilbert M'Adam tried to escape, but the soldiers fired and shot him dead. Wodrow says he was a person of shining piety.—ED.]

PARTY of Highlanders killed Joseph Wilson, David Dun, Simon Paterson, and other two, near the water of Coyle in Kyle [Ayrshire], anno 1685.

[David Dun belonged to an Ayrshire family noted for their attachment to the cause of truth and freedom, who suffered much during the persecution. David Dun had been at a conventicle held by James Renwick at Kilmien, a moorland spot four miles to the north-west of Dalmellington. He was returning home, when he saw a company of horsemen in the distance, trying to find their way to Kilmien. He turned towards a morass, in the midst of which was a hollow often resorted to by the persecuted when pursued, and would have reached the hollow, had not another detachment of cavalry coming from an opposite direction suddenly met him. thus found himself hemmed in, and his heavy horse sinking on the edge of the moss, ere he could right himself he was a prisoner. Simon Paterson had been at the same meeting, and seems to have been taken at the same time. Their presence at the conventicle was their only crime. Both were taken to the gallows standing at Old Cumnock, and without trial, witnesses or jury, hanged that very Joseph Wilson, John Humphry, and John and Alexander day. Jamieson had come from Galloway, and had been at Kilmien. had sought refuge in Tod Fauld below Benbeoch Craig, in the parish of Dalmellington, where they had lain for some time, but having learned that a reward was offered for their apprehension they retired to Carsgailoch Hill, about five miles to the west of New Cumnock. Here the four were surprised the day after the meeting by a party of Alexander Jamieson, as Wodrow calls him, or James dragoons. Lamieson according to tradition, escaped, but the other three were Their friends shot and left by the murderers unburied on the moor. afterwards interred them on the spot where they fell. A monument was erected about 1838 over their remains. In digging for its foundation the workmen came upon the bodies of the martyrs lying in the moss. They were in the coats, hose and bonnets, in which they had been shot. Their bodies were still in a state of good preservation, and so was their dress, which was mainly a strong home made cloth, that either had been, or had become the colour of the moss.—ED.]

HE laird of Ardincaple, commanding a party of Highlandmen, killed Robert Lockhart and Gabriel Thomson about that time also, May 1st, 1685.

They had been at a conventicle, and were on their way home, when they were overtaken by Ardincaple coming from the west. one was shot at Cowplie, at the foot of Melowther Hill, about three miles to the south-west of Eaglesham village; the other got away, but the soldiers came up to him about a mile further on the road at Sparrow Hill, at a house now in ruins. With his back to the gable of the house, he defended himself, but he was soon over-They were strangers to the district. powered and shot dead. Their remains lie in a corner of Eaglesham churchyard, since made the burying-place of the ministers of the parish. When a new monument was erected in 1838 over the spot, in clearing out the foundation two skulls were found not far from the surface, about the length of a man from each other, lying "heads and thraws" i.e., in opposite No trace of a coffin was to be seen. The inscription directions. on the monument is in the appendix.—ED.]

ILLIAM PATERSON was shot at Strathaven, uncertain by whom, 1685.

[William Paterson was son to Robert Paterson in Kirkhill, Cambusnethan, who was killed at Airsmoss. William Paterson had been turned out of his house for nonconformity, his family was scattered, and he himself suffered many privations, until at last he was apprehended and sent abroad as a soldier. Making his escape, he came home; and, after being in concealment for some time, was taken upon a Sabbath day in 1685 at Charonheugh. There were fourteen in the place, ten of whom, on the soldiers' approach under Captain Bell, got into a secret place in the cave, while William and other three were made prisoners, who took the oath of abjuration. William Paterson refused it, when the soldiers carried him to Evan-dale Castle, where that afternoon, without trial, he was shot. His remains lie in Strathaven churchyard. The inscription is in the appendix.—Ed.]

OHN M'GLORGAN was killed at Drummellian's house in the night-time, not known by whom.

OHN REID, belonging sometimes to Craigie's troop, did under cloud of night kill by a shot one George Wood, about sixteen years old, without asking one question at him, in Distinkhorn Hill in Kyle, June 1688.

[George Wood was the last who suffered previous to the Revolution. Wodrow says that the murderer, when challenged for what he had done, replied, "He knew him to be one of the Whigs, and they ought to be shot wherever they were found."—ED.]

N sum, their number amounts to seventy-eight. Besides these cold-blood murders, there were many killed at several skirmishes at Pentland, Bothwell, Airsmoss, etc., while fighting in their own defence, and the defence of the field-meetings, the number whereof amounts to about four hundred and some odds.

A Short Account of the Oppressive Exactions.

HE following short account, taken from the "Memorial of Grievances," is far from being a full statement of the oppressive exactions during the twenty-eight years' persecution. The expectation of the compilers that a fuller statement would be given was fulfilled by Wodrow. In the preface to the second volume of the original edition of the history there is an "abbreviate of fines and losses in the different shires and parishes from particular information in the author's hands." This abbreviate cost the historian more labour than many sheets of his history, and was formed out of several hundred sheets of informations from different parishes throughout the kingdom. Much labour as Wodrow spent on it, he says it was incomplete, for he had received no information from far the greater part of the parishes where the persecution raged. Hence he reckons the abbreviate to be at least one half less than the reality. But the abbreviate itself is something astounding. It is—

Fines and losses in the shires of Edinburgh, Selkirk, Berwick, Roxburgh, Peebles, Dumfries, Galloway, Ayr, Renfrew,

Lanark, Fife, Perth,	£1,743,999	18	8
Middleton's fines detailed in Wodrow's history,	1,017,353	6	8
Gentlemen in Renfrewshire 1684, detailed in the history, .	237.333	6	8
Gentlemen in Dumbartonshire as in the history,	55,200	0	0
Gentlemen in the shire of Murray [s.e., Elgin, Banff, Ross, Sutherland), as in the history 1685,	120,033	6	8

Total, £3,174,819 18 8

---ED.]

XPECTING that others, who have the particular informations of matters of facts by them, will be concerned to publish a more full account of these illegal fines and robberies, it shall suffice at present to transcribe only the general account of some of them out of the forementioned Memorial of Grievances; which runs thus:

For fines and other exorbitant and illegal exactions of money, the particular sums cannot be here enumerated; but their vastness, when together calculated, may be easily collected by the scraps already gathered of some poor families of farmers, cottars, servants, etc., and many of these omitted or not known (which would very considerably augment the sum), in some few shires, viz. Clydesdale, Renfrew, Ayr, Galloway, Nithsdale, and Annandale, only for but a few years, to wit, since Bothwell Bridge insurrection, amounting to above 288,000 pound Scots; besides the many honest families which have been casten out of their houses, harassed and spoiled of their all; some of their houses being thrown down, some burnt, some shut up, their goods and moveables seized upon, their crop and cattle also disposed of at the will of their ersecutors, in the forementioned shires, amounting to above two undred.

The immediate authors, actors, and instruments of these oppresons, were principally the curates instigating the Privy Council, which mpowered the forces, and noblemen, and gentlemen of the country, prey upon the poor people. All cannot be here expressed, but some f the most noted in the western shires shall be named, who were the reatest persecutors and oppressors by finings and other exactions.

of Queensberry, exacted above 2000 pounds Scots money in Galloway. Nithsdale, shire of Ayr, and other places.

Lieutenant General Drummond, besides the forefaultures [i.e., orfeitures] of gentlemen, did also exact moneys of the poor in the shire of Ayr.

The Earl of Linlithgow and his soldiers spoiled much in Galloway. The Earl of Airly and his troop in the same shire.

The Lord Balcarras, a great oppressor in Galloway, besides all the robberies he committed in Fife.

Graham of Claverhouse, afterwards Viscount of Dundee, with his prother and subaltern officers in Galloway, Nithsdale, and Annandale, exacted by fines and otherwise above 13,500 pounds Scots money.

Colonel Buchan, a most violent persecutor in Galloway and the shire of Ayr, by robberies took from the people upwards of 4000 pounds Scots.

Major Cockburn, a great oppressor in Galloway.

Major White in Clydesdale, and shire of Ayr, exacted by fines and otherwise above 2500 pounds Scots.

Major Balfour, a great persecutor and oppressor in Clydesdale.

Captain Strachan with his troop oppressed and spoiled much in Jalloway and other places.

Captain Inglis with his troop did dispossess many families, and got much spoil in Galloway, Ayr, and Clydesdale.

Captain Douglas in Galloway committed much outrage and spoil.

Captain Dalziel harassed much in Annandale.

Captain Bruce in Nithsdale.

— Meldrum in Clydesdale took from poor families upwards of 800 pounds, and vast sums in Merse and Teviotdale, with the Earl of Hume, and Ker of Grandoun, with the lairds of Haining and Blindlee, and in Tweeddale with the laird of Posso.

Lieutenant Winram in Galloway, a very vigilant persecutor and spoiler.

Lieutenant Barns, also in the same shire, took much spoil.

Lieutenant Lauder in the shire of Ayr, a most outrageous persecutor and oppressor.

James Irvine of Bonshaw, a borderer, a highwayman, afterwards an officer of dragoons, robbed much from the poor people in Clydesdale.

Duncan Grant, a cripple with a tree leg, a very outrageous persecutor, exacted in Clydesdale from poor people above 1500 pounds.

F noblemen, gentlemen, and others, the greatest oppressors and persecutors of the people were:

In Clydesdale.

Sommerville of Spittel, sheriff-depute, who, beside his other ways of persecution, wherein he was most active, drew from the poorest people above 1200 pounds.

The laird of Halyards, who uplifted more than 8500 pounds.

The laird of Lachop, a great persecutor and oppressor.

The laird of Bonnytown and laird Symme, both violent persecutors and exactors.

In the city of Glasgow:

Provost Johnston, Provost Barns, Baillie John Anderson, Baillie Yuil, Baillie Graham, William Stirling, Baron-Bailiff, great persecutors, exacted above 20,000 pounds.

In Renfrew:

The Earl of Glencairn, by fines and dispossessing of families, exacted partly there, and partly in Clydesdale and Nithsdale, above 2400 pounds.

Lord Sempill, a papist, a persecutor.

Alexander Hume in Eaglesham, a most violent and vigilant persecutor and exactor, with many others.

Mr Ezekiel Montgomerie, a great fine-monger.

In the shire of Ayr:

The Earl of Dumfries exacted above 1000 pounds.

The Lord Craigie, a great persecutor and oppressor.

William Crighton, sheriff-depute, very violent and active.

James Crawford of Ardmillan, a wicked persecutor and spoiler.

Mr William Crawford, Montgomery of Bozland, the laird of

A Short Account of the Oppressive Exactions. 561

Broych, and Clerk Ogilvie, all great persecutors, who sought to make themselves up with the spoils of the poor people.

In Galloway:

The laird of Lagg, Grierson, a most wicked persecutor there, and in Nithsdale exacted above 1200 pounds.

The laird of Elie, Lidderdale, and Canon of Mardrogate, all diligent persecutors and intelligencers, together with the then collectors.

In Nithsdale:

The Duke of Queensberry and his sons oppressed much.

John Alison, chamberlain to the Duke of Queensberry, who, when dying said, "He had damned his soul for the Duke his master," and George Charters, another of the Duke's factors, who vaunted he had made twenty-six journeys in one year in pursuit of the Whigs.

John Douglas of Stenhouse, a Papist, exacted above 5000 pounds.

The laird of Closeburn, above 700 pounds.

Sir Robert Dalziel, upwards of 400 pounds of a few poor families.

Sir Robert Lawrie of Maxwelton, an oppressor and persecutor. In Annandale:

The Lord Annandale dispossessed and harassed many families, and persecuted much in Galloway.

Sir James Johnstone of Westerhall, a great persecutor, exacted upwards of 11,000 pounds.

Sir Patrick Maxwell of Springkell, a very active and violent persecutor and oppressor.

The lairds of Powdeen, Castlemilk, Robert Carruthers of Rammerscales, Thomas Kennedy of Heybeiths, were most violent persecutors of poor people.

From these short accounts of the oppressions, bloodshed, and illegal tyranny exercised in this land, it may be conjectured what the total would amount to if a history thereof were published; but all these (howsoever great) persecutions are but little in comparison of what THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS and her children intend against us: which that the Lord may prevent, ought to be the serious prayer and strenuous endeavour of all them that have a regard to the greatest interests of themselves and posterity.

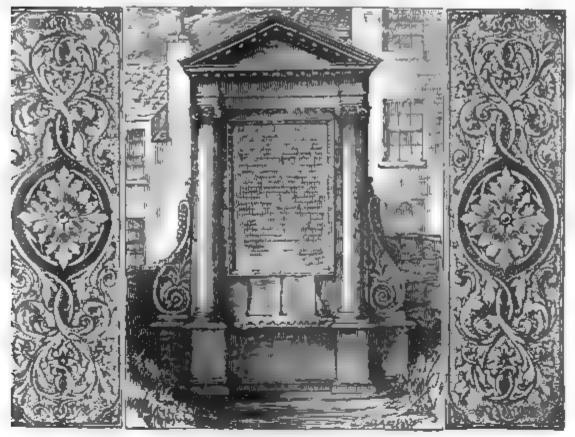

THE

EPITAPHS OR INSCRIPTIONS

THAT ARE UPON THE TOMBS OR GRAVESTONES OF THE MARTYRS IN SEVERAL CHURCHYARDS AND OTHER PLACES WHERE THEY LIE BURIED.

will be neither impertinent to the subject nor unacceptable to the reader to insert the following epitaphs or inscriptions that are upon the tombs or gravestones of the martyrs, in several churchyards and other places where they lie buried. And the reader is desired to remember, that they being mostly composed by illiterate country people, one cannot reasonably expect neatness and elegant poetry in them, and therefore will readily pardon any harshness in the phrase or metre which he may meet with.—Note by the compilers of the Cloud.

[In the first edition the inscriptions fill six double-columned pages, closely printed down to the very bottom, as if there were others for which room could not be found. Following these inscriptions, a number of others, taken from gravestones in different parts of the country, have now been added for the first time. One or two of them, both of those in the first edition and of those now appended, have been verified by kind friends, but in most cases the writer has visited the localities themselves in which the monuments are to be found. At the end of each inscription a short account is given of the stone, or of the martyrs, where they have not been mentioned in the foregoing pages.—Ed.]

MARTYES' MONUMENT, GREYFRIARS.

N a Monument in Greyfrians Churchyand, Edinburgh.

Upon the head of the tomb there is the effigies of an en Bible, drawn with these Scripture citations: "And when he d opened the first seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them at had been slain for the Word of God, and for the testimony tich they held. And they cried with a loud voice, saying, How ng, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our ood on them that dwell on the earth? And white robes were ven unto every one of them, and it was said unto them, that they ould rest yet for a little season, until their fellow-servants also, d their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be lilled" (Rev. vi. 9-11). "These are they which have come out great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them tite in the blood of the Lamb" (Rev. vii. 14).

"Halt, passenger, take heed what thou dost see: This tomb doth shew for what some men did die. Here lies interred the dust of those who stood 'Gainst perjury, resisting unto blood;

Adhering to the Covenants and Laws, Establishing the same, which was the cause Their lives were sacrificed unto the lust Of prelatists abjured. Though here their dust Lies mixt with murderers', and other crew, Whom justice justly did to death pursue; But as for thir, in them no cause was found Worthy of death; but only they were found Constant and steadfast, zealous, witnessing For the prerogatives of Christ their King. Which truths were sealed by famous Guthrie's head, And all along to Master Renwick's blood, They did endure the wrath of enemies, Reproaches, torments, deaths, and injuries. But yet they're these who from such troubles came, And now triumph in glory with the Lamb.

"From May 27th, 1661, that the noble Marquis of Argyle suffered, to the 17th of February 1688, that Mr James Renwick suffered, were execute at Edinburgh, about an hundred of noblemen, gentlemen, ministers, and others, noble martyrs for Jesus Christ. The most part of them lies here. This tomb was erected anno 1706."

Upon the foot of the monument stands a crown, with this inscription: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

This, well known as the Martyrs' Monument, is at the northeast corner of the Greyfriars churchyard, near the spot at one time appropriated to the bodies of criminals. The Rev. William Goold, minister of the Reformed Presbyterian Congregation in Edinburgh, from 1804 to 1844, told the writer that the grave-diggers were ordered by the authorities to bury the remains of the martyrs among those of murderers and other criminals who had been interred there. grave-diggers, however, secretly sympathised with the cause for which the martyrs suffered, and took care that while burying their remains in the corner, it should yet be in a part of it where the body of no criminal had ever been laid, so that the dust of the two could not in any way intermingle. The opposite seems to be stated on the monument itself, but Mr Goold was a man of antiquarian tastes, and from his long connection with the Reformed Presbyterian Church he was in his sixty-ninth year when he died in 1844—was the very person to have heard and to have sifted its traditions.

The present monument was erected in 1771, in place of an older and smaller one erected in 1706, by James Currie, merchant in Pent-This older monument is still in existence in the possession of representative of Charles Fairnington, the stone-cutter who put up The present one. It is in excellent preservation, and the inscription has been verified from it. James Currie was a worthy member of the united societies. His name is at the call the societies gave in 1706 to Rev. John M'Millan of Balmaghie. He suffered much during the persecution, and had more than one narrow escape for his life. He has left a record in "Passages in the life of James Currie," which, along with a similar tract by his like minded wife, Helen Alexander, have been recently issued in a small volume by one of his descendants, C. U. Aitchison, Esq., of the Indian Civil Service. The records of the Edinburgh Town Council, under date 28th August 1706, contain the substance of the memorial asking permission to erect the monument. It craves that the Council would allow the said monument "to be put up without paying of anything to the Kirk Treasurer as was done at Glasgow and other places of the nation." The Council granted the prayer of the memorial.

We have given the original inscription as on the old monument and as in the first edition of the "Cloud." The inscription on the present monument differs somewhat in arrangement of its paragraphs from that on the old, but otherwise it is substantially the same.—Ed.]

N a Gravestone in Hamilton Churchyard.

"At Hamilton lie the heads of John Parker, Gavin Hamilton, James Hamilton, and Christopher Strang, who suffered at Edinburgh, December 7th, 1666.

"Stay, passenger, take notice what thou reads; At Edinburgh ly our bodies, here our heads; Our right hands stood at Lanark, these we want, Because with them we sware the Covenant.

"Renewed 1828."

[The monument is built into the east wall of the churchyard; and the grotesque appearance of the four sculptured heads, that

Adhering to the Covenants and Laws, ects to Establishing the same, which was the co reestone, Their lives were sacrificed unto the readth. Of prelatists abjured. Though her in East Kil-Lies mixt with murderers', and Hamilton, in Whom justice justly did to de All four were But as for thir, in them no idinburgh before Worthy of death; but or at Edinburgh, on Constant and steadfast .d, their heads and For the prerogatives Lords of Privy Council Which truths were me joint testimony of the four, And all along to ... them.—ED.] They did end

Reproaches

But yet th

And no in the High Churchyard, Glasgow.

Here lies the corps of Robert Bunton, John Hart, suffered Matthew Patoun, John Richmond, James Johnstoun, suffer Stewart, James Winning, John Main, who suffered at the ger Glasgow, for their testimony to the Covenants and work of The Article, destroying the same betwixt 1666 and 1688.

"Years sixty-six and eighty-four,
Did send their souls home into glore,
Whose bodies here interred ly
Then sacrificed to tyranny
To covenants and reformation
'Cause they adhered in their station.
These Nine, with others in this yard
'Whose heads and bodies were not spar'd
Their testimonies, foes, to bury Caused beat the drums then in great fury.
They'll know at resurrection day
To murder saints was no sweet play.

"The original stone and inscription repaired and new lettered, 1827, at the expense of a few friends of the cause for which the martyrs suffered."

[From the memorial to the Edinburgh Town Council, asking permission to erect the monument in the Greyfriars', it appears that the stone in Glasgow High Churchyard had been erected previous This stone, from which the above inscription has been copied, was lying on its side against the wall of the churchyard when we visited it in 1866; but the inscription has been transferred to the outside of the north wall of the Cathedral. The testimonies of John Richmond, James Johnston, Archibald Stewart, James Winning, and John Main are in the "Cloud." Robert Bunton, or Buntine, was a native of Fenwick, where a monument has recently been erected to his memory. John Hart was a native of Glassford. Robert Scott belonged to Dalserf. Matthew Patoun was a shoemaker in Newmilns. All were at Pentland. They were tried at Glasgow, December 17, 1666, and were hanged on the 19th. Wodrow says that at their execution the men were most cheerful, and had much of sense of the Divine love upon them, and a great deal of peace in their sufferings.—ED.]

N a Stone at Inchbelly Bridge, Kirkintilloch.

"'Twas martyrs blood bought Scotland's liberty. Erected, February 1865, in room of the old tombstone, by the people of Kirkintilloch and neighbourhood. Original inscription: In this field lies the corpse of John Wharry and James Smith, who suffered in Glasgow, 13 June 1683, for their adherence to the Word of God, and Scotland's Covenanted Work of Reformation: 'And they overcame them by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death'" (Rev. xii. 11).

"Halt, courteous passenger, and look on Our bodies dead, & lying under this stone. Altho' we did commit no deed, nor fact That was against the Bridegroom's contract, Yet we to Glasgow were as prisoners brought, And against us false witness they sought. Their sentence cruel and unjust they past, And then our corps on scaffold they did cast.

There we our lives and right hands also lost. From Glasgow we were brought unto this place In chains of iron hung up for certain space. Then taken down interred here we ly-From 'neath this stone our blood to heaven doth cry. Had foreign foes, Turks, or Mahometans, Had Scythians, Tartars, Arabian Caravans, Had cruel Spaniards, the Pope's blood seed, Commenced the same, less strange had been the deed; But Protestants, profest our Covenants to, Our countrymen, this bloody deed could do. Yet notwithstanding of their hellish rage The noble Wharry stepping on the stage With courage bold and with a heart not faint, Exclaims, This blood now seals our covenant— Ending, They who would follow Christ should take Their cross upon their back, the world forsake."

[The monument is about three quarters of a mile to the east of Inchbelly Bridge, on the road between Kirkintilloch and Kilsyth. The original monument is a flat stone, six feet by three, and along-side of it is the new one, and both are enclosed under an iron grating. The inscription on the old monument, when we visited it in October 1866, so far as we could trace it out, seemed identical with that on the new by its side, yet it differs considerably from the following one, that given in the first edition of the "Cloud," which is three lines shorter, and has all the appearance of being a correct transcript. The probability is, that what is called on the new stone "the old tombstone" is not much older than this century, and that it is the successor of an older one on which may have been inscribed the following epitaph:

"Halt, passenger, read here upon this stone. A tragedy, our bodies done upon. At Glasgow Cross we lost both our right hands, To fright beholders, th' enemy so commands; Then put to death, and that most cruelly. Yet where we're slain, even there we must not lie, From Glasgow town we're brought unto this place, On Gallow tree hung up for certain space.

Yet thence ta'en down, interred here we lie
Beneath this stone; our blood to heaven doth cry.
Had foreign foes, Turks or Mahometans,
Had Scythian Tartars, Arabian caravans,
Had cruel Spaniards, the Pope's bloody seed,
Commenc'd the same, had been less strange their deed.
But Protestants, once Covenanters too,
Our countrymen, this cruel deed could do:
Yet, notwithstanding this, their hellish rage,
The noble Wharrie leapt upon the stage.
With courage bold, he said, and heart not faint,
'This blood shall now seal up our covenant,' Ending, 'they who would follow Christ, should take 'Their cross upon their back, the world forsake.'"

N a Monument in Castle Street, Glasgow.

"The dead yet speaketh. Behind this stone lyes James Nisbet, who suffered martyrdom at this place, June 5th, 1684. Also James Lawson and Alexander Wood, who suffered martyrdom, October 24th, 1684, for their adherence to the Word of God, and Scotland's Covenanted Work of the Reformation.

"Here ly martyrs three,
Of memory,
Who for the Covenants did die:
And witness is
'Gainst all the nation's perjury
'Gainst the Covenanted cause
Of Christ, their royal king.
The British rulers made such laws,
Declar'd 'twas satan's reign.
As Britain lies in guilt, you see,
'Tis ask'd, oh reader, art thou free.

"This stone was renewed by the proprietors of the Monkland Navigation, April 1818, and again in granite by the citizens in 1862. Drink and think, the Martyrs Monument."

[This monument is about a quarter of a mile's walk to the north of the High Church of Glasgow, at the Monkland Canal in Castle Street. It is a large tablet of polished granite, built into the wall that encloses the canal. Beneath the tablet a drinking fountain has recently been added.—Ed.]

N a Monument in the Cemetery, Paisley.

"Here lie the corpses of James Algie and John Park, who suffered at the cross of Paisley for refusing the Oath of Abjuration, February 3, 1685.

"Stay, passenger, as thou goest by,
And take a look where these do lie;
Who for the love they bore to truth
Were depriv'd of their life and youth.
Tho' laws made then caused many die,
Judges and 'sizers were not free.
He that to them did these delate,
The greater count he hath to make:
Yet no excuse to them can be;
At ten condemn'd, at two to die.
So cruel did their rage become,
To stop their speech, caus'd beat the drum.
This may a standing witness be
'Twixt Presbytery and Prelacy.

"The stone containing the epitaph transcribed on this monument was erected over the grave on the Gallowgreen, the place of common execution; and on the occasion of the ground being built upon, it was removed near to this spot, along with the remains of the martyrs, by order of the magistrates, 1779."

[James Algie and John Park were two young men that belonged to Kenniswood, a village four miles to the south-west of Glasgow. They were seized on the Lord's day, February 1685, while in their own house, as they were about to make family worship. They were tried in the usual summary way the following Tuesday, and were hanged the same day at two o'clock.

In the original edition of the "Cloud," the gravestone is said to have been in Eastwood, but this is evidently a mistake, for Paisley is the place where it has always been. The monument, which is a handsome obelisk, was erected in 1835.—Ed.]

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Cathcart.

"This is the stone tomb of Robert Thom, Thomas Cook, and John Urie, Martyrs for owning the Covenanted Work of Reformation, the 11th of May 1685.

"The bloody murderers of these men Were Major Balfour and Captain Maitland,
And with them others were not free,
Caus'd them to search in Polmadie.
As soon as they had them out found,
They murder'd them with shots of guns.
Scarce time did they to them allow Before their Maker their knees to bow.
Many like in this land have been,
Whose blood for vengeance cries to heav'n.
This cruel wickedness you see,
Was done in loan of Polmadie,
This may a standing witness be
'Twixt Presbytry and Prelacy."

[The monument is a single flat stone, six feet and a half in length, by three and a-half in breadth, and when we visited it in 1865, was in good preservation. The lettering has been retouched some years ago. Its style is rare about Glasgow, but common on the martyrs' monuments in Galloway.—ED.]

N a Stone in the Churchyard, Eaglesham.

"Psa. cxii. 6, The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance. Here lie Gabriel Thomson and Robert Lockhart, who were killed for owning the Covenanted Testimony, by a party of Highlandmen and dragoons, under the command of Ardencaple, 1st May 1685.

"These men did search through moor and moss,
To find out all that had no pass.
These faithful witnesses were found
And murdered upon the ground.
Their bodies in this grave do lie,
Their blood for vengeance yet doth cry.
This may a standing witness be
For Presbytry 'gainst Prelacy."

[The old monument is alongside of the new one, to which its inscription has been transferred.—Ed.]

MONUMENT AT ALESMOSS,

N a STONE at AIRSMOSS.

"Here lies the corpse of that famous and faithful preacher of the Gospel, the Rev. Richard Cameron, with the corpses of several others who were conquered by the bloody enemies of truth and godliness.

"Halt, curious passenger, come and read;
Our souls triumph with Christ our glorious head,
In self-defence we murdered here do ly,
To witness 'gainst this nation's perjury."

[The stone, when we visited it August 1871, was somewhat broken on one of the sides, and the word "preacher" has been nearly obliterated. Part of the inscription has become quite illegible. The stone in 1832 was set upon a platform some ten feet square, in the centre of which is an obelisk with the following inscription: "Sacred to the memory of the Rev. Richard Cameron, Michael Cameron, John Gemmel, John Hamilton, James Gray, Robert Dick, Captain John Fowler, Thomas Watson, Robert Paterson." The obelisk is towards the east end of the moss, and is a prominent object from the railway between Lugar and Muirkirk stations, about half a mile to the northward.—Ed.]

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Strathaven.

"Here lyes the corpses of William Paterson and John Barrie, who was shot to death for their adhering to the Word of God and our Covenants, anno 1685.

"Here lys two martyrs; severally who fell By Captains Inglis and by bloody Bell. Posterity shall know they're shot to death, As sacrifices unto Popish wrath."

On the pedestal of the stone—"Renewed by the Reformers of Avondale at the passing of the Reform Bill, anno domini 1832."

N a GRAVESTONE at BLACKWOOD, in the parish of Lesmahagow.

"Here lyes the corpse of John Brown, who was shot to death, without shadow of law, anno dom. 1685.

"Murray might murder
Such a godly Brown,
But could not rob him
Of that glorious crown
He now enjoys. His credit,
Not his crime
Was non-compliance
With a wicked time."

N a Gravestone at Priesthill.

"Here lies the body of John Brown, martyr, who was murdered in this place by Graham of Claverhouse for his testimony to the Covenanted work of Reformation, because he durst not own the authority of the then tyrant destroying the same, who died the first day of May A.D. 1685, and of his age 58.

"In death's cold bed the dusty part here lyes
O f one who did the earth as dust despise.
H ere in this place from earth he took departure:
N ow he has got the garland of the martyr.

"B utchered by Claverse and his bloody band,
R aging most ravenously over all the land,
O nly for owning Christ's supremacy.
W ickedly wronged by encroaching Tyranny,
N othing how near soever he to good Esteemed, nor dear for any truth his blood."

[Priesthill is easiest approached from Muirkirk. The monument is four miles from Muirkirk out on the moor. The stone is a flat one five feet in length by two feet six inches in breadth. It has been enclosed by a dyke. Close by it stands an obelisk, with an inscription recording its own erection and the enclosing of the grave in 1826.—Ed.]

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Lesmahagow.

"Here lies the body of David Steel, martyr, who was murdered by Chrichton for his testimony to the Covenants and work of Reformation, and because he durst not own the authority of the tyrant destroying the same. He was shot at Skellyhill on the 20th of December 1686, in the 33d year of his age.

"Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

"David a shepherd first, and then Advanced to be king of men,
Had of his graces in this quarter
This heir, a wand'rer, now a martyr,
Who for his constancy and zeal,
Still to the back did prove true Steel.
Who for Christ's royal truth and laws,
And for the covenanted cause
Of Scotland's famous Reformation;
Declining tyrant's usurpation,
By cruel Chrichton murdered lies,
Whose blood to heaven for vengeance cries."

N a Gravestone in Craickhaugh, Eskdalemuir.

"Here lies And. Hyslop, martyr, shot dead upon this place by Sir James Johnstone of Westerhall, and John Graham of Claverhouse, for adhering to the Word of God, Christ's kingly government in His house, and the Covenanted work of Reformation, against tyranny, perjury, and prelacy, May 12, 1685. Rev. xii. 11."

"Halt, passenger, one word with thee or two, Why I ly here wouldest thou truly know?

By wicked hands, hands cruel and unjust,
Without all law, my life from me they thrust,
And being dead they left me on this spot,
And for burial this same place I got,
Truth's friends in Eskdale now triumph their lot,
To wit, the faithful, for my seal that got.

"1702. Repaired by subscription, 1825."

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Dumfries.

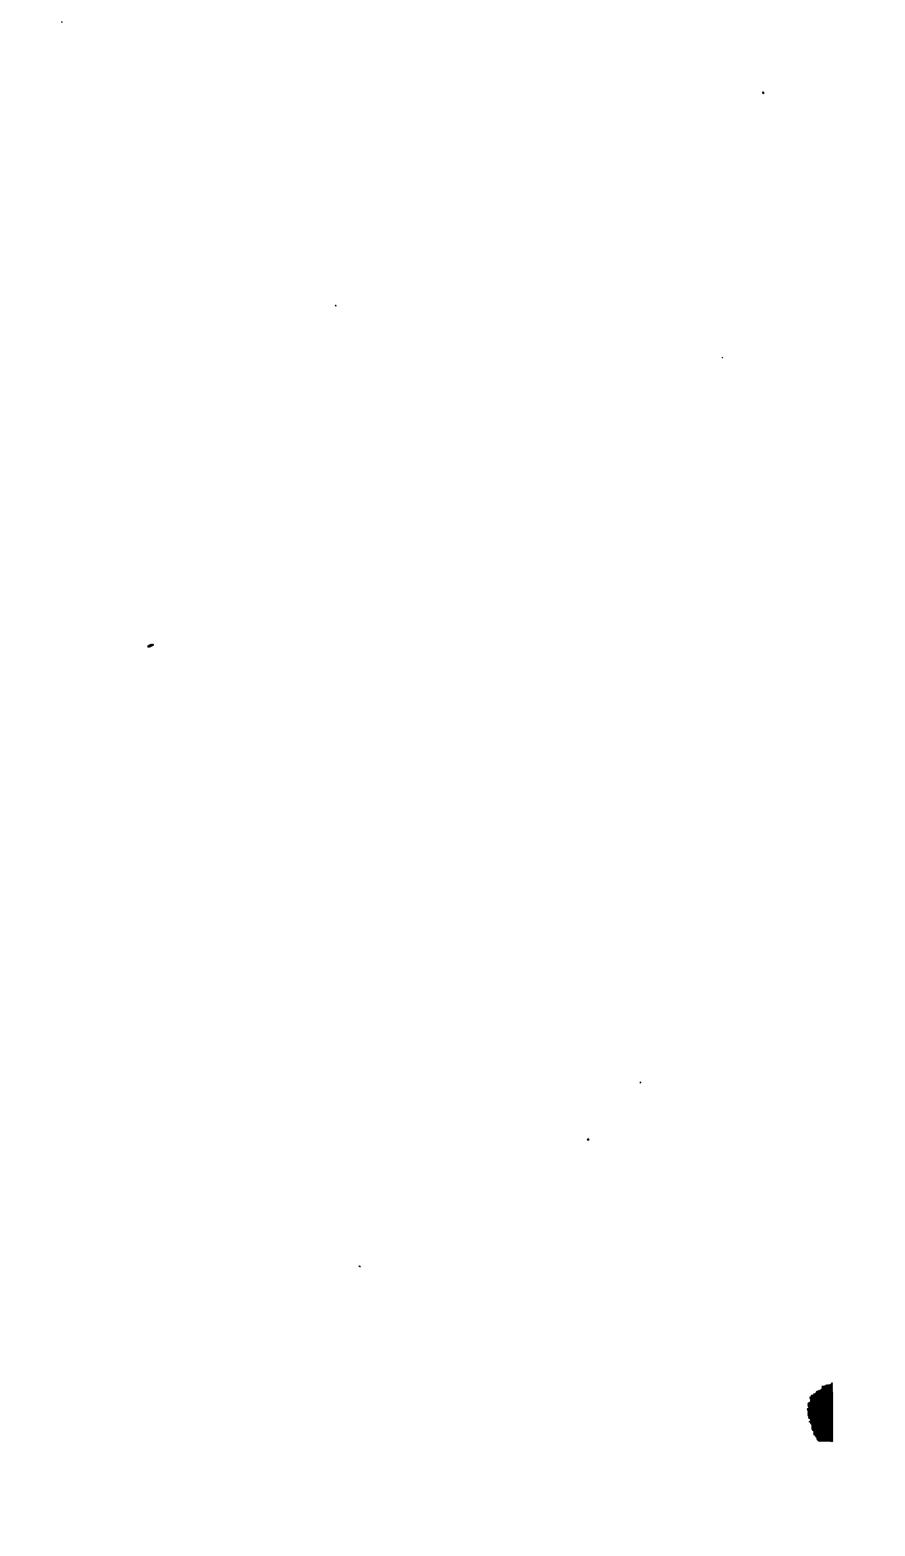

"Here lyes William Grierson, Pentland martyr, for his adhering to the Word of God, and appearing for Christ's kingly government in His house and Covenanted work of Reformation, against perjury and prelacy, executed Jan. 2, 1667. Rev. xii. 11.

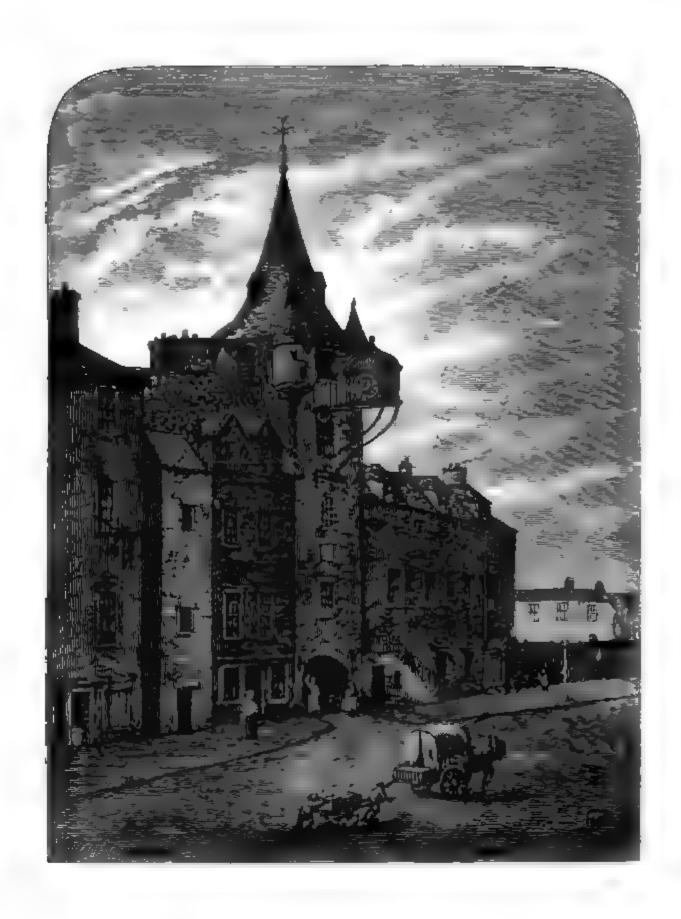

"Under this stone lo here doth ly
Dust sacrificed to tyranny;
Yet precious in Immanuel's sight
Since martyr'd for His kingly right.
When He condemns these hellish drudges,
By suff'rage saints shall judge the judges."

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Dumfries.

"Here lyes William Welsh, Pentland martyr, for his adhereing to the Word of God, and appearing for Christ's kingly government in His house, and the Covenanted work of Reformation against perjury and prelacie, execute Jan², 1667. Rev. xii. 11.

"Stay, passenger, read,
Here interr'd doth ly
A witnes gainst poor
Scotland's perjury,
Whose head once fix'd up

THE CANONGATE TOLBOOTH, EDINGUAGH.

On the bridge port stood, Proclaiming vengance For his guiltles blood."

[The stone is of the same character as that to John Grierson. It is five feet six inches in length, by one foot ten inches in breadth.—ED.]

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Dumfries.

"Here lyes James Kirko, martyr, shot dead upon the sands of Drumfreis, for his adhereing to the word of God, Christ's kingly government, in his house, and the Covenanted work of Reformation against tirranie, perjurie, and prelacie, 1685. Rev. xii. 11.

"By bloody Bruce and wretched Wright,
I lost my life in great despight;
Shot dead without due time to try
And fitt me for eternity;
A witnes of prelatick rage
As ever was in any age."

[The stone is similar to the other two in the churchyard.—ED.]

N a Gravestone in a Clump of Trees near the Church of Irongray.

"Here lyes Edward Gordon and Alexander M'Cubine, martyres, hanged without law by Lagg and Cap. Bruce, for adhering to the word of God, Christ's kingly government, in his house, and the Covenanted work of Reformation against tyranny, perjury, and prelacy. Rev. xii. 11. March 3, 1685.

" As Lagg and bloodie Bruce command, We were hung up by hellish hand; And thus their furious rage to stay,
We dyed near Kirk of Irongray;
Here now in peace sweet rest we take,
Once murder'd for religion's sake."

[The gravestone lies flat and is enclosed by a railing. Alongside of it is a monument erected in 1857, "designed," it is said in the inscription, "to express the respect cherished by the present generation for the memory and principles of the martyrs whose ashes repose on this spot."—ED.]

N a Stone in a Moor near Lochenkit or Larghill.

"Here lyes John Gordon, William Stuart, William Heron, and John Wallace, martyrs, shot by Captain Bruce.

"Behold here in this wilderness we ly,
Four witnesses of hellish cruelty.
Our lives and blood could not their ire asswage,
But when we're dead, they did against us rage;
That match the like, we think, we scarcely can,
Except the Turks, or Duke de Alva's men."

[The graves of these four martyrs are situated on a moor about a mile and a-half to the north of Brooklands House, parish of Urr, Kirkcudbrightshire. They are surrounded by a clump of trees enclosed within a wall. The inscription on the tombstone is quite illegible. Near by on a rising knoll is a monument built of granite, on the top of which is a hand with the finger pointing heavenwards. A tablet on one of its sides bears the following inscription: "Yonder lie William Heron from Glencairn, John Gordon, William Stewart, John Wallace, Galloway men who were found out and shot dead here, 2d March 1685, by Captain Bruce, for their adherence to Scotland's Covenant and Reformation. To commemorate the principles for which these martyrs suffered, this monument is erected by subscriptions, after services preached here by Messrs M'Lachlan and M'Gill, 1843."—ED.]

N the Churchyard, Glencairn.

1. On John Gibson.

"Here lyes John Gibson, martyr, shot to death by Col. Douglas and Livingston's dragoons at Englestoun in Glencairn, for adhering to the word of God, Christ's kingly government, in his house, and the Covenanted work of Reformation against tyrany, perjury, and prelacy, Apryl 28, 1685. Rev. xii. 11.

"My soul's in heaven, here's my dust,
By wicked sentence and unjust
Shot dead, convicted of no crime,
But non compliance with the time,
When Babel's bastard had command,
And monstrous tyrants rul'd the land."

2. On James Bennoch.

"Here lyes James Bennoch, shot to death by Col. Douglas and Livingston's dragoons, at Englestoun in Glencairn, for adhering to the word of God, Christ's kingly government, in his house, and the Covenanted work of Reformation against tyrany, perjury, and prelacy, Apryl 28, 1865. Rev. xii. 11.

- "Here lies a monument of Popish wrath;
 Because I'm not perjur'd I'm shot to death
 By cruel hands; men godless and unjust
 Did sacrifice my blood to Babel's lust."
- 3. On Robert Edgar and Robert Mitchel, both under one Stone.
- "Here lyes Robert Edgar and Robert Mitchell, martyrs, shot to death by Colonel Douglas and Livingston's dragoons, at Englestoun in Glencairn, for adhering to the word of God, Christ's kingly government, in his house, and the Covenanted work of Reformation against tyrany, perjury, and prelacy, Apryl 28, 1685. Rev. xii. 11.
 - "Halt, passenger, tell if thou ever saw Men shot to death without process of law.
 We two of four who in this churchyard ly,
 Thus felt the rage of Popish tyranny."

[The stones are each lying flat, and are five feet six inches in length, by two feet two inches in breadth. They are enclosed by an iron railing. In a garden in Ingleston, about a mile to the southwest of the churchyard, is an upright stone two feet in height, by two feet six inches in breadth, with the inscription—"In this yard were shot John Gibson, James Bennoch, Robert Edgar, Robert Mitchell, and Robert Grierson, April 28, 1685, by Colonel Douglas and Livingston's dragoons, for adhering to Christ's kingly government in his Church, against tyrannie, perjurie, and prelacie." A thorn bush, about thirty yards to the east of the stone, is said to be the spot at which they were shot.—Ed.]

N a Stone in the Churchyard, Tynron.

"Here lyes William Smith, in Hill, who, for his adhering to the Covenanted Work of Reformation, was shot at Moniaive Moss the 29th day of March 1685. His age 19 years. This deed was not done by a council of war, but by countrymen without syse [i.e., assize, or trial by jury.]

"I, William Smith, now here do ly,
Once martyr'd for Christ's verity.
Douglas of Stenhouse, Lawrie of Maxwelton,
Caus'd Coronet Bailie give me martyrdom.
What cruelty they to my corps then us'd Living may judge; me burial refus'd."

[The monument is similar in size and form to those in Glencairn. The place where he was shot was at a large stone in a field about half a mile to the east of the Cross of Moniaive. His body was refused burial in the churchyard, and so was laid in a grave at the doorstep of the farm house of Hill. After the Revolution it was disinterred, and put where it now lies in the churchyard.—Ed.]

N a Stone near Dalveen Pass, Durisdeer.

"Here lyes the corpse of Daniel M'Michael who was shot by Dalziel of Kirkmichael, January 1685.

"As Daniel cast into lion's den,
For praying unto God, and not to men;
Thus lions cruelly devoured me,
For bearing unto truth my testimony.
I rest in peace, till Jesus rend the cloud,
And judge 'twixt me and those who shed my blood.

[The stone lies flat, and is situated near the entrance to the pass, not far from the roadside.—ED.]

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Balmaghie.

"Here lyes David Halliday, portioner of Mayfield, who was shot upon the 21st of February 1685, and of David Halliday, once in Glenape, who was likewise shot upon the 11th of July 1685, for their adherence to the principles of Scotland's Covenanted Reformation.

"Beneath this stone two Davids Hallidays
Do ly, whose souls now sing their Master's praise.
To know, if curious passengers desyre
For what, by whome, and hou they did expyre?
They did oppose this nation's perjurey,
Nor could they join with lordly Prelacy.
Indulging favours from Christ's enemies,
Quench'd not their zeal: This monument then crys,
These were the causes not to be forgot,
Why they by Lag so wickedly were shot,
One name, one cause, one grave, one heaven do tye
Their souls to that one God eternally."

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Anwoth.

"Here lyes John Bell of Whitesyde, who was barbarously shot to death in the paroch of Tongland, at the command of Grier of Lag, Anno 1685.

"This monument shall tell posterity,
That blessed Bell of Whitesyde here doth ly;
Who at command of bloody Lag was shot:
A murder strange which should not be forgot.
Douglas of Morton did him quarters give;
Yet cruel Lag would not let him survive.
This martyr sought some time to recommend
His soul to God, before his days did end,
The tyrant said, 'What, devil! ye've pray'd enough
This long seven year on mountain and in cleugh:'
So instantly caus'd him with other four,
Be shot to death upon Kirconnel moor.
So thus did end the lives of these dear saints,
For their adhering to the Covenants."

[The monument is a flat stone, five feet eight inches in length by two feet eight inches in breadth, and is supported on six small square pillars. It is close to the south-west corner of the old church of Anwoth, now in ruins. The whole has evidently been renewed within the century.—ED.]

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Dalry, Galloway.

Memento Mori.—"Here lyeth Robert Stewart, son to Major Stewart of Ardoch, and John Grierson, who were murdered by Graham of Claverhouse, Anno 1684, for their adherence to Scotland's Reformation and Covenants, National and Solemn League, at the Water of Dee, in Galloway, Anno 1684.

"Behold, behold! a stone here's forc'd to cry, Come see two martyrs, under me that ly. At water of Dee, who ta'en were by the hands Of cruel Claverhouse and's bloody band. No sooner had he done this horrid thing, But's forc'd to cry, 'Stewart's soul in Heaven doth sing.'
Yet strange! his rage pursu'd ev'n such when dead,
And in the tombs of their ancestors laid;
Causing their corps be rais'd out of the same,
Discharging in churchyard to bury them.
All this they did, 'cause they would not perjure,
Our Covenants and Reformation pure;
Because, like faithful martyrs, for to dy
They rather chus'd, than treacherously comply
With cursed Prelacie, the nation's bane,
And with Indulgencie, our Church's stain.
Perjur'd intelligencers were so rife,
Show'd their curs'd loyalty, to take their life."

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Kirkcudbright.

"William Hounture-Robert Smith-1684.

"This monument shall show posterity, Two headless martyres under it doth ly, By bloody Gr'hame were taken and surpris'd, Brought to this town, and afterwards were saiz'd: By unjust law were sentenced to die, Them first they hang'd, then headed cruely. Captain Douglas, Bruce, Gr'hame of Claverhous, Were these that caused them to be handled thus. And when they were unto the gibbet come, To stop their speech they did beat up the drum, And all because that they would not comply With indulgence and bloody prelacy, In face of cruel Bruce, Douglas, and Gr'hame, They did maintain that Christ was Lord supreme: And boldly ouned both the Covenants: At Kirkcudbright thus ended these two saints."

[The stone is flat; five feet ten inches in length by two feet six inches in breadth.—ED.]

N a Stone in the Churchyard, Balmaclellan.

"Here lyeth Robert Grierson, who was shot to death by command of Colonel James Douglas, at Inglestoun, in the parish of Glencairn, anno 1685.

"This monument to passengers shall cry,
That goodly Grierson under it doth ly,
Betrayed by knavish Watson to his foes,
Which made this martyr's days by murther close.
If ye would know the nature of his crime,
Then read the story of that killing time,
When Babel's brats with hellish plots conceal'd,
Design'd to make our south their hunting-field.
Here's one of five at once were laid in dust,
To gratify Rome's execrable lust.
If carabines with molten bullets could Have reached their souls, these mighty Nimrods would Them have cut off; for there could no request
Three minutes get, to pray for future rest."

[The stone lies flat, and is about five feet in length, by three in breadth. It has recently been painted, and set up about a foot from the ground by a zealous antiquary, the Rev. John Murray of Balmaclellan.

Near it is a monument to the memory of a man, who, in his time, did so much to repair and deepen the inscriptions on the stones over the remains of the martyrs. The inscription is—"To the memory of Robert Paterson, stone engraver, well-known as 'Old Mortality,' who died at Bankend of Carlaverock, 14th February 1800, aged 88." Balmaclellan was the place where the wife and family of "Old Mortality" lived. A monument was also erected in 1869 in Carlaverock Churchyard over his remains, with the following inscription—"Erected to the memory of Robert Paterson, the 'Old Mortality' of Sir Walter Scott, who was buried here February 1801.

"Why seeks he with unwearied toil,
Through Death's dim walks to urge his way;
Reclaim his long-asserted spoil,
And lead oblivion into day?"—ED.]

ESIDES these mottoes in verse, there are in the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, in Galloway, several other monuments, both in churchyards and open fields, the mottoes whereof are in prose, intimating that they died for their adherence to the Covenants and Work of Reformation.

These monuments are—

In the Churchyard, Kirkcudbright.

Memento Mori.—" Here lyes John Hallume, who was wounded in his takeing, and by unjust law sentenced to be hanged. All this done by Captain Douglas, for his adherence to Scotland's Reformation Covenants, National and Solemn League, 1685."

[The monument is an upright stone, two feet in height, by one foot ten inches in breadth. The letters are Roman capitals, and, like all the work of "Old Mortality," in the Stewartry, are deeply cut. It is in the centre of the churchyard. The six inscriptions that follow are on stones of a similar size and form.— ED.]

In the Churchyard, Kirkandrews, parish of Borgue.

"Here lyes Robert M'Whae, who was barbarously shot to death by Captain Douglas, for his adherence to Scotland's Reformation, Covenants, National and Solemn League, 1685.

[This monument was broken, but was restored by the inhabitants of the parish, in fac-simile, 1855.—Ed.]

In the Churchyard, Girthon.

"Within this tomb lyes the corpse of Robert Lennox, sometime in Irelandtoun, who was shot to death by Grier of Lagg, in the paroch of Toungland, for his adherence to Scotland's Reformation, Covenants, National and Solemn League, 1685."

In the Muir of Auchincloy, Girthon parish.

Memento Mori.—"Here lies Robert Ferguson, who was surprised, and instantly shot to death on this place by Graham of Claverhouse, for his adherence to Scotland's Covenanted Reformation, Covenants, National and Solemn League, 1684."

On KIRKCONNEL HILL, Tongland parish.

"Here lies James Clement, who was surprised, and instantly shot to death on this place by Grierson of Lag, for his adherence to Scotland's Reformation, Covenants, National and Solemn League, 1685."

In the CHURCHYARD, KELLS.

"Here lyes Adam Macwhan, who, being sick of a fever, was taken out of his bed, and carried to Newtown of Galloway, and next day most cruelly and unjustly shot to death by the command of Lieutenant-General James Douglas, brother to the Duke of Queensberry, for his adherence to Scotland's Reformation, Covenants, National and Solemn League, 1685.

"The above stone, erected to the memory of Adam Macwhan, was placed in this granite monument, A.D., 1832. The expense defrayed by the inhabitants of Kells, after sermon by the Rev. James Maitland, minister of the parish."

[This monument is in the centre of the churchyard, and is one of the most striking in the Stewartry. The frame is of granite, and the old stone is so placed in it, that it can be read on both sides.—ED.]

In the Churchyard, Crossmichael.

Memento Mori.—" Here lyes William Graham, who, making his escape from his mother's house, was pursued and taken, and instantly shot dead by a party of Claverhouse's troop, for his adherence to Scotland's Reformation, Covenants, National and Solemn League, 1682."

N a Stone in the Churchyard, Ayr.

"Here lie the corpse of James Smith, Alexander M'Millan, James M'Millan, John Short, George M'Kertny, John Graham, and John Muirhead, who suffered martyrdom at Air, 27th December 1666, for their adherence to the Word of God, and Scotland's Covenanted Work of Reformation.

"This small tribute to the above was done by the Incorporate Trades of Air, Anno Domonie, 1814. For the righteous shall be keept in everlasting rememberance."

"Here ly seven martyrs for our Covenants,
A sacred number of triumphant saints,
Pontius M'Adam th' unjust sentence passed;
What is his own the world shall know at last.
And Herod Drummond caus'd their heads affix;
Heav'n keeps a record of the sixty-six.
Boots, thumbkins, gibbets, were in fashion then;
Lord, let us never see such days again."

[Nothing seems now to be known of these seven martyrs, save that they were at Pentland, and were condemned to death at Ayr. The hangman at Ayr disappeared, and was not to be found when the day of execution came. William Sutherland, a Highlander, and the hangman in Irvine, was by force brought to Ayr, but neither by fair means nor foul would he be persuaded to act as executioner, and was kept in prison for many weeks. His declaration, written after he was set free, is one of the most interesting papers in Wodrow. A Cornelius Anderson, who had been condemned with the seven, was at last prevailed, on promise of free pardon, to act as executioner.—Ed.]

N a Stone lying beside the Gallows of Ayr.

[The compilers preface the eight lines of rhyme by the introductory words, "Upon a stone lying beside the Gallows of Air, upon the body of Andrew M'Gill, who was apprehended by the information of Andrew Tom, who suffered there, November, 1684.—ED.]

"Near this abhorred tree a sufferer lies,
Who chus'd to fall that falling truth might rise.
His station could advance no costly deed,
Save giving of a life the Lord had need.

When Christ shall vindicate His way, He'll cast The doom that was pronounc'd in such a haste, And incorruption shall forget disgrace, Design'd by the interment in this place."

[This monument is the only one that we have been unable to find. The gallows stood near the present railway station. Wodrow mentions M'Gill's apprehension and execution.—ED.]

N a Stone at Mauchline.

"Here lies the bodies of Peter Gillies, John Bryce, Thomas Young, William Fiddison, and John Bruning, who were apprehended and hanged without trial at Mauchline, anno 1685, according to the then wicked laws, for their adherence to the Covenanted Work of Reformation. Rev. xii. 11.

"Bloody Dumbarton, Douglas, and Dundee, Mov'd by the Devil and the Laird of Lee,
Dragg'd these five men to death with gun and sword,
Not suffering them to pray nor read God's Word,
Ouning the Work of God was all their crime,
The Eighty-five was a saint killing time.

"Erected by subscription in 1830. The old decayed tombstone, from which the above inscription is copied, lies below."

[The present monument is a flat stone, twelve feet by six, and is situated on a small common on the outskirts of the town of Mauchline.—Ed.]

N a Tombstone in the Churchyard, Irvine.

"Stop, passenger, thou treadest near two martyrs, James Blackwood and John M'Coul, who suffered at Irvine on the 31st of December 1666. Rev. xii. 11.

"These honest countrymen whose bones here lie,
A victim fell to Prelates' cruelty;
Condemn'd by bloody and unrighteous laws,
They died as martyrs for the good old cause,
Which Balaam's wicked race in vain assail,
For no enchantments 'gainst Israel prevail.
Life and this evil world they did contemn,
And died for Christ, who died first for them."

[Little else is known of James Blackwood and John M'Coul than that they were taken prisoners at Pentland, and that they died full of joy and courage, to the admiration of all who were witnesses. The following has been added to the original verses when the stone was restored.—Ed.]

"They lived unknown,
Till persecution dragged them into fame,
And chas'd them up to heaven."

"Erected by friends to religious liberty, 31st December 1823."

"Here lie the heads of John Ross and John Shields, who suffered at Edinburgh, December 27th, 1666, and had their heads set up at Kilmarnock."

"Our persecutors mad with wrath and ire; In Edinburgh members some do lie, some here; Yet instantly united they shall be, And witness 'gainst this nation's perjury."

[John Ross belonged to Mauchline. He joined the rising that ended at Pentland, but was taken prisoner a week previous to the battle. John Shields was a tenant in Titwood, a farm in the parish of Mearns, Renfrewshire. He was taken along with John Ross. They were tried at the same time with the martyrs whose heads are at Hamilton, and received a similar sentence. "Naphtali" contains a testimony by John Shields. It is very much shorter than most of the testimonies issued by the martyrs, but it is happily expressed. The monument is an upright stone, and stands on the north side of the church, in the Laigh Kirk burying-ground.—Ed.]

N a Stone in the Churchyard, Kilmarnock.

"Here lies John Nisbet, who was taken by Major Balfour's party, and suffered at Kilmarnock, 4th April 1683, for adhering to the Word of God and our Covenants. Rev. xii. and 11. Renewed by public contribution, A.D. 1823.

"Come, reader, see, here pleasant Nisbet lies;
His blood doth pierce the high and lofty skies;
Kilmarnoc did his latter hour perceive;
And Christ his soul to heaven did receive.
Yet bloody Torrans did his body raise,
And buried it into another place;
Saying, 'Shall rebels ly in graves with me?
We'll bury him where evil doers be.'"

[The stone is near that to John Ross and John Shields. It is an upright stone, four feet in height by three in breadth.—ED.]

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Fenwick.

"Here lies the dust of John Fergushill and George Woodburn, who were shot at Midland by Nisbet and his party, 1685.

"When bloody prelates, once this nation's pest, Contriv'd that curs'd self-contradicting test; These men for Christ did suffer martyrdom, And here their blood lies waiting till He come."

"Renewed by subscription, 1829."

PENWICK CHURCHYARD.

N a GRAVESTONE in the CHURCHYARD, FENWICK.

"Here lies the corps of Peter Gemmel, who was shot to death by Nisbet and his party, 1685, for bearing his faithful testimony to the cause of Christ, aged 21 years.

"This man, like holy Anchorites of old,
For conscience' sake, was thrust from house and hold;
Blood-thirsty red-coats cut his prayers short,
And ev'n his dying groans were made their sport.
Ah Scotland! Breach of solemn vows repent;
Or bloody crimes will bring thy punishment."

N a Stone in the Churchyard, Fenwick.

"Here lies the body of James White, who was shot to death at Little Blackwood by Peter Inglis and his party, 1685. Renewed by subscription, 1822.

"This martyr was by Peter Inglis shot, By birth a tiger, rather than a Scot, Who, that his monstrous extract might be seen, Cut off his head, and kick'd it o'er the green. Thus was that head, which was to wear the crown, A football made by a profane dragoon."

HE above inscriptions comprise all those given in the First Edition; those which next follow were added in the Third and Fourth Editions.-ED.]

i a STONE in the CHURCHYARD, WIGTOWN.

"Here lies Margrat Willson, daughter of Gilbert Willson in Glenvernoch, who was drowned, anno 1685, aged 18."

MONUMENT AT STIRLING TO THE WIGTOWN MARTYRS.

"Let earth and stone still witness beare
There lyes a virgine martyr here:
Murther'd for owning Christ supreme,
Head of His Church, and no more crime,
But not abjuring Presbytery,
And her not owning Prelacy,
They her condemned by unjust law,
Of heaven nor hell they stood no awe.
Within the sea, ty'd to a stake,
She suffered for Christ Jesus sake.
The actors of this cruel crime.
Was Lagg, Strachan, Winram, and Gr'hame,
Neither young years, nor yet old age,
Could quench the fury of their rage."

N a Stone in the Churchyard, Colmonell.

"I, MATTHEW M'ILWRAITH:
In this parish of Colmonel,
By bloody Claverhouse I fell,
Who did command that I should die,
For owning Covenanted Presbytery.
My blood, a witness still doth stand
'Gainst all defections in this land."

N a Stone in the Churchyard, Straiton.

"Here lyes Thomas M'Haffie, martyr, 1686.

"Tho' I was sick, and like to die,
Yet bloody Bruce did murder me;
'Cause I adhered in my station,
To our covenanted Reformation.
My blood for vengeance yet doth call,
Upon Zion's haters all."

[The original stone is somewhat small—two feet by one foot and eight inches. Close by it is a stone twice its size, to which the inscription has been transferred, with the addition—"This stone was erected by subscription in the year 1824."—ED.]

N a Stone in the Churchyard, Tweedsmuir.

"Here lies the body of John Hunter, who was shot at Corehead by Colonel James Douglas, 1685.

"When Zion's King was robbed of his right,
His witnesses in Scotland put to flight;
When Popish Prelates and Indulgencie,
Combin'd 'gainst Christ to ruin Presbytrie.
All who would not unto their idols bow,
They socht them out, and whom they found they slew.
For owning of Christ's cause I then did die,
My blood for vengeance on His en'mies did cry."

[A few yards in front of the entrance to the parish church is an obelisk, eight or nine feet in height, with the inscription—"In memory of John Hunter, Martyr, whose gravestone is in the lower part of this churchyard, 1837. The old stone was erected in 1726."—ED.]

N a Gravestone at Magus Muir.

[The compilers of the "Cloud" prefix the following introductory sentence—"Upon the gravestone of Thomas Brown, James Wood, Andrew Sword, John Waddel, and John Clyd, who suffer'd martyrdom at Magus Muir, November 25, 1679, and ly buried in a corn-field near Magus Muir, is this inscription."—ED.]

"'Cause we at Bothwel did appear, Perjurious oaths refused to swear;
'Cause we Christ's cause would not condemn,
We were sentenc'd to death by men;

Who raged against us in such fury,
Our dead bodies they did not bury,
But up on poles did hing us high,
Triumphs of Babel's victory.
Our lives we fear'd not to the death,
But constant prov'd to the last breath."

(When the Gravestone was set up in October 1728, the chains were taken out of their graves, and some of their bones and clothes were found unconsumed, now forty-seven years after their death.—

Note by the compiler of Third Edition.)

[Thomas Brown was a shoemaker in Edinburgh; James Wood belonged to Newmilns; Andrew Sword was a weaver in Galloway; John Waddell belonged to New Monkland; John Clyde to East Kilbride. They had no connection with the death of Archbishop Sharp, but had been at the battle of Bothwell Bridge, and had refused to take the Bond. They were tried at Edinburgh, November 10, and were found guilty of being in arms at Bothwell, and sentenced to be hanged at Magus Muir, and their bodies to be hung in chains till they rot. Their testimonies and an account of their words at the scaffold occupy forty pages in the Appendix to "Naphtali."

Magus Muir is about three miles to the west of St Andrews, and a mile to the south of the village of Strathkinness. The spot where the five martyrs suffered, and where the archbishop found his death, is about a quarter a-mile from the turnpike road on the ridge of the high ground, and is an oblong, unploughed, of about nine paces by It is easily distinguished from the five in the middle of the field. ground around. The stone to the memory of the martyrs was in existence thirty years ago, but got broken, and has been carried away by visitors piece by piece until all that remains of it is a fragment of a few inches square, which, when we visited the district in August 1871, we found the farmer at Clermont Cross had taken away for safety and laid down at his front door. A few letters, but no words complete, were all that could be deciphered. It is to be hoped that steps will soon be taken to put up a new stone.—ED.]

N a Gravestone at Magus Muir.

"The gravestone of Andrew Gullon, who suffered at the Gallowlee of Edinburgh, July 1683, and afterwards was hung upon a pole in Magus Muir, and lyeth here.

"A faithful martyr here doth ly,
A witness against perjury,
Who cruelly was put to death,
To gratify proud Prelates' wrath.
They cut his hands ere he was dead,
And after that struck off his head;
To Magus Muir they did him bring,
His body on a pole did hing;
His blood under the altar cries,
For vengeance on Christ's enemies."

[This stone is an upright one, and is situated in the centre of a small enclosure, planted with trees, a few yards to the west of the farm-house at Clermont Cross, about half a mile to the south-east of Magus Muir. The lettering on the stone is in italics, and very different from all the other monuments we have visited; it is so shallow as to be little better than scratched. Robert Paterson (Old Mortality), when he went to Dunottar, where Sir Walter Scott first met him, must have passed it by. Possibly he had his doubts about Andrew Guilline, because concerned in the death of Archbishop Sharp.—Ed.]

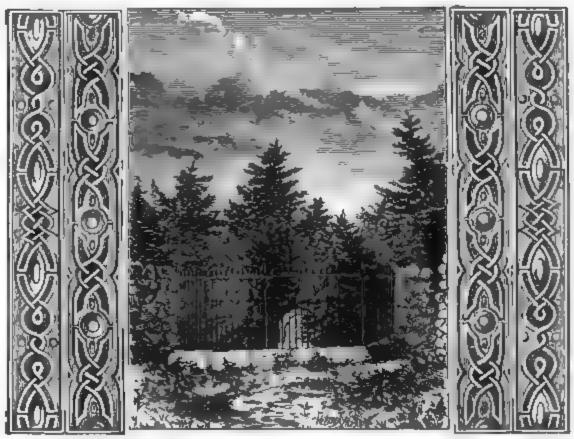

N a Gravestone at Rullion Green.

"Here and near to this place lyes the Reverend Mr John Crookshank and Mr Andrew M'Cormick, ministers of the Gospel, and about fifty other true covenanted Presbyterians, who were killed in this place in their own innocent self-defence, and defence of the covenanted work of Reformation, by Thomas Dalziel of Bins, upon the 28th of November 1666. Rev. 12-11. Erected Sept. 28, 1738.

RULLION GREEN.

MONUMENT AT RULLION GREEN.

"A Cloud of Witnesses lyes here,
Who for Christ's interest did appear,
For to restore true liberty
Overturned then by tyranny,
And by proud Prelates, who did rage
Against the Lord's own heritage.
They sacrificed were for the laws
Of Christ their king, His noble cause;
These heroes fought with great renown,
By falling got the martyr's crown."

[Rullion Green lies on the south side of the Pentland Hills. It is best approached by the road from Edinburgh to Carlops—about a quarter a-mile past the seven mile-stone. The monument is about quarter a-mile from the road upon the hill. It is an upright stone, and was carefully railed in some years ago at the expense of the proprietor of the ground, the Right Honourable John Inglis, Lord President of the Court of Session.]

Ta Gravestone near the Cross-Water of Dusk, in Colmonell parish.

"Here lies John Murchie and Daniel M'Ilwraith, martyrs. By bloody Drummond they were shot. 1685.

"Here in this place two martyrs ly,
Whose blood to heaven hath a loud cry,
Murder'd contrary to Divine laws
For owning of King Jesus' cause.
By bloody Drummond they were shot,
Without any trial near this spot.

"Renewed by Gilbert M'Ilwraith in Alticonnach."

[A new monument was erected in 1825, and the old inscription transferred to it.—ED.]

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Muirkirk.

"Here lyes John Smith, who was shot by Col. Buchan an' the laird of Lee, February, 1685, for his adherence to the Word of God, and Scotland's Covenanted work of Reformation. Rev. xii. 11. Erected in the year 1731.

"When proud apostates did abjure,
Scotland's Reformation pure,
And fill'd the land with perjury,
And all sorts of iniquity.
Such as would not with them comply,
They persecute with hue and cry,
I in the fight was overtane,
And for the truth by them was slain."

[The stone is an upright one, of small size. Part of it is broken off.—ED.]

N a Gravestone, in a Kailyard, Newmilns.

"Renewed in 1822. Here lies John Law, who was shot at Newmills, at the relieving of eight of Christ's prisoners, who were taken at a meeting for prayer at Little Blackwood, in the parish of Kilmarnock, in April 1685, by Captain Inglis and his party, for their adherence to the Word of God, and Scotland's Covenanted Work of Reformation."

"Cause I Christ's prisoners reliev'd,
I of my life was soon bereav'd,
By cruel enemies with rage,
In that rencounter did engage,
The Martyr's honour and his crown,
Bestow'd on me, O high renown,
That I should not only believe,
But for Christ's cause my life should give."

[The "kailyard" is behind a house on the main street, nearly opposite to the Parish Church.—ED.]

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Strathaven.

"Erected in the year 1732. Heare lys the corps of William Dingwall, who was shot in a rancounter at Drumclog, June 1st, 1679, by bloody Grahm of Claverhouse, for adhearing to the Word of God, and Scotland's Covenanted Work of Reformation.

"This hero brave who here doth ly
Was persecute by tyranny,
Yet to the truth he firmly stood,
'Gainst foes resisting to the blood.
Himself and th' Gospel did defend,
Till for Christ's cause his life did end."

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Stonehouse.

"Here lays, or near this, James Thomson, who was shot in a rancounter at Drumclog, June 1st, 1679, by bloody Graham of Clavershouse, for his adherence to the Word of God, and Scotland's Covenanted Work of Reformation. Rev. xii. 11.

"This hero brave who doth ly here,
In truth's defence he did appear,
And to Christ's cause he firmly stood,
Until he seal'd it with his blood,
With sword in hand upon the field,
He lost his life, yet did not yield.
His days did end in great renown,
And he obtain'd the martyr's crown."

N a Stone in the Churchyard, Dron.

"Here lyes the Reverend Mr John Welwood, minister of the Gospel in the Church of Scotland, who dyed at Perth, Aprile 1679, about the 30th year of his age.

"Here lies a follower of the Lamb,
Thro' many tribulations came.
For long time of his Christian race
Was persecute from place to place.
A Scottish prophet here behold,
Judgment and mercy who foretold;
The Gospel banner did display,
Condemn'd the sins of that sad day,
And valiantly for truth contended,
Until by death his days were ended."

N a Stone in the Churchyard, St Andrews.

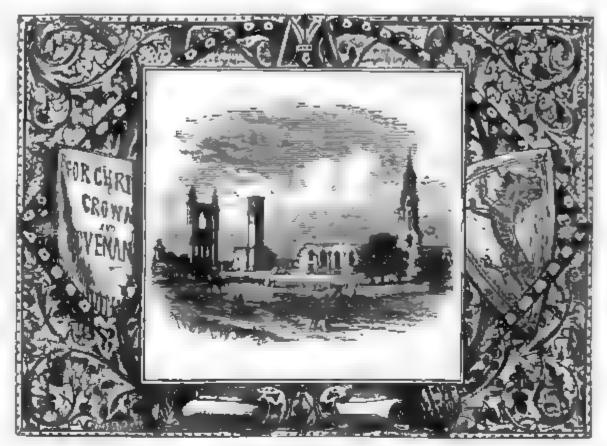

"Here lyes the Reverend Mr Samuell Rutherfoord Professor of Divinity in the University of St Andrews, who died March 20, 1661.

"What tongue, what pen, or skill of men, Can famous Rutherfoord commend? His learning justly rais'd his fame, True godliness adorn'd his name. He did converse with things above, Acquainted with Emmanuel's love. Most orthodox he was and sound, And many errors did confound. For Zion's king and Zion's cause And Scotland's Covenanted laws; Most constantly he did contend, Until his time was at an end. Then he wan to the full fruition, Of that which he had seen in vision."

(October 9th, 1735. By W. WITSON.)

(The famous Mr Samuel Rutherford, who was cited before that Parliament, which rescinded the Covenanted work of Reformation, to appear before them when he was in a dying condition; being soon after that called to answer at that tribunal, where his Judge was his friend: though he did not actually suffer martyrdom, being called home to the joy of his Lord before his persecutors got their wicked devices put in execution against him; yet since he was a martyr, both in his enemies' design and his own resolution, the epitaph upon his gravestone, done above seventy-four years after he died, by a true lover of his memory and owner of the honourable Covenanted cause which he faithfully contended and suffered for, deserveth a room here among martyrs' epitaphs.—Note in the Fourth Edition.)

CHURCHYARD OF ST ANDREWS.

HE following inscriptions have now been added for the first time.—Ep.]

N a GRAVESTONE in the CHURCHYARD, DUNOTTAR.

"Here lyes John Stot, James Aitchison, James Russel, and William Broun, and one whose name we have not gotten, and two women whose names also we know not, and two who perished coming down the rock, one whose name was James Watson, the other not known, who all died prisoners in Dunottar Castle, anno 1685, for their adherence to the Word of God and Scotland's Covenanted work of Reformation. Rev. xith ch., 12th verse."

DUNOTTAR CASTLE

IN a GRAVESTONE in a CHURCHYARD near BATHGATE.

"Here lies the body of James Davie, who was shot at Blackdale, April 1673, by Heron, for his adhering to the Word of God and Scotland's Covenanted work of Reformation, in opposition to Popery, Prelacy, Perjury, and Tyranny."

N a GRAVESTONE in the Churchyard, Galston.

"Here lies Andrew Richmond, who was killed by bloody Graham of Claverhouse, June 1679, for his adherence to the Word of God and Scotland's Covenanted work of Reformation.

"When bloody tyrants here did rage Over the Lord's own heritage, To persecute His noble cause By mischief framed into laws, 'Cause I the Gospel did defend, By martyrdom my life did end.

"Renewed in 1823."

[The stone is an upright one, and stands to the south of the church. Besides the inscription, it has sculptured on it, in base relievo, an open Bible, a man with a soldier pointing a gun at him, and a figure of the Galston Covenanter's flag.—Ed.]

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Galston.

"In memory of John Richmond, younger of Knowe, who was executed at the Cross of Glasgow, March 19th, 1684, and interred in the High Churchyard there. And James Smith, East Threepwood, who was shot near Bank of Burn Ann by Captain Inglis and his dragoons, and buried there. Also James Young and George Campbell, who were banished in 1679. And the Rev. Alexander Blair, who suffered imprisonment 1673."

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Loudon.

"Here lies Thomas Flemming of Loudon Hill, who, for his appearing in arms in his own defence and in defence of the Gospel, according to the obligations of our National Covenants, and agreeable to the Word of God, was shot in a rencounter at Drumclog, June 1st, 1679, by bloody Graham of Claverhouse."

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Campsie.

"Erected in memory of William Boik, who suffered at Glasgow, June 14, 1683, for his adherence to the Word of God and Scotland's Covenanted Work of Reformation.

"Underneath this stone doth lie Dust sacrificed to tyranny, Yet precious in Immanuel's sight, Since martyr'd for his kingly right.

"Rev. chap. 7, verse 14."

N a Monument in the Churchyard, Glassford.

"To the memory of the very worthy pillar of the Church, Mr William Gordon of Earlston in Galloway, shot by a party of dragoons on his way to Bothwell Bridge, 22 June 1679, aged 65. Inscribed by his great grandson, Sir John Gordon, Bart., 11 June 1772.

"Silent till now full ninety years hath stood This humble monument of guiltless blood. Tyrannic sway forbad his fate to name, Least his known worth should prove the tyrant's shame. On Bothwell road, with love of freedom fir'd, The tyrant's minions boldly him requir'd To stop and yield, or it his life would cost. This he disdain'd, not knowing all was lost, On which they fir'd. Heaven so decreed his doom, Far from his own laid in this silent tomb. How leagu'd with patriots to maintain the cause Of true religious liberty and laws, How learn'd, how soft his manner, free from pride, How clear his judgment, and how he lived and died, They well could tell who weeping round him stood On Strevan plains that drank his patriot blood."

"Repaired by Sir John Gordon, Bart. of Earlston, his representative, 1842.

"If a hard fate demands,
Or claims a tear,
Stay, gentle passenger,
And shed it here."

MONUMENT AT WIGTOWN TO THE WIGTOWN MARTYRE

N a Stone in the Churchyard, Wigtown.

Memento Mori.—" Here lies Margaret Lachlane, who was by unjust law sentenced to dye by Lagg, surnamed Grier, Strachane, Winram, and Grame, and tyed to a stake within the flood for her adherence to Scotland's Reformation Covenants, National and Solemn League, aged 63, 1685."

[The stone is an upright one, and similar in size and form to those in Galloway that have simply a prose inscription.—Ep.]

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Wigtown.

"Here lys William Johnston, John Milroy, and George Walker, who was, without sentence of law, hanged by Major Winram, for their adherence to Scotland's Reformation Covenants, National and Solemn League, 1685."

N a Stone in the Churchyard, Wigtown.

"Here lyes the body of Alexander Linn, who was surprised and instantly shot to death by Lieutenant-General Drummond for his adherence to Scotland's Reformation Covenants, National and Solemn League, 1685."

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Balmaghie.

Memento Mori.—"Here lyes George Short, who was pursued and taken, and instantly shot to death under cloud of night, in the paroch of Tongueland, by Grier of Lag and the Earle of Annandale, because of his adherence to Scotland's Reformation Covenants, National and Solemn League, 1685."

[The stone is upright, and is three feet in height by two feet in breadth.—ED.]

N a Gravestone in the Churchyard, Tarbolton.

"Here lys William Shillilaw, who was shot at Woodhead by Lieut. Lauder for his adherence to the Word of God and Scotland's Covenanted work of Reformation."

[The stone is an upright one, and stands close to the east side of the steeple.—ED.]

N a GRAVESTONE at MID WELLWOOD, parish of Muirkirk.

"Here lyes William Adam, who was shot in this place by Captain Dalzeal and his party for his adherence to the Word of God and Scotland's Covenanted work of Reformation." We from it the Councillant, Turnstall

Monoris Mivi.—" Here has Andrew MiRabent, who was surprised and short to death in the parish of Tongueland, by Gree of Lagg, for his adherence to Scotland's Reformation Community, National and Science League, 1985."

AN 2 GRATESTONE in the CHURCHTARD, KELLS.

"Here lyes the corpse of Roger Gordon of Largmone, who dyed March 2, 1662, aged 72 years; and of John Gordon of Largmore, his grandchild, who dyed January 6, 1667, of his wounds got at Pentland in defence of the Covenanted Reformation."

IN a STONE in the CHURCHYARD, OLD CUMMOCK.

"Here lies the corpse of Thomas Richard, who was shot by Colonel James Douglas, for his adherence to the Covenanted Work of Reformation, on the 5th day of April, anno 1685.

"Halt passenger! this stone doth show to thee
For what, by whom, and how I here did die,
Because I always in my station
Adhered to Scotland's Reformation
And to our Sacred Covenants and laws,
Establishing the same, which was the cause,
In time of prayer, I was by Douglas shot,
Ah! cruelty never to be forgot."

IN a Stone in the Churchyard, Old Cumnock.

"Here lyes David Dun and Simon Paterson, who was shot in this place by a party of Highlanders, for ther adhearance to the Word of God and the Covenanted Work of Reformation, 1685."

N a Stone in the Churchyard, Old Cumnock.

"Here lies Mr Alexander Peden, faithful minister of the Gospel, sometime of Glenluce, who departed this mortal life the 26th of January 1686, and was raised after six weeks out of the grave and buried here out of contempt.

" Memento Mori."

[The remains of Alexander Peden were first laid in the aisle of Lord Auchinleck, but were disinterred by a body of dragoons, in order to hang them on the gallows. At the entreaty, however, of the Countess of Dumfries, they were induced to depart from their purpose, and the corpse was laid alongside those of the martyrs at the Gallowsfoot of Old Cumnock.—ED.]

N a Stone at the Caldons, Loch Trool, Kirkcudbright-shire.

"Here lyes James and Robert Duns, Thomas and John Stevensons, James M'Clude, Andrew M'Call, who were surprised at prayer in this house by Colonel Douglas, Lieutenant Livingstone, and Cornet James Douglas, and by them most impiously and cruelly murther'd for their adherence to Scotland's Reformation Covenants, National and Solemn League. 1685.

"In memory of six martyrs who suffered at this spot for their attachment to the Covenanted cause of Christ in Scotland. January 23, 1685.

"Erected by the voluntary contributions of a congregation who waited on the ministrations of the Rev. Gavin Rowatt of Whitehorn, Lord's Day, 19th August 1827."

[This tomb stands in a lonely march near the little water of Trool shortly after it leaves the loch of that name. The site of the old farm-house of Caldons (or Caldunes), where the martyrs were taken and put to death, is supposed to be marked by a shapeless heap of stones, which has once been a cairn. The present monument is close beside it, and consists of a strong plain wall about four feet high, forming a square enclosure (ten feet square or thereabouts), within which stands the little grey tombstone with its plainly legible inscription, bearing marks of the pious care of "Old Mortality." The modern enclosing wall has a slab of red sandstone let into its inner side (S.W.). On it stands the inscription of 1827.—ED.]

N a Stone in the Churchyard, Cupar Fife.

"Here lyes interred the heads of Laurance Hay and Andrew Pitulloch, who suffered martyrdom at Edinburgh, July 13th, 1681, for adhering to the word of God and Scotland's Covenanted work of Reformation. And also one of the hands of David Hackston of Rathillet, who was most cruelly murdered at Edinburgh, July 30th, 1680, for the same cause.

"Our persecutors fill'd with rage,
Their brutish fury to aswage,
Took heads and hands of martyrs off
That they might be the people's scoff.
They Hackston's body cut asunder,
And set it up a world's wonder,
In several places to proclaim,
These monsters glory'd in their shame."

Re-erected, July 13th, 1792.

[The stone has recently been raised upon a new base, and is in a good state of preservation.—Ed.]

N a Monument in the Churchyard, Fenwick.

"Sacred to the memory of Captain John Paton, late in Meadowhead, of this parish, who suffered martyrdom in the Grass-market, Edinburgh, May 9th 1684.

"He was an honour to his country; on the Continent, at Pentland, Drumclog, and Bothwell, his heroic conduct truly evinced the gallant officer, brave soldier, and true patriot. In social and domestic life, he was an ornament, a pious Christian, and a faithful witness for truth, in opposition to the encroachments of tyrannical and despotic power in Church and State.

"Who Antichrist do thus oppose,
And for truth's cause their lives lay down,
Will get the victory o'er their foes,
And gain life's everlasting crown,

"The mortal remains of Captain Paton sleep amid the dust of kindred martyrs in the Greyfriars' Churchyard, Edinburgh.

"Near this is the burying place of his family and descendants."

N a Monument at Moniaive.

"In memory of the late Rev. James Renwick, the last who suffered to death for attachment to the Covenanted Cause of Christ in Scotland—born near this spot, 15th February 1662, and executed at the Grassmarket, Edinburgh, 17th February 1688.

"'The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance.' Erected by subscription, A.D. 1828."

N a Stone in the Churchyard, North Berwick.

"Here lies the body of Mr John Blackader, minister of the Gospel at Troqueer in Galloway, who died on the Bass, after five years imprisonment, anno dom 1685, and of his age sixty-three years.

"Blest John, for Jesus' sake in Patmos bound,
His prison Bethel, Patmos, Pisgah found;
So the bless'd John, on yonder rock confined,
His body suffer'd, but no chains could bind
His heaven-aspiring soul; while day by day,
As from Mount Pisgah's top, he did survey
The promised land, and view'd the crown by faith
Laid up for those who faithful are till death.

Grace formed him in the Christian Hero's mould, Meek in his own concerns—in's Master's bold; Passions to reason chained, Prudence did lead—Zeal warm'd his breast, and reason cool'd his head. Five years on the lone rock, yet sweet abode, He Enoch-like enjoyed, and walk'd with God; Till, by long living on this heavenly food, His soul by love grew up too great, too good To be confined to jail, or flesh or blood. Death broke his fetters off, then swift he fled From sin and sorrow, and by angels led, Enter'd the mansions of eternal joy;—Blest soul, thy warfare's done, praise, love, enjoy. His dust here rests till Jesus come again—Even so, blest Jesus come,—come Lord. Amen!"

Schenck & M' Farlane, Printers, Edinburgh.

